The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 3.30 p.m.

[MR SPEAKER: Hon. M L Farrell BEM GMD RD JP in the Chair]

[ACTING CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: S Galliano Esq in attendance]

PRAYER

Mr Speaker

CONFIRMATION OF MINUTES

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Monday, 16th May 2022.

Order of Proceedings: (i) Oath of Allegiance; (ii) Confirmation of Minutes – the Minutes of the last meeting of Parliament, which was held on 20th and 23rd September 2021.

Mr Speaker: May I sign the Minutes as correct? (Members: Aye.)

Mr Speaker signed the Minutes.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Tribute to Joe Garcia, Editor of Panorama

Clerk: (iii) Communications from the Chair; (iv) Petitions; (v) Announcements.

10 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

15 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the whole House, I know, will have been saddened greatly by the untimely passing of Joe Garcia Snr, the well-known editor of Panorama, in the past weeks. He was the doyen of journalism in Gibraltar. He had been recognised for his work with a state honour from Her Majesty the Queen, an MBE, and this very House had bestowed upon him the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour for his huge contribution to journalism in Gibraltar and to Gibraltar generally as a result.

20 Mr Speaker, anybody who knew Joe Garcia Snr knew that he was the embodiment of the commitment to a British Gibraltar and to all of the things that we hold dear in Gibraltar. He was a defender of everything Gibraltarian and everything that all of us love about this place. He was also a close confidant of successive Chief Ministers, myself included; I am genuinely sorry that I will have been the last to enjoy the benefit of his wise counsel.

25 The Government felt this loss greatly, not least because Joe was the father of Joseph, the Deputy Chief Minister, and we extend our deepest condolences to the whole of the family, to Lorraine his daughter, to Lydia his wife and to all the grandchildren. I know that the whole House will join me in extending condolences to the family and to the Deputy Chief Minister in particular.

(Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, may I associate the Members on this side of the House with the comments of the Chief Minister?

Anyone who thought of journalism in Gibraltar thought of Joe Garcia. He was, for many decades, the foremost figure of journalism in Gibraltar. We all knew him well. Anyone who was in politics knew Joe, knew that he was a fearless advocate for the truth. In his writing he would not take prisoners and he would criticise anyone on any side of politics; that is the way it should be when people do independent journalism. He was always known to be independent and fearless and I am sure he would have liked to have had that reputation, which he indeed merited and earned through so many decades of reporting not just locally but also internationally for other well-known papers around the globe.

Our condolences also to the Garcia family – to Joseph, of course, and the whole family. We all felt his loss.

When I first knew Joe, it was not just in journalism. Of course we had his little foray into politics – that was the first time I knew him – but of course his reputation, his rightful reputation, was built through a long career in journalism, of which he and his family should be undoubtedly proud, and I associate us with the remarks of the Chief Minister. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I too would like to take this opportunity to mark the passing of Joe Garcia and offer my condolences, yet again, to his family, especially to his son, the Deputy Chief Minister, who is, of course, present in this Chamber today.

Mr Garcia's fruitful career spanned an impressive five decades, throughout which he had every opportunity to chronicle some of the most relevant events of our recent history. I, personally, remember, as a child, almost every Saturday morning, after synagogue, being taken by the arm to the headquarters of the Panorama offices to listen to Mr Garcia's latest musings, where most politicians or journalists would be very interested to know ...

With his bold and personal touch, Mr Garcia brought diversity and colour to our media from the pages of his Panorama paper, which he founded and turned into a household name. He excelled as a political analyst and commentator, and for this reason it is right that he is remembered in this Chamber which he so greatly influenced with his passion and his hard work.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Sir Joe Bossano.

Minister for Social Security, Economic Development, Enterprise, Telecommunications and the Gibraltar Savings Bank (Hon. Sir J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I think I am the Member of the House who has known him longer than anybody else, because of our generation being the one that was faced with the Brussels Agreement and the Lisbon Agreement before that. He showed what came first, because for many years we were on opposite sides in local issues, as he was the editor of the Evening Post, which was very close to the AACR, but when the Brussels Agreement came along he actually broke ranks, as it were, and, at the time when the opposition to Brussels was a minority view in Gibraltar, Joe Garcia was supporting that minority view because he thought we were right; he thought it was the wrong thing for Gibraltar to have subscribed to the agreement. Time has proved that he made the right choice, but he had the courage of his conviction and of his love for Gibraltar and he put that above everything else. Therefore, Gibraltar has lost a great defender. Independent of his skills as a journalist, as a Gibraltarian he was 100% a defender of the Rock. There were not many like him. There are not many more, I think. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, I rise only to thank the Hon. Members who have spoken here this afternoon and also those who have written to me or called me separately in private. Also, on behalf of my mother and the family, I want to thank the many people who have sent messages of support and condolence in the last difficult four or five weeks.

I think he wanted to be remembered for his contribution to journalism, certainly, as has been said, as editor of the Gibraltar Post and later also of Panorama, but I think primarily he would want to be remembered for his international links, his international connections, and for projecting the identity of Gibraltar and the Gibraltarian abroad, outside our shores, and also, obviously, our right to self-determination.

90

Thank you all very much indeed. (Banging on desks)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the words of all hon. Members and I would recall that in the short foray that Mr Garcia made outside of journalism he was able to mentor four of the current Members of this House – two much more successfully than the other two aspirants, something that was always a great cause of mirth for him in later life.

100

Mr Speaker, with that and with a smile on our faces, I call that the House should now hold a minute's silence for Mr Garcia.

The House observed a silence.

Future relationship with the EU –
UK-EU treaty negotiations – Statement by the Chief Minister

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am grateful for leave to make a Statement today on our continuing negotiations for a treaty between the United Kingdom and the European Union on Gibraltar's future relationship with the EU.

As hon. Members and the general public are aware, we have been embarked on these negotiations since October of last year. We were unable to commence sooner, as the European Union mandate for the negotiations was not finalised until early in that month. As we know, the European Union is a union of laws, and, as a result, its negotiators are unable to negotiate other than to a mandate agreed by its institutions. This is as provided for in EU doctrine.

The process of negotiation has involved eight negotiating rounds to date: the first was held in Brussels on 11th and 12th October 2021; the second in London on 10th, 11th and 12th November 2021; the third, again in Brussels, on 2nd and 3rd December 2021; the fourth in London on 14th and 15th December 2021; round 5 was in Brussels on 1st and 2nd February 2022; round 6 in London on 1st and 2nd March 2022; round 7 in Brussels on 30th and 31st March 2022; and round 8 in London again, last week, on 10th and 11th May 2022. I anticipate that we will likely need two more rounds of formal negotiation at least, and the first is now likely in early June if the parties can agree relevant dates.

120 I think it is important to set this out, as the record needs to reflect these matters. Although, of course, the rounds are already public, we have not had a meeting since the rounds commenced in September and so I think it is important that Hansard should reflect those dates.

125 It is also important to reflect on the fact that rounds 2, 3, 4 and 5 were held whilst the so-called Omicron variant of the COVID-19 pandemic was rampant throughout the European Union and the United Kingdom. That made travel harder and uncomfortable, and I want to specifically thank all members of the United Kingdom and EU negotiating teams for travelling at that time. The nascent normality that we seem to be going through at the moment I think has made us all be blessed with forgetfulness as to how difficult it has been during some periods of the pandemic, and it was no less difficult during the last throes of the pandemic when Omicron came and travel once again became very restricted.

130 These eight rounds to date have already covered all areas which are the subject of the negotiation, I am pleased to say. In fact, I must tell the House that the complexity of this negotiation is, frankly, unimaginable. The EU treaties, as all EU lawyers well know, are all very detailed and complex. We are, in effect, touching every single aspect of the basic building blocks of the European Union and considering whether, and if so, how each of those should apply to Gibraltar going forward.

135 The House should nonetheless be aware, as I have already said publicly before, that helping us through this process the United Kingdom has deployed huge resources to assist Gibraltar in this negotiation. Literally hundreds of individual officers of the UK Civil Service have been deployed to assist Gibraltar in areas of specialist competence – from the Home Office, who deal with issues related to mobility, to matters relating to the expertise of officers of Her Majesty’s Revenue and Customs, where Gibraltar has not had experience of being in the free movement of goods zone of the European Union in the past and the issues that arise in relation to indirect and direct taxation of goods, and we have been able to tap in to the expertise of HMRC. Led by the Foreign, Commonwealth and Development Office, we have seen remarkable resources deployed from across Whitehall just to assist us in every aspect of the negotiation, in particular in the preparation for each round of the negotiation, and that is something for which we must be grateful and understand that those resources have been made available to us.

140 Also, on the EU side we have seen similarly large teams involved, with subject matter experts from each relevant directorate involved in the rounds of negotiations. We could not have advanced matters as much as we have without the experts in each field making themselves available. There is nothing easier and yet more dangerous than people who think they know about a subject engaging in a negotiation about it, and therefore it is fundamental that we have the subject matter experts on each side so that we get this right if we are able to make an agreement.

145 The Gibraltar team of officials could also not have been more ably led than it has been by the Attorney General and Chief Legal Adviser to the Government, Michael Llamas QC. No one in Gibraltar has the remotest hint of his depth of understanding of EU law and the relevant EU structures. We could not have achieved what we are achieving in this negotiation without his involvement in leading the technical teams in the discussions. I should also set out my condolences to Mr Llamas, who has suffered the loss of both his parents in the period of this negotiation and indeed in the last few months. A hard professional time has been made tougher all round by extenuating personal circumstances, but he has not faltered for one moment. He has been extraordinarily well supported by Daniel D’Amato in the Gibraltar Office in Brussels, who has really become an indispensable part of our team on this issue.

155 The work has involved senior civil servants from Gibraltar being present in the virtual negotiating rooms and demonstrating the depth of their commitment to Gibraltar in their preparations and contributions in the fields in which they are each the subject-matter experts for Gibraltar. All of our subject-matter experts in the public sector have been involved from Gibraltar.

160 The United Kingdom team, led by UKMIS Ambassador in Brussels Lindsay Appleby, and Foreign Office lead Robbie Bulloch, have gone above and beyond each day as we have strategised and worked together to progress matters.

175 Although in the past – but not in my time – the Convent and Convent Place may not have always batted together, I am very pleased to say that our fourth official, or our 12th man in our team, has been the quite remarkable Sir David Steel and his Convent team. He really has been a key mentoring and reflecting influence for me in particular, if not for the whole of my team.

180 Mr Speaker, we could have the best negotiators on our side, but if the EU or Spain had the worst, then we would not be able to make any progress. We are lucky to have a great EU Commission team across the table from us. Clara Martinez Alberola leads a committed team with whom we are enjoying working, even when we inevitably disagree on the many ways to do or say the same thing – but that is what a negotiation in good faith is about, after all. I want to thank the EU negotiators for having had the patience to understand from us the things that make Gibraltar different to most places. We are still working through the list, as you can imagine. I hope they are enjoying this process and learning as much as we are.

185 The same is true of our interaction with our Spanish opposite numbers, with whom, as I have told the House before, we have built a strong rapport from which to hopefully resolve these historic issues in a way that everyone wins on the non-sovereignty aspects and no one loses on the sovereignty aspects. That is the extraordinarily difficult balance that we are seeking to strike. I therefore reiterate my thanks to the respective negotiating teams involved.

190 In terms of progress of the talks, I am able to advise the House today that considerable positive engagement in the past four weeks has led us to be very pleased with where we are today. Of course, nothing is agreed until everything is agreed, and at the moment we are not able to say that we have agreed any text; we are simply refining principles in great detail. But we have done so, and this morning I have updated the Cabinet on the progress we made last week, which has been satisfactory to all of us at this stage. I have also subsequently briefed the Leader of the Opposition and the Hon. Ms Hassan Nahon.

195 On many areas, there has already been agreement around basic principles for full agreement to follow. The areas that remained most open in principle relate to aspects of mobility of persons and aspects of mobility of goods. The main issue has centred around mobility of persons. The key has been resolving how we would be able to give effect to the practical arrangements necessary that will arise from the delicate balance reached in the New Year's Eve Agreement.

200 Spain is the neighbouring member state and is, today, already responsible for Schengen checks as individuals seek to enter Schengen via Gibraltar at the Gibraltar-Spain frontier at La Linea. We, therefore, agreed in the New Year's Eve Agreement, which we debated already in this House, that Spain will have the responsibility for the Schengen checks as people enter Schengen via the entry points in Gibraltar. At least for the first four years, she will carry out those checks with the assistance of Frontex. The question, however, is how to do that in a way that is safe, secure and agreeable to Gibraltar and the UK, and Spain and the European Union, from day one.

205 Of course, we have the many years of disputes and restrictions etc. to deal with as we assess each other's positions. The location and manner of the carrying out of the Schengen checks has been a key issue throughout the negotiation. That means working to agree in detail where relevant people will be, what they will do and who they will do it to. As such, we have also had to determine what each relevant agency will do in carrying out such checks. The key, however, is that there will be no such checks at the frontier between us and Spain. That is to say that where the checks are currently carried out, there will be no checks. That will bring an end forever – at least during the period of application of the treaty, such as it may be – of frontier queues and checks as we know them today.

215 Of course, we also want these issues not to create unnecessary additional burdens for passengers arriving at Gibraltar Airport and Port, so we are working very hard indeed to get this right. Again, the complexity of the negotiation cannot be overstated in this regard, but neither should the potential fruits and benefits of it for this community be underestimated. By seeking mobility of goods and persons we are seeking, in effect, to carve a niche for ourselves in the infrastructure of the EU which cannot in any way threaten the integrity of the single market or the security of the Schengen area. That much is obvious. But those personal mobility and goods mobility issues are not everything. We continue to seek to finalise agreement in other areas. What 225 I would say, though, is that some of the subsidiary points that are not the totemic ones will also have some important underlying aspects for us which will need to be resolved in a way that we are satisfied, after scrutiny, do not cause us any unintended issues. Those are coming into scope now, but the detail behind the current positions is not one we can go into. I say that knowing, as I do, that people want the detail because the devil is in the detail – in the detail of the principles 230 agreed, which are essentially those seen in the New Year’s Eve Agreement, and in the detail of the texts to be finalised in the treaty and the ancillary documents that we will agree around a treaty.

I appreciate the public’s patience as we seek to ensure that we strike the right balance. The details will all be made public when everything has been agreed in principle. Nothing will be finally and irrevocably agreed in secret, but what we cannot do is negotiate in public. If we do that, 235 although we may satisfy a lot of curiosity we will also fail to find final agreement in any area. So I am sorry to say that we cannot say more. We cannot go into more details because we want to give the opportunity to finalise this deal the best chance possible. This is not because our instinct is not to be transparent but because our obligation is to a higher purpose than ourselves and even our own political reputations and fortunes. We have to do the right thing for the Gibraltarians and 240 all residents of Gibraltar. We have to do so even if in doing so we have to take arrows and bullets from our own side for our alleged lack of transparency.

In that respect, I would say this. In our view, a lack of transparency arises when a government can say something without a negative repercussion to the nation but chooses not to do so, even if that is as a result of seeking to avoid embarrassment for itself. We are not in the realms of such 245 a lack of transparency. We are respecting the confidentiality of a process which depends on discretion in order to be able to succeed as we consider would be in the best interests of Gibraltar and its people and residents. I think most people understand that this is a process where all relevant teams have been treading softly. We are walking on a tissue of diplomacy that still remains untrampled. If we get to the end without tearing it, it will allow us the twin objectives of 250 making a success of our future relationship with the EU whilst not turning one atom away from the steadfast reality that we are and want to remain exclusively British in every regard. I want to emphasise that in fact no one is asking us to explicitly or implicitly give up the latter, by the way.

Mr Speaker, many of our citizens and our businesses will ask what is the current state of play.
The straight answer to that is that we are within touching distance of a historic treaty: a treaty 255 between the United Kingdom and the European Union; a treaty that, if we can get there, will create renewed optimism in the European idea itself. It will create opportunity for our further economic development and the further economic development of the region around us, and perhaps even beyond, reaching across the Straits.

I want to be clear that the shared prosperity we talk about is about business development, not 260 about Gibraltar paying for the creation or maintenance of Spanish infrastructure. The new arrangements, if they can be agreed, will put cross-border co-operation on a more definite and secure footing. In doing so, it will be protecting our post-1986 way of life, whilst at the same time safeguarding all of our fundamental political interests and not asking any other party to compromise theirs, as already provided for in the New Year’s Eve Agreement.

We are moving at a good pace now. We can see the contours of the final agreement between the UK and the EU that will be turned into a treaty text. The positions we are landing on are becoming clear and concrete proposals on the table. We are reaching the point of being able to point to legally safe and secure solutions on the different parts of each of the most important points. That will enable the UK and the EU to consider draft texts for the agreement in those areas.
270 I believe we are now close to being able to start consolidated treaty drafting in coming weeks. I entirely agree with Spanish Foreign Minister Albares in his assessment that we can be confident that this will move forward as quickly as possible.

What I can also assure the House and the community as a whole is that we are not, for one moment, going to spring an agreement on anyone. Neither will we pretend to declare an 275 agreement can be ratified by the United Kingdom on behalf of Gibraltar without consultation. We have already said that we will not give Gibraltar's consent to the United Kingdom's ratification of the treaty without the agreement of the Cabinet and the agreement of this House after a debate on a substantive motion – that is to say an amendable motion, not a motion to note. So this House will debate the terms and substance of the agreement if the Cabinet approves a deal.

280 Mr Speaker, I know that the uncertainties of the past six years have unsettled many. Some have heard rogue voices from outside Gibraltar, in different places, challenge the nature of our British sovereignty. Let me, once again, be exceedingly clear. The future of Gibraltar is exclusively British. Nothing in the negotiations has called this into question or challenged any of the basic tenets of British sovereignty over Gibraltar, and we are not being asked to do anything which 285 might cross that objective of ours. As former Spanish Secretary of State for Europe Mario Aguiriano said, Spanish negotiators know that if they raise the issue of the sovereignty of Gibraltar, the UK and Gibraltar will simply leave the negotiating room. We have not closed our files and left the table because no such thing has been raised or asked of us.

Of course we are looking always to ensure that there is no detail that involves any aspect of jurisdiction or control that will erode sovereignty being brought into play. As I have said in every 290 Statement I have made on this matter in this House, nothing will ever cleave Gibraltar from the United Kingdom. Nothing will ever rip us from Britain. No one is even trying, although I recognise that it is sometimes easier for some to try to battle the monsters of the past to avoid fighting the real challenges of the present. We will not fall into that trap, our people will not fall into that trap, 295 because cheap jingoism will not resolve the Brexit conundrum that Britain has served up for us and which we are negotiating with Britain and not against Britain, as some might have done.

The European Union is built on compromise and we will need to compromise in some areas, of course. Some things will change and will be done differently as we will have freedoms we did not have before, as in movement of goods and people. For us, the compromises on the table cannot 300 concern compromises on British sovereignty, jurisdiction or control, but they will include practical measures to secure fluidity that will make us all safer and more secure if we become a de facto part of the Schengen space.

In fact, our people know that Gibraltar is, today, closer to the UK than it has ever been before, socially, politically and economically. The latter is important as we have secured access to the 305 United Kingdom market in services that is the envy of many. We will never put that at risk. That has been, perhaps, the greatest political achievement of the Government I have led in the international sphere. It has been the repair, the consolidation and the strengthening of our relationship with the United Kingdom, in which we have found an understanding and willing partner. It is in that work with Britain that the Government as a whole can already see the contours 310 of that deal which we think is likely to become a treaty text which is safe and secure for Gibraltar and within what we would all consider to be acceptable, but we will, of course, have to see the final draft treaty text before deciding.

Mr Speaker, I also want to say something about the issue of Northern Ireland, as I know that it is something which is very live in the news media. It is not for me to comment on the substance 315 of matters affecting Northern Ireland, and I will not do so, but it is clear that many external issues have buffeted our negotiations in the past six years since the result of the Brexit referendum. The most high-profile issue, of course, now is how matters relating to Northern Ireland and the disputes over the application of its protocol may affect our negotiation.

I want to be clear and set out that both our negotiations are entirely different. There are 320 common parties in the UK and the European Union, but there are also underlying disparate parties in Spain and Gibraltar. In one – that is to say in relation to Northern Ireland – the parties are arguing over what they have already agreed and how to implement it, or not. In another – that is to say in relation to our negotiation – we are negotiating our agreement conscious of the need to give it sufficient clarity to avoid issues going forward. That view has been echoed by the United 325 Kingdom, which has consistently made the point that the issues arising in respect of Northern Ireland and those which arise in relation to Gibraltar are entirely different. Importantly, it is also the position of the Kingdom of Spain, at whose suit the European Commission has launched this negotiation. On Friday, the Spanish Foreign Minister, Jose Manuel Albares, made clear that Gibraltar and Northern Ireland presented the EU with two separate negotiations. 'They have 330 nothing in common other than the fact that on the other side of the table is the same party,' he said. Perhaps even more importantly, the Foreign Secretary of the Republic of Ireland, Mr Simon Coveney, in the same press conference, alongside Sr Albares, was also forthright and clear in separating the issue of the disputes arising in respect of Northern Ireland and the very positive ongoing talks on Gibraltar. Mr Coveney specifically said that they were completely separate 335 negotiations. He insisted, as we do, as the UK does and as Spain does, that they should be negotiations that are kept that way, as has been done at every stage throughout the Brexit process. The European Commission has previously made similar statements through different spokespersons.

Before I sit down, Mr Speaker, I should remind the House of an underlying reality that we 340 cannot minimise. On the morning of 24th June 2016 our political world changed forever. We must understand that, as we reach the final throes of this process. We must understand that Spain remains a member state of the EU and we are not. We must understand that things we had the right to do in Europe before, we are now not entitled to. My obligation from then has been to steer a course to continued prosperity and to seek a path to future prosperity in an exclusively 345 British Gibraltar. We have a plan for being outside the European Union now and a plan for being outside the European Union in four years' time, if needs be. Our better plan is the plan that sees us enter into arrangements with the EU so long as the circumstances for those arrangements are right and remain right. We are leaving no stone unturned to negotiate a safe, secure and positive agreement for Gibraltar's future relationship with the EU. We will continue to work night and day, 350 in good faith, to achieve that.

Mr Speaker, I am happy to clarify or answer questions on any part of this Statement that hon.
Members might think is useful.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, on this side of the House we entirely understand that the world changed for Gibraltar on 24th June 2016. Brexit was indeed a seminal moment for us. We have said already, on this side of the House, that it was important to be bold and imaginative when considering our future, but in doing so, of course, while we should use imagination and boldness, 360 we also need to make sure that we protect the fundamentals to make Gibraltar sustainable economically and politically as we go forward. I am sure we all have that in mind also whenever we speak on issues such as this.

I welcome that the Chief Minister has, at the end of his Statement, talked about the differences between the Northern Irish situation and the negotiation with regard to Gibraltar. We certainly 365 hope that that will not prove to be, in any way, a hindrance to reaching an agreement for Gibraltar.

On this side of the House our position has been, for a very long time, that there should be a safe and beneficial agreement reached for Gibraltar: safe on the sovereignty aspects and on the fundamentals; beneficial economically and politically and going forward towards a bold and imaginative future and a new relationship with the EU that is safe for everyone in Gibraltar.

370 May I just ask, in terms of clarification of a number of aspects ...? I will ask the questions ... I asked some of them this morning at the briefing I had with the Chief Minister, but some of the points that I raised this morning I am sure people will have in their minds, so I will give him the opportunity to clarify those aspects, if he feels he can. He can make a judgement call, because I also understand that there may be issues of detail where he does not want to stray, but there may 375 be other issues which he can address quite safely.

The devil is, of course, in the detail, as he rightly says, and we share that view. The Chief Minister has previously said – again, we agreed – that there are many aspects of the EU mandate that are unacceptable. Can he say that the agreement they are working towards will not involve unacceptable aspects for Gibraltar, based on that EU mandate?

380 In terms of process, may I just ask him ...? He gave an indication as to timing, but may I also delve a bit deeper, perhaps? He indicated that they are looking towards a discussion about the principles but then going away to draft the treaty text. Does he have a general view – a view only at this stage, of course, because negotiations are dynamic and I appreciate that things change, but does he have a view as to how long the process will take, so that a treaty text would be published?
385 Would it be that the treaty text that is published is in draft? I understand that it is subject to ratification, but that is not what I am asking. What I am saying is are they intending to publish treaty text that is draft without the parties, i.e. the EU and the UK, having entered into the treaty subject to ratification, or is it that they are intending to enter into it in terms of some signing but subject to ratification, which, of course, will require, as he indicated, ratification?

390 In terms of the process in Parliament, presumably that will take place after the treaty text is published. After that moment – and he says that he is going to take a substantive motion in Parliament – is the Government's current thinking to give the people of Gibraltar an opportunity to also express a view on the treaty text and what is on the table in, for example, a referendum?
Or is it something that is, as far as the Government is concerned, off the table? Or is it something 395 that dynamically would depend on the draft treaty text whenever negotiators land on a final settled version? Can I ask him about that thinking?

May I ask him to assure the people of Gibraltar, and indeed the residents, that the deal that the Government is working on is a deal for all residents of Gibraltar, irrespective of what kind of ID card or civil registration card colour they hold?

400 May I also ask him, because it has been a while since this Parliament has met and indeed since he briefed the Opposition informally ...? I think the last informal brief we got was in November last year. Can he explain perhaps a bit more, without delving into the granular detail, which I accept may be subject to detailed discussions on which it may be problematic to give a blow-by-blow account, but can he confirm that what they are trying to negotiate is a deal not just on 405 mobility and on goods but a wider deal that will also encompass other aspects of Gibraltar's relationship with the EU going forward – so things like the environment, things perhaps on judicial co-operation, things on other aspects, social services, indeed health ...? Does it contain other aspects of benefit to the citizens? Is that the objective, or is it something a bit narrower and a bit less wide?

410 On the checks at the Frontier that the Chief Minister mentioned in his contribution, he said that the objective, or at least the result, if there is an agreement, would be that there would be no checks at the Frontier. Does that mean that as a consequence ...? Can we also have his confirmation, or at least an indication, of what is the current desire or state of play? Is it that the consequence would also be that, by there being no checks at the Frontier, the police and customs 415 checks would be eliminated on both sides? In other words, on our side Borders and Coastguard and the Customs, and on the Spanish side Policía Nacional and Guardia Civil? Is that what he envisages would be the result? And has there been a discussion about that?

In terms of checks, can he perhaps expand a bit more in terms of what the customs checks would be at the Port and Airport? He has spoken about mobility and we understand the debate there is with Frontex on the immigration side. Can he speak a bit more about the customs checks 420 at the Port and Airport and how he would envisage that would be done and who would do those checks?

Mr Speaker, I appreciate that is a long list of questions, but I am sure listeners who are listening to the Ministerial Statement made by the Chief Minister after so many months, understanding 425 that the Chief Minister cannot be explicit about the granular detail, will want some level of reassurance as to where the Government is heading on a number of issues.

When he speaks about issues of mobility, he may also want to address the issue of security in terms of the border by eliminating checks. What is his view on that? The patrolling of waters: will there be patrols?

430 I return to the initial point on which I started my contribution seeking clarification. We all want a safe and beneficial agreement for Gibraltar. Uncertainty, as he himself has pointed out, is unhelpful. It is certainly better to keep talking than for there not to be talking at all, but six years on from this process the people of Gibraltar would, I am sure, welcome a prompt clarification and conclusion to this process and, hopefully, an arrival point which guarantees a safe and beneficial agreement to Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I must tell the hon. Gentleman that I do not think it is relevant to refer to six years as the period of negotiation: the negotiation commenced eight months ago. And so he will forgive me for saying that a lot of what he has asked me to do – which no doubt is designed, if he will allow me to descend into the politically colloquial, for him to be able to extract and put on his social media page to show that he asked me these things and that he was talking about being safe and beneficial in what we bring back to Gibraltar – is exactly what I have already referred to. I have referred throughout my intervention to us bringing a treaty which is safe and secure on all of the issues of sovereignty, jurisdiction and control – that is to say the fundamentals – so I do not understand what it is that he says is the level of reassurance that I have not given that he is seeking to extract with his questions, which I will try and deal with insofar as I am able to.

The hon. Gentleman says that uncertainty is unhelpful. Well, we can all agree with that – it is such a blanket statement that it is impossible to disagree with it – but the hon. Gentleman needs to, obviously, temper the remarks that he makes with the political reality in which we are dealing. He understands, as I know, that of course it is possible to do an agreement quickly. It is unlikely to be safe or secure if one accepts the first text that is put to one, but if one does the work of ensuring that the treaty text that we bring is safe and secure and as finessed as it can be, to be improved, to be as beneficial as possible to the people of Gibraltar, then that cannot be quick.

He will forgive me for saying that it is becoming a little difficult to accept that the Opposition believe that everything can be done quicker, better and cheaper than the Government does it. Whether we are dealing with these or any of the other matters that hon. Members will ask us about today, their principle seems to be ‘We would have done it quicker, we would have done it better and we would have done it cheaper.’ Given that slogans are successful when they involve three words, I would recommend that they take forward to their campaign for the election – which, according to Mr Clinton, is to be held this month – the slogan ‘Better, quicker, cheaper’. What I cannot do is deliver a treaty that is as safe and secure as can be and as beneficial as can be and do it as quickly as we would like.

Hon. Members will know that one of the reasons my Government is unable to deal with other issues is because we are dealing with this issue. That is an opportunity for them to make political hay because if we are not there because we are doing this, they can be there in all of the other areas of politics. But what we cannot do, in facing the allegation that uncertainty is unhelpful, is accept responsibility for not being able to have brought the treaty sooner, because this is a process. We could have brought a text immediately and not recommended it, or we can do the hard work that is required to finesse this negotiation that delivers, as I have said, the success for all parties and the non-loss for all parties to be safe and secure, but we cannot do that and meet the hon. Member’s slogan that uncertainty is unhelpful, and we need to resolve that.

Having said that, I am going to go through the list of issues that he has asked about. I will start by saying that if in any of the areas that he had asked about today I felt it was possible to give more detail, I would have given more detail, and if I have not given more detail it is because the issue is either not yet agreed or not ripe for announcement because it is in the stew of gelling, if I might call it that, Mr Speaker.

The hon. Gentleman asked me, given how unacceptable we have all said, on the British side, the European Union mandate was, whether we would be seeking to agree things which are unacceptable. I am not going to get into the detail of the negotiation, but I will say that if I bring a text to this House and describe it as safe and secure it will not contain things which are 485 unacceptable. This is a negotiation, and negotiations are about give and take, but I have already indicated that compromise can only happen in areas which do not go to the fundamentals, do not go to sovereignty, jurisdiction and control, do not go into those issues, so the hon. Gentleman, I think, can make of that what I hope he understands from what I am saying.

I am not going to venture into saying how long I think it will take for a treaty text to be prepared because a treaty text could be prepared, probably, in a week, but whether that treaty text would be acceptable, or whether indeed the treaty text itself will require negotiation and finessing, is obviously something that I cannot predict. But as we all know, matters relating to Gibraltar often require a keener eye on every letter and word than they would if we were simply dealing with a commercial negotiation, so I am not going to venture to give my estimate. The hon. Gentleman knows I have given him my view privately, but I am not going to venture to put out there a timetable that creates an expectation, because people might then think that they should hold us to it and there is nothing to hold us to at the moment because this is a live, ongoing negotiation.

The hon. Gentleman asked me whether we would publish the text before it is ratified or agreed. Of course the text must be published before it is ratified. The process of ratification in the European system and in the British system requires publication, and, in Europe, in the official journal, and in the United Kingdom the process involves laying in the library for a particular period of time – and we anticipate the debate in this Parliament before then. That is the process that leads to the agreement of the treaty. All you have, otherwise, is the agreement of negotiators that they have reached the end of their negotiating mandate and have resolved a text which can be recommended to the ratifiers in the process of ratification. There is no agreement of a treaty which is not the ratification process; there is simply the negotiators and the executive saying, ‘This is the text that we put forward for ratification.’ I do not anticipate, therefore, that what would be published would be a draft at this stage, but it may be that a draft is published or that a draft leaks. A draft is not agreed.

The difficulty, of course, with publishing a draft is that all sides will then have their positions publicly put. On the European Union side there will be, if only the people in Spain take an interest, 45 million opinions about it; if the whole of the European Union takes an interest, 450 million opinions. On our side, of course, there will be 32,000 trenchant opinions, each of them probably slightly different, and potentially 60 million British opinions. You cannot negotiate on that basis. The executive is tasked with taking on the process of negotiation and then bringing the text for ratification. The Cabinet will certainly be seeing all of the drafts of the treaty because the Cabinet will be determining whether after each draft we continue to go to seek a next draft, what we seek to amend etc., which is the process that we have been undergoing, and I expect to informally be continuing to brief hon. Members.

510 May I just say, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Gentleman says that the last time we briefed him was last November: in fact, it is not. He might care to check that we briefed him again on 22nd November, we briefed him again on 6th December and we briefed him again on 18th January this year, and as he knows, after that process there was also a slower period in the negotiations, as I have told him today. (Interjection) I am told that those were the days when we did the briefings.

525 The hon. Gentleman asked me whether we would envisage giving the people of Gibraltar a say. Well, I think I have already answered that question on television. I have set out the circumstances where I believe, how I believe and when I believe a referendum should be provided for in respect of these arrangements beyond the hardening period, if we might call it that.

Of course, what we are negotiating will be for the benefit of all residents. That is to say whatever colour or hue of identity card a resident of Gibraltar enjoys, they will enjoy the benefits and fruits of the treaty that will be negotiated; they will enjoy the benefits of complete fluidity between Gibraltar and the Schengen space. That, of course, is exactly how I expressed it in a public statement that I made some three or four weeks ago in relation to issues which are being faced by holders of blue identity carnets at this stage, and that is already in the public domain. I welcome the hon. Gentleman giving me the opportunity to confirm that here today, because there is no question of the Government failing to have in mind the difficulties that are today being experienced by blue ID carnet holders and which in the past have been experienced by holders of other ID cards in Gibraltar. There are not just blue and red ID card holders, there are other colours of ID card which are held by individuals who have had difficulties in the past and in respect of which we have made representations, as we have made in respect of blue ID card holders.

This is an issue on which we have to, of course, recognise that today the Schengen border code applies for access to any part of the Schengen area for holders of British passports resident outside of the Schengen area, as we all are who reside in Gibraltar. And so we need to understand that we are benefiting, at different stages since the Withdrawal Agreement became the final Act, from administrative concessions granted at this Frontier, when there is no obligation to do so, and we have to be careful that we do not do anything that creates a level playing field between all holders of all colours of identity card before we have the treaty, because that level playing field might be a negative one rather than a positive one.

Mr Speaker, I know that the hon. Gentleman has questions on this subject on the Order Paper for later this week. I would just gently counsel that although it is easy to play to a constituency at this moment in the short term, it is in the interest of that constituency and the whole of the single constituency that is Gibraltar that we get this right for everyone and that we get it right as soon as possible on the basis of getting it right when we are satisfied that we have reached the end of the negotiation and we have the safe and secure arrangements that we want to bring forward.

The hon. Gentleman said, as an aside, that it had been some time since Parliament met. Yes, Parliament met last in September, and I think, if the hon. Gentleman goes back to the list of the rounds of negotiations that I gave him, every month since September we have been involved in the negotiations and we have also been involved in the Omicron variant etc. I think it is hugely important that in the view that we all have of how magnificent Gibraltar is, we should also remember how small Gibraltar is and how small its administration is. Despite views about whether the number should be bigger or smaller, it is a small administration and the people who prepare the parliamentary sessions and the people who appear in the parliamentary sessions are also the people who prepare and appear in the negotiations and are involved in the thinking and in the negotiations around the rounds. Each round of negotiations between the European Union and the United Kingdom also involves other rounds of contact at a technical level between the United Kingdom, Spain and Gibraltar and between different, variable geometries of that in a way that ensures that by the time you get to the round you are closer than you were last time and you are engaged in positive discussion. So I think it is important that when we look at the fact that Parliament has not met for that period we do understand that and that it is just sometimes impossible to stretch our resources further in order to be able to meet our obligations, although all our constitutional obligations are met. Indeed, as I think I said in an exchange of press releases with the hon. Member, we probably met more in the month that we have met very little than we met when hon. Members were involved in calling meetings of this House, although that is no consolation to us – we have oft wanted to ensure that we can meet every month, but since Brexit and since the pandemic it has just become impossible.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman asked me whether this is just a deal on mobility and goods or whether in fact we were going to take the benefit or obligations of acquis in other areas. The reality is that a deal on mobility of persons and mobility of goods is a deal that touches just about every area of the acquis. If we understand what Europe is about, as we all do, it started off as the European Coal and Steel Community and became the European Economic Community and the European Union in order to permit the movement of people and the movement of goods, and really most of the acquis is about that, about how you provide for that fluidity in a way that does not have corrosive or disruptive effects in the other areas to which you are free to move or move your goods. Schengen covers the passport-free movement of people, which creates the fluidity, but the whole acquis is about free movement and the free movement of goods. Why do I say that? Because a deal that seeks to provide that level of fluidity that we wish to achieve in effect requires you to plug into different parts of the treaty, take some parts of the acquis there is this – LPF, as 590 it is known in the lexicon of technical European negotiation, level playing field provisions. Level playing field provisions are to ensure that if somebody is producing in one place and selling into a market, there is at least the basis of a level playing field compared to production in another place, so that the competition is as fair as it can be in the context of the environmental impact of production etc. In Gibraltar there is no production, so that is a reason why there are some aspects of what we might otherwise have to take that we do not have to take.

595 For many years, the argument in relation to the transposition of directives – one of the big issues in the 1996 elections, no less big in 2011 when the list of directives outstanding that we inherited was longer than the one in 1996 – was about whether or not one had to transpose directives in Gibraltar that dealt with rivers or dealt with what are known as Article 100A issues, which were issues relating to goods which were on the market when they had free movement of goods. We were not in the free movement of goods acquis, but goods could move to Gibraltar 600 from the EU, just not with the benefit of no taxation.

So, all of those issues, if they were live when we were not in a free movement area involving goods, are very live now and we need to ensure that we get that balance right in a way that is going to be wholly beneficial to the Gibraltar economy. That is why I talk about enhanced prosperity for Gibraltar and shared prosperity between Gibraltar and the region, which is what 605 hon. Members will have heard me talk about before. Which areas? All of that is live within the negotiations.

In terms of checks at the Frontier, I have said before, on a number of occasions, that if you go into a free movement area with the Schengen zone, what you are doing is getting rid of the regular checks on people as they cross the frontiers between those states which have come together to 610 share an immigration protocol. Because you share the immigration protocol, you then do not check each other's members. There would therefore be that regular check disappearing between Gibraltar and Spain. Nonetheless, that does not need to mean less security; in fact, it can mean more security because security can be handled in different ways. The security of the state is not an issue that is up for grabs in negotiations with Schengen. We will be more secure in the future, 615 I am confident, even than we are today.

The hon. Gentleman asked me whether there would be joint patrols. That is not something that anybody has raised with us. I know that they have mentioned it before, but it is not an issue that has been raised with us. Therefore, in terms of security, I believe that the sum total of the arrangements that will be provided for will make Gibraltar much more secure when it comes to 620 security and much more secure when it comes to the inability of others to be able to create a stranglehold at the current crossing point between Gibraltar and Spain, as has traditionally been the case since 1986 when the Frontier was open. We have always, in this House, referred to the Frontier as the potential barometer of the relationship between Gibraltar and Spain because of the length of the frontier queues suggesting a higher or lower level of tension.

625 On customs issues relating to the Port and Airport, I am not able to say much at this stage because the negotiation is still a live negotiation, but I would say to hon. Members that they will, I believe, when we have finished this process, see that there will be very little change in the context of the excellent work that our customs officials do at Gibraltar Port and Gibraltar Airport. This is not an area like the Schengen area, where responsibility is vested in a member state; this 630 is a different sort of relationship, and so there will be very little to talk about there in terms of the job that our customs officers do today. I envisage very little change in that respect, indeed an enhancement of the role that they will undertake because of course these arrangements are all sought to be entered into for the purpose of, as I said before, enhancing Gibraltar's prosperity – that is to grow what it is that Gibraltar does, grow what it is that our economy provides for, in a way that shares that across the area around us. There will be so much more activity generated by 635 not least the optimism that this treaty, if it is possible to enter into in a safe and secure and beneficial way, will provide – then the economic opportunities will be obvious to the economic actors who I think will want to take them.

640 Mr Speaker, I think I have dealt as fully as possible with all the issues that the hon. Gentleman raised. He knows that I have been able to tell him a little more in some areas in private simply because at this stage, for all the reasons I have already stated in my earlier intervention, we cannot provide more public information. Indeed, it is a live negotiation, so a lot of the things that I might be able to say to him in private about where we are tactically and strategically I am obviously not able to say here because, although I am full of praise for the work done by our negotiating team 645 and indeed the negotiating team across the table, they are still across the table. We have not yet shaken hands, hugged each other and declared that we think we have reached an agreement that we think we can recommend. This is still live, and therefore, with the utmost of respect to those sitting on the other side of the negotiating table, I am not going to be able to say more at this stage.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

655 As much as I appreciate the information provided to me and to the Leader of the Opposition by Government in private briefings and the Chief Minister's update today, here in Parliament, I think the people of Gibraltar need clarification on how the Government plans to manage the day-to-day frictions that will continue to arise in this exceptional moment that we are living in, and into the final stretch of negotiations.

660 Together Gibraltar and I have always been very supportive of the work of our Government throughout these negotiations. We have gone as far as to make statements protecting the work of our negotiators from what we consider to have been past attempts at populist rabble-rousing on the subject. We are willing to be supportive of Government in this titanic and historic duty, and all we ask in return is that MPs are briefed on developments in a timely fashion and that the people of Gibraltar are informed effectively and accurately of anything that may impact their day-to-day 665 lives.

Despite the Chief Minister's explanations on confidentiality, the Government is, regretfully, failing to manage day-to-day issues that are causing enormous disruption to people's lives, like the issues faced by the Ambulance Service some months ago at the border and all the problems being faced by blue ID holders today, which, as comprehensible as they may be in both of these 670 cases, instead of having properly been guided and supported by their Government, people are being informed of policy changes by Spanish authorities at the Frontier and then told to turn around and go back home.

This situation has caused enormous grief to a lot of Gibraltarians, and while we understand that our Government is not always responsible for these unfortunate developments, we believe 675 that Government is responsible for duly informing and supporting its citizens in advance of any problems they might encounter at the border. I would, therefore, like the Government to clarify if they have plans to improve communications on these operational matters with the Spanish Foreign Ministry and the Spanish border authorities, and if it has put in place contingencies to better inform the public of anything that might affect them directly.

680 Lastly, Mr Speaker, just to clarify again, despite the reasons given by the Chief Minister for no meetings in this House and the need for resources, why is it that Ministers who do not necessarily deal directly with Brexit cannot attend Parliament to answer questions on things like housing, transport and education, like we see so often in the Houses of Parliament, in Westminster, when Prime Minister Johnson is not present? Or are all his Ministers involved in these negotiations with 685 him simultaneously?

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

690 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I thank the hon. Lady for that intervention. It is, of course, absolutely patently true that we have fallen out on many issues but not on this one, and I am very grateful for the fact that she has continued to plough her positive furrow in respect of this issue. I would just, please, ask her not to call it a 'titanic' task. I am a little superstitious when it comes to superliners that end up in Davy Jones's locker.

695 The reality is that it is sometimes very difficult for the Government to have in place what the hon. Lady calls a strategy for communication to alert people to the things that are about to happen at the Frontier and that people have only learnt about as a result of events at the Frontier, when the Government itself only finds out from events at the Frontier.

700 The Government itself sometimes finds that the less positive angels of some of the people who are involved in negotiations take over and steps are taken at the Frontier which are not conducive to the result that we want to achieve. Gibraltar is large and has many millions of citizens in the way that we sometimes see ourselves, but we are just 30,000 people and we have many different views as to what should happen at 9 a.m. in the morning with Frontier workers, depending on what is happening at the Frontier, let alone an administration the size of that which is currently

There are rules which now apply to Gibraltar which, in some instances, are being applied at the Frontier, and that sometimes is happening without warning. I do not want to hide that from people. I think we were explicit in saying that at the time, that these things happen. The minute

710 that they come to our attention we raise them with those who are our interlocutors. We sometimes can blunt the effect of that, we sometimes can stop the effect of that; we sometimes cannot change something which has happened as the result of another ministry that is not the one that we are negotiating with having responsibility for things and feeling that their legal obligation under the European rules requires that they do one thing or another. So it is not possible for us to have a strategy to deal with those things, because those things are not things

715 that we have on the radar to deal with.

There are many theories that one can have as to how those things happen, who knows they are going to happen and when they are going to happen. I would not want to delve further in that respect in public, other than to say that this is, of course, a live negotiation and different parties think that they have different levers and different parties think that different levers work in

720 different ways and will have different effects. The thing that I would leave in the public domain is that anybody who knows the Gibraltarian and sees the trajectory of the Gibraltarian people from 1967, and the 1960s when the restrictions started – anybody who analyses that will know that seeking to put pressure on a Gibraltarian or seeking to use a lever which somehow makes something uncomfortable for a Gibraltarian is not going to result in a Gibraltarian buckling; it is going to result in a Gibraltarian doubling down and wondering whether the party that is also the subject of a negotiation is as trustworthy as they believe. Indeed, knowing the Gibraltarian as I do, a policy of generosity is going to get people further with us all, a policy of respect is going to get people further with us and will lead to a better outcome which will be safe, secure and beneficial for Gibraltar and the Gibraltarians and for those who will benefit alongside us when our prosperity

It is also important to note, as I said earlier, that unfortunately there are some things that, at this moment, it is not possible to do anything other than complain about, and we have to complain about them knowing that it is not that somebody is taking away a right for us to do a thing. This is the big difference in Gibraltar politics today in the relationship with the United Kingdom and our 735 joint relationship with the European Union. From 1973 to 2019-20 we were members of the European Union and we had the right to do things, just like everybody else had. Obstacles were put in our way and our right to do things was curtailed. That was improper and that was the battle. From 2020 onwards we do not have the right to do things and we are seeking to negotiate to have a treaty right to do those things in a different way that does not cross any of the fundamental issues that we need to protect on sovereignty, jurisdiction or control, but enables us to once again

740 have rights to do those things and to be able to assert those rights. In the interim period, which arises for the reasons I have explained in my answer to the hon. Gentleman – not because we have not worked hard enough, not because we have not wished to resolve things – of course things are happening which we are dissatisfied with because they are no longer the benefits that we enjoyed until 2020 and had the right to do. We have to be careful, as negotiators, not to permit anything which anybody might have designed as an element of pressure to somehow skew the outcome of the negotiation or the way in which we carry out that negotiation towards the fundamental objective that we are seeking to fulfil.

There may be some – not in Gibraltar, not in Brussels or in London, but perhaps some in Madrid, not those we are negotiating with – for whom the best outcome would be that we should not have a treaty and that an element of pressure at our Frontier affecting a group of people, not the majority, might lead us to throw our toys out of the negotiating pram and not achieve the negotiating objective that we have sought to achieve and which we consider can be delivered in a safe, secure and beneficial way which does not affect our sovereignty, jurisdiction and control. So we have to be careful that we react in the right way and that we react in a way that is proportional and responsible, and although we are the smallest in the room we have the obligation, because it is our interests that are on the table principally, to be the most mature, the most adult in the room, and that is of course what we are going to do and how we are going to discharge our function. Everybody is behaving maturely and as adults in the room. Everybody is behaving in a way that is designed to deliver the right result.

I think the hon. Lady understands what I am trying to say, so that she sees that we are not failing to do anything that is designed to protect a collective that could be done, but we are unable to make assertions as of rights which are being vitiated, because this is not a case of rights being vitiated.

The British government has upwards of 150 Ministers in it, and countless civil servants. They are going to lose 10% of their Civil Service in the next few years but it is much more sizeable than us, even to scale. The issue with coming to Parliament to answer some questions but not others is that our Rules do not provide for it. Once a Parliament is called, hon. Members can file questions on any matter they wish involving any Ministry. We have not sought to curtail that in any way. We have not sought to change the way that hon. Members have the right to ask questions. That would have to be something that emerges from Select Committee when we have time to meet in the further parliamentary forms that we wish to see imposed. At the moment, when I sign the notice for hon. Members to have a meeting of Parliament, we are all, ironically, entitled to file such questions as we think are appropriate. Therefore, Mr Speaker, hon. Members could have filed questions to the negotiating team, to the team dealing with other matters, and therefore it would have been impossible to hold a meeting as the hon. Lady suggests. Neither have Opposition Members got in touch with us to say, 'We are happy to come to Parliament and only file questions in respect of housing or financial services.' It is also very difficult because in the way that our administration works, the Parliament team is in No. 6 Convent Place; the other ones, who handle all the questions and distribute all the questions ... every answer needs to be checked etc. So, although at first blush it might seem like you can have parliamentary sessions which only involve some Ministers coming to answer questions only on their issues, we would have to sit down together to agree a mechanism for that to happen in order for us to be able to do that and for me to be comfortable in calling a general meeting of the House and knowing that hon. Members were not going to ask questions of the Ministries that I will be responsible for.

I am open to that. I do hope that we are now at the end of the period of not being able to have meetings of the House, because I think the rounds of negotiation are likely to now happen before the summer. The COVID pandemic has lifted, which was also a difficult issue to deal with. People might think that Omicron was not as bad as it had been in the past, and it was not, but it still required a lot of work from Civil Contingencies and No. 6 etc., so there was a lot going on.

Even in the context of last year, when we had fewer meetings, I think we had more meetings than hon. Members had when they were in government in any year, let alone in that famous year when they only had one meeting. That is no excuse, because I want a Government that calls a 795 meeting every month. Hon. Members know – I have said it before – I am in Government not because I have a deep desire to be an executive; I am in Government because I enjoy being a parliamentarian. Coming here and debating with them gives full vent to what I enjoy most about being in Parliament. So we haven't not called meetings because we have wanted not to call meetings, we have not called meetings because we have literally not been able to commit to the 800 dates to be here. But the hon. Lady raises an interesting point, and if we felt that it were not possible to call another meeting for an extended period I am quite happy to sit down with her and with the Leader of the Opposition to agree a new set of informal parameters, if only for a short period whilst negotiations were to continue and they were to continue to be protracted, where they could ask questions of Ministries which were not the Ministries of the Deputy Chief Minister, of me or of other Ministers who might in any month be involved in the negotiations.

805 To answer the question also more widely, as I have said, senior officials from most Departments have been involved in these negotiations because there have been issues of transport and there have been issues of housing, there have been issues of health, there have been issues that affect financial services and standards etc. So we have all been involved at different stages. Preparing for the rounds and preparing to be present virtually in the rounds, in 810 some cases, or being present in person in the rounds or in the ancillary talks around the rounds has taken up time across the board in the public sector, not just principally No. 6 where the Deputy Chief Minister and I are based.

I hope that that answers all of the questions that she has raised at this stage. From my notes, I think it has. Can I suggest the next time she refers to a cruise liner in describing this process she 815 refer to the Love Boat instead of the Titanic?

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

820 I only have two areas of clarification which I wish to seek from the Chief Minister. The first is, quite simply, he mentioned the two more rounds to come and the next one would be early June, but I am not sure if I caught when the next round after that would be. Does he have a date in mind, or is there a timetable which would give us an indication of when the next round would be after that round in early June? And is there an end to these rounds, or will they continue until such 825 time as we reach an agreement or there is not an agreement?

Secondly, Mr Speaker, I would ask the Chief Minister about the customs union element of the discussions. He has made reference to various points, to how things will have to be done differently for goods and also the desire to remove the stranglehold at the Frontier, which of course is not just about passports but can also be about customs checks. In terms of how the 830 customs checks will be going on and who will be doing them for what purpose, I would be interested to learn if there is anything the Chief Minister can share with us, but specifically I would be interested if the Chief Minister can confirm one thing that I know both the Chamber and the Federation are concerned about, which is that when we talk about the customs union there will be no VAT-type system or VAT itself introduced, although I appreciate there may be some 835 alternative in mind, but specifically the EU-type VAT system which I know the Federation and Chamber are concerned about. Sir Joe has publicly stated that he does not believe that that will be the case, but I think it would be appropriate if the Chief Minister could confirm that to this House.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

840

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the hon. Gentleman raising those two very distinct issues, which I can deal with quite quickly, I hope.

845 First of all, whenever we have fixed a round for negotiation, we have not often envisaged that there would be another round unless ... I think in one instance we felt it was necessary to have two days for a particular thing, break, and then the following week come back for another two 850 days on another thing, and those were then ascribed two different rounds. We are going into the round in June, and then, once that round is over, we will determine whether what is needed is another round or whether what is needed is more contact at disparate technical levels between the technicians in different areas, who can then come together and have a different sort of meeting, which is more a technical, legal drafting meeting, rather than a round. The rounds are places where we are discussing things in principle etc. We will see, Mr Speaker. It may be that we 855 need one more round after June, that we need 20 more rounds after June or that we need a hundred more rounds after June, or none. It is not possible to say at this stage.

Do we continue with rounds until we reach agreement or we end? Well, I think that question answers itself: we continue with more rounds until we reach agreement or we end, although we do hope that when we end, we end with a treaty text that we can recommend, that the Cabinet approves, that I can bring to this House, that the House can approve and that can then go to the 860 process of ratification. This is a 'how long is a piece of string' question, and therefore I am unable to give any more clarity at this stage.

In terms of the customs union, the hon. Gentleman is the only person this afternoon who has referred to the customs union. I have not referred to the customs union at all during the course of my Statement. I have referred to movement of goods. Movement of goods is not a customs 865 union, although that is one element of what a customs union can involve. We are talking about the ability to get goods in and out of Gibraltar without a check at the frontier between Gibraltar and Spain, which has been a vexed issue. Ninety eight per cent of our goods enter through the Spain-Gibraltar frontier. It is worth pausing to think that 98% of our goods have entered through the commercial gate. What we are talking about is having different systems for the movement of 870 those goods. I would say to the hon. Gentleman that he should reflect on the fact that I have not used the terminology of the 'customs union' on purpose; there is a reason for that.

The hon. Gentleman knows that the EU's negotiating mandate seeks that VAT should apply in Gibraltar and that the Government, from the first moment, has said that we do not accept that that should be a proportionate way of dealing with price differentials in the context of our 875 economy and the European single market. The Government's position has not changed and will not change, but this is a live part of the negotiation. It is, I think, also fair to say that the European Union's position has not formally changed either, and if we are able to reach an agreement then that will be reflected in the agreement that is provided for and is published. The hon. Gentleman looks quizzical but there could be nothing simpler: two parties go into a negotiation with 880 conflicting positions, they maintain their conflicting positions until they are able to surface an agreed alternative position, and that is what we are talking about here.

The Federation and the Chamber will be briefed by the Government privately on Wednesday –
I think that appointment has already been fixed with some and is in the process of being fixed with others – and I look forward to being able to share the Government's views with them.

885 Sir Joe Bossano has now been in politics in Gibraltar for 50 years and – rightly, in my view, Mr Speaker – says what he wants when he wants and how he wants and should never be prevented from doing so. He is aware of the Government's position, he is aware of what the Government is negotiating, and if he has thought it appropriate to make a statement about the Government's position which might go a little further than I am prepared to go today, I fully 890 support and endorse his right to say it and what he said.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to make a contribution to seek clarification on the Chief Minister's Statement?

PAPERS TO BE LAID

895 Mr Speaker: We proceed to the next item on the Order Paper.

Clerk: (vi) Papers to be laid – the Hon. the Chief Minister.

900 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table the Annual Report of the Gibraltar Police Authority for the year ended 31st March 2021 and the Ombudsman’s Annual Report for the year ended 31st December 2020.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

905 Clerk: The Hon. the Minister for Digital and Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table the Financial Services Resolution and Compensation Committee Financial Statements ending 31st March 2018, 31st March 2019 and 31st March 2020.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Questions for Oral Answer

BUSINESS, TOURISM AND THE PORT

Q10/2022

Shore-to-ship power –
Government position

Question 10/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state its position on shore-to-ship power?

915 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Tourism.

Minister for Business, Tourism and the Port (Hon. V Daryanani): Mr Speaker, I can confirm that HMGoG is committed to incorporating shore-to-ship power projects as part of the overall strategy to increase the sustainability of the Port. Initiatives linked to providing shore power facilities will form part of the Net Zero Strategy workstreams going forward.

925 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer, although it is not much of an answer because I think it was in their 2019 manifesto where they stated ‘We will provide shore power’, and whilst it is important for our community to understand and recognise ... I think we would like a bit more reassurance as to how those commercial discussions are going.

I think there was a very strong commitment in the ‘Green Gibraltar the Child Friendly City’ manifesto of 2019, which set out quite clearly what the commitment was, and I wondered whether the Minister can give us an update as to how those discussions are going and whether they have found a location for doing shore-to-ship power.

Hon. V Daryanani: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member will appreciate that this is quite a complex situation and it is something that we have been working on.

As he will probably know, a lot of the ports around the world have set themselves a target of 2050 when they hope to achieve net zero. I am not saying that we have not spoken yet, internally, about targets – we are looking at things, we are discussing with the stakeholders; they have their views – but I think we are in a situation where we are on the right path with one of the aims to have shore-to-ship power.

There is the issue of electricity, of course. It would demand a lot of power in the area, so we are looking at the infrastructure involved – there are costs involved, very high costs, I must say – but with the world looking at a target of 2080 I think we have a lot of time to deal with this and I hope, as we move along over the next few months, I will be able to give you a little bit more information on this.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer insofar as the route home in relation to this particular issue.

I wonder whether the Government has given any thought to renting out a particular site to a commercial entity for the use. He speaks about the cost, which will be very significant, and the complexity of the particular project, which I do not underestimate, but I wonder whether the Government has given any thought to renting a particular location that would allow for a commercial entity to do that, because that could be fairly significant revenue into the Government.

Hon. V Daryanani: We are considering a lot of different options at the moment, but we have not yet identified a specific area or a specific property.

Cruise liner visits –

Policy re disembarkation and onshore excursions

955 Clerk: Question 11/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Further to Written Question 36/2021, please provide details of the current policy in respect of cruise liner visits, in particular in relation to the disembarkation of passengers and their participation in onshore excursions.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Tourism.

Minister for Business, Tourism and the Port (Hon. V Daryanani): Mr Speaker, in line with policy at the rest of entry points to Gibraltar, we have scaled down the restrictions and conditions placed on passengers wishing to disembark cruise liners in order to carry out shore excursions.

All vessels calling at our Port are still required to provide the Port Authority with a COVID declaration form where any confirmed or suspected cases of COVID-19 on board are listed. This is in addition to the standard Medical Declaration of Health, as mandated by IMO requirements, which has always been a requirement for all ships calling at the Port.

Any passengers listed on the COVID declaration as positive are required to stay on board and not join a shore excursion. This is in line with the industrywide protocols already put in place by the cruise liners themselves, whereby any passengers who are identified as being positive are isolated in their cabins to avoid dissemination among the rest of the passengers.

975 These procedures, which have been developed in close consultation with the Director of Public Health and Civil Contingencies as well as with the cruise liner industry, ensure that this important activity – namely cruise calls and the consequent passenger excursions – can be carried out in a safe manner.

Hon. D J Bossino: I thank the Minister for the very full reply.

980 The scaling down aspect: is it that they do not require a valid PCR or lateral flow test? Is that understanding correct?

May I also ask him, with the Speaker's permission, are these requirements home grown? In other words, are they Gibraltar requirements, not as a result of any international obligations?

985 Hon. V Daryanani: Mr Speaker, first of all, we do not require a PCR test, but the cruise lines themselves have testing facilities on most of their ships now, so they carry out tests regularly. I am told that every 48 hours some of them require them to be carried out, or 72 hours, so they are constantly checking on their passengers, so that if they have any issues they can deal with them and isolate them immediately in the middle of the cruise. As you can imagine, it would be a disaster, otherwise, if they suddenly had people walking around with COVID.

990 Yes, our rules are pretty much what most ports in the Mediterranean have, and we have tried to mirror them.

Hon. D J Bossino: I appreciate this is a very difficult question for him to answer, and perhaps even impossible at this stage, but does he have information as to whether there is going to be a further scaling down of those rules? We have seen a lot of cruise liners coming to our shores, which is obviously a welcome sight, and I am sure that that is something he will want to sell as part of his ongoing marketing of Gibraltar's Port.

1000 Hon. V Daryanani: The scaling down is not really something in my control. I would have to see how things are moving and we will react according to the health situation.

Q12-13/2022

Airline links –

Update

Clerk: Question 12/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

1005 Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide updates with regard to the hoped-for airline links with Ireland.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Tourism.

Minister for Business, Tourism and the Port (Hon. V Daryanani): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 13.

Clerk: Question 13/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Please state what the current state of play is with regard to flight connections to Gibraltar Airport in respect of Wizz Air, Eastern Airways and Volotea airlines.

1015 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Tourism.

Hon. V Daryanani: Mr Speaker, the Government is in continued discussions with regard to the possibility of opening air links with Ireland.

1020 Regarding Wizz Air, I refer the hon. Member to the joint statement issued by the airline and the Government on 6th December 2021.

Eastern Airways made a substantial loss on flying to Gibraltar last year. In our discussions with them earlier this year they suggested that the only way they could make the routes work was if the Government subsidised the operation. We took the prudent decision not to do so.

1025 I have clarified the Volotea situation on numerous occasions in Parliament, in the press and live on television. Nothing has changed.

Hon. D J Bossino: So, Mr Speaker, the position with Eastern Airways is that basically it is not coming to Gibraltar – is that correct?

1030 And presumably with Volotea there has not been a renewed attempt by the Government to try and attract that airline or any other Spanish airlines – is that the position?

I will then ask a question in relation to the Irish connection.

1035 Hon. V Daryanani: Mr Speaker, regarding Eastern Airways, I do not know whether the hon. Gentleman has heard what I said: we took the prudent decision not to do so, so that is where the matter ends.

With regard to Volotea or any other Spanish airline, the treaty has not ended yet.

1040 Hon. D J Bossino: And in relation to Ireland, can he provide any more substantive updates? I think he mentioned ongoing discussions and we still had an intention to bring that air link to Gibraltar.

I am reading from an article, and I cannot say the source because I do not know where it came from, but he does say that he is hoping that we can do something with Ireland and he makes a reference in that context to the air link he was successful in securing vis-à-vis Scotland. Presumably that is not predicated on any deal with the EU. Can he confirm that?

1045 Hon. V Daryanani: Ireland is Ireland, and it could be Belfast or it could be Dublin. I do not know which article he is referring to, but it has nothing to do with the link with Scotland. We are talking to two or three different airlines about the possibility of different routes to Ireland, but obviously at this moment in time I do not really have anything further to add.

1050 Hon. D J Bossino: By a point of clarification, I ask a question, with your permission, Mr Speaker. In fairness, he does not say it has a direct link to the Scottish connection, so to speak. Just to confirm that.

1055 Hon. V Daryanani: That is right, Mr Speaker, it has no link to the Scotland route.

Q14/2022
Floating hotel – Likelihood and location

Clerk: Question 14/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide an update as to whether Gibraltar is likely to see a floating hotel establishing itself here; and, if so, where the location would be.

1060 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Tourism.

Minister for Business, Tourism and the Port (Hon. V Daryanani): Mr Speaker, the Government has been approached by a number of potential operators of a floating hotel in Gibraltar. Nothing concrete has been agreed.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, a couple of questions, if I can elicit this further information. This arises, as he will recall, from news that Gibraltar had received that there was a potential floating hotel – I think there was a brochure with a location at the Small Boats Marina: a barge which was situated in Medway in Kent. It did not look particularly attractive, I must say. In that context, I think Government said that that particular barge was not coming to Gibraltar. But he said that the Government had been approached back in October by a number of potential operators of luxury floating hotels. He says that not much progress has happened, but can I ask him now many have approached him and what does he think is the likely prospect of that happening?

1075 Hon. V Daryanani: Mr Speaker – (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) Ah, right.

Mr Speaker, the Member opposite will understand, as a lawyer, client confidentiality. I cannot give out information on who has approached or who has not approached. It is very difficult to say because we are approached by many investors, not only to bring a floating hotel but to carry out lots of different business in Gibraltar. These things take time, more so when we are still in a pandemic, when people are thinking twice about making investments. We are discussing with a handful of possible investors. Let's see where the discussions take us, and when and if we have anything concrete we will make the announcement and then he will know.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, that is fair enough. He knows full well that instinctively I will not ask him to reveal any confidences. I fully appreciate that, but I have simply asked for numbers so that the Opposition and the public can gauge what level of interest there is out there for this particular line of business. I have asked him for the number, that is all, rather than just 'many' – but with all due respect to him.

1090 Hon. V Daryanani: A handful, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, that is not really an answer. A handful is not a precise number. I am not asking him ... perhaps I am asking him to be a bit more forensic about it. He is playing around with words. Does he have that information? If he does not have that information in the House today, it is fair enough, but I am asking him specifically is he willing to provide that answer, or is he suggesting that even that information is of a confidential nature which cannot be expressed across the floor of this House?

Hon. V Daryanani: Mr Speaker, I feel uncomfortable providing really any information because there are people here who have put money into looking at things and how they want to do things, and I do not feel comfortable in providing whether there is one, whether there are two or whether there are three. I am happy to speak to him behind the Speaker's Chair, if he wishes.

1100

Hon. D J Bossino: I will accept that offer, Mr Speaker, but I really do think that it is information which does not transgress the issues that he has raised in any way, shape, manner or form. I suspect that he does not have the information, but let's see. I will have a word with him.

1105

It is a pity, unfortunately, when this offer is made, that the people of Gibraltar do not get the information which ought to be made public. I simply do not understand why that in itself is confidential in nature.

1110

Mr Speaker: Next question. (Interjections)

Hon. V Daryanani: I do know the number because I deal with them directly, so do not say that I do not know. I do know how many people have shown interest.

1115 Mr Speaker: Let's proceed. Let's continue.

Q15-18/2022

Minister for Tourism's foreign visits – Delegations, costs, meetings, new business secured and duration of trips

Clerk: Question 15/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

1120 Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide the following details relating to the Minister for Tourism's visit to Seatrade Cruise Global in Miami. It is five pieces of information I would like: (i) who comprised the Government's delegation; (ii) the total cost of the trip, broken down into air travel costs, lodgings and entertainment; (iii) who the Minister met; (iv) what new business has been secured as a result of the trip; and (v) the duration of the trip.

1125 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Tourism.

Minister for Business, Tourism and the Port (Hon. V Daryanani): Mr Speaker, I shall answer this question together with Questions 16, 17 and 18.

1130 Clerk: Question 16/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide the following details relating to the Minister for Tourism's visit to Edinburgh. It is (i) to (v) and exactly the same information. I am not sure if Mr Speaker wants me to read it out again for the sake of Hansard.

1135 Mr Speaker: For the sake of Hansard, you should.

Hon. D J Bossino: (i) Who comprised the Government's delegation; (ii) the total cost of the trip broken down into air travel costs, lodgings and entertainment; (iii) who the Minister met; (iv) what new business has been secured as a result of the trip; and (v) the duration of the trip.

1140 Clerk: Question 17/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

1145 Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide the following details relating to the Minister for Tourism's working breakfast in London in March last year: (i) who comprised the Government's delegation; (ii) the total cost of the trip broken down into air travel costs, lodgings and entertainment; (iii) who the Minister met; (iv) what new business has been secured as a result of the trip; and (v) the duration of the trip.

1150 Clerk: Question 18/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

1155 Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide the following details relating to the Minister for Tourism's visit to the CONNECT Route Development Forum in Tampere, Finland: (i) who comprised the Government's delegation; (ii) the total cost of the trip broken down into air travel costs, lodgings and entertainment; (iii) who the Minister met; (iv) what new business has been secured as a result of the trip; and (v) the duration of the trip.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Tourism.

1160 Hon. V Daryanani: Mr Speaker, in relation to Question 15, the Government's delegation was comprised of Mr John Reyes, Chief Executive of the Ministry of Business, Tourism and the Port; Mr John Ghio, Captain of the Port; and myself. The cost of air travel was £9,664.14, and lodgings was £3,254.28. There was zero cost on entertainment. I took the opportunity to meet with several leading cruise line executives. The duration of the trip was three days in Miami and overnight in London, due to flight timings.

1165 In relation to Questions 16 and 17, the Government's delegation was comprised of Mr John Reyes, Chief Executive of the Ministry of Business, Tourism and the Port; Ms Maxine Sene, Press and Communications Officer of the Ministry of Business, Tourism and the Port; Ms Tracey Poggio Magnus, UK Head, Media & Marketing, Gibraltar Tourist Board; and myself. The total cost of the trips were as follows: £1,300 return Gibraltar-London; £1,793.60 London-Edinburgh. Lodgings were £990 in London and £882 in Edinburgh. Entertainment was £940 – reception in Edinburgh. 1170 In London, I met with travel writers from Business Traveller, Conde Nast Traveller, BA Highlife and Travel Bulletin amongst others, and the editor of Business Traveller. In Edinburgh, I met with travel agents and the local Scottish press. The duration of the trip was one day in London and one day in Edinburgh.

1175 Finally, in relation to Question 18, the Government's delegation was comprised of Mr John Reyes, Chief Executive of the Ministry of Business, Tourism and the Port, and myself. The cost of air travel was £3,387.23 and lodgings was £1,117.67. There was zero cost on entertainment. I took the opportunity to meet with several airline executives. The duration of the trip was two days in Finland and overnight in London on the way back, due to flight timings.

1180 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, it has cost a lot of money in terms of expenditure – particularly, obviously, the US trip, as one perhaps would expect – but it will require more analysis.

The issue that I feel he ought to try to answer, and I am not sure that he has in terms of one of my subsidiary questions from the main question, is what business he has been able to secure from these trips. I appreciate that there is always a tension with these things – or, at least, there ought to be – that before the Government decides to expend money which it can probably ill afford given the current economic and financial situation we are in, and this is on their own admission, it chooses wisely where to exert its efforts and invest, both in terms of financial investment – I apologise that there is a bit of a long preamble to this – in terms of financial investment and in terms of the Minister's and his team's time in relation to this. 1185 1190

Can he tell me, firstly, whether he can provide an answer to the fourth subsidiary question I asked, as to whether he has been able to secure any new business for Gibraltar; and in relation to all of these trips that I have mentioned, whether he thinks any of them are not worth pursuing any further, or whether he intends ... which ones he wishes to pursue further or which new ones he is thinking of pursuing further for the sake of attracting new business to Gibraltar? In other words, really what I am asking him is whether he has a plan in relation to marketing, and, if he does, what it is and whether he sits down with his team, and how often he does, to assess whether that plan and his trips are proving fruitful in any way. 1195

1200 Hon. V Daryanani: Mr Speaker, he complains when I do not go marketing to Madrid; now he is complaining that I am marketing elsewhere. He needs to – (Interjection) I am just making a point.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): [Inaudible] hipocresia [Inaudible]

1205 Hon. V Daryanani: Exactly, I am asking him.

What the hon. Member needs to understand is that the one who is taking the decisions is me, because I am the Minister for Tourism. He is not in Government and I cannot be expected to do what he thinks I should do, because that is not how it works.

1210 Regarding new business, let me tell him that new business does not just happen with one meeting or two meetings; it can take years. He asks whether I am going to pursue going to these conferences. To give the example of CONNECT, it was the first time the Government of Gibraltar has been to this conference. It was a decision I took because I felt that, considering we are 1215 negotiating a treaty, there might be a possibility that air transport might form part. If it does form part of the treaty, then it will open up different possibilities for Gibraltar, so that is why I chose to go to CONNECT. Of course I will assess whether I go next year. I might or I might not – it all depends.

Insofar as Seatrade Global is concerned, I was told that Gibraltar has been going for 25 years.
It is the most important cruising conference in the world. Let me tell him that I am glad I went because it showed me how much interest there is in Gibraltar and it showed me how much inroad 1220 we have made by the way we are marketing and the way we are promoting our Port – the constant cruise calls which are promoted on social media and the top executives of all major cruise companies stopping me and asking how Gibraltar was doing. Of course, this shows that we are on the right path, so I will continue going to Miami and, actually, to any cruising conference that I feel will help Gibraltar, because I am extremely keen on making sure that Gibraltar becomes the 1225 premier cruising destination in the Mediterranean.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, unfortunately his reply look I am really trying with the hon.
Member. He and I have had our differences. Clearly, we continue to have them, it seems. He just needs to learn how to answer in a reasonable way and fully, and I am afraid to say ... I will not rise 1230 to the bait. I am not sure he is even trying to place a bait before me. I really do not think so; I do not think he is that clever, to be honest. The hon. Member has not –

Mr Speaker: I think that is out of order.

1235 Hon. D J Bossino: Happy to withdraw it, Mr Speaker

Mr Speaker: And apologise.

1240 Hon. D J Bossino: And I apologise to him.

Mr Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, what he has revealed to us in that reply is that he does not have a plan. He alights, in respect of one of the questions I asked, which is the Seatrade cruise place to 1245 be in Miami, which he rightly points out our Government used to attend and they have continued with the practice ... That is an obvious reply and I am glad that he went. He mentions the CONNECT conference that he went to. He has not answered, for example, in relation to that particular one, where he is treading on new ground, whether he has made the analysis as to whether he thinks he will be going in the future.

1250 Let me ask him a specific question. He tells us, and I quote, that the one who takes the decisions is him, and presumably he is the one who intends to continue to attend these conferences and meetings etc. The specific question is what he envisages in relation to the newly appointed CEO, who happens to be my brother but that is totally irrelevant. Does he intend to allow the new CEO 1255 to take charge of these things, or will he be the one to continue to lead in relation to these marketing trips?

Hon. V Daryanani: I am not going to rise to the bait, whether or not he knows that he laid it.

1260 What can I say? The Member opposite has become a one-trick pony, Mr Speaker. People are tired of his negativity, his immaturity and his pessimism. He has become so predictable –

Hon. D J Bossino: ‘Immature’ – that cannot be parliamentary, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Yes, I think the Member is absolutely right. You cannot say things like this.

1265 Hon. V Daryanani: Immature? It has been said across the House on a number of occasions, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: No, no, no, I think you should withdraw that particular word. (Hon. D J Bossino: And apologise.) And apologise, yes.

Hon. V Daryanani: I have heard it on many occasions. I would never use a word that I thought I could not use, Mr Speaker. (Interjection)

1275 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the Government considers that that language is parliamentary, but we always take your advice, and although it might be parliamentary, if it is not temperate ... We would always seek to ensure that we have a temperate debate across the floor of the House. You rightly pulled up the hon. Gentleman on that side, so on this side we will follow your advice, of course.

1280 Hon. V Daryanani: So, Mr Speaker, I withdraw that comment.

Hon D J Bossino: And apologise.

Hon. V Daryanani: And apologise. (Laughter)

1290 Hon. V Daryanani: I apologise, but the hon. Member has said many things to me that need apology, Mr Speaker, and ‘immature’ is one of the ... Anyway, Mr Speaker, I will follow your ruling, of course.

He is the only one who does not want to see business in Gibraltar, or it seems that he is the only one. He does not want to see me go out and try to achieve to bring business to Gibraltar. The industry and the stakeholders all – (Interjection by Hon. D J Bossino) Mr Speaker, it just shows you the lack of respect he has for this Parliament, but what can I say? As I said, all he wants ... He does not want me to go out there and try to bring new business to Gibraltar, but he will not stop me from doing so. I will continue working hard to make sure that we can bring Gibraltar back to a strong economy. He does not understand that I am ...

1295 I am sorry that I have to repeat this, Mr Speaker, because he constantly repeats the same thing. All the comments that he makes are damaging to Gibraltar. It is not like before when you made comments and they were just for local consumption. Today, people abroad, executives who follow Gibraltar, who work with Gibraltar, see these comments being made on social media by politicians, by Members of the Opposition, and they ask me, ‘The other politicians in Gibraltar, don’t they want to see new business for Gibraltar?’ I say, ‘Well, I suppose they want to, but in their desperation to win the odd vote here and there, this is the game that they play.’ In other countries, when it comes to this type of message, politicians tend to work together to promote their economy, but we know what the hon. Member Mr Bossino is here for: he laps up the oxygen of controversy for his own political gain.

1300 I am sorry that I have to repeat this, Mr Speaker, because he constantly repeats the same thing. All the comments that he makes are damaging to Gibraltar. It is not like before when you made comments and they were just for local consumption. Today, people abroad, executives who follow Gibraltar, who work with Gibraltar, see these comments being made on social media by politicians, by Members of the Opposition, and they ask me, ‘The other politicians in Gibraltar, don’t they want to see new business for Gibraltar?’ I say, ‘Well, I suppose they want to, but in their desperation to win the odd vote here and there, this is the game that they play.’ In other countries, when it comes to this type of message, politicians tend to work together to promote their economy, but we know what the hon. Member Mr Bossino is here for: he laps up the oxygen of controversy for his own political gain.

1305 Finally, Mr Speaker, I would just like to say one thing. I am told that the Member opposite is the spokesman for ‘Style of Government’. Well, before he aspires to Government, he should look first at his style of Opposition: destructive, uninspiring and toxic.

Mr Speaker: This is going to be the last supplementary.

1315 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I have used this adjective to describe it in the past and I have not been called to order, re not him but what he said, and it is a load of fluff. He has not answered the point and he has certainly has not answered the specific point in relation to the CEO and the role he is going to play.

1320 Can I ask him this? This is a point of detail, and he did provide it in his reply but I would ask him, because I was not able to take a note, did he say that Maxine Sene – who I do not know, but he mentioned her name – is part of the press office team? Is that what he said? And, if so, is that his press office or that of No. 6? And, if the latter, why did he take her on the Edinburgh trip? It is not very clear to me.

1325 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, just to clarify, because these are issues that affect across the Government, press officers often travel with Government Ministers when there is a need for them to do so. They have travelled to the United Kingdom and they have travelled to the United States of America on a number of occasions. They have sometimes travelled to Spain and other places where it is considered appropriate that members of the press should travel with members of the Government for the purposes of being able to record a message or to deliver a message in a more effective way for Gibraltar's ends. I do not think this is something we originated, I think it is something that originated ... I am not going to say in their time, I am going to say in the past. I think that is just the way that things have oft developed in history. There is nothing new there, and I am surprised that the hon. Gentleman is asking about it.

1330 But I wanted to clarify the question that he has asked repeatedly – I think he has asked it three times. The hon. Member, I think, wishes that it should be answered on behalf of the whole Government because it is a question about how Government functions. Of course, when a chief executive officer is appointed to a role, he is a chief and executive officer. That is to say he is in executive control of a Department. The Minister becomes responsible for policy when there is such a person involved and that person runs the mechanism.

1340 So, Mr Speaker, what Mr Bossino is asking is whether Mr Bossino will be allowed to run the Department. Mr Bossino should know that as soon as Mr Bossino arrives, Mr Bossino will be the one making the decisions, so that Mr Bossino can ask whether Mr Bossino has done something right or not, and then ensure that the Minister is not the one he blames for everything going wrong. It will be the fault of Mr Bossino.

1345 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q19 and Q21/2022
Gibraltar Tourist Board – Changes to staff complement

Clerk: Question 19/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Well, let's see.

1350 Please state whether any changes have been made recently to the staff complement at the Tourist Board; and, if so, please provide details of what these are.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Tourism.

1355 Minister for Business, Tourism and the Port (Hon. V Daryanani): Mr Speaker, I will answer this together with Question 21.

Clerk: Question 21/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1360 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Why has a vacancy been seen circulating in the Gibraltar Tourist Board when a senior member of staff has been transferred out and the filling of posts from those who have retired has been abolished?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Tourism.

1365 Hon. V Daryanani: Mr Speaker, the Government does not comment on any internal transfers. The Government is unaware of what vacancy the hon. Lady is referring to.

1370 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I find it hard to believe that the Minister can answer in such a way, because there has been quite a bit of commentary on a particular senior member of staff who was quickly and swiftly asked to transfer. My question leads to the concerns and the impact that this has on the morale of the staff, given their loyalty and their pride in the role over many years. I believe that the Minister knows exactly what I am asking about, and I would ask him to perhaps enlighten this House and the community, and perhaps even his staff, on Government plans to retain a happy and motivated staff at the Tourist Board.

1375 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, all moves of civil servants and members of the Gibraltar Development Corporation, of which I am the Chairman, are handled through the Department of Human Resources or the secretariat of the GDC. All of the officers who are clerical officers of the Civil Service and the GDC are freely transferrable and are often transferred.

1380 Sometimes when these transfers occur, the sorts of sentiments that the hon. Lady refers to are the first sentiments that seem to come to the fore, but in my experience in Government, and indeed in Opposition, a new leader soon settles in with the team and the team soon follows and supports their new leader, and the individual who has moved, although not wishing to move on, usually moves on to do an excellent job somewhere else. Excellent leaders are excellent leaders wherever you put them. That is the benefit of having a professional Civil Service and what having the GDC as a supplier of services to the Civil Service has enabled us to do.

1385 I am very confident in the changes that have been made during the course of the change of financial year, where the Minister for Economic Stability and I, together with the Financial Secretary, have been working with each Department head, not just on issues relating to other charges in Departments but also on personnel changes, and we will see that produce the efficiency that Gibraltar requires.

1390 We do not routinely – and neither did they when they were in government, Mr Speaker, and I assume no one will in the future – comment on specific moves of civil servants across the floor of the House. We have always considered that that is a matter which touches and concerns the dignity of the individual in question, and therefore we support the continued excellent work that the officers of the Hon. Minister for Tourism’s Department are doing, as well as those who were in that Department, who did excellent work and are now moving to do excellent work elsewhere.

1395 That is the nature of the Service. It is an established principle in the Civil Service – and it would be one which I think would find common agreement between Members on all sides of the House – and should not change, to ensure that Gibraltar’s administration has the business efficacy that it needs to have and always has had since it was created.

1400 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I would like to be a bit more specific. The hon. Member said – and there has been an alignment in terms of the answers that we have heard from both Ministers in relation to this – that they do not comment on internal transfers, but can I gather from what the Hon. the Chief Minister has said that there have been moves within the GTB? And, if so, can he confirm that that is the case?

The specific point that I make is that this issue has been the subject of comment in social media. Without mentioning names – because the Hon. the Chief Minister is absolutely right that this House has, in the past ... Indeed, when I have asked questions in my previous incarnation in the 1410 previous Parliament, I asked a particular Minister for details of the employees in his Department and he gave me a whole spreadsheet with names, and then that was actually commented on by the Speaker at the time, Mr Canepa, that he should not do that, provide names. I think that is absolutely right, so in follow-up questions I did not refer to the names. But I will refer to this particular message that I received, and indeed many people in Gibraltar received in relation to ...

1415 I think it is of public interest to not ignore this. It is out there. I do not propose to quote the entirety of it. I can assure Members I have no intention of mentioning any names – although they are out there in the public – out of respect to those individuals, but I will just read two paragraphs. The title is ‘What’s happening in the GTB?’ So there is concern. What I ask the Minister to do, once I have read this, is to assuage any concerns that there may be in relation to, as the hon. Lady says, 1420 morale etc. This post says, and I quote:

Employees have been transferred, unwillingly, at the Minister’s whim, from the GTB to posts that they are not suited for.

This is the second paragraph, albeit the third one in the text, and there are about seven or eight:

Valuable and longstanding members of staff are not being used for their strengths. Essentially, they are being ignored and almost ostracised.

I would like the hon. Member to comment in relation to that, if he can.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is a message which I received as well. It is a common 1425 things, these days. If you want to get attention, you circulate a WhatsApp to everyone in your address book, everyone in your address book circulates it to their mates, and before you have said Bob’s your uncle 32,000 Gibraltarians have read the same WhatsApp message and then started to send it to each other – so I think I got it about 32,000 times!

1430 It is not dissimilar to the sort of thing that used to happen before WhatsApp was the chosen method of communication. I have also seen similar messages posted in places on social media and in the past I have seen very similar messages which I have had regard to when I have been in Opposition and which I have understood the nature of when I have been in Government. That is to say that there are people who are moved from where they are who do not wish to be moved, and then wish to recriminate on the basis that they have been moved.

1435 These are decisions which are taken for the very opposite of the reason that the hon.
Gentleman has quoted from the WhatsApp message. In other words, there is no question of valuable and longstanding members of staff not being used to their strength and essentially being ignored or ostracised; it is quite the opposite. And it is not the case that the Government considers that people have been moved to posts for which they are not suited; quite the opposite.

1440 We have a higher regard for the people in question than the person who sent the WhatsApp, because we do believe that they are eminently well suited for the things that they are now going to be asked to do, which are not the things that they were doing, because we believe that they are really well qualified, we believe that they are excellent professionals and we believe that they can turn their hands to what it is that they are being and will be asked to do.

1445 It is not true that people are not being used to their strengths and are being ignored and ostracised, although anybody whose opinion might not be the one pursued on a particular occasion might take the view that that is the case, that because what they have asked should be the case does not happen they being ignored or ostracised. I would simply say that, quite the opposite, because we might not agree with something that a particular individual may 1450 recommend on one occasion, it does not mean that we will disregard that person’s opinion or advice in other matters where we might agree, or where, in fact, that person’s opinion may lead us to a better decision to be made in a particular area.

1455 Mr Speaker, in fact I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for raising this because it has demonstrated in glorious technicolour exactly what I have said to the House before: that they are sometimes led in their questioning by rumour and tittle-tattle. Here, the rumour and tittle-tattle is set out explicitly not in something which is metaphysical, but in something which is physically able to be seen by all of us. They are acting on the basis of an anonymous WhatsApp exchange, giving it the credibility of raising the issue in this Parliament, actually reading out this physically set-out rumour and part of the innuendo provided for, and in that way Mr Speaker seeking to create dissent and to, I assume, seek to curry political advantage. In, fact what is happening is that the Minister – in keeping with other Ministers, because this has happened across the Service – is making changes, with the support of my Office and the support of the Human Resources department and the GDC secretariat, to ensure that we deliver, in the way that we consider is best suited to deliver, the policies that we are elected to deliver. (Interjection) We are maximising the resources that we have in the way that is best designed to deliver efficiency, and I thought that they supported us in that.

1460 The individuals mentioned in this WhatsApp – and we have all read it, so we see the names – are individuals the Government holds in the highest regard, who have done an excellent job wherever they have been. There are individuals who are not named here, who are equally highly regarded by the Government, who are also moving to other areas and will do an equally excellent job wherever they go. Some of them will work more closely with me going forward, rather than with the hon. Gentleman; other people who have worked closely with me will be working with the hon. Gentleman; and new people from outside will be working even more closely with the hon. Gentleman in discharging the functions that they will have come to discharge to Gibraltar.

1470 It is quite remarkable to see an Opposition not just operate on the basis of rumour and tittle-tackle but actually stick their colours to the mast, to the objective existence of this anonymous rumour and tittle-tattle, and I am very grateful to the Hon. Mr Bossino for having done so, because I no longer have to portend that that is what they are doing when asking questions and can actually point to the fact that they did so.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q20/2022

Gibraltar Tourist Board – CEO salary, benefits and location

Clerk: Question 20/2022. The Hon. K Azopardi.

1485 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, further to the Government's announcement regarding the identity of the CEO of the GTB, can we have details of his salary, other financial or contractual benefits and where he will be based?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Tourism.

1490 Minister for Business, Tourism and the Port (Hon. V Daryanani): Mr Speaker, Mr Kevin Bossino, the new CEO of the GTB, will be paid a salary of £140,000 per annum. Mr Bossino will be working between Gibraltar and London, as required. A flexible arrangement has been agreed with him.

1495 Hon. K Azopardi: Can I just ask about that aspect, the between Gibraltar and London? Is it that the new CEO is not actually going to be based in either Gibraltar or London? Is he going to be based in both? How is that going to work? Can the Minister provide a bit more detail about that?

Hon. V Daryanani: Mr Speaker, as I have just stated in my answer, we have a flexible arrangement with Mr Bossino.

1500 Never had I expected that a Gibraltarian would tick all the boxes I was looking at. This is a demand-driven situation, so it might be that he will spend more time in London at some points, then in Gibraltar. It all depends on where he is required.

1505 You need to understand that Mr Bossino is coming to Gibraltar and this is one of the situations that he wanted to ... He was happy to be based in London principally, but obviously he has a family in Gibraltar and he wanted that to be taken into account, and we have done that.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member should not underestimate the Gibraltarian so much. (A Member: Hear, hear.) When I look at the jobs that the Government put out, I hope, first, that the Gibraltarian does get it. I am sure there are lots of talented Gibraltarians out there.

1510 Does the hon. Member not know where Mr Bossino is going to live? Really, that is what I am asking. Surely, in the discussions on reaching a flexible arrangement, he must have established where he is going to be living.

Hon. V Daryanani: Mr Speaker, what I was not expecting was a Gibraltarian to apply for a job, to live in London. That is what I was saying. He will now live in both Gibraltar and London. That is the point I am making. He will work in London and he will work in Gibraltar, so he will live in London and also live in Gibraltar.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how much of the year does he expect Mr Bossino to be living in London for?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, that is an issue which is indeterminate. After the first year of operation we will be able to tell the hon. Gentleman, without the fear of misleading the House inadvertently, how much of the time Mr Bossino has spent in Gibraltar and how much he has spent in London, and then we will have an empirical set of answers that we can give hon. Members.

1525 The hon. Member has made clear that we expect Mr Bossino to be working in London as much as in Gibraltar, whereas before – and this is the issue they are trying to get to – the head of the GTB was based in Gibraltar. We expect him to be spending a lot of his time in London. Whether that will be the majority or not ... Let's not crystal-ball gaze. Let's make an assessment after the end of 365 days, and then we can tell them where he has spent the most time.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, is it not actually the case that they have changed their view, and having put an advert out for someone who was going to be based in England and having found the right person – who happens to be a Gibraltarian – to do that job, that person is going to be based in Gibraltar, although that person may, of course, work in England from time to time? Of course you have to go to England, which is an important market for us, but in reality that person will be based in Gibraltar.

1535 If that is the case and the position has changed, we welcome it, because that person should, in fact, direct tourism policy from Gibraltar.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, I am afraid, Mr Speaker, in that case hon. Members will not welcome this, because it is anticipated that actually Mr Bossino will be doing a lot of his work in London and from London.

1545 Mr Bossino is not moving back to Gibraltar. He is going to be moving to Gibraltar and to London. He will be based in London for a considerable part of his time, and it may be that that is the majority of his time. We will know whether it is or not at the end of the year, and then Mr Speaker we can be accused not of changing our minds but of having permitted the flexibility to make 1550 decisions that Mr Bossino is asking that Mr Bossino should have, to ensure that Mr Bossino is the one making the decision even as to where he should be.

Let's be very clear, Mr Speaker. The hon. Gentleman has demonstrated in his last question that all he was doing with his purported forensic cross-examination was seeking to make a cheap political point. Point made. Target missed.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1560 Just two questions. Could the Minister advise the length of the contract? And if I recollect correctly – and I am happy to be corrected – I believe the Minister, at the time when he said this person would be based in London, said it would actually achieve a net cost saving. If that is the case, could he tell the House what that net cost saving is?

Hon. V Daryanani: Mr Speaker, the net cost saving will be announced during the Budget.

1565 The contract is an indefinite contract. (Interjection) Yes. I do not have the contract with me, but ... I would need to check that, but ... Yes, it is better that I check it and I will write to him and let him know.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS, EMPLOYMENT, HOUSING AND SPORT

Q32/2022

Youth clubs –

Opening hours and statistics re regular use

1570 Clerk: Question 32/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can Government provide updated details of the opening times at the youth clubs, together with statistics of how many youngsters are using these facilities on a regular basis?

1575 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I now hand over to the hon. Member opposite the information requested.

Answer to Q32/2020

Laguna Youth Club

Thursday 4.30pm to 7.30pm

Attendance: between 20 to 30 young people

Youth Centre

Tuesday 4.30pm to 7.30pm

Wednesday 6.00pm to 9.00pm

Thursday 5.00pm to 8.00pm

Friday 6.00pm to 9.00pm

Attendance: between 20 to 35 young people

Dolphins Youth Club

Tuesday 5.00pm to 8.00pm

Wednesday 5.00pm to 8.00pm

Thursday 5.00pm to 8.00pm

Attendance: between 25 to 50 young people

Weekend opening is on a Youth Club rotation basis.

1580 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the schedule the Minister has provided. My first quick look at it shows that there is actually no opening during weekends per se, be it the summer or winter schedule. Can the Minister expand upon why this policy of not opening or making the premises available for youngsters' use during the whole weekend?

1585 Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, the youth clubs are open during the weekend. It says, in the answer to the question, that weekend opening is on a youth club rotation basis. At the bottom it says on a 'rotational basis'. That means that there is always one youth club open. It is to do, basically, with programmes that they might have. Sometimes, if the programme is in the Dolphins Youth Club, they open the Dolphins Youth Club during the weekend on a rotational basis, like it says.

1590 Every weekend there are programmes. Sometimes it is not even on a rotational basis. Sometimes you get two or three youth clubs doing projects during the weekend. The only thing is that they are not time specific. That means that we would not put it there, opening from 7.30 to 9.30, or whatever; it is on a case-by-case basis, depending on the programme.

1595 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, from what I gather, I think that extra bit of information ... No youth club is open on a Monday. On a Friday afternoon or evening there is only the Youth Centre available. And, if I have interpreted correctly what the Minister was saying in his supplementary answers, as and when a youth club may have an activity it may open during the course of a weekend, but that seems to be specific to the particular youth club for specific use by a youngster taking part in a project, so any other youngster who happens to have time off and wishes to attend a youth club during the course of a weekend – Friday, Saturday or Sunday – does not seem to have 1600 a choice of any of the four there. Am I right in that interpretation, Mr Speaker?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, over the course of the last 12 months, the world has faced uncertainty with regard to the global pandemic. Gibraltar was no exception. This affected the nature of the work we embarked on at the Youth Service, particularly on weekends, where under usual circumstances we provide opportunities to young people to travel abroad and into Spain for activities that cannot be sourced within Gibraltar. Up until last month, we had been unable to undergo any activities in Spain, or any other country for that matter. However, the Youth Service team adapted as best as possible in order to provide opportunities to young people locally.

We endeavour to ensure that the work we do and opportunities we offer are meaningful to the young people and yet also within the parameters that Government provide, up until recently.

1610 With the above in mind, the Youth Service ensured that the following work was carried out on weekends: Youth Day – a day to celebrate the youth of Gibraltar; movie afternoons hosted at each of the youth clubs; trips to local cinemas; bowling at the Kings Bastion Leisure Centre; cooking; overnight stays at the Gibraltar Retreat Centre; team-building activities; interclub football and basketball tournaments hosted by the Dolphins Youth Club; arts and crafts themed sessions; visit to the Royal Gibraltar Regiment; guided tours at the Alameda Gardens; visit to the Alameda Zoo; Upper Rock tours; paddle-boarding; kayaking; visit to the Northern Defences; Nautilus Project workshops; and collaboration works with various charities. And there are many more I can read, Mr Speaker.

1620 I think the young people are very well catered for during the weekend, so if any young person would like to come on a Friday, Saturday and Sunday to any of the youth clubs, there are many activities that they can do.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, the Minister obviously has read out all the information provided to him on the question arising, but he still has not really answered what I was asking. The youth clubs are not open on a Monday. On a Friday there is only the Youth Centre open from six to 9 p.m., and because there is no other official opening time advertised as such in any youth club – and not even the Minister can provide it in this Parliament – for any youngster who wishes to entertain himself by going to a healthy and safe environment, like a youth club, during the course of let's say this Saturday or this Sunday, the information is not here.

1630 Can the Minister say what time it is open or just admit that it is not open? You know what youngsters are like, they tend to act on the spur of the moment, so a youngster, at five o'clock on Saturday afternoon, can he or can he not go to a youth club and find it open for his use?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the youngster can find out in school. All the youngsters are in schools and therefore it is through the school system that they know exactly when these things are happening. Even at the weekend there are loads and loads of things that are happening and therefore the youngster will know, not only through his or her peers, that the youth clubs are functioning.

1640 If a youngster, at five o'clock in the afternoon on a Saturday wants to go to any of the youth clubs, they will find that the youth club might be closed, but they can go to the next youth club and see if it is open. But anyway, they all know about the activities that are happening because all these activities are well published not only in social media ... They can go to youth.gi and they will get a vast array of projects which they can get into. For example, if they turn up to the Victoria Stadium, the Nautilus Project is running there. That is not a youth club but it is run by the Youth Service in conjunction with the Nautilus Project.

1645 I understand that the hon. Member is going to say that one young person has not found out whether there is any project, that they go to the youth club and it is closed. Yes, unfortunate.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q33/2022

Play park facilities –
Reason for delays to repairs

1650 Clerk: Question 33/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can Government explain why there seem to be delays in carrying out repairs at facilities provided in children's play parks?

1655 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares):
Mr Speaker, given the retirement from service of several members of staff and discussions regarding the future maintenance of parks and playgrounds, there has been a slight delay in addressing some repairs. However, I am glad to report that this has been resolved.

1660 Moving forward, GJBS will be taking over the actual maintenance and repairs, but these will ultimately continue to be under the responsibility of the GSLA. Officials from both sides have been working together with the new maintenance regime, which started on Monday, 9th May 2022.

1665 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I heard clearly the Minister saying – what he is admitting – that because there was some retirement ... Contrary to this, does the Minister not realise that that perhaps shows poor succession planning to ensure that there is as little disruption as possible?

1670 Mr Speaker, may I declare a vested interest? As a grandparent of three young children, I am a very regular user of these play parks, and may I add that each weekend I tend to find that things have got slightly worse rather than slightly better, and in some places they are unsafe, or bordering on being unsafe. May I please urge the Minister to ensure that whatever plans he has in the future are implemented as soon as possible and to ensure that there is constant reporting on and updating of facilities for the sake of us grandparents, but more importantly for our grandchildren, with which I think Mr Speaker will concur?

1675 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I am happy to say that the GJBS system is now working very well.

1680 It was not a question of succession; it was a question of having a team in the GSLA itself. Having said that, I am happy that the hon. Member uses the playgrounds and I am happy to inform the hon. Member that in every single playground there is a hotline which he can now call to report anything that might be dangerous, and he should do so immediately so that it can be made safe immediately for it to be repaired as soon as is reasonably possible. That is exactly what is happening now.

Thank you.

1685 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q34/2022

Lathbury and Europa sports facilities – Management arrangements and plans re operation and maintenance

Clerk: Question 34/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1690 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports provide updated details in respect of the present management arrangements in operation at Lathbury and Europa sports facilities, together with details of future long-term plans for the operation and maintenance of these facilities?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares):
Mr Speaker, my answer remains the same as my answer to Question 509/2020.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I was somewhat hoping that there had been some sort of progress. Does the Minister have any idea by when we can have an update or a change in information, so that I can then make a note and see when next to ask this question across the table?

1700

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I would say very soon because we are very close to sorting all these contracts and memoranda of understanding that we are trying to get together. I hasten not to give him a date, but it is going to be very soon and it will not take more than six months, I would say – even though I am giving you more or less a date. I am sure he can come back in six months and put a gun to my head on why I have not done it, but I am sure it will be done before then.

Q35/2022
Island Games facilities – Expected completion dates

Clerk: Question 35/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports update this House with details of what facilities still require completion or remedial works at all the facilities built or refurbished in connection with the 2019 Island Games, together with details of their respective revised expected completion dates?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares):
Mr Speaker, in respect of facilities built or refurbished in connection with the 2019 Island Games, please note the following.

1715

Lathbury Sports Complex: the swimming pool is now nearing the end of its testing and commissioning phase. This is a slow process given that it identifies any issues with the integrity of the structure, and if and when identified these are addressed with minimal amount of water loss. The turf field is complete and we are now awaiting the arrival of the specialist subcontractor to complete the top layer of the athletics track. All being well with personnel arrival and other minor issues, everything should be complete by the end of June. This was due to the unprecedented weather conditions, especially the mud rain we encountered.

Europa Sports Park: the facility is complete with the only item pending being the ball-stop netting on the north side of the ground. The contractor will be in Gibraltar imminently to complete this final area. However, irrespective of this, temporary safety measures have been implemented, which means that the facility is practically in full use.

1725

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, the Minister, in his answer, has ended by referring to the Europa sports ground. Yes, I tend to go round that area quite a lot. May I bring to his attention, in case he has not noticed it – but I think he has, due to the proximity to his own place of residence – that it is not only the netting on the north side but also that on the east side that does not seem to be correctly in place. Perhaps there is less danger of a ball going that way, but the Minister may not have been provided with full information.

1735 In all the things that he has given us that are ready or almost ready, there has been no reference made to the actual wicket in the cricket area. The Minister and I both shared some time out there recently. Can he confirm whether that new wicket as arrived?

Also, whilst I am on my feet, Mr Speaker, can the Minister confirm that he is fully satisfied with the repair completed in respect of the dip at the southern end of the rugby playing area?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has touched upon two issues. The slope has already been fixed and should be finished with the turf on top very soon, which is when the contractor should be here. By the way, I wanted the contractor to be here last week and I was having discussions – only discussions, and I will say that – with the contractor, because I am the one who is more allied with the contractor than anybody else. Be that as it may, that has already been fixed.

1745

As to the wicket, we have another company that will be putting down the wicket, which is the company that has been identified by the cricket ... itself, because the one that put it down originally was not good enough and we told them as much, to the same one that has put down all the other part of the turf. The cricket fraternity was not happy with it, so we told the contractor, because they did not have the specialist wicket, that we would contract, with the Cricket Association, another company – at their cost because they were supposed to have put the right wicket. So we are now waiting for the new contractor. They are still playing on the one that is currently there, but they are not happy with it, so it is going to be lifted and the new one put down.

Q36/2022
Employment Tribunal – Cases pending

Clerk: Question 36/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can Government provide updated details of how many cases are pending to be processed by the Industrial Tribunal, together with details of dates when individuals first applied to the tribunal with their grievance?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the first part is a bit semantic, but it is the legal terminology, so I would just say I would first like to make the hon. Member opposite aware that it is the Employment Tribunal and not the Industrial Tribunal.

As at 11th May 2022, there are no applications that the Employment Tribunal staff have received that have not been processed by them.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, if there are none pending to be processed, how many are pending to be completed to finalise the whole process?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, there are currently a total of 85 cases which are going through the Employment Tribunal process. This includes the allocation of the chairperson and mediators, applications that are undergoing hearing or directions, and applications that have been heard and are awaiting judgments from the chairperson.

The status of these are follows: awaiting appointment of the chairperson, 47; awaiting appointment of a mediator, none; awaiting mediation outcome, nine; awaiting response, five;

1780 undergoing hearing or directions, 23; and awaiting judgment, one. It says here 'awaiting appointment of chairman by due date' and I have a whole list, which is since 2019, 2020 and 2021.

The Employment Tribunal has specific procedures set out in the legislation for different stages of the process under each of the different timeframes. If the hon. Member would like, I will pass him the figures from the three dates, if he wants.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I would be grateful for that, and it is probably better for this House if the Minister can forward to me that information at his earliest possible convenience.

1790 Hon. D J Bossino: May I ask a supplementary on that question, Mr Speaker? Does the hon. Member – and I appreciate that he may not have that information in front of him ... Has he made a comparison with the figures from previous years to see how the – I think the correct nomenclature is 'Employment Tribunal', is doing in terms of processing all these cases?

1795 Hon. S E Linares: When I said I would pass the hon. Member ... I meant not as a schedule, but I have a supplementary, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: You had some information that you agreed to give the hon. Member.

1800 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, I will pass that information to the hon. Member. It is together with my supplementary –

Mr Speaker: Right, which you want to extract?

1805 Hon. S E Linares: Exactly, yes. I just want to give him the list. Okay?

Mr Speaker: Yes.

Hon. S E Linares: Thank you.

1810 I have, actually, a press release prepared in order to publish exactly what we are going to do with the Employment Tribunal. I did not want to do that and I have stopped it because of the questions the hon. Member has asked. I did not want to be told off – rightly so – by the Speaker for publishing it before I came to this House, but I can tell the hon. Member that we are in the process of already choosing a chairperson and mediators, and all the set-up is currently being done, and it will be stated publicly exactly what we are doing.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

1820 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, this issue may be a subject of record both in this House and indeed, I think, in the manifesto of the parties opposite. I think the intention is that, when he talks about alighting on a decision in relation to the chairperson, we are dealing with a permanent individual. Is that the case?

1825 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, there will be a permanent and also a supply, so in case the permanent chairperson is not available for whatever reason we can also tap into people who will be on a supply list to cover.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q37/2022
Nature Reserve staff walkout –
State of play

Clerk: Question 37/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

1830 Hon. D J Bossino: Please state what the state of play is with regard to the Nature Reserve staff who carried out a walkout recently.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

1835 Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, as the Minister for Industrial Relations, I have met with the unions and their representatives in relation to their concerns. The Government proposed to work collaboratively with the unions to identify efficiencies, invite proposals from each of the workforce in relation to revenue and savings and providing a value-for-money service — a vision that all stakeholders 1840 subscribed to. In the interim, the status quo will prevail. To this end, the unions ceased all industrial action within this sector.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful for his reply. I think it is very similar, in fairness, to the press release that the Government issued at the beginning of the month.

1845 Would he agree with me that what happened that day with the closure of the Nature Reserve, on that Friday, was a sad state of affairs? And in that context, may I ask him what measures he has in place, given his new responsibility as the Minister for Industrial Relations, to prevent this type of incident occurring again?

1850 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, it was very unfortunate because I could not deal with it – I was in the UK and I was in a conference, so I dealt with it via WhatsApp and tried to get the press releases and all the issues that occurred ... It is unfortunate, but now I am having a very good working relationship with the unions, in which the unions, before they start ...

1855 I have told the unions that I think it is not only fair for me but for them and for the workforce not to come on a Friday night saying to me that on Monday they are walking out. I have told them that I need to get to grips, and I am getting to grips with all the issues. We will be sitting down systematically, issue by issue, and seeing how we can resolve them before it gets to this point, but unfortunately it did this time.

1860 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, Mr Speaker, especially when we are dealing, in effect, with the coalface in terms of our tourist industry and all the rest of it, which has gone through sufficient stress and trouble as it is.

1865 In the press release and in his reply to this Hon. House he talks about efficiencies, but can he be a bit more particular in relation to that? Is he able to tell this House what the underlying issues are? What are the issues that the employees want to resolve from the Government side?

1870 Hon. S E Linares: It is one of those things, Mr Speaker, that have been simmering for a long time, and I am trying to sit down with them to negotiate how best we can do the whole ... For example, up the Rock, how we can work out who does what, when, and overtime and promotions and all these issues. It is no good for me to now say which one I can resolve or not. I need to sit down with the union in order to see how best we can do it.

Value for money: they can also give me or the Government ways in which we can make more revenue. They have told me, 'Minister, do you want to know how to make more money out of this? We can do this, this or this to make more money.' These are very interesting things that I

1875 would like to discuss and negotiate with them, to see how best we can have a service which the taxi drivers and everybody else will be happy with as well. So it is a question of negotiating.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I appreciate that and he has been very kind to respond. I think 1880 the issues are basically in terms of conditions, pay, responsibilities and duties, in effect – it is quite wide ranging. Is he able to tell this House when he expects that to be resolved?

Hon. S E Linares: How soon? I do not really know. I am only negotiating with them. I am already 1885 sitting down with the unions. I am going issue by issue from all of the Departments that want to come and speak to me about it. I am open as from now, so it is happening already.

Mr Speaker: Final question.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am grateful.
1890 Is one of the issues a manpower issue? Can he state whether that is the case, and does it impact on the negotiations? I am simply asking him to highlight whether that is one of the live issues between the parties.

Hon. S E Linares: I would not know, Mr Speaker, until I negotiate with them, so I cannot answer 1895 that question. I would have to sit down and ask them whether there is an issue or not, but at this moment in time I would not know.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am conscious that you have been in that chair, 1900 although we have been able to be in and out, for a number of hours now, and I wonder whether it might be a convenient moment to offer all Members and yourself a 10-15 minute recess.

Mr Speaker: The House will recess until quarter to seven.

The House recessed at 6.30 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 6.45 p.m.

Q38/2022

Housing for special needs individuals – Plans to earmark

Clerk: We continue with Question 38/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Thank you.
1905 Does the Government have plans to earmark housing for use by special needs individuals; and, if so, what are these?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): 1910 Mr Speaker, the Government has always had plans for individuals with special needs. These individuals have always been assessed by professionals and referred to the Housing Department for support and assistance with their respective applications. Once they are identified as needing 1915 housing, the Housing Department engages with the occupational therapist and other relevant professionals in order to adapt these flats to their individual needs.

The Housing Department will continue to endeavour to make the lives of individuals with special needs as easy and comfortable as is reasonably possible, working together with professionals to allocate and reallocate flats depending on an individual's needs.

1920 Hon. D J Bossino: That is not the information that I am receiving. It is not that I am challenging the system, as he has put it. What I am being told is that there are flats allocated and identified almost on a permanent basis, rather than on a case-by-case needs basis as the Minister has just put it to me and to the House. He is shaking his head, so no doubt for the record he will deny that.

1925 Can he give an indication as to how many extant applications need to be dealt with in the process that he has kindly set out for this House?

1930 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, it is virtually impossible to say how many there are, as in numbers, because, as I have said in the last line of my answer, we will work together with professionals to allocate and relocate. That means that if there is a family that needs more care as the person with special needs grows and gets older, then we will adapt and relocate as and when needed. If a family has children ... and I say 'children' openly because they may become adults, and that is where the problem might lie, where the family might not be able to live in that flat because of the needs of then the adult. So we are always open to see... if we need to improve by relocating them somewhere else, where we can completely adapt for their needs, we will do so.

Hon. D J Bossino: Maybe if I phrase the question in a different way ... I think I understand what he is saying. Rather than in terms of applicants, can I ask him to state how many cases his Department is dealing with?

1940 And secondly, if I may, Mr Speaker, the issue which has been brought to my attention – but he tells me that there are not flats specifically allocated for this purpose – is that there is a flat, I am told, in Engineer Lane, and one in the Upper Town, which are simply not fit for purpose in terms of mobility and access and all the rest of it. I would ask him to address that point as well, if he would, in his answer.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, he says in Engineer Lane. I do not recall having any housing stock – (Interjection) There is no housing stock in Engineer Lane that I know of.

1950 How many? As and when it is needed. Only recently I had a case where it came to our attention that the family were struggling in the flat where they living, because of space, for example, so we are now working actively with the family and with the professionals in order to relocate that family somewhere else, where they can live more comfortably. This goes beyond housing lists and all that. We will do that as a matter of urgency because I will prioritise that.

1955 If somebody is in need and they come to us and ask for a relocation, for example, I am not going to wait a year and a half or two years for the person to be up on the list. It becomes medical/social, and all the professionals will work for that family to be relocated as soon as it is possible.

1960 Hon. D J Bossino: Is he telling this House that he does not have ...? I really do genuinely ask this by way of clarification. Is he telling me that when a case like this arises it is categorised in the current list – as he said, medical/social – as opposed to a specific category dealing with special needs?

1965 The reason why I am pressing him on this is simply because in Gibraltar we tend to find that there is a dearth of statistics in relation to all these issues, so it is a question, really, of assessing what type of demand there is. For example, if we are dealing with two, then we know that that can probably be very easily accommodated by the Government, but if we are dealing with thousands – I know that for the purpose of this example I am exaggerating – then obviously we need to take, as a community, I think, a policy decision in order to address this issue.

1970 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, it is a question of assessing the disability and the needs of the person. If the hon. Member says that suddenly there are a thousand, then we would have to build a thousand houses specifically for the people with disabilities. It is not the case that it is thousands; it is a handful. One or two have recently cropped up and, as I said, the Housing Department will work closely with the family, together with professionals, to see how we can help with improving the lives of those people with those disabilities.

1975 Hon. D J Bossino: I just want him to answer, really by way of clarification ... I do not think he has addressed the specific point. So you have a family that comes to you, or because of the various institutions' dealings with that family they decide together that this individual – who, as he said, was a child and becomes an adult – is able to, more or less, have an independent lifestyle and therefore accommodation; we have a case that the Government, his Department, needs to deal with. What I am asking is once you have that case, what happens to it? Where is it catalogued? 1980 That is all I am asking. Does it become medical/social category on the standard housing list? Or is there a special category for special needs individuals?

1985 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I still insist it depends on the urgency and how bad ... and how quickly we can allocate that family a better place to live in. So it is not a question of having a list of 20 families wanting better ... We will do it as and when it is needed. The professionals will come to us and say there is a family that is having problems because the child is no longer a child and the child has more needs, and therefore we will identify it and actively try to relocate them to a better place.

Mr Speaker: Behind the Speaker's Chair have a word with the Minister and perhaps arrive at some way of moving this forward.

1995 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am conscious that we need to move the business of the House, but unless I have ... The Speaker understands the point I am making and, with all due respect to the Member, I do not think he is addressing the point, but maybe behind the Speaker's Chair I can ask him – or WhatsApp him – whether there is a special classification of a case once it is brought to the attention of the Government. That is all. The answer has not come back with a yes or a no. He has alighted on and explained the process behind it, that is all.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I can answer the question. Everybody with a disability is classified automatically, and then, on that classification, as and when they need it –

2005 Hon. D J Bossino: In your Department, in Housing?

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, in Housing, by their disability – (Interjection by Hon. D J Bossino) Right. So we identify them by the disability and therefore, if the person is living now in a place and they need something else, and we need to either adapt the house ... As opposed to relocation, it could be adapting the flat, making the flat more user friendly for the person who has the disability.

Hon. D J Bossino: Finally, Mr Speaker, until we have got a place where there is a classification, the term is not 'special needs', it is 'disability'. If I ask a question at the next meeting of the House as to what that number is, unless it is available online – it may be – the hon. Member would be able to provide that: is that the case?

2015

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker. There is no issue at all. I do not know what the issue is. I have explained to the hon. Member exactly how we work.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q39/2022
Government flats –
Reason for drop in allocations

2020 Clerk: Question 39/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide an explanation as to why there is a drop in the number of allocations for Government flats and when it is expected that that number will rise to previous levels.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the number of flats allocated is determined by the availability of stock, i.e. flats returned to the Housing Department from their previous tenants. If there are fewer flats returned then there are fewer flats allocated.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for the answer. The reason why I asked the question is ... and I have not done a full analysis of the last 10 years, but over the last three or four years I have noticed a drop, particularly in this last year, when you do a comparison month by month with the previous years, and then from 2018 onwards you see a drop in the number of allocations.

For example, in 2018 – this is the online information, which I am sure the hon. Member will be aware is available in Table H7 – we have 226 flats, then in 2019 it drops to 192. It is not a particularly big drop, but then in 2021 it is 151. Obviously, we have not seen the full effect of the 2022 figures, but the figures for January and March, which are four and six respectively, are particularly low when the average of allocations is around about the 12, 15, 16, 17, 18 mark.

He has given a wide explanation. If that is the case, then that is the case; there is no other extraneous reason to explain what for me appears to be a drop, perhaps not particularly significant but nevertheless a drop. It could be the fact that we have had COVID and that has had an effect, but if that is the answer, fair enough; it would not be the answer that he gave me originally.

2045

Hon. S E Linares: It is the answer that I have given him and it is to do with the pandemic. It is both. I have fewer flats to give because fewer flats have been able to be fixed, due to the pandemic. Therefore, the numbers obviously have dropped because people have not been able to fix the flats because of the pandemic.

2050

We have had the Housing Works Agency running around doing all the good work that they have been doing with the pensioners in the pensioner flats. They have been working with them to take things to ... Everything that has happened in the pandemic – I am not going to go through it all but it is to do with that. As the hon. Member knows, we are quite proud of the number of flats we turn around every year. There has been a drop, and in fact the dates that the hon. Member mentions – January to March – are when we were at the height of the pandemic. It was then that we were having the pandemic and therefore why it drops, but I am hoping that now we will pick up again and we will go back to the numbers, and even better.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, that is fair enough and it fills me with hope that that is the case. I am glad that he has identified the pandemic as the reason for that reduction in numbers. He expressed the hope himself that it would improve.

Now that we have some modicum of normality, as the Hon. Chief Minister was referring to earlier, when does he expect that number to see an increase? I think I speak for many Members on this side of the House. I am sure he also receives many complaints from individuals out there who are in dire housing circumstances which require a resolution sooner rather than later.

2070 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, yes, I am hoping, and we are getting back to normal but again this is a question of supply and demand. It is a demand-led thing. I know the demand is high, but we will be dealing with it.

I can also say to the hon. Member that once we build the houses we will have quite a lot of stock to be able to give because people who are in Government houses have been categorised as 2075 category 1, where they will be given the choice of buying a house and therefore returning the house to Government.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Minister, in his experience, provide an estimate of how long it takes from the moment when somebody is told by his Department, 'We have allocated 2080 a flat to you' ...? The flat is normally not identified. That is, essentially the procedure. It then goes to the Housing Works Agency in order to fix it up. It goes out to be fixed. It may be fixed by a company, I do not know, but it has to be fixed ... for that flat to then come back to his Department so that it can then at least be seen by the person who has been told that they have been allocated a flat?

2085 I have, and I have written to the Minister about this, an example of somebody who received a letter more than four months ago being told 'You have been allocated a flat' – the flat has not been identified – 'but we cannot show you the flat because it needs to be fixed up.' It is May already, this was actually before Christmas, and that person has not even been shown the flat, so I am just asking how long do these things normally take.

2090 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I cannot say. I cannot answer that question for the simple reason that there are flats that need a lot of work and there are flats that need hardly any work. These are people who we say are earmarked a flat and – I have explained this in the House before – we do chains ... For example, the person he is talking about, who will move into whatever flat is going 2095 to be allocated ... Yes, it might take four to six months, but once they are allocated a flat I have to get that flat from that person and see if I can move somebody in again, because we move people around to satisfy their needs. Therefore we do these chains, and sometimes ... I would prefer to be able to do that within a month, but realistically it does not happen. It is a question of identifying what ... I can tell the hon. Member that sometimes the flats, the way they are returned leaves a lot to be desired, but that is another issue for another day. We have to fix the flat and maybe I say 2100 to someone, 'Don't worry, because you have a flat earmarked.'

We do not want to take the person there for a number of reasons, because we have taken people who have been earmarked a flat and we have given them the number, and then they have gone into the flat and told the contractor, 'I want this, this and this,' costing the Housing 2105 Department three or four times the original budget. So we do not say where the flat is. We expect the flat to be ready as soon as is reasonably possible and then we give them the flat.

The hon. Member must understand why these things happen. We might not communicate for four to six months, but within six to eight months they are going to get the house and they know that, so it is a question of hanging on and waiting for a little while until we give them the flat in 2110 adequate condition.

Hon. D A Feetham: But, Mr Speaker, does the Minister not think that perhaps the system could be improved? And does he not understand as well the great frustration that somebody who, for instance, has already spent a number of years in the women's refuge, is finally told, 'You are being 2115 earmarked a flat,' and five months down the line she has not even been taken to see the flat? At least if, for example, an assessment can be made of the flat the moment the Minister or his Department receive the keys and then that assessment says, 'This needs x, y and z and we estimate that the works are going to take three, four or five months,' even if you were to add, to be cautious, two months on top of that, at least people are being told how long it will take, not that 2120 you have the frustration of somebody – and I do not think this is an isolated example – having spent a number of years in the women’s refuge being told before Christmas that a flat had been earmarked and in May that person is still waiting.

Does he not agree that the system can be improved, and will he give a commitment to this 2125 House that he is going to look at improving the system and communication with people in particular?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, we are not going to create a false expectation that things can be fixed when they cannot be fixed, because although the results may not be that 2130 which any of us would wish, and the easiest thing would be to say that we will fix the system and go away just on that, there is a physical reality that hon. Members have to understand, which affected them as much as it affects us.

First of all, we tell people as soon as we are able to make an allocation, so we tell them sometimes with the person who is still the tenant telling us that they are going to leave in two 2135 weeks, but they have told us that they are going to leave, so we say to the other person, ‘The good news is we are able to make an earmarked allocation; the works are going to start.’ The person then does not go, for reasons which are sometimes perfectly humanly understandable: they were moving to private accommodation and the chain in which they are involved does not move quickly, they are waiting for another flat which we are not able to complete, or there is an issue 2140 with a bed at ERS so there is a delay in the move out. If we forced the move out of the person who has told us they are going to move in two weeks, hon. Members would rightly be here saying, ‘You put enormous pressure on a pensioner to move to ERS’ or ‘You put enormous pressure on a person to leave Government rented accommodation to go to the accommodation they were purchasing.’
That is the first potential delay.

The second delay is the works. If we bring an external company in to do the works quickly, hon.
2145 Members will come here and tell us we used an external company and the tap failed when the new tenant went to touch the tap for the first time, or that we are privatising and outsourcing things etc. So we do it in the usual way using the resources that we have. That sometimes takes more time because, although an assessment is made at a preliminary level of works that require 2150 to be done, when the works commence they take longer because all of the pipes are rotten, not just the ones that were visible when the works were going to start. If we do not fix all the pipes, hon. Members will be here telling us that we put people in a flat which had rotten pipes. So we want to try to do the work to the standard that hon. Members would agree with us is the right standard in the timeframe that the hon. Members would agree with us is the right timeframe for 2155 the person who is leaving the flat, if it is not a flat that has been empty because of somebody deceasing and moving out already, in the context of the repairs being done in the proper way, and therefore that is the only thing holding up the process.

If there were anything we were doing to hold up the process – in other words, if the Government were not voting the money for the repairs to be done, if the Government were not 2160 permitting the repairs to start for any other reason, if you had an empty house which was either being repaired or handed back to the Government etc. – then you would have fat in the system, in the chronology of the system, which we would be able to attack in order to reduce the waiting time. There may be instances where that has happened. I am not suggesting that that has not been the case either in our time or in their time in office, although the line of questioning that the 2165 Hon. Mr Bossino was taking a moment earlier was about how proud we rightly are that we refurbish and hand over many more houses every quarter of every year that we have been in government than they did in every quarter of every year when they were in government – except for the pandemic period, in which everything stopped completely.

In those circumstances, although the easy political thing to do is to get up and answer the hon.
Member’s question with a yes, I am going to be extraordinarily honest with the hon. Gentleman 2170 and the House, as I always am, and say that the answer has to be no, for all of the reasons I have already provided.

Hon. D A Feetham: May I, (Mr Speaker: Final one.) because it is an issue that is important to many Gibraltarians. All of that is understood and I understand the difficulties that the Government 2175 is facing, but actually, even in the first example that the Hon. the Chief Minister postulated about why he was not agreeing with me, this is about communication.

It is possible for the Minister or his Department to do an assessment in relation to ... In the example the Hon. Chief Minister gave – perhaps somebody does not want to leave, does not want to vacate the flat – it is the simplest of things to simply write to the person who has been told they 2180 have been allocated a flat and say, ‘The reason why you do not have the keys is because, unfortunately, we thought that that person was going to vacate but the sitting tenant has not vacated.’

Very often this is simply about communication. It is not because the process has not started and things are not in process; it is about communication. That is the point that I am making to the 2185 Minister, because actually the system could potentially be improved through an assessment of the flats that you have – ‘How long is this going to take? What do we need?’ – and just communicating with people and saying, ‘We have subcontracted to X Ltd in order to do the works, we estimate that the works are going to take x but we cannot give a guarantee’ at least is an open channel of communication. It is about explaining to people and it would lead to less frustration on 2190 the part of people than there is currently. Therefore, can I commend that to the Chief Minister?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful to the hon. Gentleman for commending that to me and I will receive that commendation with the generosity that has marked our political 2195 relationship in the past months, and not in the average level of generosity that would mark the assessment if we made it over the past 15 years.

But I will also tell him, in the spirit of honesty, openness, transparency and accountability that has characterised this Government since were elected, that unfortunately everything that he has said is irrelevant because the communication happens, because the persons who are told that there is an earmark then proceed to call the Department of Housing – and I am being generous – 2200 once a day, if not twice a day, three times a day or five times a day. In many instances they will call the Hon. Minister, the Hon. Minister’s secretary, my secretary, the previous Minister for Housing and the previous Minister for Housing’s secretary, etc. That is why the decision was made, I think in their time, not to tell people which house has been earmarked to them, because people will then turn up at the house and harass the people who are still there. I am not suggesting that 2205 the lady who has consulted the hon. Gentleman would be such a person, but unfortunately we have to put in place procedures to deal with the extremes that we have experienced. If we told a person that we had allocated XYZ Ltd to deal with the refurbishment of a particular property, that person would be calling XYZ Ltd or following them around to see where they were going to do a refurbishment to, in that way, determine which the property was.

This is a vexed issue, where there is, in fact, a huge amount of communication between the Department of Housing and the individuals and a massive amount of frustration, which I fully understand and accept, but unfortunately it would be utterly superficial to believe that this is an issue of communication. It is not an issue of communication; there is sufficient communication. People sometimes – and I am not suggesting it is the lady who consulted the hon. Gentleman – 2215 just do not accept what they are told. They do not accept a reasonable reason for a delay.

Unfortunately, the culture of entitlement which the hon. Gentleman has oft spoken against sometimes intrudes in situations where it should not, such as the very meritorious situation which he is referring us to of a person who has finally been given a home, who is in the women’s refuge and direly needs it as soon as possible.

2220 I am sure, Mr Speaker, that he would want to encourage us to ensure that in such instances there is no fat in the process of allocation and that we reduce that insofar as is possible, which we will indeed always seek to do.

I hope that is helpful, Mr Speaker.

2225 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q40/2022

Illegal occupation of rental homes –
Legal costs

Clerk: Question 40/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

2230 Hon. D J Bossino: Further to the answer to Written Question 61/2021, please provide an update with regard to the then unresolved case of illegal occupation of a rental home and what the legal costs are for each of the unresolved and resolved cases.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

2235 Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the unresolved case of the unauthorised occupier in Written Question 61/2021 has been resolved. The legal cost of this has been £1,750. The legal cost of the resolved case in Written Question 61/2021 has been nil.

2240 Hon. D J Bossino: He said that in relation to the resolved case the legal cost has been nil. I suspect that he expects the supplementary question I am about to pose, because what he has said in his written answer is:

The invoice relating to the resolved case has not yet been received by the Housing Department.

Clearly, when he gave the answer he must have expected to receive a legal bill. Can he explain why the legal cost is nil?

2245 Hon. S E Linares: Because there is not any legal cost.

2250 Hon. D J Bossino: But that is not the impression he gave when he gave the written answer. He said, 'The invoice relating to the resolved case has not yet been received', which is suggestive of at least an expectation on his part that he was going to be receiving an invoice for legal services provided.

Can he explain why that is the case? Did he not engage lawyers, and was the answer wrong? Or it was done pro bono – is that the case?

2255 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman may have missed it, but there have been successive Ministers for Housing who have given the answer in this House that we have a retainer in relation to housing matters. In some instances, the work is in excess of a retainer and it requires a separate bill. In this instance, he will be delighted to hear that there was no need for a separate bill; it will have been covered by the retainer.

2260 Perhaps we have come within that parameter that I indicated earlier to the hon. Members that they might wish to adopt for themselves: that we did this quicker, better and cheaper than they expected.

Hon. D J Bossino: Why is it the case, then, that the hon. Member was expecting an invoice for legal services rendered? Did he not know that it was within the retainer?

2265 Hon. Chief Minister: Because we do not know whether something has been covered by the retainer until the lawyer who is retained tells us whether he has exceeded the hours for the month in the month that he has acted. As somebody who practises in the field, I would have thought it was relatively clear.

2270 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q41/2022

Unlawful occupation of rental homes –
Number of ongoing investigations

Clerk: Question 41/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide details of how many cases of unlawful occupation of rental homes are currently being investigated by the relevant authorities.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Housing Department is currently investigating three cases of unlawful occupation.

Hon. D J Bossino: Does he have an understanding as to when these are likely to be resolved to the satisfaction of his Ministry?

2285

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker. These all started last year and therefore we do not know how long they will take. I reckon that two of them might be solved quickly but the other one might not. But then again, I do not know how they will proceed.

Hon. D J Bossino: Just to get a better idea on the timelines, when he said they all started last year, we are talking, presumably, of the investigation rather than from when they have been illegally occupied – if he knows what I mean?

Hon. S E Linares: The date of action. We go through the process first, and then it is action, so it was last year.

2295

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q42/2022

Government rented housing estates –
Anti-social behaviour

Clerk: Question 42/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

2300 Hon. D J Bossino: How does the Government deal with anti-social behaviour in Government rented housing estates?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

2305 Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares):
Mr Speaker, upon receiving a complaint a housing officer will make an assessment to determine if the complaint constitutes anti-social behaviour (ASB). This process will be carried out in line with this policy. If a complaint is accepted and it is determined that it is reasonable and proportionate to conclude that a tenant, member of their family or other visiting person may have been conducting ASB, based on the information we have received, we will prioritise the complaint, 2310 which will allow us to allocate an appropriate priority and response time for dealing with the complaint. The focus needs to be on those behaviours that have a significant negative impact on the quality of life of others but does not necessarily take the form of criminal behaviour such as drugs, criminal damage, harassment, etc. It is on this basis that we will prioritise incoming complaints.

2315 We will notify the alleged perpetrator, where appropriate, in writing, when a complaint has been made. In accordance with the Data Protection Act 2004 and GDPR, we will never disclose the name of the person making the complaint.

If it appears that a tenant has breached their tenancy conditions, we will investigate further. This may include prevention, intervention and formal methods of resolving a complaint.
2320 Investigative measures may include discussions at joint agency meetings; letters; liaison with the RGP; referrals to Children and Young People Services, Adult and Community Services and the Community Mental Health team; asking complainants to keep detailed records of the ASB experienced – this is particularly important where eviction is considered – but any noise monitoring taking place will be dealt with by the Department for the Environment; signposting to 2325 other agencies; and working with or making referrals to other internal departments and external agencies where appropriate.

We will take a multi-agency approach, including working with the RGP; the Care Agency; Adult and Children Services; environmental protection officers; the Gibraltar Health Authority, including the Community Mental Health team; other internal departments as necessary; tenants' 2330 associations; and schools.

Hon. D J Bossino: I thank the Minister for the very full reply. I think he has given a very detailed statement as to how the system works and I thank him for that.

2335 Is he able to assess the success or effectiveness – shall I put it in those terms? – or otherwise of the system he has just laid out for us? A subsidiary question to that would be is he aware of how many complaints he receives, say on a monthly or indeed a yearly basis? Is that information that his Department catalogues? It leads to my first point, which is how it is that he is able to assess whether the system that he has in place actually works or not, because it appears, from the information that I am getting, that there are very serious issues in particularly some estates, not 2340 necessarily in all of them.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the issues, as and when they arise ... We do have a list of complaints, and that is why we follow the form that I have just read out to the hon. Member, but it is very difficult to ... It is a long process. It takes time. People need to monitor. We have to, like 2345 I have just read out, go through all the motions of going through the agencies, depending on the age of the person who is doing the anti-social behaviour and what the anti-social behaviour is, but one of the problems we have is that many complaints come to us when some people do some things once or twice. That is why I said at the very beginning we have to monitor whether they are constantly doing it or it is a one-off, or weekly. It is very difficult.

2350 If we go the other way, which is eviction, where do we send the person who has anti-social behaviour? That is the problem, because the person who lives beside them says, 'I do not want this person here,' but I send them somewhere and they create the problem elsewhere. So it is a question of going through the right motions in order to ascertain whether there are actually lots of problems that they are creating. Like I said, it is hard on the person who is living beside the person who has anti-social behaviour, it is very hard, because you are living beside somebody who is constantly playing either music or whatever ... That is why it is taken on a multi-agency approach.

Hon. D J Bossino: But similar to the points I made in relation to the disability numbers, does he have the numbers in order to establish ...? It is conceivable that somebody may make an unmeritorious complaint, but does he have numbers where he says he ... or at least to be able to assist him in determining whether there are particular pockets, particular estates which are worse than others, which may require the greater attention of his Department? That is really what I am driving at. If he does not have that information and as a system his Department does not have it, that is fair enough, but I just wanted to elicit that information from him, that is all.

2365 Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, it does not happen specifically on one estate. Sometimes it does not happen specifically always in specific estates. It can happen anywhere in Gibraltar. You might think, 'Well, I live in this block in the south and it is very quiet,' but all you need to have is one anti-social behaviour that is constant and it has an effect on the lives of all the people who are living around, and we are conscious of that. It is a very difficult situation because you have to go through the whole process before you do the end part, which is eviction. I am quite happy with the way it is dealt with, because it is a systematic way of dealing with it.

2370 Sometimes what happens is that if it gets to the stage, for example, of letters, the person changes and takes the letters in and thinks, 'I am not going to be as I was before,' and it cures them – then it works. Or you have to go to another stage, where the RGP is involved, and maybe because the RGP is involved they refrain from doing it. So it is a very difficult balance in how you deal with it all the time, but I can understand and we are actively doing it. It is a question of actively doing it when it happens.

2380 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, the Minister will know that a few minutes ago I spoke to him in the back room about a representation without knowing that this question was being presented. So, considering the representation that I brought to him was about three or four years old and has not been solved, would he now say that the system that is being applied is failing? And what would he tell this constituent, who is constantly suffering as a result of this nuisance?

2390 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, it is difficult to answer that question because it is a specific case and I would not like to go down the route of a specific case. All I can say to the hon. Lady is that we are dealing with it. We are looking at it, we have written certain letters and we are in the process of what I have read and we will try to see how best we can deal with that specific case, but I do not want to go down the route of saying how far we have gone or not on that case. But we are dealing with it.

2395 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q43/2022
Mid-Harbours estate –
Cleaning and maintenance

Clerk: Question 43/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

2400 Hon. D J Bossino: Please state what arrangements are in place to clean and generally maintain the Mid-Harbours estate and whether the Government is satisfied with the general condition of the estate.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

2405 Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, under a contract between HMGoG and Britannia Management the cleaning of the communal areas of Mid-Harbours estate is undertaken daily from Monday to Sunday. It includes scrubbing, flushing and power hosing once a month during the autumn and winter and fortnightly during the spring and summer; servicing of all the litter bins Monday to Sunday as required, 2410 minimum once a day; cleaning of bin holding areas daily Monday to Sunday; and sanitising of the refuse containers once a week.

The cleaning of internal communal areas – el Turno – includes the cleaning of all internal lobbies, halls, corridors, landings, stairways, fire-escape corridors/stairways and lifts, and all bannisters, grab rails, letterbox areas, communal windows, glass-pane doors and window reveals 2415 and sills within the blocks, where applicable. The cleaning routine is undertaken to each block once a week, 52 weeks per year.

With regard to the general maintenance, we are currently catching up with pending work orders, as a result of the pandemic generally, throughout the housing stock.

2420 It must be said that this estate has been suffering from defects since its construction, hence works having been undertaken already to the west façade of Blue Wave House. In addition to this, there is an inherent defect with the podium, whereby rainwater filters through every time it rains. These defects can be resolved, albeit holistically. In fact, there are projects in the pipeline to resolve these issues. Bearing in mind that we are slowly but surely coming out of a pandemic, progress is being made, albeit at a slower rate than we would have wanted. In addition, the issue 2425 of inherent defects within Mid-Harbour estate since it was constructed is something that needs to be factored in when it comes to the overall maintenance of the estate.

Hon. D J Bossino: Again, thank you for the very full and long reply, but can I just tell him this: that I visited the estate recently and met up with the committee there, and I must say that what 2430 he has set out in his reply is not reflective of reality in terms of the general cleanliness of the estate. Very large sections of the place look particularly bad and grotty.

I saw for myself a situation where flower beds are not cleaned, I am told, because there is a tension between one company and another – one company saying that it is the other company's responsibility and so forth.

2435 Bird excrement: he talks about cleaning of windows, but I saw one particular one which was in a really sorry state and had not been cleaned, at least when I saw it, for a very long time.

Those who live there may not be absolved of any responsibility. I am not suggesting that that is the case, but perhaps the hon. Member should take a look. I am not suggesting he has not, but I simply put to him that there is a diametric opposition between what he has given in his reply and 2440 what is in fact happening on the ground. If he has not visited recently, I encourage him to do so.

Can he, therefore – if I can put this into the form of a question – look into this and establish whether what I saw is in fact reflective of what he tells me contractually these companies are meant to be doing in the estates?

2445 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, there are two issues there which I have to answer. One is if everything that I am saying is not being done. I meet regularly with the tenants' association and that is not what they say to me. If it is not being done, I will go back and make sure, because we do pay them for doing exactly what we are saying.

2450 The hon. Member might also consider that when he went there, there might have been people who do things on a daily basis and then he sees it badly. It might have been swept at nine o'clock in the morning, but then at eight o'clock in the evening it is not the same.

2455 What I am saying is I meet regularly with the tenants' association. I am glad that the hon. Member is saying that it is not there. I do visit all estates frequently – very frequently – and if what the hon. Member is saying to me ... I will tackle the company that does it, because they should be doing it.

2460 Hon. D J Bossino: Would he encourage them to tackle the flower bed issue? As I said, I was told that there is a tension between one and the other, so maybe it is a question of looking at the contracts and establishing who is meant to be doing it – but just get it done.

Hon. S E Linares: I agree.

Q44-45/2022

Home Co-Ownership Scheme –

Criteria for access to and allocation of flats; number of allocations made not meeting criteria

Clerk: Question 44/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

2465 Hon. D J Bossino: What is the criteria for access to and the allocation of flats to the Home Co-Ownership Scheme?

Clerk: Answer, the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

2470 Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 45.

Clerk: Question 45/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

2475 Hon. D J Bossino: How many flat allocations have been made in the Home Co-Ownership Scheme that do not meet the criteria for allocation?

Clerk: Answer, the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

2480 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the criteria for access to and the allocation of flats to the Home Co-Ownership Scheme was published at the time that the current projects were announced. I will read it to the hon. Member if he has not read the press release:

Applicants who release HMGOG rented accommodation; applicants who have post-war HMGOG accommodation purchased; applicants, family compositions, registered on the housing waiting lists; married couples with no children registered on the waiting lists; joint applicants not married and with no children, both registered on the housing waiting lists; applicants who are meritorious upgraders, i.e. those requiring larger accommodation because of family composition – this group is looked into on a case by case basis, as a limited number of flats are available within this group; single applicants registered on the housing waiting lists; family units eligible but not registered on the housing waiting lists; single applicants eligible but not registered on the housing waiting lists; applicants wishing to upgrade or transfer from their currently owned private accommodation – this group is sorted by way of a draw; applicants resident in Gibraltar but not falling into any of the above categories – this group is sorted by way of a draw; any remaining apartments will be sold by way of tender to the highest bidder.

I can confirm that GRP strictly allocates properties in line with the criteria set above by HMGoG for each development.

2485 Hon. D J Bossino: Thank you for that. Just a point of clarification. I do have a press release of 28th September 2017, when they announced the new home ownership scheme at Hassan Centenary, Bob Peliza and Chatham, and there is a reference to another press release, apparently from 2015, which sets out the eligibility criteria but it very helpfully sets out in a note to editors the criteria which is applied. I have not done the proper analysis but it looks slightly different to what the hon. Member has just read out. Can he confirm that the criteria is as set out in, if he bears with me it says under the section, in this press release, 'Eligibility Criteria':

The eligibility criteria and priority of allocation continues to be as announced by Government in its press release in August 2015 which are given in notes to editors.

Is he saying that that is still the current position?

Hon. S E Linares: Well, it is the same as I have read, yes.

2495 Hon. D J Bossino: That is the point that I made by way of preamble. It is not the statement that he has read. I can do the analysis later from Hansard when I receive the written reply, but it does not, from what he has read ... Whilst there are bits which are similar, there are other sections which appear to be quite different and I just wanted to understand. If he is not aware of what the position is, then that is fine, but I just want to understand. There clearly has been a change at some point and I ask him to shed some light on that.

2500 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the change might be that we have added more. Frankly speaking, all the houses are sold now and we have used this criteria. In fact, it gets to a point where, as you go down the list, there is less opportunity for anybody to get ... For example, the one on the currently privately owned accommodation we probably did not get to because they were all sold before. The list is the same as is there, but obviously you add on because you might think, 'Well, if I do not sell to this section, these type of applicants, I will go down to the next one.'

2505 As I said at the very beginning, for us the priority is number one, where they give HMGoG accommodation, and we are happy to say that we have sold quite a number of those, which will then come back to Government, and that was a priority that we pushed.

2510 Hon. D J Bossino: Did he say, just by way of clarification, that that criteria has been adhered to, and not in any way, by exercise, let's say, of discretion being adopted in a different way in order to allow an application not necessary to meet any of the criteria to have access to an apartment?

2515 Hon. S E Linares: It is not possible because ... I can confirm that GRP strictly adheres to properties in line with the criteria set out above, so they do follow these criteria. As I have said, they have not even reached the fourth line here, category 4. We are pushing category 1 pushing category 2 because it is in our interest to get those houses back.

Hon. D J Bossino: I see. So the way it works is you go down the categories. I see. Okay.

2525 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q46-47 and Q50/2022

Bob Peliza Mews, Chatham Views, Hassan Centenary Terraces and Beach View Terraces – Update re commencement/completion of construction; rectification re flooring

Clerk: Question 46/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

2530 Hon. D J Bossino: Further to the answer to Written Question 67/2021, please provide an update as to the commencement of construction of the Bob Peliza Mews and Chatham Views projects.

Clerk: Answer, the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

2535 Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 47 and 50.

Clerk: Question 47/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

2540 Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide an update as to when the Hassan Centenary project is likely to complete, broken down in respect of each phase.

Clerk: Question 50/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

2545 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Has Government honoured its repeated manifesto promise to rectify the faulty flooring at Beach View Terraces?

Clerk: Answer, the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

2550 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as has been previously explained in answer to Written Question 67/2021, the start of Bob Peliza Mews estate is dependent on the decommissioning and demolition of the Waterport power station and the relocation and demolition of the AquaGib reverse osmosis plant. Over the past months, the necessary assessments and investigations of the Waterport power station have been ongoing and the first of a series of tenders associated with its demolition will be issued during June 2022. In parallel with this, the extent of any ground 2555 remediation required will be determined. The findings of the latter will dictate the completion of the site clearance phase. It is expected that site clearance will be completed in November 2022, after which time the site will be available to commence the construction of the first phase of the housing estate. The start of the second phase will be dependent on the AquaGib relocation, which is currently being designed with a planning submission to follow. The whole estate is programmed 2560 to take 35 months to construct.

Similarly, the commencement of Chatham Views is dependent on the clearance of the Westside School and Westside Mews site. There have been delays in completing the latter due to existing occupiers, but decisions have now been made to finally deal with this. This will now allow the demolition process to begin so that the site can be cleared. The construction of the estate is 2565 programmed to take 27 months to complete.

The first phase of the Hassan Centenary Terraces project is programmed for completion in July 2023. The second phase of the project is programmed for completion in April 2025.

2570 In respect of the faulty floors at Beach View Terraces, the Government confirms that it will continue to honour its commitment to rectify any latent defects in the acoustic flooring layer. Independent surveys will assess and determine if any such defects are present and the main contractor will take the necessary actions to deal with them.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker ... [Inaudible]

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): No, Mr Speaker, the purchasers were not aware of that and neither was the Government. Of course the issue that has really affected us here has been the inability to assign a contract for demolition and for construction, principally because of the two-year hiatus that has been visited upon us by the pandemic, which has meant that it has been impossible to enter into a contract for construction in a safe way. If we had, we would have found that that contract would have already been costing us a lot more than expected. We would have been paying in the period when we would have been down without being able to see works undertaken.

We have, also, an issue on that site of a sitting tenant, where we have now, I think, resolved the issue that was outstanding. It has been a hugely challenging period to resolve the issues that related to, first of all, the contracts for demolition that are required, and second the construction contracts that are required. This has delayed us in a way that is entirely unacceptable. The Government recognises that these delays are unacceptable, but where there is no alternative, where it could not have been done in any other way, where we could not have gone faster, where we could not have delivered in a different way – not because of any choices that we have made as a Government under successive Ministers for Housing, under my Ministry for Finance, which is in the driving seat of this construction, but because we would be damned if we did and damned if we did not – we have no choice but to make sure that we make the right choice for the taxpayer to ensure that we do not enter into contracts which would have become open-ended money pits that could have caused us huge financial problems. That is the difficulty that we have. I think most people will understand that.

2595

I know many people are in deep hardship because they need housing and they will not be able to have it now for a longer period. There is nothing we can do other than continue to diligently work to ensure that the new housing is delivered as soon as possible, knowing that in the period we will have delivered more homes in 12 years than any other Government in our history has delivered homes for sale in a 12-year period, but nonetheless not at the pace we would have wished it to be, which would have been much faster – but in any event exceeding the 200 per year that we set out had to be provided, but still not at the pace we wished. It is an inevitable consequence of reality, which we cannot magic-wand away.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can I just –? Oh sorry...

Hon. D J Bossino: I think she is asking a supplementary, unless I have understood what is – (Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: No.) Maybe on the next one. But she asked a supplementary in relation to my question, as opposed to ... I thought you had allowed her to go ahead, to ask a supplementary in relation to her question, but if she wants to ask a supplementary on her question then I am willing to give way.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Sorry, Mr Speaker, I was going to ask two in one, but then I just asked one. The supplementary on my question, being Question 50: the Minister talks about continuing to honour defects at Beach View Terraces, but from what I understand there is not continuation of honouring defects because honouring defects has not even begun. From what I remember, just before the last General Election the Government assured tenants that these defects would be dealt with very soon and we are here, three years later ... I know there has been a pandemic, but for many there is no sign of this action being taken, so can the Minister expand on this 'continue to honour' phrase that he has used? And when exactly will tenants finally see that these defects have been rectified?

Hon. Chief Minister: Again, Mr Speaker, this is being dealt with by my office and, as far as I know, we had resolved the issues that had been brought to our attention. There was an ongoing discussion with ... it is not the tenants' association, it is the management company, and the instances of cases that had been brought to our attention had already been dealt with, as far as I understood it.

2630 The hon. Lady can rest assured that if she asks those of her constituents who have got in touch with her to get in touch with us through the management company or directly, we will continue the process of resolving these issues. We have resolved them in a number of cases.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Damon Bossino.

2635 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

In terms of the replies that the Hon. Minister has given in relation to Bob Peliza Mews, one point, if I may, by way of clarification or confirmation: did he say that in relation to the first phase it is going to be dependent on the decommissioning and demolition of the Waterport power station? And further, did he say that that is expected to be completed in November this year, 2640 November 2022?

Secondly, if he could give further clarification in relation to the second aspect, which is presumably also the decommissioning and demolition of the AquaGib RO plant and when that is expected. I think he did not have a date in relation to that, and I think, as I understand it, that impacts on the second phase of that particular project.

2645 And then, if I may, does the timeline of 35 months, which is, I think, just under three years, apply to both phases respectively?

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker. If he wants, I can read it to him again, because I have answered those questions.

2650 The one on Bob Peliza was to do with two issues. The issues were the decommissioning of the Waterport power station and the AquaGib reserve osmosis plant. I stated that in parallel with this, the extent of any ground remediation that needs to be done ... the findings of the latter will dictate the completion of the site clearance. It is expected – talking about Bob Peliza – that site clearance will be completed in November 2022, after which time the site will be available to commence the 2655 construction of phase 1 of the housing estate. The start of the second phase will be dependent on the AquaGib relocation. That means we are starting one after November and then the other one is to do with AquaGib, which is currently being designed with a planning submission to follow. The whole estate is programmed to take 35 months.

2660 Then he talks about Chatham. Chatham is different. It has different dates. It is dependent on the clearance of Westside School and Westside Mews. We have stated why there was a delay. This will now allow the demolition process to begin so that the site can be cleared. The construction of the estate is programmed to take 27 months to complete. So we are actually stating dates on both estates.

2665 Hon. K Azopardi: So, Mr Speaker, 27 months for Chatham, but the commencement date is unclear because of the explanation that the Hon. Minister has given, whereas in respect of Bob Peliza Mews he is clearer because he thinks it might start after November 2022. Is that right? So, in respect of Chatham it is unclear when the construction will start?

2670 Hon. S E Linares: No. In fact, I can tell the hon. Member that for Chatham the tenders are going out as well, to do with the demolition. I stated that. There was a problem, we have solved it, and now there is going to be a demolition and it will take 27 months to complete the whole lot.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q48/2022
HM Customs –
Industrial action

2675 Clerk: Question 48/2022. The Hon. K Azopardi.

Hon. K Azopardi: Have the issues leading to industrial action at HM Customs been resolved; and, if so, how?

2680 Clerk: Answer, the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Government continues to engage with both the GGCA and Unite the Union to reach an outcome which is acceptable to all parties and does not impinge on operational outputs.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Minister give us an idea of what precisely the issues in dispute are? There has been a report, some months ago, back in November, that there was a dispute in relation to the Marine section and shifts. I do not know if that has been resolved or continues to be the central issue, or whether there are new issues that are the central part of the dispute. Can the Minister perhaps tell us what the particular matters are at the core of the dispute?

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, because I am still engaging with them and I would not like to say which are the specific issues. I need to speak to the union. Once we get a resolution, we will come back and say what the resolution is.

2695

I am in negotiation, so you must understand that if I am negotiating certain things and I say that we are negotiating this, then the union will say 'Why have you gone public on this, that or the other?' So I would rather not say at this stage, but I have said that I am engaging with them. During the week I will be meeting them again and again. I met them today and I met them last week as well.

2700

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I am not trying to prejudice the Hon. Minister's negotiations. All I am asking for is ... There was a report six months ago about a particular issue, so this would not be new because it has already been reported. What I am saying is: is that one of the issues that is still part of the dispute, or has that matter been resolved and this is about something completely different? And if it is about something completely different, is there nothing the Minister can tell us without affecting his negotiation? For example, I am not asking for the granular detail but is it about manpower, is it about working hours, is it about resources? Broadly speaking, what are the issues?

Anecdotally, people are saying that they have experience that members of staff do not pick up the phones, or did not before a certain period. Is that still the case? Are members of staff not picking up the phone at the Customs service?

2710

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is asking now about a question that arises in respect of a period when I was Minister for Industrial Relations when this thing started.

2715

The Government has always taken the view that we should not be setting out what the dispute that the union is claiming should be. That is for the union to set out and the unions decide for themselves what they want to say publicly about the issues they are raising. In some instances, if there is an effect on public services, the Government may make a statement, but we have sought not to make a statement at this stage in order not to inflame matters.

2725 There is more than one union involved in this matter, they each have a different view of what their dispute is or is not, and so the Government could not faithfully characterise that on behalf of one union or the other in a way that we would be able to say is sufficiently accurate to ensure that we are giving the House accurate information. We can tell hon. Members what we think the dispute is about, as we perceive it to be, but it would be for the union to make a statement as to what they say the issues in dispute are. Therefore, I think that the Hon. Minister has indicated today, both in relation to this question and the question from the Hon. Mr Bossino earlier about the Upper Rock, that the Government does not wish to say anything that exacerbates issues with unions in the context of areas where we may be negotiating.

2730 We want to ensure that we continue to work in partnership with our union colleagues, that we resolve issues, where we can, collegiately and through discussion, and if anybody wants to know what a union says its dispute is they should ask that union, not the Government.

2735 Hon. K Azopardi: Yes, Mr Speaker, well, of course the unions can say whatever they want where there are disputes, I accept that. I was picking up information which is publicly available and that is why I was putting it to the hon. Members. I have put it twice. The hon. Members do not want to confirm either way. I accept that answer, obviously; I am not going to get a different one, because I have asked twice already.

2740 Does the Chief Minister accept that obviously the industrial action can affect the service to the public – to the extent that people are not picking up the phone, for example – and it appears to have been going on for some time? The Government must, I assume, be sighted about the importance of resolving matters, so given that they are involved in those negotiations – and they know what the issues are, but we do not – are we any nearer resolution, given that it has now been six months at least?

2745 Hon. Chief Minister: Chronologically there can be no other answer but yes, as a matter of logic and chronology.

2750 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q49/2022
Department of Social Security –
Industrial action

Clerk: Question 49/2022. The Hon. K Azopardi.

2755 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain how it intends to resolve the issues affecting the Department of Social Security that have resulted in industrial action by staff?

Clerk: Answer, the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

2760 Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Government has continued to engage with the GGCA, DSS management and our employees to reach an agreed way forward. Consequently, a firm date for a move into new premises has been agreed. During this transitional period no services to the public will be affected.

2765 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I assume that that resolution, that move to new premises, that promise has now happened after the filing of the question. In the last week, this came into the public news again for a variety of reasons.

Does the Minister accept that the staff at DSS rightly felt let down after they had been enduring bad conditions in the building for some time? They had promises from the Government. They had taken industrial action and were working from home for several months.

2770 And then, last week, the action escalated to the point where the most vulnerable and the most needy members of our community were put at peril of not receiving their benefits in a timely fashion, which caused huge concern to those people in our community.

2775 Does the Government accept that it was right that the staff should feel let down and it was right that the people who are most needy and most vulnerable in our community should also feel aggrieved that the dispute had been allowed to escalate to that point and the Government had allowed the service, in effect, to collapse around them without a resolution, which put the needy in this community at most peril?

2780 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman does not know which industrial relations bandwagon to jump on now. It appears that what we are going to have to do now is have questions from the hon. Member on every industrial relations issue that raises its head, so that we can continue the negotiation with the union here, with him representing either the union of choice – because there may be more than one union involved and they may be at loggerheads, as is the case in another of the questions that he asked – or pursuing the agenda of a particular union.

2785 When it comes to talking about our magnificent staff at the Department of Social Security, we are talking to them directly. We have issued public statements regretting the fact that we have not been able to move them. Again, physical reality got in the way. They know that the minute they raised the issue of their premises we were completely on board in moving them. We have physical issues of getting ... We even had a truck strike in Spain ... that was bringing all the material in to move out one office so that they could move into another. We have publicly, in a press release, apologised to the members of the DSS staff for not being able to move them quicker, so I am surprised that the hon. Member is asking us those questions here, other than for the opportunistic opportunity of seeking to raise the issue in a way that he can put on his social media feed to show that he raised them and to show how much he loves everyone except us.

2795 Mr Speaker, let me tell him that we actually have the highest possible regard for our members of staff at the DSS. They have done everything possible to ensure that they could continue the service despite the circumstances in which they have found themselves in. They are so dedicated that they did not even raise the issue of their premises for a long time. Because they were so dedicated and they raised it late, it has been difficult for us to recover the momentum that we needed in time to be able to move them. We are totally committed to doing so. The hon. Member 2800 has given them, after discussion with me, an undertaking that we will move them now with the deadlines that we envisaged set in stone.

2805 What we should be doing is not trying to raise the spectre of something that did not happen, as the hon. Gentleman is doing, but looking to support the Government to ensure that we can deliver in time. Why do I say that, Mr Speaker? Because actually the hon. Member has been left without the tool that he wanted. He would much rather that hon. people in our society had not got their money in time, because then he could have come here with that axe. Instead, he was left stuttering to say 'put at peril' at not potentially getting their money in time. They did get their money in time because the members of staff of the DSS pulled out every stop to ensure that they 2810 made those payments in time and that if any was delayed it was only marginally delayed. I thank them for their forbearance in the way that they have behaved, I thank them for continuing to be diligent and concerned about what they do and I thank them for knowing an opportunist when they see one.

2815 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister has now twice in this House accused me of wanting to ask questions so as to put things on social media. It may be that the answers I get – or the lack of answers – get put on social media, because that is the role that we have in this House, 2820 to hold them to account robustly and to ask for information. He has gone further. He has actually gone further to say that I would rather see vulnerable people in this community not get their money because in some way it is going to help me politically. It is absolute nonsense and a shame for him to say that. It is a shame.

2825 The reason I raised this publicly was because single mothers who could not put food on the table and thought they were at peril were contacting me. That is the reason why I raised this publicly the other day on social media. The hon. Member can smirk all he wants but that is the reality of the role that I discharge properly and seriously, and I will continue to do so while I am in this chair. What he needs to understand is not that he is what he says he is.

2830 In fact, he did not actually relocate the staff the minute they asked for the relocation. In January they took the action that they were going to work from home, so they knew it was building up. They knew it was building up because they put it in their manifesto two years ago that they were going to relocate the staff, but they allowed the situation to escalate and the question I was asking is if they knew it was escalating and they knew it had to be done, why allow it to get to the level that the most vulnerable in this community are exposed?

2835 The reason I raise it is not because of political opportunism; it is because it is a real issue that people want answers for in this community.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is not a question. That fails all of the parliamentary requirements, except of course the social media requirement to be an impassioned speech in less than two minutes 40 seconds that can be uploaded to Twitter to show how much the hon. Gentleman cares for people who have not been put at risk, for people who have been paid on time.

2840 If he felt concern about a single mother who could not put food on the table, how dare he not have called me? If he was genuinely concerned that single mothers who could not put food on the table were not able to provide for their families ... If that was a genuine concern of a Leader of the Opposition in a place like Gibraltar, where we are all accessible, where he can text me on whatever he likes, how dare he not get in touch with me with that concern – if it was a genuine one, because of course it was not, because he would have known before he got up today that they have all been paid on time.

2850 I will give him the benefit of the doubt that when he filed the question he might have had the concern, but when he put the question today he will have known that she was paid on time, he will have known that those issues have been resolved. So, Mr Speaker he will spare this House the bleeding heart that pretends that he is not in politics to achieve ascension through the greasy pole. He is here for exactly that purpose, making those points for exactly that purpose, impassioned or otherwise.

2855 With my political opponents, however bitter it might have got, I have never, for one moment, challenged their professional abilities. He is an excellent advocate, but from an excellent advocate to an excellent politician when it comes to dealing with issues that matter to everyday people, let me guarantee him that if he gets one phone call of concern I get 20 and we ensure that we act so that the most vulnerable in our community are never going to suffer – as they have not suffered this week.

2860 But he will allow me to think what I want to think – unless he is going to become the thought police even before he has been elected to the executive – and I believe what I told this House was his motivation was exactly what motivated him. We have seen it everywhere. We have seen this hypocrisy. I am grateful to them for making it obvious so that they can no longer hide it.

2865 One day they describe a thing as a rust bucket and they tell us that we are not going to make money on it, that we are going to lose our shirts on it. The next day they are on the Sunborn recording their magnificent new videos at the choice location in Gibraltar. (Interjections) One day they are telling us that we must not announce things when we think we have achieved them – Volotea; the next day they are telling us that the minute somebody gets in touch with us and tells us that they might bring a boat to Gibraltar we have to announce it. It is a very clear campaign

2870 (Interjections) and what is very clear to everyone is that the one thing that has not aged well is the fact that Mr Clinton suggested that there would be an election within three months of February. (Interjections) There is not going to be, and the slogan 'Better, cheaper, faster' is not going to get them anywhere because no one believes them, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

2875 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

2880 If I may ask the Minister something much more mundane: the new premises that DSS are going to, were they existing Government premises? If so, who has been vacated from them? And how long has his Ministry been at Regal House?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as to the first question, we are moving the Housing Works Agency to the ICC, the Housing Department also goes to the ICC and the DSS will move into the Housing Department. I have been in my offices in Regal House for nearly a year and a half.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may, just one supplementary.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, just on a point of order, I do not know what relevance the second question has to this debate, but never mind.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, with your indulgence, the relevance is where effectively the Government is obviously having to rent from the private sector, as opposed to using its own resources – for example the Haven building, which has been empty for years.

2895 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am afraid that is totally, materially, incorrect. The Haven building belongs to Gibtelecom; it does not belong to the Government of Gibraltar and therefore cannot be a place where one would put civil servants of the Government of Gibraltar. It belongs to a company which is involved in telecommunications, not which is going to be able to house civil servants. Nonsense.

2900 Mr Speaker, in the circumstances, I wonder whether now would be a convenient moment to adjourn the House to tomorrow at 3.30 in the afternoon.

Mr Speaker: I now propose a question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Tuesday, 17th May at 3.30.

2905 I put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Tuesday, 17th May at 3.30. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Passed.

The House will now adjourn to Tuesday, 17th May at 3.30 p.m.

The House adjourned at 8.17 p.m.

The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 3.37 p.m.

[MR SPEAKER: Hon. M L Farrell BEM GMD RD JP in the Chair]

[ACTING CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: S Galliano Esq in attendance]

Questions for Oral Answer

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Tuesday, 17th May 2022.
We continue with Answers to Questions.

Procedural

Mr Speaker: We are going to start off, first of all, with a number of unanswered questions from 5 the September meeting. Some of these will be answered by Minister Sacramento and then it will be the turn of Minister Isola, who has some of these unanswered questions from September.
We are going to start with Question 229.

JUSTICE, EQUALITY AND PUBLIC STANDARDS AND REGULATIONS

Q229/2021

Nitrous oxide –

Criminalisation re possession and supply

Clerk: Question 229/2021. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that it intends to criminalise the possession and supply of nitrous oxide?

20

Hon. E J Phillips: I thank the hon. Lady for the answer to the question. I think that, of course, is a development from the legislation that the Government brought in 2020 in relation to the imports and exports amendment, making it a controlled import. Does the Minister know at this stage when she is likely to bring amending legislation to bring that within the scope of the misuse of drugs legislation?

I only ask that because it is clear from the positive – actually, the very positive – engagement I had with the Chief Minister in relation to this issue that there are still a number of these cartridges seen in certain car parks in Gibraltar where a lot of young people are misusing this particular item, which is commonly known as ‘hippy crack’, and the photographs that I received yesterday from an individual who said they have now noticed a lot of these in a particular car park, which I can share with the Hon. Minister.

I would just like some more visibility on when she intends to promote legislation in this area.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the draft legislation has been commissioned. There are quite a number of pieces of legislation that I have commissioned, so as soon as it is made ready by those who are drafting it for me it will be brought to this House.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q230/2021

Support for the profoundly deaf – Provision of BSL trained interpreters

Clerk: Question 230/2021. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state whether the support for profoundly deaf people extends to the provision of BSL trained and experienced British Sign Language interpreters?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will be aware that the Government recently published a Bill to recognise British Sign Language as a language of Gibraltar and requires the Minister for Equality to report on the promotion and facilitation of the use of BSL by public authorities and issue relevant guidance.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, of course there is a Bill before this House that is likely to be presented by a Minister of the Government in respect of the recognition of British Sign Language as a language of Gibraltar. The question really is pointed at the resource issue, because whilst the Bill will, I can state to the Minister, be welcomed by this side of the House, it is a first step in not only recognition but also provision more widely.

There is concern by GHITA, deaf members and hearing-loss members of our community about the lack of resource, particularly in healthcare, education and employment, and it would be helpful if the Minister could explain what level of interpreter will be provided, because there is clearly a CPD issue there as well, so it would be helpful if the Minister could expand on the answer.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, there will, of course, be a debate in this House as to the merits of the Bill that I have just referred to, but as the hon. Member will know, because he has seen this Bill, there is provision for the provision of BSL by public authorities if the Bill is passed.

However, first of all in relation to the point that the hon. Member makes in respect of GHITA, I was not aware that the hon. Member was a spokesman for GHITA in this House. In my capacity as Minister for Equality, my Department is in regular contact with GHITA and we have a very good relationship with them, as of course they have a relationship with the Chief Minister from the meetings that they have with him as well as with me.

Of course we would not, clearly, present a Bill to this House for the recognition of British Sign Language if there was no intention to provide it, but the hon. Gentleman does not understand that Gibraltar public authorities already facilitate the use of British Sign Language interpreters in the services that they provide. In fact, this is an arrangement that was initially introduced in Gibraltar, in the GHA, by this Government and it was the hon. Member Minister Cortes who introduced it when he was Minister for Health. So that is a landmark decision made by us in government and I recall very vividly working closely with Minister Cortes in this respect.

What we have is a contractual relationship. Initially it was a relationship between the Gibraltar Health Authority and a provider of BSL services. Subsequently, as we were learning more about the issue, that contract was extended for the whole of the Government. So, what we have is a contract where if someone requires the provision of BSL within a Government Department we have arrangements with a provider to provide those for us. Also, because that is not always available immediately, the Government has invested in an app where that is provided by digital means. I do not know the extent of the hon. Gentleman's knowledge in this field. In my capacity as Minister for Equality I am very fortunate that I have a very efficient team at the Ministry for Equality who, of course, are very up to date with these things and keep them up to date.

As a Government that is invested in and committed to equality, these things are, of course, provided, so the answer to the hon. Gentleman is yes.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one more question. I am not going to labour the point because there is a particular question on the Order Paper that deals with the number of interpreters and we can deal with that when we come to it.

I should say from the outset that I am not a spokesman for GHITA. I am a supporter of the work that they do and their cause. I am also a supporter of inclusivity and accessibility to interpreters for deaf people who really need them in healthcare in communicating their conditions to doctors and nurses. I think this whole House should support GHITA. I am not a spokesman for them, but I am a supporter of the work that they do and I will always support the work that they do within this community.

What I would say is that the BSL Bill that will be presented before this House is about recognition of BSL as a language and it imposes on the Minister an obligation to report to this House in relation to the work of public services and the Departments under the Government. My question was more about BSL trained and experienced sign language interpreters and the accessibility of that, because that is the real problem on the ground, that people are not getting ... The information I receive from those people who believe in inclusivity and accessibility is that they do not have that accessibility, and I think it is important that this House support those individuals who have a longstanding complaint about being discriminated against because of the lack of resource for the deaf and hearing-loss community. I would ask the Minister if she could expand on that.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am very glad and indeed I welcome the hon. Gentleman's support for the work that we have done in Government through the Ministry for Equality in the inclusion of people with disabilities, regardless of the disability they have, and the very significant progress that we have made in over 10 years since we have been in Government and work that I am very proud that we have done as a Government.

In this respect, the hon. Gentleman I think is confusing this question, which is an old question from a historic sitting of Parliament, with a different question that I think it is also the hon. Gentleman who has posed on the Order Paper in relation to the qualification of people who are trained in BSL. That is a completely separate question.

Insofar as what the Bill does and does not do, I did say in my first reply to a supplementary that the Bill is before this House and will be debated in this House. It is obviously clear from the content and the substance of the Bill what the Government intends to provide and I would not want, at this stage, to usurp the debate that we intend to have in this House, because I feel it is improper to do it at this juncture.

125 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q231/2021

Support for the profoundly deaf – Interactions with the public service

Clerk: Question 231/2021. The Hon. E J Phillips.

130 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm what support the Government provides to assist profoundly deaf people within the community in their daily interactions with public services?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

140 With the progress of e-Government services alone, this Government is ensuring that more services are available to those who find it difficult to communicate verbally, but this merely improves a system that already existed for any individual who may have found it difficult to communicate in person or by telephone. E-Gov services were also introduced and this offered alternative ways in which people with hearing impairments can communicate with Departments in order to complete and submit application forms or other information.

145 Notwithstanding this, hearing induction loop systems have also been actively introduced by us in many Government Departments and sites, and other measures have been taken to ensure that this service is provided when an individual needs to attend in person, if they are hard of hearing. For example, at the Primary Care Centre we have, for a long time, offered appointment services via the Smart Messaging Service (SMS) to those people who are deaf or hard of hearing and cannot phone in to ask for an appointment. At the clinics, pagers that vibrate are also being used to communicate that the GP or medical practitioner is available to see the patient. Also, since last year, the GHA 111 service was enhanced to allow people who are deaf or hard of hearing to communicate via WhatsApp if they require medical attention. This service will also allow the emergency 111 team to dispatch police or fire services if required by the user. As you know, Mr Speaker, 111 is also the mental health crisis line.

155 The Government has a longstanding contractual arrangement that was introduced by this administration that enables Government to book BSL interpreters to attend meetings where necessary. This has been further enhanced by adding the provision of online sign video service as well.

160 BSL interpreters have been used frequently in the past by Government, including at cultural events like the Literary Festival and also at the Gibraltar National Day Rally.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I think we generally, as a community, have underestimated the need for wider BSL provision within our community. If we individually look back at our lives and what we do every single day of the week, it is difficult to imagine an example of an individual going to see a doctor, for instance, in a sensitive appointment with a doctor, and not being able to communicate with that doctor the symptomology of the complaint that they are experiencing. That is enormously difficult for someone who is deaf or has a hearing loss issue.

170 What I am receiving from constituents is the problem in communication, and whilst she is right in relation to the online exchange, it does assist in some way, but what I am receiving from people on the ground is that it is very difficult to communicate with a doctor. You must understand from the GHA's perspective as well that in terms of misdiagnosis and risk to the GHA in misdiagnosis it is also a problem.

175 There is another example as well, in relation to public broadcasting. That is a serious issue for the deaf and hearing-loss community, who wish to understand the news that is going on in our community. Indeed, the speech of the Chief Minister yesterday, in that contribution: isn't it right that the deaf and hearing-loss community understand what the Chief Minister is saying about a seminal moment in the history of Gibraltar and its engagement on Brexit?

180 I think that what I am asking the Minister ... Those are two or three examples of where the deaf and hearing-loss community do feel that they are being discriminated against insofar as access to public services and I think the answer to this problem – and I ask her whether she agrees or not – is the increased provision of British Sign Language across the public service so those individuals concerned can understand and communicate properly, as is their right, Mr Speaker.

185 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has referred to me during the course of the question and to my contribution yesterday in this House in relation to Brexit. He will have noticed that I read my speech. Other than during the course of interventions during the Budget debate or indeed when presenting a Bill which is technical, I try to avoid reading speeches because the Rules suggest that we should not and that we need your leave to read a speech. I gave you yesterday, Mr Speaker, a copy of my Statement ahead of my delivery of it, as is the custom also in circumstances where a Member seeks leaves to read.

190 There is a reason why when I make Statements in this House I read them, and there is a reason why every time I have made an intervention and one of the Members of the Government has made an intervention at four o'clock from No. 6 Convent Place in those horrible days when we were dealing with COVID, why we were reading our speeches, and that is because after we made our very first intervention, GHITA got in touch with us and said, 'These statements are hugely important and our members cannot understand what is being said on every occasion because they do not have the kit,' and we do not have subtitles, etc. And so we then ensured that instead of having notes when we made our addresses from No. 6 etc., we had a script, so the script could immediately be provided online and could be provided on our social media platforms, so that members of the hard-of-hearing community in Gibraltar were able to have that as expeditiously as possible. We subsequently also tried to provide online subtitles to the question and answer sessions and our teams transcribed those question and answer sessions so that members of GHITA could have that information.

200 We are absolutely of the view that those who are hard of hearing must have the information, insofar as possible, in real time, and what we are going to do, as a Government – and therefore I am surprised that the hon. Gentleman thinks he needs to urge us to do so – is make it a legal requirement that provision is available to those who are hard of hearing, so that BSL becomes an official language and we have to provide in the official language that alternative language to what is being said.

210 Mr Speaker, we have to understand it is going to be a sea change in the way that we do things in Gibraltar. We have already understood that these things can be manageable, because we have seen how it has been done in the United Kingdom, although England has been the last of the nations of the United Kingdom to adopt legislation, but Wales and Scotland have done so already. There is now a model for us to be able to follow and we are very confident that we will be able to make the provision that is necessary.

215 The credit for this should go not to anyone in this House. The credit for this should go to those who have been campaigning to make us all aware of this, not just in our time in government but even before, from the days of Joe Brugada writing to me about these issues, putting them on the agenda, our discussions on the subject.

220 Hon. Members will know that since the first moment the hon. Lady had the opportunity to do so, we were providing a BSL interpreter at Casemates on National Day and on other occasions when we were able to do so. So we have gone from being volunteers to this to accepting that we have to take a further step and bind ourselves by law to ensure that this provision is made.

225 I hope that the hon. Gentleman therefore now sees that he is pushing at a door that is no longer there, that opened a long time ago, that opened when we were elected, that opened as a result of the hard work of the men and women who make up GHITA and from the genesis of GHITA and the work that Joe Brugada used to do. He wrote me a very moving letter recently, where he said an old man's work is done and it really has been well done.

230 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I just have one question, a final question in relation to this. I know that Mr Bossino had a lot of leave yesterday to ask all sorts of questions, but I only have one in relation to this.

235 I thank the Chief Minister for his intervention, and of course he answers that question more broadly from the Government's perspective but also in relation to his responsibilities for broadcasting. I did direct a certain part of my question in relation to, for instance, those who are involved with doctors in sensitive medical investigations and how difficult it is for them to communicate with their doctors. I note that that might well remain unanswered.

240 I acknowledge the fact that the Government puts forward this sea change in approach, which we welcome on this side of the House, but I should not let that go without saying that it was the motion of this side of the House, in combination with the campaign by GHITA that has allowed the Government to bring this Bill in the time that it has. I think that is the overall context of how this has happened and I think it is right that we ... not make this political, Mr Speaker (Interjections) because this is not about them and us, this is about the deaf community, and people like Bobby and Ana Maria Gomez who are marching to the north of Spain in this heat, campaigning for the rights of deaf people. This is about systemic discrimination of deaf people in our community for generations and we are putting it right, and we should avoid at all costs a political battle on this because this is about deaf people. Does the Chief Minister agree with that assessment?

245 And I would appreciate an answer in relation to the medical question before.

250 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in relation to the medical issue, which is an operational issue, I will allow the Minister for Disabilities to reply.

I really do not understand what it is that the hon. Gentleman is trying to do, because I was attempting to ensure that we were reflecting on how things were being done in a constructive spirit.

255 The Government has never needed an Opposition motion on any subject in order to be able to legislate in respect of that subject. The Government, I must tell him, was not at all moved by his motion. We felt it was the usual attempt by hon. Members to try to curry favour with a particular section or interest group in our community. The reason for that, as I have been at pains to explain on a number of occasions to hon. Members – to this hon. Member in particular – is that I have always been clear with hon. Members that if they believe that something will improve our community and they wish to bring a motion to this House for the purpose of doing that, they have two ways of doing it. They can simply put a motion and then the Government will take the view it takes of the motion and we will ... This is the place to do politics in our community and therefore we will deal with it in the way that we consider is necessarily political. Or, if the hon. Members opposite want a motion to succeed and they therefore wish to have Government support for an Opposition motion, the only thing that they need to do is get in touch with me, or indeed with another Member of the Government, with their relevant shadow in that area, say that they think this is a thing which is constructive and that we should do together. We will agree, if it is constructive and if it is something that we can do together. They can then move the motion, so that they can have the party political brownie points which they might wish to garner from any particular issue – let's make no bones about the fact that politicians are in politics to do politics – and we will support them, although they will have that party political gain because they will be the first movers on an issue which will enjoy our support.

The hon. Gentleman did not do that in this case. The hon. Gentleman simply went for the sure shot of the headline where he was the mover of the motion. He was not able to say that he had 275 Government support and I can tell him now he will not have Government support for his motion because the Government is doing that which the Government is empowered to do.

The Government has been in direct contact with the people who have the issues here, in GHITA. There was a confluence of opinion between those making representations to the Government and those inside the Government advising the Government – and GHITA have many 280 strong advocates inside the Government – and that is why the Government acted.

And so the first part of what the hon. Gentleman said in the context of asking a question in this last supplementary was entirely wrong and misleading. The Government did not need the Opposition motion in order to bring this legislation. Neither was the Government moved to act because of the Opposition motion. The motivation behind the Government's action was the 285 extraordinary campaign run by GHITA and the representations made internally by the hon. Lady and others who advise her also.

Just in relation to those who are continuing the exercise of fundraising – and I know that Robert Gomez is walking an extraordinary distance to raise awareness of these issues and raise funds for these issues – people like that are the people who deserve the respect of this community, people 290 who put themselves out when they could put their feet up. Those are the ones who really deserve our support and those are the ones who deserve the credit for keeping these issues at the top of the political agenda with so much going on – people like Edgar Triay, who gives every moment outside his professional life, if not some of them in his professional life, to keep this on the agenda to make the campaign. His committee, the people who support him, all deserve mention of the 295 great work that has been done to keep this in the headlines and to make it a priority.

Mr Speaker, I think it ill behoves us, in particular when we get up to say that something is not political, to be quite as party political as the hon. Gentleman transparently has.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I will deal with the other points and that of medical treatment, in particular the capacity to give consent to medical treatment, which is, in a nutshell 300 and in a concise way of expressing it, what I think the hon. Gentleman wanted to say in his extremely long supplementary questions.

I am afraid that I think that the hon. Gentleman has not heard a word of what I said in my answers. It would be much better, I would advise the hon. Gentleman, if he could really hear with 305 the purpose of listening to what I have to say, instead of just listening for the sake of it and already having his pre-prepared supplementary questions, which do not take anything I have just said into account.

I said, I do not know how many supplementaries ago – we have already been here half an hour and we are still on the second question – when we came into government and I was Minister for 310 Equality and Minister Cortes was the Minister for Health, we introduced a system so that we could provide British Sign Language services to people who are profoundly deaf and speak British Sign Language. It was something that when they were in government did not exist. When we came into government we introduced it.

We introduced it initially in the GHA because the issue of informed consent and understanding 315 medical treatment is something that we felt very strongly about. As I explained in answer to my question, we have introduced a system whereby if you are deaf and are unable to use the telephone to make an appointment, an appointment can be made either using e-Gov or by using an SMS system, so you can get into the system. So, the first part of one of the supplementaries he asked I answered. When you use the system, the GHA system recognises you as deaf, and 320 arrangements are then made so that when you attend your appointment there is provision for there to be a BSL interpreter there, available for you. All that I have explained, but the hon. Gentleman did not seem to understand.

325 The arrangements that are made in government are not just for speakers of BSL. The hon. Gentleman is focusing these couple of questions he is asking here specifically on BSL – they relate to people who speak BSL – but when it comes to the Government, and as part of our ... Mr Speaker, that is the term that is used. You speak BSL. That is the terminology that one uses in this area. But the work that we have done is not limited to people who speak BSL. We provide support to all the people in Gibraltar who are also hard of hearing with lots of other alternatives to services that we provide for them, and we will be very shortly announcing a massive investment that Government has made in audiology services for Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q22/2022
British Sign Language –
Qualified individuals engaged in public sector

Clerk: Question 22/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips.

335 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state the number of British Sign Language qualified individuals currently engaged in the public sector?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

340 Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, in his question the hon. Gentleman specifically enquires as to the number of individuals qualified in British Sign Language (BSL). Since Government is not a provider of BSL training, it is not in a position to answer this question with absolute certainty.

345 What I can say is that the Ministry of Equality has in the past collaborated with GHITA in order to offer and pay for training for public servants in BSL Levels 1 and 2. Already this year, the Ministry of Equality has spoken to GHITA again to provide similar training and are waiting to hear from them as to when it will be delivered. The Government's Human Resources department has also undertaken a consultation with all public offices to determine the number of public servants who have any level of qualification in BSL and it has shown that 17 people are so qualified.

350 Mr Speaker, it is important to point out that HM Government of Gibraltar already engages with qualified BSL interpreters when necessary, both in person and via online video link.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q23/2022
Mental Health Act 2016 –
Leaves of absence requested since introduction

Clerk: Question 23/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I ask the Minister to please look at the answer provided to Q702/2020? Is the Minister now able to answer the supplementary posed, namely how many reports and requests for leave of absence have been received since the Mental Health Act 2016 was introduced, updating the position to today's date?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the granting of leaves of absence to patients under section 16 of the Mental Health Act 2016 is within the remit of the responsible clinician. It is only relevant for the Minister for Justice to be involved if the individual has been admitted to Ocean Views subject to a hospital order. In those cases, section 16 of the Mental Health Act 2016 needs to be read in conjunction with section 117 of the same Act, which requires the Minister for Justice's consent.

Since the Mental Health Act 2016 was introduced, five applications for the granting of leaves of absence have been received by the Ministry for Justice. These relate to three individuals. All of the applications were agreed to.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I understand that she has a role, in certain circumstances, in relation to leave of absence, but the information that I have received is that in fact reports were not being produced under section 16.

Just to recap so that people understand this, section 16 of the Mental Health Act essentially allows a responsible clinician to make a report that essentially will allow somebody out of Ocean Views where that person has been sectioned, but in order to do so it will consider the situation of that person – for example, whether it will allow that person to be rehabilitated, and that is why a short leave may be provided, but also the safety of the public. So that is one of the things that need to be considered in the report.

I would have thought that even though it may not involve a decision by her, a question from me as to how many of these reports have been produced ... The question arose out of a prior question about how many leaves of absence had actually been granted. I was asking how many reports had been produced because the information I was getting was that in fact these reports were not being produced. I would have thought that is something that the Hon. Minister would take seriously and would be keen to answer in this House, and therefore I am asking her again –

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: I have answered.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, no, you have not. Perhaps I have misunderstood. (Interjection by Hon. Miss S J Sacramento) Is the Minister saying that there are five that have involved her? But I am not asking about her only, I am actually asking how many reports have been produced more generally that do not involve her.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as I recall – because this is a question that arises from the last time we were in Parliament and the hon. Gentleman will remember that there were a number of questions in relation to this and there was a lot of toing and froing between us as to the actual question the hon. Gentleman was asking, so I remember we were having this debate at length on the last occasion. In terms of this question, I have replied on the basis of my understanding of this question from the basis of the questions on the last occasion, because this question follows on from that one and I remember that we had a lot of debate across the floor in that respect.

As far as the ones that come to me as the Minister for Justice, of course, as the hon. Gentleman rightly says, it is my job to ensure that this process is triggered and that this process is done. Of course these are produced. I see them, I read them, I consult on them and I sign them, and in fact when these reports have come to me I have sent them back with questions because, as the hon. Gentleman says, I need to be satisfied in terms of the rights of the individuals concerned and the public protection responsibilities that we have.

Although this question has not been answered beyond this, I know for a fact – not in my capacity as Minister for Justice, which is how I am replying to this today, but in my previous capacity as Minister for Health I, of course, ensured that this happened ... I know for a fact that it happens. It also forms part of the Gibraltar National Mental Health Strategy, so I know that these things happen.

415 I know that the hon. Gentleman triggered ... I said I was the previous Minister for Health, not the current. I do not know what the joke with the hon. Gentleman is at the moment. I am a bit confused. (Interjection) No, I am looking at you. In any event, Mr Speaker, I do not know why the hon. Gentleman finds this discussion funny, because it is very serious.

420 I know that when we had this debate in the last Parliament the hon. Gentleman raised this as a result of a conversation with someone from – (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) No, I think we did by the end of it. By the end of the debate we identified the source and I think when I met with ... We are going further to what we identified here last time. It is in relation to a group that meets in this umbrella and it was discussed in that context. The hon. Gentleman can rest assured that if there was any understanding or misunderstanding at the last meeting of Parliament, which 425 was last year and a long time ago and perhaps premised on something that was more of a rumour and not that accurate, then so that we do not have to go further into that debate I can guarantee to the hon. Gentleman that all procedures that need to be met in law are met.

Breathalyser tests –

Number of convictions set aside due to unapproved tests

Clerk: Question 24/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

430 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister please refer to the answers to Written Questions 51, 52, 53/2021, and will the Government state how many convictions, if any, have been set aside or overturned either on appeal, by agreement with the Crown Prosecution service or otherwise due to the use of an unapproved breathalyser as a material factor?

I have put the 'material' in italics so that the Minister can focus on that.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

Clerk: Question 25/2022.

Mr Speaker: Just a second, Mr Clerk. Does the hon. Member wish to ask a supplementary?

445 Hon. D A Feetham: So there is one that has been set aside because the use of the unapproved breathalyser was a material factor in the conviction – am I correct in relation to that?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, I did read the question as he intended me to read it, but in any event I am grateful for that clarification that he provided.

450 As the hon. Gentleman will know, convictions of this nature are not usually premised on the roadside breathalyser. Usually it is on the basis of a second test that is undertaken, but the question was only relevant in relation to one particular case.

455 Hon. D A Feetham: And does she know whether there have been any attempts or any representations, for example, to the Crown Prosecution Service for the Crown Prosecution Service to review any other convictions on the basis that the unapproved breathalyser was also material in the conviction?

460 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, yes, and indeed it was the other way round. It was as a result of this situation that the Director of Public Prosecutions advised the Police to identify if there were any other cases where this may be relevant, and I understand that the Royal Gibraltar Police wrote to individuals and invited them to make representations in that respect, but from the information that I have, no representations were received, so only one has been overturned.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q25/2022

UN Convention on the Rights of the Disabled – Target date for full implementation

465 Clerk: Question 25/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I refer to the answer provided to Written Question 57/2021. Will the Government please state by when it intends to fully implement the UN Convention on the Rights of the Disabled?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, Government continues to be committed to assuring the rights of people with disabilities are being met. As I said in my last reply to the hon. Gentleman in Written Question 57/2021, this continues to be an ongoing process that has been held back because of our focus on COVID-19, but which we are already refocussing on.

In essence, the UN Convention sets out a minimum standard for the protection and safeguarding of a full range of civil, political, social and economic rights for people with disabilities. The support for the rights already exists in legislation in the form of our Constitution, the Equal Opportunities Act, the Disability Act and other legislation. The ongoing progress I referred to relates to the practical matters that need to be looked at in order to better provide services so that these rights are enabled.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have in the past accepted that the Government has gone a long way in relation to the rights of the disabled, but this is an important issue in relation to the UN Convention, as the Minister nodding from a sedentary position appears to accept, and therefore can I ask her to provide some comfort to people who are concerned about this with at least an indication of by when she expects that exercise to be completed?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Of course, Mr Speaker, equality is not more important to anyone than to those on this side of this House, so anything we need to do in terms of progressing any of the strands in relation to equality we will progress as much as we can.

495

Of course we know, and the hon. Gentleman will have heard me say in relation to disability and the provisions of the UN Convention, anything that needs to be done in order to further what we have already done will be done in the lifetime of this House.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just one final question. 'As much as we can' obviously is an elastic concept. Can the Minister at least –? (Interjection by Hon. Miss S J Sacramento) I have said 'as much as we can'. Sorry, have you heard what I have said? 'As much as we can' is an elastic concept. Sorry, does she want to say something?

505 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I just do not understand where the supplementary is going, so hopefully we can – (Interjection) The hon. Gentleman just continues to repeat something, but I do not understand from his questions today or in previous questions what exactly it is that he is getting at, that he wants me to do. Is there anything in particular that he wants me to do? Can he please be clear, instead of being ...? I think, Mr Speaker, it is the hon. Gentleman who is being elastic and very wide in his description. I would ask the hon. Gentleman to be concise and pinpoint what it is that he is referring to.

510 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I know that after the next election we will be on that side and they will be sitting here (Several Members: Hear, hear) and therefore she can ask all the questions she wants and she will find us in government much more forthcoming than they are with answers that they provide – and far less elastic, I may add, as well.

515 What we want on this side of the House is the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Disabled; that is what we want.

The question I was going to ask was: given that doing as much as we can is an elastic concept, can she at least say whether she has completed any kind of study that at least is going to guide her in the work in terms of the implementation? For example, is there a set of parameters that she has now landed upon where the Government essentially has made a decision that we are going to be implementing 90% of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Disabled, or we are going to be implementing this part that we left out last time round but not these other parts? That is essentially the supplementary question, so that at least we have more specificity in relation to what the Government's plan is in relation to the implementation of this particularly important Convention.

525 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am afraid that I agree with the hon. Gentleman about what is going to happen after the next election. I do believe he is right: there is likely to be a Feetham on this side of the House, but it is unlikely to be him (Interjections) because when it comes to elasticity there is no one more elastic than the hon. Gentleman. In fact, in praising him, as I always do since he has left the leadership of the Opposition, I would say that he is Gibraltar's political equivalent of the stretchy man on the Fantastic Four because he pretends to be as much on the left as he pretends on the right. He pretends to cover all parts of the political rainbow and to represent all ideologies and, of course, none, which is in the nature of the hon. Gentleman.

530 That is why the team he represents is very likely to be rejected at the next General Election by the people of Gibraltar. What I am not going to do is decide what is going to happen at the next General Election because I respect the judgement of the people of Gibraltar and they will decide who makes up the next Government of Gibraltar at the time when a General Election is called – which, by the way, is not three months after February when the hon. Gentleman thought it was going to be.

535 On this issue the hon. Gentleman has demonstrated that he does not understand the concept with which he is pressing us, and it is a concept on which he should press us. The Government is pressing itself in order to achieve the extension of the United Nations Convention on the issue of disabilities, not the implementation of the United Nations Convention on Disabilities. The hon. Gentleman has confused his apples and his pears. He has confused his directives of the European Union, which contain things which have to be implemented in the national law, and his conventions, which are UN conventions, which are extended, not implemented, into the national law.

540 And so, Mr Speaker, what the Government is doing is putting in place all of the things that need to be put in place in the national law for the extension of the Convention to Gibraltar, which must happen as soon as possible, to be done without Gibraltar then being in breach of the Convention when the extension becomes active. These are completely different legal concepts that he has confused, and in that context what the hon. Lady is saying is that we have done a lot already – and he has recognised that – to put ourselves in a position where extension, not implementation, of 555 the Convention to Gibraltar can happen without Gibraltar immediately being in breach of that Convention when it is extended to us.

Hon. Members will know, of course, that the extension of the Convention is sought by the United Kingdom. The United Kingdom acquires international legal obligations when the 560 Convention is extended to Gibraltar and it would be the United Kingdom that would be found in breach of its international legal obligations if we had not put in place all those building blocks. The answer that we gave him before he started to spin his yarn about elasticity and forgot that we were not dealing with a concept called implementation, we are dealing with a concept call extension, is that we expect that that extension will be done in the lifetime of this Parliament, 565 which is not just another week before the three months that Mr Clinton suggested would be the end of the lifetime of this Parliament when he was interviewed on GBC in February, it is in the lifetime of the Writ of this Parliament, which is four years from October 2019. And so we believe that we have fully answered with full particulars the issue as to the timetable and the issue as to the extension of the Convention, not implementation.

But on this, Mr Speaker, whilst he remains a Member of this Parliament I look forward to 570 continuing to be pushed by him. This is the one area on which the GSD is welcome to clock-watch for us. He will recall that when he had abandoned the left and joined the right and then became a Member of this Parliament, his leader, Sir Peter Caruana, told us in Opposition, when we were asking them about whether one of the projects in their manifesto was going to be completed, that as far as the GSD – the colours that he still represents – were concerned, the Opposition were not 575 elected in this House to clock-watch when they were implementing their obligations to the people of Gibraltar because they were the Government, they were elected by the people of Gibraltar, they were answerable to the people of Gibraltar. Well, Mr Speaker, on this I tell him he should clock-watch us. He should ask us at every session of the House between now and the next General Election, ‘Where are you on the extension’ – not implementation – ‘of the United Nations 580 Convention in respect of disabilities?’ and we will happily answer that we are on target to complete extension during the lifetime of this Parliament.

I look forward to welcoming the other Feetham to this House, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, my belt must be particularly visible today because he really 585 cannot resist punching below it. That is the reality. The hon. Gentleman’s style in politics is that every single time there is a question that hits the mark or potentially is going to hit the mark the hon. Gentleman rises and hits below the belt. That is his style. I will just leave it there.

The reality is that every single Government does its bit over the course of their term in office for different sectors of society. We did it, they have done it, I have recognised it. We have brought 590 motions in relation to Disability Benefit, we have asked about this issue on a number of occasions, and that is what politics is about. It is about an Opposition of the day essentially holding the Government to account and asking questions, because that way issues then are at the forefront of a Government’s agenda, or more likely to be at the forefront of the Government’s agenda.

Mr Speaker, all I want from the answer to this question is for the Government not to split hairs 595 in terms of extensions and implementation, but bearing in mind that in the past the Government has said they were not able to transpose – let’s use that wording – into Gibraltar law the UN Convention or the UN Convention on Human Rights because it would have involved, I think, from memory at the time, a disproportionate burden, for example, on private business – that is one of 600 the arguments that were deployed at the time – and therefore the Government has seemed to accept that what we had in the legislation book is not a full transposition of the actual Convention ... Is the Government saying that, actually, before the end of this term in office all of the Convention is going to effectively be transposed and form part of the law of Gibraltar and that there are not going to be parts that are left out because they may be disproportionate either on business or on the Government? That is the question.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman I think does neither of us any favours by suggesting that we are engaged in a pugilist exchange. I do not understand how it is that he goes on television and talks liberally about welcoming his brother to politics, and when I welcome his brother to politics I am accused of hitting below the belt. The hon. Gentleman really needs to belt up.

610

Look, there is nothing to transpose in the United Nations Convention. He needs to understand that, and he has not understood it. Although I have been at pains and I have spoken slowly, he has not understood that the Convention is not about implementation of things or transposition of things. He has still got his old European lawyer hat on. Directives contain things which are transposed or which are implemented. The Conventions are different, the Conventions are about rights, and the things one has to do in one's national law are to ensure that the rights are protected, so that when the Convention bites, the things that have to ensure the mechanisms of the state and third parties are available to the people who have the right to have them available are there. That is the process we have been undergoing at greater speed and alacrity until 2020 and then, like everything else, it hits the buffer of the pandemic and that slows us down.

In order to understand this better, perhaps, Mr Speaker, what I would say to the hon. Gentleman is that instead of when he comes to doing the clock-watching I have asked him to do and ask us in every session of the House – subject to your consent because you would have to agree to that and the hon. Gentleman might have to rephrase the question a little every time to not offend the rule against asking the same question every six months ... The concept is not about transposition or implementation, it is about extension, and the best way to describe the Convention is as once it is extended, and if you are not in breach of it, it gives you the kite mark, if you can call it that, that your laws are in compliance with the Convention. So he can ask us about compliance with the Convention but there is nothing in the Convention to implement or transpose.

I hope that is clear and that the blow he says I dealt him did not reach any of his intellectual nether regions in a way that has prevented him from understanding what I said.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Clerk: Question 26/2022 –

Mr Speaker: I think, with respect to the Leader of the Opposition, we have covered this particular subject to quite an in-depth degree. I do not think we should continue with this one.

640

Next question, please.

Q26/2022

Parental alienation – Plans following public consultation

Clerk: Question 26/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, following its public consultation, what is the Government going to do in order to tackle parental alienation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, as explained the last time that this was asked in Parliament, this was, unfortunately, unavoidably delayed due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Now that work has restarted, it will be concluded in the coming months. Discussions have already been undertaken with the Care Agency, as social workers will deal with children and court welfare matters, as well as the court service as the principal stakeholders. It is also intended that guidance information will be prepared for court users and members of the public.

655

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Government intend to change the law in order to deal with this issue of parental alienation?

660

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, at this stage I am advised that it is not necessarily a matter of legislation that needs to be changed but more in relation to guidance and advice and the way that people work with families. If at any point I feel that that changes and it requires a legislative amendment, then of course I will consider that, but at the moment that is not the advice that I am receiving.

665

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, as somebody who has sat in her chair and has attempted to deal with this issue, as indeed I did between 2007 and 2011, through guidance and through education, I am sceptical, I have to say. It is not a criticism of the Government, it is just an observation on the policy because that is what we did. I am sceptical about whether in fact education and information are going to solve this particular issue.

670

Has she seriously considered changes of the law along the lines of other jurisdictions that have come to the same conclusion – in other words, that parental alienation needs to be dealt with through positive legislation change, rather than simply education and information?

675

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I recently, beyond this consultation exercise of parental alienation as a specific area of concern in family legislation, commissioned a wholesale review of family law, family legislation and all proceedings. Under the new review there may be changes to the way we do things by operation, i.e. by way of order, by way of guidance, and the guidance can be statutory in terms of possibly either by way of court rules, which is of course a matter for the courts but not for us, or by way of secondary legislation as opposed to legislating in the way I think the hon. Gentleman is referring to. But I am, of course, open to it in the context of the way that things have to change.

I understand what the hon. Gentleman did when he was Minister for Justice and it was something that was necessary at the time. In particular when it comes to family law, the dynamic of the world is changing, the way we have to deal with cases is changing and that is a reflection of the way that society is changing. This is something that we have to be alive to and this is something that we very much have under review.

685

The position I have in terms of the representations that have been given to me and the advice that has been given to me is that it does not require legislative change, but it may well be that when we are looking at other potential legislative changes this may fall into that in a different way. It will be clearer when we issue the consultation on the broader consultation of the family law reform that I have recently embarked on – so it is not something that has been formally announced yet, Mr Speaker.

690

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, if I may, and I am grateful for your leave on this particular question, I have a strong interest in this area; the hon. Lady and I have discussed this on numerous occasions insofar as parental alienation syndrome.

695

The hon. Lady will know, of course, that five years ago I was interviewed by the Chronicle in relation to this specific area and was calling on the Government at the time to deal with targeted training of the judiciary, lawyers and those involved in this issue so that we can provide better understanding. And whilst I support what my hon. and learned Friend on this side of the House says about legislation, has the Government ...? It was five years ago that we called for this and it was in response to Lady Justice Parker in the United Kingdom, when she said there needs to be a

705 greater understanding of parental alienation. What has the Government done in the last five years to increase training for the judiciary, lawyers and those who are in family practice, so that we can better understand this phenomenon and the damage it does to families across the board?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will forgive me, I am not aware of ... whether it was a press release or an interview that he gave five years ago. Please forgive me, I am not aware of that, but in any event I was not the Minister – 710 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): [inaudible] assiduously read everything you say in the media.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Exactly. Mr Speaker, I was not the Minister for Justice at the time but the general principle that if there are issues that arise that formal training may need to be required ... is very much part and parcel of the review that is being conducted in this regard, so while I am not familiar with that press interview that he is referring to, it is a recommendation but it is not a recommendation as a result of what the hon. Gentleman has said, not a recommendation in this respect but a recommendation generally.

720 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q27/2022
HM Prison –
Mandatory drugs testing

Clerk: Question 27/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what progress has the Government made in relation to mandatory drugs testing at HM Prison?

725 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, you will recall that when this matter was previously raised in this Parliament I explained that it was an unfortunate side effect of the COVID-19 pandemic that our ability to progress this matter was limited. I am pleased to be able to state now that, since then, progress has been made to ensure that mandatory drugs testing of prisoners will be able to commence before the end of 2022.

735 The hon. Gentleman will recall from his last question that such testing was being undertaken in the UK. Since then, arrangements have been made for testing to now be undertaken at the GHA lab instead and that HM Prison Service has completed its review of the relevant policies and practices.

The final training for the MDT Co-ordinator/Trainer is due to be completed within the month and this will commence thereafter.

Q28/2022
Lishman* case –
Review of outcome

740 Clerk: Question 28/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Government consider that any laws need changing following its review of the Lishman case outcome?

745 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, this review is ongoing.

750 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Minister give an estimate as to how long she expects this review to continue?

755 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, this review into very sad and regrettable circumstances is part of a wider piece of work that we are undertaking in relation to domestic abuse and there is a lot of work that is being undertaken in that respect with an insight into this particular case as part of that. As soon as that work is concluded – and it is incredibly advanced – I would be happy to inform the hon. Gentleman.

760 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Minister say who is conducting the review?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, it is a multi-agency review generally that we are doing, but it is led by the Ministry of Justice in their capacity, where the people who are dealing with it are neutral from the people who were involved in the details of this particular case.

765 Hon. D A Feetham: And is anybody with any legislative expertise involved in that review as part of that team?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, yes.

770 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can I just ask, following on from that, what is the scope of the review? Is the review looking at the criminal law or some aspects of the criminal law? Is it looking at sentencing issues? Is it looking at other aspects? Is it looking at departmental processes? Can the Minister perhaps give us an idea of precisely what is being looked at and perhaps the composition, if there is a committee dealing with it to discuss ...? If it is a wide remit and it is a committee, can she give us some idea of who is on the committee in terms of not specific names but perhaps which Departments they are drawn from?

785 Hon. S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, yes, all that the hon. Gentleman has mentioned are issues that are being looked at in this case and in the wider way in which we work, because of course fundamentally the objective of the exercise we are doing is to protect victims of abuse, victims of violence and victims of domestic abuse, so it is part of a wider group. It is led by the team within the Ministry for Justice and it is a fluid arrangement as opposed to a committee looking at these particular circumstances. There will be consultation with stakeholders internally and externally as well. By stakeholders I mean the normal stakeholders that one would expect, in terms of the Police and prosecution and the process.

Hon. K Azopardi: Would the Minister keep in mind that obviously there was a big degree of public concern evidenced not least by the demonstration that was held just shortly after the outcome of that matter? And would the Minister keep in mind that degree of public debate that there was in terms of ensuring that ...? I am sure the Minister does realise that it is important for the review committee and that process to carry on its work to reach a comprehensive outcome, obviously, in terms of the results of its recommendations and to do its work properly, but of course to do so also in a way that is not too extended and that the outcomes of the investigation and review are done as quickly as possible so that if there are going to be improvements to processes or legislation that are the results of the inquiry, then clearly it should be done as soon as possible to deal with those matters.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, of course I am alive to representations that have been made.

What I can say in terms of comfort, if there can be some, is that the incident is historic in that it took place a number of years ago and there has been a lot of progress in that field and there has been a lot of development in that field since then.

Q29-30/2022

National Disability Strategy and Autism Pathway – Finalising and publication

Clerk: Question 29/2022. The Hon. K Azopardi.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm when the National Disability Strategy will be finalised and whether this will be published?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 30.

Clerk: Question 30/2022. The Hon. K Azopardi.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm when the Autism Pathway will be finalised and whether this will be published?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, significant work has already been undertaken on progressing disability, and within that autism, at a strategic level. The strategy is delivered at operational level by the key stakeholder Departments. Learning disability and autism pathways have already been further developed under the National Mental Health strategy that was published last year. Work is also being undertaken to have documented strategies and these will be published when ready.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, so I am understanding the answer, is the Minister saying that there is going to be a National Disability Strategy under which there are different elements, one of which is the Autism 'Pathway', for want of a better word? That Autism Pathway – there is going to be an improved, republished version – is that what she is saying?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, when we talk about issues such as learning disabilities and autism, there is an overlap between the strategic way we deal with things and the operational way we deal with things, and there is a massive overlap with mental health.

835 The hon. Gentleman will be aware that last year I published a document which was the National Mental Health Strategy for Gibraltar. It looks something like this. If it helps the hon. Gentleman, I am happy to furnish him with a copy if he does not have one. Obviously, before this document we have had strategic documents and strategic working groups as we work on these things, but now 840 we have this document. I am working on a document for disability which will be very similar to this one, but of course it will have an overlap with health and with mental health, and for that reason a lot of this work is already undertaken under the auspices of this document and a lot of the workstreams and working groups are already formally established as part of the Gibraltar Mental Health Strategy because of the overlap, and then those are groups that already existed, some more informally than others, before this document was published.

Hon. K Azopardi: I am grateful for that. The hon. Lady did give me a copy of the Mental Health Strategy last year, so she does not need to ... But I am not sure she answered my question. Maybe I should just put it again. My question was whether the Autism Pathway is going to be republished. That was my specific question.

While I am on my feet, can she perhaps give us an indication of when she would expect the National Disability Strategy to be published, bearing in mind that, as I understand it, the Government first started work on this back in maybe 2014? There is a reference to an Autism Pathway in the 2014-15 Health Report, when the Hon. Prof. Cortes was the Minister involved, and so it has been, I suppose, a while in brewing, and my question is: assuming this is dovetailed with 855 the work on the National Disability Strategy, which again presumably is not an easy document to draft but has been worked on for some time, can she give us an idea of when it is likely that she thinks she will publish such a document?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, let me clarify. The hon. Gentleman has made reference to a statement I made in 2014. I can assure him that the work on the strategic development when it comes to disability started very much in 2011, because that was obviously the ambition when we started, and a lot of work has gone into that already and strategies exist. The majority of the strategies that we have are, of course, internal, but they have always been applied. Strategies in this field obviously are very live, and as things develop and progress and we learn more, then we 865 work on what we have.

He is right that some years ago there was a specific focus on autism. The intention of that was because of the number of people who were affected by autism, and because it was such a large number it would have been part of the wider Disability Strategy. But things like introducing the Disability Act as part of the Disability Strategy, the improvements that we make in Departments, 870 in service delivery, in training, all that is part of the Disability Strategy.

What I want to do now is, having been very alive, I think, to the success of having a written National Mental Health Strategy in this document ... I am very happy with this document and the outcomes that we have had in the work that we have undertaken here since we published it. I want to do something very similar for disability.

The Autism Pathway that he refers to will be developed under that strategy, but a lot of work when it comes to autism, particularly the mental health and the health aspects of autism, are captured by this. But not all the needs of people who are on the autism spectrum are health needs, there are also social needs, and that will be clearer in the new document. The document, of course, is multi-agency, and whereas the Disability Strategy will be centralised in the Ministry for 880 Equality – because that is the pivot for the Government, so that is where all disability roads lead to on a strategic basis and a policy development basis – obviously we will have a lot of interagency work in relation to that because we have to involve the Director of Public Health as well as the Health and Social Services providers of the strategy.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

May I ask the Minister on an issue in terms of the administration of this strategy? (Interjection by Hon. Miss S M Sacramento) Sorry, how this is going to be administered. The basic question is: is it her office or is it – I want to get the name right – the National Special Needs and Disability ...
890 No, sorry, excuse me, that is not the one ... the Special Needs Co-ordination and Liaison Office. As I understand it, that office – and I know the individual who leads it – works from No. 6, and in fact it was going to be done from No. 6. So is it No. 6 and that particular office, or is it her Department that is going to be leading on the Disability Strategy?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am, of course, the Minister with the constitutional responsibility for disability. When I undertake these functions, obviously I will consult with clinical professionals and there are also public servants who are engaged as part of the whole umbrella.

As the Minister for Disability, when it comes to this, it is my responsibility to discharge these functions and of course I will involve different people within the public sector as well as the private sector and the voluntary sector along the way. But as this is my responsibility as Minister for Equality, it will be delivered by the Ministry for Equality in the same way that when we delivered the Mental Health Strategy it was delivered at the time by the Minister for Health because it is a national strategy for the Government. The Government will, of course, consult anyone we need to consult as part of that, and different individuals will report to me along the way.

Hon. D J Bossino: With respect to that – maybe there has been a change, and if there has been a change I would ask her to confirm that position – the position in Government press releases was ... This was, I think, the first press release on the subject; there have been two, as far as I know. The first one was dated 6th September and it very clearly states ‘The Special Needs Co-ordination and Liaison Office is responsible for ...’ There are three bullet points and the first one says ‘developing and implementing a National Special Needs and Disability Strategy for Gibraltar’. Is she now saying that that has changed and it is her office that is now leading on this issue?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, under the Constitution, when I have designated Ministers, all of the Ministers have the ability to run national programmes. National programmes are not just run by the Chief Minister, they are run by each Minister in their respective Departments. If the hon. Gentleman thinks that national programmes can only be run by the Chief Minister from No. 6 Convent Place, he has a misunderstanding of how the delegation of powers after the election happens in the way that Ministers take their powers from the Governor.

Mr Speaker: I think we need to move on.

Hon. D J Bossino: This is a very important point.

Mr Speaker: What point are you trying to make, please?

Hon. D J Bossino: It is simply whether there has been a change in the approach. It is very clearly stated that it is nothing to do with the Chief Minister and No. 6. It actually says there is a special office that has been set up. It so happens that it works from No. 6 Convent Place. It has a hifalutin name. It was said in the press release that this office, the Special Needs and Disability Co-ordination and Liaison Office, which operates from No. 6, was going to be leading on this strategy. We are now being told that it is now being led by the Minister and her office. All I am trying to establish is whether she admits and agrees that there has been a change in tack and policy.

935 A further question to that is: what is the remit of this office, which was set up in September, according to her press release? What is it going to be doing from now on? Is it now no longer going to be responsible for the launching, seeing-to and conclusion of this particular strategy?

I think it is an important issue of public ... and nothing to do with what the Hon. Chief Minister, with all due respect to him, has replied in answer to my point.

940 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Gentleman has completely misunderstood that point, because it goes exactly to what he has asked.

No. 6 Convent Place is not my office, it is the place in which I am based. No. 6 Convent Place is a Government office. It is also the office of the Deputy Chief Minister. The Minister with responsibility for financial stability has officers there who work to him and work to me, and so the fact that an office is based in No. 6 does not mean that it is not answerable to the other Minister who is also based in No. 6, because the Hon. Miss Sacramento has responsibility for civil contingencies and Civil Contingencies occupy all of the bottom right hand floor, as you go in, of No. 6 Convent Place.

950 I really do not understand what it is that the hon. Gentleman is saying, because the fact that somebody is at No. 6 and running a national plan does not mean they are running it for me; they could be running it for him, for the Deputy Chief Minister, or they could be running it for her because she is the Minister for Civil Contingencies and is at No. 6.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has asked a question and we have given him the answer. He has now asked it again: has there, therefore been a change of tack? Answer: no, this is the same tack in the same office in the same direction. I genuinely believe that he is really pressing us and splitting hairs on an issue on which we should all be agreed, which is that we have set up an office which is doing the right thing. It is doing it from the heart of Government, answerable to the Minister with responsibility for these things, who has offices there in that office as well. On the substance of the issue, where we should be spending time, he is not asking us anything; he is just asking us where is it based. (Interjection) It beggars belief, Mr Speaker.

965 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as the Chief Minister has just said, I do not understand the splitting of hairs because of one individual. As I think I said earlier, when it comes to disability, because of my ... Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman wants to listen to what I am saying (Interjection) he may be able to get to the bottom of the question he is asking.

Hon. D J Bossino: [inaudible] to ask.

970 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I will answer to you, and if the hon. Gentleman wants to listen to my answer then I welcome that he does. As I said earlier, constitutionally – (Interjection) Mr Speaker, constitutionally the Chief Minister has appointed me as the Minister with responsibility for disability. In that respect, anything in relation to policy or strategy of disability will have to report to me. There are different people within the Government and within the public sector who report to me on disability and they will report to me through the Ministry for Equality. I hope that answers the hon. Gentleman's question.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q31/2022

Development plans –
Lack of cycle lanes and charging points

Clerk: Question 31/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

980 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Why are we continuing to develop without cycling lanes and charging points being embedded in our development plans?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

985 Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Development Plan contains a policy on cycling routes, which aims to encourage cycling as a means of transport in Gibraltar by encouraging the provision of safe routes and facilities and requiring that new developments take account of the requirements of cyclists.

990 Furthermore, both cycling and the use of electric vehicles as environmentally friendly modes of transport are very much the policy of this Government and widely encouraged in various ways. The Town Planning (Development Control) Regulations 2019 include requirements for applications for planning permission to include scheduled numbers of both active and passive electric vehicle charging points. These policies and provisions are continuously being applied in all 995 planning applications where redevelopment is proposed either through pre-submission consultations and included in the submitted plans and planning statement for approval, or as planning conditions.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for her answer but this question 1000 is one that I have myself observed has not been adhered to – in terms of when the Minister says that these are embedded in the plans, it does not appear to be. Can I ask if we saw this in the new schools or in the schools that are being built? Can I ask if we are seeing it in the new projects? I myself and representatives of the cycling community are not seeing it, so I would just like an affirmation from her that these are being implemented in the future developments, and I want to 1005 ask why I am not seeing them in the schools that have been built recently.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, there are questions specifically relating to cycling and schools on the Order Paper later on and, with your leave, I would suggest that it may be better placed for the hon. Gentleman the Minister for Education to deal with those.

1010 On the generic question, in terms of cycling and electric charging points, I do not know but I have never seen more provision being made for cycling in Gibraltar than I have seen in recent years. Never have I seen more people on bicycles in Gibraltar. It is as simple as that, Mr Speaker. It is just that –

1015 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, we have never had a Minister with that responsibility who is more active (Interjections) or committed to promoting that himself. That sends a message which is visible and which speaks volumes. You just have to look around. When there is a cycle lane, people complain that there is a cycle lane. But now we are being asked that there are no cycling lanes.

1020 The general thrust of the supplementary is whether we are going to do more. Well, of course we are going to do more because it is clear that everybody on this side of the House is very committed to an environmentally friendly Gibraltar, a green Gibraltar and a healthier Gibraltar, and encouraging the use of cycling ticks all those boxes so the answer to that is yes.

DEPUTY CHIEF MINISTER

Q90/2022

Civil aviation –
Post-Brexit changes envisaged

1025

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state what changes, if any, are envisaged in relation to civil aviation in a post-Brexit world?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, any changes to civil aviation in a post-Brexit world will depend on whether a treaty is concluded on Gibraltar's relations with the EU and, assuming a treaty is agreed, on the terms specific to civil aviation.

In essence, the information contained in Press Release 687/2020 and the supporting Technical Notice (4) 'Getting ready for the end of the Transition Period – Aviation' remains current today.

Hon. E J Phillips: I am grateful for the answer from the Deputy Chief Minister. I just want to explore that slightly more because obviously yesterday we had ... I am not encouraging further debate on the subject, but yesterday we heard much about the work being done by the Tourism Minister in relation to encouraging European airlines at least to use Gibraltar as a potential place to land passengers. Therefore, if on one hand the Government is encouraging that throughput to our jurisdiction it must, of course, be reviewing what the position might be from a civil aviation perspective, and whilst I appreciate everything the Deputy Chief Minister has said about the post-Brexit work and where the treaty will end up, has the Government looked at that whilst planning its Tourism Strategy?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, obviously I understand the two are connected because without the ability to have a legal framework to allow the flights to happen, the flights cannot happen, but as the hon. Member heard yesterday, the Government is relatively optimistic about looking at a treaty between the UK and the EU on the future relationship of Gibraltar.

As we already said, for there to be a change, aviation needs to be a part of the treaty, presumably in the transport section, and that then would trigger flights being able to operate between Gibraltar and the European Union.

The position at present is that, as the hon. Member knows, Gibraltar operates under the framework provided by the Chicago Convention. That allows flights to and from Gibraltar to overfly other signatory countries – in our case, Belgium, France and Spain – and it also allows for diversions to those countries in the event of bad weather or emergencies. That is the position today.

The position in the EU was obviously the EU legal framework, from which I have to say we were suspended on different occasions for different periods of time from different parts of that acquis. What applies today is the Convention on International Civil Aviation – the Chicago Convention – and that may change if there is a treaty. We have the Convention, but there would be a specific treaty regulating flights to and from the European Union.

Q91/2022

Former GBC premises site – Update re development options

1065

Hon. D J Bossino: Further to Written Question 46/2021, can the Government state whether it is any closer to requesting expressions of interest in the former GBC premises site and what its own preferred options are for development in that area?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, requests for expressions of interest in the site were published in February of this year after the answer to Written Question 46 but before this question was tabled. The Government is currently reviewing the four applications received.

Proposed schemes must allow for a low-rise development and for a use compatible with the area, and include the provision for a minimum of 40 public car parking spaces and a green area.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that answer. Is he able to advise of any progress since that expressions of interest was published?

I do not know whether my hon. Friend here has a question in relation to the parking in the South Barrack Ramp areas and South Barracks, but is it the intention for those parking spaces that are going to be built – I know it is an issue for residents in the area – to replace those that are along that hill opposite GBC, if he knows what I mean? At the moment, there are seven parking spaces that have been lost as a result of, in effect, the pedestrianisation of South Barrack Ramp, and – this is my own calculation and my own counting, as I live in the area – there would be another loss of, depending how far it goes, between 24 and 31 car parking spaces. So are those 40 I think he mentioned meant to be replacing those, or will they be in addition to those parking spaces?

I appreciate it is two questions I have asked him in this supplementary.

1090

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, these are issues that I know my colleague the Minister for Transport, the Hon. Mr Balban, is looking at. They are not issues that I am directly concerned with in terms of the expression of interest and the use of the land. It is fair to say that no policy decision has been taken in that respect at the moment.

1095

Hon. D J Bossino: And in relation to the first supplementary I asked in that exchange, does he have an update as to how the expressions of interest are going and when he expects to be able to alight on a decision in relation to that?

1100

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is not an immediate urgency. Let me explain why. First of all, because my understanding is that GBC still has some equipment in the area which they still use to relay the signal to different parts of Gibraltar; and secondly because there is also a Government tenant in one of the flats in that area who will move to one of the affordable homes when those homes are ready. So there is not an immediate urgency, but that aside, the Government has not had a chance yet to sit down and look at the different proposals that have been made.

Hon. D J Bossino: He may not be in a position to tell me across the floor of the House, but do those proposals include, for example ...? I think one of the buildings – the brick building, as I call it – is listed, so it has to be protected, but I am not sure that the others are, so my question is... I know there is a 19th-century or perhaps early 20th-century building there. Is it proposed to sacrifice that building – the Minister for Heritage is shaking his head – as part of the construction and development of that area?

1115 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think it is fair to say that these would be planning questions for the Development and Planning Commission to address from their own perspective. From the point of view of the Government, the advert makes it clear that planning and heritage considerations would need to be respected.

1120 In terms of the areas used for clubs and associations at the moment, which I think includes the area that he refers to, there is the option for developers to be able to relocate the entities that are there at the moment and fund their relocation, or to temporarily relocate them somewhere else and then bring them back to the area when the development is complete. So, in answer to the question, in short, it really would be a heritage and a planning issue [inaudible] in terms of what they seek to preserve or not preserve from that area.

1125 Hon. D J Bossino: By way of assistance, Mr Speaker, we may not be focusing on the same building. I am thinking more about ... If I can explain it better, it may actually be attached to what is currently the GBC building, so if you are on the road and looking ... Do hon. Members know which one I mean? It is stated on the archway. If you are looking at it, you have La Morna on the left and then the next one up is this one. I am not going to mention names of the neighbours I know who used to and I think still live there, but I think the hon. Member knows which building I am talking about. Is it the Government's policy to protect that building, or not? I know it is not protected by way of legislation.

1135 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, my colleague the Minister for Heritage helpfully tells me those are known as recreation rooms.

1140 Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): That is on the other side. I think he means up the hill from [inaudible].

1145 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Okay, above the [inaudible] In terms of what we preserve or do not preserve, I think fundamentally that would be a planning issue and really would be a matter for the Development and Planning Commission and the experts in the different areas that sit on that body.

1145 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q92/2022
Gibraltar National Archives –
Update re new premises

Clerk: Question 92/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

1150 Hon. D J Bossino: Further to Written Question 47/2021, please provide an update with regard to the new premises for the housing of the Gibraltar National Archives.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

1155 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, the Government has earmarked Duke of Kent House as the new premises for the Gibraltar National Archives.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, Mr Speaker, in fact that was identified in their manifesto at the time as a possibility, so I am glad to hear that that has now been decided upon. I am sure the staff at the National Archives will be very happy with that announcement.

1160 When does he expect those premises are going to be kitted out, and when does he expect that the National Archives will be able to move in? I think in his answer he was talking about 'soon' as to an announcement. He is now making an announcement, but I would ask him, if I may, to state when he expects it will become a reality.

1165 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, a preliminary feasibility study has already been carried out and concept designs have been produced. The next step will be to produce the detailed costings. Obviously, as with everything else, this will need to be fitted into the Government's budgets in any financial year. We will need to determine how to spread the cost of the funding of the project, but there is a feasibility study already produced, concept designs are produced and 1170 we are waiting for the detailed costings.

Hon. D J Bossino: Am I able to take from that reply that it is unlikely to be in this financial year or, indeed, on this side of a general election? Are we looking more into the future as to when he thinks that is going to materialise?

1175 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not possible, really, to say at this moment, but the hon. Member has an advance secret copy of the Estimates of Government Expenditure which may throw some light on that question.

1180 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Hon. K Azopardi: May I ask, please, just a quick supplementary on this? The Government is satisfied, I assume from the indication the Deputy Chief Minister has given us, that the building is big enough for the archives and that it will be secure enough. Obviously, at the moment they are within the courtyard of the Convent, therefore secure. Can he give us an insight on the kind of security the archives would have at Duke of Kent House, given the importance of the National Archives?

1190 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government does not intend to move all the storage that the Archives have to the new premises. It would be a front-facing area for research, students, visitors and exhibitions, that kind of facility. Also, there is now a considerable amount of information that the Archives does put online automatically, which means that the original files no longer need to be on display for researchers to access – they can do so online.

1195 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q93/2022

St Andrew's Church, Town Range – Developments

Clerk: Question 93/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Please state whether the Government is aware of any developments with regard to St Andrew's Church at Town Range; and, if so, what these are.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, no, neither the Office of the Deputy Chief Minister or the Lands Office are not aware of any developments with regard to St Andrew's Church at Town Range.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, if it is of assistance, I am happy to speak to him later on, but I have heard ... I do not know whether he has – perhaps that is a formal answer – but I have heard that the Church of Scotland may be leaving that church. I think there is a formal process that would need to be undergone if that were to be case. I have that on relatively good authority, but he has answered the question.

There is a relevant point that arises. As I understand it, but I stand to be corrected, that particular building is not a listed building in the ... It is? Okay, it is a listed building so that's the answer from my hon. Friend Mr Clinton. I had a quick look at the schedule and I did not see it, but at least it is going to be protected, so I have no questions, Mr Speaker, on that point. (Interjection) Well, he has heard what I have heard, that is all, but is it just his formal position or has he heard whether there is any intention to do away or deal with that building?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member will know that we do not operate on rumours, certainly neither the Government nor myself do, so I really cannot answer the question except to say that my office is not aware of it. I do not know whether they have engaged with other parts of the Government, but after receiving the question and drafting the answer I also made a point of asking Land Property Services to see whether they had heard anything about it as the Government's land and property agents, and they too had not heard anything.

1220

Hon. K Azopardi: To the extent that it transpires that the presence of those people operating St Andrew's Church and administering it is diminished, does the Government accept that it is an important heritage asset and it would take an interest in ensuring that the property is preserved?

1225

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member will know, the question is hypothetical and there is really nothing more that we can say on this particular subject until something more concrete materialises.

1230

Northern Defences –
Refurbishment programme and future management plans

Clerk: Question 94/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide an update with regard to the Northern Defences refurbishment programme, especially in regard to future management plans and likely private sector parties involved.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, works at the Northern Defences have continued unabated with significant improvements to infrastructure by AquaGib being the focus this last year.

With regard to future private sector management, Government has engaged with one of various companies that expressed an interest in providing and managing activities in the area and those discussions are now ongoing.

1250 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, is this one of the three I think he mentioned in reply to my question on 30th October on the same subject? I ask him to confirm that. He is nodding his head. And can he give more detail in relation to that particular project and what it is likely to entail, and more particulars than he has just given us across the floor of the House?

1255 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on the activities being looked at I will probably give more details at the time of the Budget debate, but at the moment it is things like rock climbing, abseiling, zip-lining and also historical heritage tours as a separate activity for those who are interested in undertaking it.

Victualling Yard –
Number of expressions of interest received

Clerk: Question 95/2022. The Hon. K Azopardi.

1260 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how many expressions of interest have been received in respect of the Victualling Yard?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

1265 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, there have been five expressions of interest received in respect of the Victualling Yard.

Hon. K Azopardi: Can the Minister give us an idea of the breadth of options that form part of the expression of interest process, the current consideration process and the likely timescale for the conclusion of that process?

1270 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am reluctant to give too much detail because Government has not yet considered the proposals in detail, but I can confirm that they are for different types of storage, and there are other more altruistically inclined uses proposed as well. The Government really has not had time to consider this in depth as yet.

1275 Hon. K Azopardi: And the question I asked about the likely timescale for consideration?

1280 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: I think, Mr Speaker, we would be looking probably at some time after the summer. We expect that if there is a treaty between the UK and the EU on the future relationship with Gibraltar it would release a huge amount of time on the part of Government Ministers and officials, who will then have time to deal with other issues of this nature. We are trying to combine the two, but I would expect realistically it would be after the summer.

Mr Speaker: Mr Isola will commence with some – 1285 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I thought it might be a convenient moment, just before Mr Isola starts, to offer the whole House a short comfort break of 15 minutes, so that we could start at quarter to six.

Mr Speaker: The House will recess for 15 minutes and return at quarter to six.

The House recessed at 5.30 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.46 p.m.

Procedural

1290 Mr Speaker: Minister Isola will commence with some of his unanswered questions from the September meeting, starting with Question 232.

Whilst I say these few words, I would like to remind everybody that if any hon. Member wishes to speak he should signal this to the Speaker and we can go ahead and allow Ministers to speak or I will ask Members to speak.

DIGITAL, FINANCIAL SERVICES, HEALTH AUTHORITY AND PUBLIC UTILITIES

Q232/2021

PCC/GHA telephone appointment system –
Plans for overhaul

1295 Clerk: Question 232/2021. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state what plans it has to overhaul the PCC/GHA telephone appointment system?

1300 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the GHA is in the process of updating its telephone system by implementing an improved call flow process that will redirect callers to the exact service they require. This will cover not only appointments but also other publicly available services.

In addition to this, I am pleased to announce that we will shortly be introducing an online doctor appointment system, available through the Government's gov.gi portal. This new service will introduce various online GP consultations, including online repeat prescriptions. Access to the existing MyGHA automated telephone booking service will continue.

1310 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer. It is the one question, in my respectful view, the one issue in this community that has blocked every single one of my social media feeds. People in this community are deeply frustrated with it and I am sure the Minister understands that – he must receive numerous complaints about the system and how it works.

1315 Can he assure this House, and members of the public – who, on a daily basis, are either thrown of the line, cut off the line or have to wait for hours upon hours for appointments and contact just to see a doctor – that this new system that he speaks about today will solve the systemic problem with our appointment system?

1320 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I agree and I think that one of the first things I did upon being given responsibility for the GHA was to engage with the Director General in considering options, although I had previously been instructed by the Chief Minister to begin work on an online booking system – which we are ready to go with – which would also provide some support to improving generally the appointment system, which I hope to deliver very shortly.

1325 I accept the hon. Member's comments and I agree with them, and I am doing as much as I possibly can to get it fixed as quickly as I possibly can.

Q233/2021

Cancelled operations – Categorised and reasons for cancellation

Clerk: Question 233/2021. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1330 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many GHA and non-GHA operations have been cancelled over the last three months, broken into category and reasons for cancellation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

1335 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, at the time, the GHA had cancelled 27 operations in the previous three full months. The reasons for the cancellations included emergency surgeries taking priority and critical care beds not being available post operations due to COVID patients being admitted. Additionally, 27 have been cancelled as a result of patients not attending, patients being unwell on the day of the 1340 procedure, surgeon's clinical decision on the day, or as a result of having contracted or isolating due to COVID.

Hon. E J Phillips: I am grateful, Mr Speaker. I should say, and this is not a question but there are numerous questions that follow this for this session or this particular year that will update 1345 them. These figures relate from the date when I asked the question, so I do not think there is any purpose in me continuing to ask this line of question when there are other questions on the Order Paper that address these issues as well.

Mr Speaker: I am grateful for that.

Q234/2021

Provision of MRI scanning services –
Location re incorporation of commercial entity

1350 Clerk: Question 234/2021. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state that the commercial entity that applied to use premises at Europort for the purposes of providing MRI scanning services to the GHA is incorporated in Belize?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

1360 Question 43/2021.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, as the Hon. Minister knows, the name of the commercial entity is, I believe, AC Ltd, which has applied for planning consent to use particular premises in the Europort complex and which might actually extend to Atlantic Suites, as far as I understand. It is understood that that application relates to the provision of MRI scanning services and we have 1365 debated in this House the extent to which the Government will either provide those services itself through the GHA or whether this will be dealt with by someone with a commercial interest in providing those services.

1370 Does the Government know who this company is, given the fact that it will be offering a significant medical service to our community? And has the Government done the necessary due diligence to establish the status of this company and its experience in providing specialist MRI services?

1375 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, there are two other questions on the Order Paper today – this is actually one from last September – which deal with the same application.

The position is the same as the last time we discussed it because there is no discussion, no engagement, no agreement, no talk, not even a negotiation with this company in respect of MRI between the GHA and that firm.

1380 If there has been an application for planning, that is one thing. I can make an application to the DPC for planning to build a house on top of his house; it does not mean I have permission to do it from the landlord or the owner. This is exactly the same. If somebody submits a planning application ... They can submit a planning application for whatever they like, but they have not engaged with the GHA, there is no discussion, and I can tell the hon. Member that we are not talking to anyone about providing MRI services in Europort or Atlantic Suites. Does that help?

1385 Hon. E J Phillips: I am grateful for that answer and that is clear. So it does appear – and the first part of the question is – that this is purely a speculative application by a commercial entity that suggests that it might offer MRI services to the community at large, but what is clear from the answer is the GHA have not been engaged in discussions.

1390 Just one question I think the community committee would benefit from further learning on is whether or not the Government continues to be committed to providing that MRI service to our community, given the fact that over 3,000 scans are ordered through Spanish providers currently, and whether the Government is considering providing that service domestically rather than sending our patients over to Spain to have that service dealt with.

1395 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, anything that enables us to provide better services here for less money is absolutely on our list, as you will be hearing from answers to other questions later on in this session. You will hear about the GHA review to be conducted by the Director General, which is in process, and I certainly expect to see this as one of the key priorities in respect of having provision for that in Gibraltar, ideally with a private contractor providing it for us.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q235/2021 –
Provision of MRI scanning services –
Commercial rationale – Question withdrawn

1405 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I will withdraw that question because I think it has clearly been answered by the previous answer by the Minister. It explains the commercial rationale, so there is no point in asking it.

Q246-47/2021

Suspended social workers –
Number suspended, whether paid, duration of and reasons for suspension

Clerk: Question 246/2021. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Of the social workers currently suspended, how many of them are on full pay?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 247.

Clerk: Question 247/2021. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Government provide a list of how many social workers are currently suspended, giving details of how long they have been suspended for and what the reason for their suspension is?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, there is currently one senior social worker suspended on full pay since 14th May 2020, interdicted on allegations of malpractice.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am glad to hear that there is only one, from his information, currently suspended, but should there be more? And even in the case of that one candidate who is suspended, how does the service act to mitigate the void they leave in terms of the continuity and effect it might have on the vulnerable and children? Does the service immediately employ a substitute, or are there gaps that then perhaps leave the service a little weaker?

1430

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the managers obviously will cater for the person who is not there – with some difficulty, but they do – as they would if somebody is on leave or away from being able to carry out the work through illness or whatever. The service will certainly not suffer. There will be people covering, getting overtime and things like that, but the service will continue to be provided.

1435

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Can I just ask ...? It seems from the Minister's information that there is somebody who has been suspended for two years now on a senior scale. Obviously this is costing the taxpayer, and therefore I would like to ask what the prognosis is in terms of the suspension. Are we waiting for a tribunal or some kind of conflict resolution? How much more will it cost the taxpayer and for how long?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the disciplinary procedure is being managed by the central Human Resources department. I do not have details of by when they will be finished. I understand there are lawyers involved and legal advice is being sought in respect of a particular matter, which may delay things, but I do not have any information other than that.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

1455 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the ability to ask just one question on the hon. Lady's question. Just so that we are clear, this relates to suspension of this particular individual as of September 2021 when the question was put before the Minister. Does the Minister have any information relating to any ...? 2020, (Interjection) apologies. Insofar as the suspension as it currently stood, as of 2021 – I should probably correct that – does the Minister have any information as to whether that has moved on insofar as the number of social workers who might be currently suspended?

1460 Hon. A J Isola: No, Mr Speaker, the information will be accurate as at today, so it is the same person from 14th May 2020 who is still interdicted now.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q248/2021
Bruce's Farm –
Replacement of drug-addiction specialist doctors

1465 Clerk: Question 248/2021. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: When will the Care Agency be replacing the two doctors with drug addiction speciality who left Bruce's Farm in the last year?

1470 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the Care Agency does not have, and never has had, doctors at Bruce's Farm. A doctor previously employed at the GHA as a GP took on a different role as the Head of Drugs Service, a policy role, so no longer a GP for the purposes of that job. Another GP was seconded from the GHA to Bruce's Farm.

1475 Bruce's Farm is a therapeutic recovery facility and it does not require an onsite doctor. Medical and nursing support continues to be provided by the GHA in the same way as has been done previously.

1480 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for his answer and I apologise for my mistake in terms of deeming them from the Care Agency when they are from the GHA, as indeed is correct, but I have to ask him why he believes that a drug rehabilitation centre does not need a specialist doctor to deal with the patients when it did until they left. I understand there were two. Why would they have been required then but they are not required now, when clearly I think any objective onlooker would think that a doctor with a speciality in this field would be very much needed and welcome in a rehab centre?

1485 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, if that is what the professionals tell us, then that would happen, but obviously it is not. The individual who was there, to be clear, was a doctor but went there to work not as a doctor but as a policy boss. That is what my answer says: 'A doctor previously employed at the GHA as a GP took on a different role as the Head of Drugs Service,' – so he was a doctor as the Head of Drugs Service – 'a policy role, so no longer a GP for the purposes of that job.' So he was not carrying out a job as a doctor at Bruce's Farm, even though he was a doctor.

1490 Does that make sense to you?

Hon. E J Phillips: Just to confirm, I believe this was Dr Taylor. Is that correct? My understanding was that the Government ... I see the hon. Gentleman is nodding his head. I just wondered because I think there was a doctor dedicated for a period of time at Bruce's Farm, as far as I understand.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Don't give his name.

Hon. E J Phillips: Oh, right, okay. Mr Speaker, I believe that there was a doctor at the time who was dedicated at least one day a week to Bruce's Farm for medical care, not in relation to policy. I think it was the decision of the Government at the time, to engage with a specialist addiction qualified GP to provide medical services one day a week at Bruce's Farm. Is it right, then, that that policy decision to engage a specialist addiction doctor for one day a week has now changed or reversed?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, from the information I have in front of me there has been no change of policy, but there is nobody based there, which is what the question was asking. The GHA provides medical care at Bruce's Farm on a regular basis, yes, but there is nobody based there, which is where the original question came from. In fact, I said in my answer another GP was seconded from the GHA to provide that to Bruce's Farm.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q249/2021
Bruce's Farm –
Aftercare programme

Clerk: Question 249/2021. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What aftercare programme is available when patients leave Bruce's Farm?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, all service users leaving Bruce's Farm residential services enter a community support based programme that is provided by the Care Agency to continue to assist them in maintaining sobriety. All service users are offered and subsequently provided with one-to-one individual appointments with the Care Agency's in-house Therapeutic Team counsellors. Community support sessions are then clinically monitored, based on each individual client assessment as per specific client needs, and continue to be offered until necessary. In addition, the Care Agency team also provides two weekly evening group support sessions, also held in the community, which clients are furthermore invited to attend as part of their continued support.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for his answer. I would just like to let him know that I get a lot of representations from ex-patients of Bruce's Farm who come telling me that they really do not feel like there is a system that cares for them or rehabilitates them after Bruce's Farm, so I would like to ask him whether perhaps he would value this point and maybe improve communications, or even the effort, to ensure that patients have a pathway to go on after Bruce's Farm. I can assure him that there are many who do not know where to go, so there must be some kind of gap in the system once they leave.

1545 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I would be happy to have that information, which I can pass on to ensure that there is no break in communication. The services are there, are being offered and are available and I would urge them to approach the Agency and ensure that they have access to them, as they should.

1550 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if I may, I have just been made aware of a Gibraltar Chronicle article from 31st May 2018 which advertises the doctor with specialism in addiction who had been recruited to help with recovery from substance and alcohol addiction, at Bruce's Farm. So I ask the Minister again whether we have, as he says, not lost a doctor as such in medical care but only in policy, when this article clearly states that a doctor was engaged in order to help with the medical side of rehabilitation at Bruce's Farm.

1555 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I have not seen that article of 2018. I do not even know if that job was filled – whether it was filled or not would be interesting – but also, of course, whether it was permanently based at Bruce's Farm or not, which is where the question was aimed. I am telling the hon. Lady that of course the services are provided to Bruce's Farm, even if they are not permanently there.

1560 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I never implied that any doctor was based, residing or engaged at Bruce's Farm. I was asking about an employee at Bruce's Farm dealing with the medical side of rehabilitating patients, for which, if I may correct him, I think I heard him say that I said there was an advert. It is not an advert, it is an article, a press conference by the GHA revealing the doctor who was engaged to be medically helping patients at Bruce's Farm as from 1565 2018, so this is my question.

1570 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I think what the hon. Lady is saying and reporting from that article is precisely the answer I have given in my very first answer, which is that Bruce's Farm is cared for by the GHA and provided with all the medical services that Bruce's Farm needs from the GHA. That is precisely what my answer said and what she has confirmed through that article from 2018.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, in the article it says:

Of course, as a community medical service we really need to concentrate on some perhaps in those sectors of our community that struggle to access our services more easily, or perhaps sections of our community who may just not seek the care of a GP, so this is where Dr [X] comes in.

1575 Obviously the Government is hailing the speciality of a doctor who is not just a GP, which is why I questioned the Minister on having an expert with a speciality and not just a GP. I reiterate the question: are we going to replace the gap that we have now without this specialist doctor?

1580 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I think we are talking at cross-purposes, because we are both saying the same thing. What I have explained to the hon. Lady is that that specialist was engaged by the GHA with the skills set that he requires to be able to work at Bruce's Farm and provide the residents of Bruce's Farm with the care they need. That was the position then and it is the position today; there is no change.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q96/2022

Special needs dental patients – Allotted days in operating theatre

1585

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, is it Government's intention to set aside allotted days for dental interventions at an operating theatre for individuals with special needs who, for a variety of reasons, may require this to be done under general anaesthetic?

1590

1595

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, there is no regular date/time allocated to special needs dental theatre sessions. The waiting list of 20 patients is the shortest of all patients requiring general anaesthetic. Theatre sessions are allocated according to workload. Since the end of March 2022, eight theatre sessions have been offered for this specific cohort of patients.

1600

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

So, if, since March, eight have been attended to, how many are still waiting and for what length of time have they been waiting? Does the Minister have that data?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I have the numbers that he has asked me for and not the numbers he has not asked me for, but I can tell him that it is the intention of the GHA to prioritise the allocation of these lists and create a waiting list – I cannot tell him the numbers on them – within the next three months.

1610

Hon. E J Reyes: And, if I am interpreting the Minister correctly, this will be done as they are able to slot them in according to demands on the theatre, rather than setting aside a particular day in the week or month, or whatever, just to tackle exclusively those with special needs?

1615

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, as I said in my answer, theatre sessions are allocated according to workload, so it is not that they set aside a morning every Wednesday or every Tuesday, it is dependent on workload whether they can fit them in and then make the arrangements, and then the theatre is made available with all the support.

1620

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, he has explained what the current state of play is. Could I ask him to consider what my hon. Friend was suggesting, to do what currently is not done and have a dedicated window where special needs children in particular can be attended to? Some of them require fillings, for example. You and I can go without a problem and we do not need to go under a general anaesthetic, but these children need to go under a general anaesthetic and it becomes an issue and a problem if you have to wait two or three months for that particular molar to be attended to because obviously it is going to cause pain and discomfort for the child. For example, if you are within the spectrum and non-verbal, you cannot express what is wrong with you, you cannot even point out where you have pain, so if something like that could be looked at ... I would appreciate it if the Minister could attend to that and give a special window for these special needs children to be attended to.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, if I may, this is precisely the kind of thing we are looking at as part of the Disability Strategy. Dentistry, which is something that affects children with learning disabilities, particularly if they are non-verbal, is something we are very alive to. In my capacity as Minister for Equality these are discussions I have already had with the GHA and it is something we are actively working on already, so the hon. Gentleman can rest assured that this is being looked at.

1635

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q97/2022

Schoolchildren referred to Mental Health and Child Protection Services – Numbers in current academic year

Clerk: Question 97/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1640 Hon. E J Reyes: Can Government provide statistics in respect of the number of schoolchildren, broken down by ages, who have been referred to (a) Mental Health Services and (b) Child Protection Services since the start of the present academic year?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

1645 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, GHA records show that referrals to the Mental Health Services since the start of the present academic year are as follows: four to 12 years, 37 referrals; 13 to 18 years, 75 referrals.

Care Agency records show that referrals to Child Protection Services since the start of the present academic year are as follows: four to 12 years, 196 referrals; 13 to 18 years, 110 referrals.

1655 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Minister help us by giving us a broad idea of the nature of the referrals, both in terms of Mental Health Services and Child Protection Services? For example, for mental health does he have a breakdown of things like depression or anxiety, or other issues that perhaps ... social media bullying, things like that? Is there some kind of similar breakdown in terms of Child Protection Services, in terms of generic type of referral; and, if not, could he obtain it perhaps?

1660 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I do not, and I think, from looking at supplementary information being handed to me, it would be dangerous to seek to assimilate where the majorities are, because they are all very different and I would not be inclined to try to put them together and generalise in terms of what the main cause or the main reason is.

1665 Hon. K Azopardi: In terms of the numbers, can I just ask: has the Government been collating similar statistics going back a few years? If so, how does it compare? If not, at first sight of the numbers does the Minister agree that it looks like a significant number of referrals either before Mental Health or Child Protection? Is this something that perhaps the Government would want to take specialist advice on, to see whether there are issues in terms of dealing with it not just in terms of referral, because by the time there has been a referral for mental health or child protection there has been a consequence?

1670 There may be things that cannot be dealt with because they are the product of issues which cannot be prevented, but to the extent that there may be things on this list where the children might benefit from having more counselling services or more child psychology services or other expertise, would the Government, and the Minister in particular, want to discuss that, given the statistics he has talked about just now?

1680 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, in respect of the child protection, the average numbers in previous years are between 350 and 380 per academic year. I think we are up to 306 with a couple of months to go before the end of the year, so I do not think they are as high as they look at first blush – because I had the same inkling when I saw the numbers. In terms of the referrals from the GHA Mental Health Services, similarly I do not actually have the detail but they have mentioned that they are similar.

1685 With respect to how we deal with this moving forward, as my hon. Friend has told me, this does form part of the Disability and Mental Health Strategy, which we will be focusing on as well to look at the numbers to see if there is any underlying cause or reason that should be addressed.

1690 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer. I share the Leader of the Opposition's concern and I note that at first blush the concern was shared by the Minister as to the numbers, but we are talking about one child for every day of the school term who is referred for either child protection or mental health issues. I can understand that he says this is a similar pattern to previous years, but given the size of our population, doesn't that give him cause for concern as to the underlying issues and how we should be solving them? For me, the figure ... despite whether it has been the same in 2022 as 2019, there is clearly a serious issue that one child for every day of the academic year is referred for child protection or mental health issues. Would the Minister care to comment on that further?

1695 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, yes, of course, whatever the number it would merit consideration and thought, and that is why I think the work of the Mental Health Strategy is important, because it does need to be looked at.

1700 I did look at the numbers and I thought my gosh, those are high. I cannot compare it with any other jurisdiction or country because I have not seen the numbers broken down proportionally to the size of population, so I do not know if they are higher or lower than any other country or jurisdiction – but frankly, who cares? We need to look after our own and look at our own numbers. I am confident that that is happening and we will get to it to find what it is, and if we can do anything better to reduce that number, the more the better, obviously.

1705 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q98/2022
Street lights –
Why on in daytime

Clerk: Question 98/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1710 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, now for something completely different. Can the Government state why street lamps appear to remain on throughout the day?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

1715 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, GEA street lighting circuits are controlled by photocells. These photocells switch the street lighting circuits on as natural light starts to fade and turn them off during the day when natural light levels increase. If there are circuits which remain on, this is generally because there could be a failure of such photocells. Once the Electricity Authority is aware of such faults, these are actioned and the fault is duly rectified.

Diesel skid generators –
Whether operational

1720 Clerk: Question 99/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state whether the diesel skid generators are still operational?

1725 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the diesel skid generators are still providing operational support while the fine-tuning of the new power station continues. New power stations are complex projects and not off the shelf. They need to be adapted to the grid systems in which they operate. The GEA is, however, actively pursuing the reduction of these operations in the near future as the fine-tuning of the new engines progresses positively.

1735 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, obviously I ask this question because of the statements that have been made in this House previously about dirty, grimy stations and I think it is right to point out that we are still using an element of that for support, as the Minister has said. Is there a view by him as to when we will rely entirely on that post the operational support that is required by the dirty diesel?

1740 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member's supplementary is ... if I were to call it cheeky it would be very generous. These are generators that are on standby – not all of them, some of them – so they are not pumping out greasy –

1745 Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Grimy, smelly diesel.

Hon. A J Isola: – grimy, smelly diesel, which is what the hon. Members opposite sought to put just opposite the mosque [inaudible] where now much more beautiful facilities are available for use by our community.

1750 These skid generators have a purpose. They are on standby if we have an issue. In most villages in every other part of the world they draw power from different stations, and so if one power station fails it automatically locks into power from another station. In Gibraltar we do not have that luxury; we have one power station and we require it to provide us with power all of the time. Consequently, when you get a completely new set of clean engines, as we have, it is cautious and 1755 appropriate to ensure that we have cover just in case it is needed. I am delighted to say it has not been needed very often, but it has been used, let's be clear.

Hon. E J Phillips: Just one supplementary. Whilst I do not associate myself with the comment of 'village' because I know the Chief Minister is very fond of describing our country as a nation, what I would say to him is that ... My question is: is it the case that these are on permanent standby for that purpose, rather than a future temporary measure? I just want to know about the permanency of these particular skid generators.

1765 Hon. A J Isola: No, Mr Speaker, they are absolutely temporary and I am very hopeful of being able to terminate the arrangements for them shortly. They are literally on standby – some of them, not all of them – because of the lead time it takes to get them going in the event of a failure, but yes, absolutely temporary.

Surgical and non-surgical backlogs –
Details for all disciplines

Clerk: Question 100/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips.

1770 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state the backlog for surgical and non-surgical interventions in respect to each and every discipline within the GHA?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

1775 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Yes, Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is set out in the schedule that I now hand to him.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, sir. The Annual General Meeting of the Gibraltar Socialist Labour Party is happening at seven o'clock this afternoon at the John Mackintosh Hall, and apart from the hiatus that we have suffered as a result of COVID here a demonstration once again in its 45th year of the best operating and real political party in Gibraltar.

For that purpose – as it is my honour not just to be Chief Minister but to be Chief Minister because I am the leader of the Gibraltar Socialist Labour Party – it is my honour to now move the adjournment of the House until tomorrow at 3.30 p.m.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Wednesday, 18th May at 3.30.

I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Wednesday, 18th May at 3.30. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Passed.

This House will now adjourn to Wednesday, 18th May at 3.30 p.m.

The House adjourned at 6.28 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GIBRALTAR PARLIAMENT

Questions for Oral Answer

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Wednesday, 18th May 2022.

We continue with Oral Answers to Questions. Question 101/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Q100/2022

Surgical and non-surgical backlogs – Details for all disciplines – Supplementary questions

5 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, before I ask that question – with your leave – I think we left it at the Hon. Minister having handed a schedule to my colleague as Shadow Minister for Health.

Mr Speaker: That is correct and he wanted to ask a number of supplementaries relating to the handouts, yes. That can proceed.

Hon. K Azopardi: So, if I may, can I just ask the Minister, on Question 100, which was about the backlog of surgical and non-surgical interventions ...? He handed us a schedule. May I just ask him a couple of questions?

15

First of all, I am not really sure what Maxfax is. Perhaps he can tell us what that is. It is on the schedule, on both the surgical and non-surgical. I could not understand it. The others are a bit more obvious. It may be a department or it may be a specific thing, but I cannot tell from the abbreviation. Perhaps he can tell us.

Secondly, from my calculation roughly, although I have not done the scientific calculation it seems to me that there are over 900 patients awaiting non-surgical interventions and over a thousand people awaiting surgical interventions. Can the Minister comment on what that translates into? Is that normal for the state of the Health Service at this time? Has it been impacted by other factors? Perhaps he can give us some idea of that. It seems like a very large number of people awaiting both things. There may be some cross-fertilisation, so there may be people awaiting surgical interventions and non-surgical interventions who might be the same people.

25

Does he have visibility as to why that is and whether it is normal for the GHA at the moment?

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola):

Mr Speaker, I am afraid I cannot be much help or assistance to him in what Maxfax is, but I will certainly get that answer to him during the course of today's proceedings.

30 What I can tell him, and I am sure he can guess the reasoning for the extraordinarily long list of pending interventions is obviously COVID. The Hospital has been, in effect, shut for a very long period of time and I am told that the number of people on the waiting list equates to ... I will send the hon. Member the information ... is three times as long as you would normally expect it to be, and that is because the Hospital was obviously basically shut for a two-year period.

35 I can give the hon. Member some colour to that. A report in the Sunday Times mentioned that waiting lists in the UK are at over six million. One in nine people in the UK are awaiting some form of intervention with the United Kingdom NHS. I think that puts in perspective where we are: way too long, it needs to be tackled, and it is very much a work in progress to tackle it. We accept that it is very much longer than it normally is and should be but, based on the circumstances we have 40 come through over the last two years, understandable. I hope that helps.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, yes, and it is understandable. I think we all accept that COVID has impacted on the provision of essential services in many different ways and the Hospital is one of them, but as we emerge – and indeed I think great strides have been taken to emerge from 45 COVID; I think it is more under control, not least because of the vaccination programme and so on – can the Minister tell us how they envisage they will take steps towards cutting that backlog and how long he thinks, in his discussions with management, it will take for there to be a manageable waiting list for these important areas?

50 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I cannot give him that sort of detail. What I can tell him is there are two things currently happening. The management is working with clinicians to expedite the reduction of the waiting times and, separate to that, there is another piece of work, which is the GHA strategy that we have worked on and which will be ready in a number of months, which will have a far more permanent approach to how we deal with interventions and waiting times.

55 So, at this moment in time I am afraid I cannot give him the kind of detail he is looking for, but I am sure I will be in a position to do that in future meetings.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q101 and Q144/2022

GHA medical practitioners in private practice – Government position

60 Clerk: Question 101/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state its position in relation to GHA medical practitioners pursuing parallel businesses in provision of private healthcare services?

65 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola):
Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 144.

70 Clerk: Question 144/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What is the policy on GHA orthopaedic surgeons in connection to their private practice work?

75 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, at the moment, if a doctor wishes to commence private practice it is a GHA requirement to submit a formal application to the Office of the Director General via the Office of the Medical Director for their consideration. This is valid for a period of one year – 80 12 months – and needs to be renewed on an annual basis. This is currently under review.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, does the Minister have any statistic on how many practitioners of different levels or speciality have submitted such a form asking for consent from the GHA so that they can undertake parallel private medical care?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, no I do not, but I will have shortly as I was in a meeting this morning where we have been through the specific questions and specific information, and so I would hope to have that available not just in terms of clinicians but in others areas where this happens – for example, physiotherapists who are working in particular clinics around Gibraltar. There are other 90 disciplines, not just clinicians, to whom this applies, but I will be able to answer that question more fully when I have that information in future sessions of this House.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, am I right in understanding that this is a procedure that has been set up so that the GHA has a supervisory role in how clinicians need to seek consent? I understood the process that the hon. Member was talking about, but am I right in thinking that those services themselves are not provided from GHA premises, or is it that the GHA seeks consent and then allows the services to be provided from the GHA?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is right, there is no service that can be provided from GHA premises; they have to be offsite. The process is to enable the GHA to ensure that none of those services being provided in a private capacity conflict with obligations to the GHA under their contracts of employment, and therefore the details required by the Director General are quite specific as to when, what and how; but none on GHA premises.
100

Hon. K Azopardi: My final supplementary, if I may. Does the GHA, in terms of the process and in terms of reviewing how this operates either now or in the future, take into consideration whether this method of regulation of private services in some way affects patient decisions in deciding whether to go public or private?
105

For example, is it that you are in the public track as a patient, seeing a particular doctor who you know will be running a private clinic from x clinic on Monday afternoons, you are faced with a long list of non-surgical or surgical interventions, for example, because of the reason that the hon. Member gave just a minute ago in relation to Question 100 – because of the backlog of COVID on the GHA – and the patient then, who is seeing that doctor under the guise of St Bernard's Hospital, decides 'I will go private because that doctor has a private clinic', and does that in some way operate a pressure on the patient? Does the GHA have an interest in that and will it consider those issues?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the GHA of course has an issue with that, and that is why I said that the process and the practice are under review as to how we should move forward. As far as the GHA is concerned, if that sequence of events happens, in our view it would be an abuse and a breach of their contractual provisions and is totally unacceptable to Government and the GHA. And so when I say that the process is under review, that is one of the areas we specifically seek to tackle to ensure it does not happen. We will not have clinicians abusing the waiting lists for their personal benefit, absolutely not.
120

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, similarly to but just a little further than the Leader of the Opposition's supplementaries, my understanding is that the doctors have their off days and private work is being done on those off days, which are supposed to be part of the rota, while some constituents are having appointments cancelled during these working hours. Shouldn't we use these off days, which are meant to be part of the rota, to shorten waiting lists in-house, because hip replacements, for example, have a waiting list of two years?

135 If the Minister is undergoing a review, can we know when we will have an outcome of this review and when we can understand if there is indeed such abuse and if doctors are going to be told that they have to practise in a different manner?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I will report on the review when the review is complete. I cannot put a timeline on that because it is being conducted by the Director General and his team.

140 In respect of the use of rooms, I think that is specifically not allowed under the terms of the contracts that each of the members of the GHA have.

In respect of what each clinician, doctor or surgeon does during the day, that is all the subject of a job plan, which again is being reviewed by the Director General's team to ensure we have a far more efficient and far more effectively policed system of operation. If there is abuse, and the hon. Lady appears to have referred to some, I would be grateful to have that information.

145

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q102/2022

Private sector aesthetic medicine – Regulation

Clerk: Question 102/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state whether it intends to ensure that provision of all forms of aesthetic medicine in the private sector is regulated in Gibraltar?

155

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Medical Registration Board (GMRB) regulates the following professional groups: doctors, dentists, pharmacists and allied health professionals. Outside of the scope and remit is regulation of services.

The Board works closely with responsible officers of all doctors practising medicine in Gibraltar to ensure that the doctors are registered, licensed if required, and operating within their scope of practice.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can I perhaps extrapolate from the answer that the hon. Member has given, and see if he agrees with me, that...? From the answer he has given I take it that the Government takes the view that aesthetic medicine is, therefore, regulated because the persons who are delivering it must be regulated under the GMRB.

170 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, there is an overlap, if I can call it that. As you know, the OFT regulates any business, any service, which is not regulated. As I mentioned in my answer, services themselves are not regulated, so a business that seeks to offer that service will require to be licensed by the OFT, and as part of that licensing process the GMRB is involved in whether that permission should be granted or not.

175 In respect of the individuals, those within the groups that I have mentioned do require to be licensed and registered with the GMRB as individuals.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q103/2022
Hepatitis in children –
Number over last two years

180 Clerk: Question 103/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state the number of reported cases of hepatitis in children in Gibraltar over the last two years?

185 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, there has been one case of hepatitis in a child over the last two years.

Q104/2022
Allergies in 2-18-year-olds –
Number receiving treatment

190 Clerk: Question 104/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, from GHA data can the Government confirm how many children or young adults from two to 18 are suffering from and are being treated in relation to allergies?

195 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, according to data held on GHA systems, there are currently 884 patients between the ages of two and 18 receiving treatment in relation to allergies. This data has been compiled from clinical primary care records and reflects the number of people receiving at least three prescriptions for antihistamines over the last 24 months.

200 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, does the Minister have information about the breadth or the type of allergies?

205 Hon. A J Isola: No, Mr Speaker, I do not. I am assuming it is quite wide, but again if he would write to me I would be happy to find further information.

Hon. K Azopardi: Perhaps when he does that can he consider with his officials whether that would be normal in comparison with, I guess, the geographical ...? Some of it must be environmental factors ... whether that would be normal for the area, for the zone, the Mediterranean, or whether specialist advice can be sought in terms of the numbers?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I would not know, but I am very happy to see if we have that information available to us and share it with the hon. Member.

Q105/2022
Respiratory disease –
Number of patients receiving treatment

215 Clerk: Question 105/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state the number of patients being treated for any form of respiratory disease in the last 24 months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the question is too broad to answer. There is a very wide range of respiratory conditions, some of which are long-term diseases and some of which are transient and acute in nature. In order to answer this question, we would need to understand what the hon. Gentleman is trying to establish. If he can provide that clarification, we can look into the matter further.

230 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, as this hon. Gentleman did not put the question, I am unable to provide the clarification, but I am sure my hon. colleague will be happy to write to the Minister and then perhaps we can get to grips with the issues.

Asthma in 2-18-year-olds –
Number of sufferers

Clerk: Question 106/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

235 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm how many children and young adults from age two to 18 are asthmatics?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

245 Hon. K Azopardi: Again, Mr Speaker, I am not sure if the hon. Member will have this, but does he have an idea whether that would be normal for a population of this size? Is it normal for a population in this area, given the environmental factors that would affect people who have asthma and breathing issues? Are those issues under consideration? If not, does he agree with me that it would be important for the GHA to do a bit more work in that area to understand whether the prevalence of asthma can be in some way assisted by any local action that may help?

250 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, obviously if the number is extraordinarily high, or higher than it should be, then I would certainly have expected the GHA to carry out the exercise that the hon. Member is referring to. I do not have that information available to me, but again I am happy to make enquiries from the operational management team and come back to the hon. Member with an answer.

COVID vaccine –
Whether to be offered beyond June 2022

255 Clerk: Question 107/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

260 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state whether it will continue to offer the COVID vaccine beyond June 2022?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

265 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the Government will continue to offer COVID-19 vaccines beyond June 2022, providing we continue to have supplies that are within expiry date.

The UK Joint Committee for Vaccinations and Immunisations is currently reviewing the data and evidence regarding the benefits for future boosters in the autumn. Our Director of Public Health will review this and develop recommendations for our programme to offer further boosters in the autumn, if required.

270 Hon. K Azopardi: Do I take it from the hon. Member's answer that the jury is out on whether there will be further boosters in the future, firstly?

275 And secondly, I think the public information has been that the current batch expires at the end of June. To the extent that there may be returning students who want to have the COVID vaccine, is the Government, at least in the short term, arranging a small supply for anyone who might have been away from Gibraltar when the second booster was offered to people and had been unable to take it up?

280 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, first of all, the UK Joint Committee for Vaccinations is currently reviewing the position in respect of what the recommendations are going to be. That is in respect of the future and the use of boosters.

285 In respect of the current vaccines that we have, I mentioned that we will continue beyond June 2022. Why? Because the expiry dates in the UK have been extended, so the vaccines that we currently hold are now valid for longer than we were originally told they were, as a result of the UK reviewing the data in the first place with the work they have done. It is not June 2022, it is now actually September, so that would cover the period the hon. Member is asking about in respect of students, and by that time obviously the UK will have reached a conclusion in terms of its thinking as to what it is going to recommend for future boosters and future vaccinations.

Long COVID –
Support for sufferers and future provision

Clerk: Question 108/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

295 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm what support is being offered to sufferers of long COVID and what future provision is being made beyond July 2022?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

300 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, patients referred with long COVID symptoms are currently being seen in a general medical clinic run by one of our consultant physicians.

The additional clinical services provided by the GHA during the COVID-19 pandemic, including the long COVID clinic, are being regularly reviewed and scaled back as necessary and in line with HMGoG's exit strategy. All long COVID patients will continue to receive the necessary clinical support and care.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member have an idea of how many patients would classify as long COVID in Gibraltar, at least under GHA records?

310 I understand the motivation for the question put by my hon. colleague was because he has had discussions with some patients who feel that their needs are not properly understood. I can understand that if someone – just anecdotally reading the cases of long COVID that have been reported – who was fit and healthy is afflicted by this, they may not necessarily feel understood and will feel particularly frustrated, so does the Hon. Minister, in the consideration ...? When he

315 says that they are being scaled down in the context of the strategy, will he consider that there will be a group of patients here who will feel particularly frustrated and that indeed it is important to ensure their long-term needs are cared for?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, as I said, all long COVID patients will continue to receive the necessary clinical support and care. There is no time limit. The exit strategy will not conflict with the care that we provide to long COVID sufferers. That care is available and will continue to be available for as long as it is needed.

I do not have the number which the hon. Member asked me for – if I was aware of how many – but again I am happy to have my office dig that out and provide it to the Hon. Mr Phillips and himself, but there can be no question ...

325 I think one of the issues with long COVID is, of course, that data is constantly under review. It is a new problem which we have all had to live with since COVID came across and therefore the data, the information, the research is ongoing. I know that the GHA are keeping a very close eye on what is coming out of the United Kingdom Health Service in order to ensure that we are at the forefront of delivering that service to our patients in Gibraltar who suffer from long COVID.

GHA strategic objectives and Government Reset, Restart and Recover strategy – Publication

Clerk: Question 109/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that it will publish the GHA's strategic objectives?
335

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola):
340 Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 110.

Clerk: Question 110/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state whether it will publish its Reset, Restart and Recover Strategy?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, this matter falls under the remit of the newly established GHA Board as well as the Director General. It is something that I have discussed myself with the Director General separately in our regular meetings and, as published in Press Release 892/2021, the strategic objectives are something that are being considered holistically to improve the GHA. Once the exercise is complete and I am advised accordingly, the strategic objectives will be published.

The Reset, Restart and Recover strategy will be an integral part of the overall GHA strategy and will also be published in due course.
355

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, does the Minister have an idea of the timescale for the publication of these documents? Clearly, when the GHA set strategic objectives for the improvement of the Health Service, which affects us all, there will be a big public interest in that programme to see how the GHA sees the roadmap for the future. I am sure that there will be interest out there on this issue, so will the Minister perhaps give us some idea of when precisely that will happen?
360

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member has suggested, it is an incredibly important piece of work and the last thing I would like the Director General to do is rush it. I am told that the review will be available for Government's consideration and review within a period of four to five months, so I expect it fairly shortly and I would expect to be able to ensure that it is published very shortly thereafter.
365

It is a comprehensive work that is ongoing. I know the Director General is putting a lot of effort and time into the entire strategic review as to where we see the GHA going in future years. It will be an important document. It will, without question, raise a lot of interest within our community and it is right that it should, and I expect a period for there to be feedback before the strategy is actually implemented.
370

I would hope that it can be done before then and I have some confidence that it will, but I do not want the hon. Member asking me every month how it is coming along, so if I put a bit of a longer date then I hope I can bring it to this Parliament before.
375

GHA appointment line –
Free calls

Clerk: Question 111/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that all calls to the GHA telephone line remain free of charge?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

385

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I am pleased to confirm that calls to the GHA appointment line – 200 52441 – remain free of charge.

Q112/2022
GHA appointment line –
Waiting times and termination of calls

Clerk: Question 112/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, in relation to the GHA's appointment telephone service, can the Government state over the last 12 months: (i) how long callers are being made to wait until their call is substantively dealt with; (ii) how many calls are terminated or cut off and for what reasons; and (iii) of those calls terminated, the percentage which are attributable to patients given excessive waiting times?

395

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, we discussed this same question yesterday and I think we agreed that the current system falls short of everyone's expectations and is actively being worked on.

400

But in answer to the specific questions raised by the hon. Member, on average, the time taken for calls that are answered by a call handler in hours or the auto attendant out of hours is seven minutes. Post-pandemic at peak times, as the GHA have been catching up with backlog appointments, it can take a maximum of 53 minutes but this is very rare. Changes are currently being implemented with the telephone system, call handling and the option to book some types of appointments online to free up pressure on the system when there is a high volume of callers.

The current telephone system does not allow the GHA to distinguish between terminated calls and out-of-hours callers where the system terminates the call after a message has been provided. However, the Authority is looking to upgrade the system in this coming year.

410

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, this is related to the question that was discussed yesterday and I am sure the hon. Member has the same data and feedback from the public that we get, which is that it is a mixed bag – sometimes you get through quickly, sometimes you are waiting and waiting on the line and then it is very difficult for people. It is a system which, as the hon. Member said quite candidly yesterday, just does not work – and is perhaps not fit for purpose, I would add.

Those were not his words, but I add my words that the system is in need of overhaul, which I know he accepts.

420 Can he give us a bit more about when the GHA intends to roll out the new system at least on a pilot basis, on a trial basis? He should have information on that.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the problem is not the telephone system. I agree that the system that we have is not acceptable to the GHA in the delivery of services it would want to give to its 425 users, but the problem is not, by itself, the telephone system or any system. You can have the best system in the world, but if what is supplying it is not ready for what is coming – in other words, the queue of appointments [inaudible] – then no matter how good the system is, it ain't going to work. And so what we are doing is spending some time looking at how we can gradually introduce 430 a new and improved system which will be partly online and partly with the telephone system, ultimately moving to a fully online service with the telephone system being reserved for our senior citizens, which will be able to deal with the number of calls we get.

At the same time as we are doing that, we are also looking at how else we can service people without having to make appointments to go to the Primary Care Centre, and that is done by reaching out to the community, providing services around the community which we are currently 435 not doing today. So this is not as simple as a system. What we are looking at doing and delivering is a new way of dealing with appointments that people need to have, which they do and they continue to do, but also what else we can do to get out to people instead of asking them to come in.

So it is a combination of a number of factors. I am very hopeful that we will be able to begin 440 that process very shortly – and by that I mean weeks, not months – and I hope that when we do begin to do that, it will meet with your satisfaction and approval.

Hon. K Azopardi: My final supplementary, if I may. I understand what the hon. Member is doing and I think I agree with him part of the way in this sense, because I think I understand that what 445 he is trying to say is that it is about trying to shift some of the volume of the calls on to the online booking system so that there is less pressure on the telephone service, as I understood it. If I am wrong, perhaps he will clarify.

Where I do not think I share his view is that in some way public awareness might lessen the number of patient attendances or desire for appointments. Statistically, I imagine the patient 450 attendances at the Primary Care Centre must hover around 100,000 a year, and those are numbers that have been fairly level for many years, so it is about finding a system that works, and shifting the volume on to an online booking system might do part of the job. But whatever the GHA put in place, does he agree it has to be a system that is capable of dealing with customary volume that has been there for many years?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the problem is not just the system. What I am trying to explain is that whatever system you put in place, if you have all of the appointment seekers for a whole range of very different services coming through one telephone system, you are going to have a 460 problem. So what I am suggesting is that if we look at it slightly differently and begin to offer a series of different services which people require and use very frequently and we take them off the telephone booking system, then that would alleviate the telephone system to be able to deal with the volume of calls and appointments that are required for more specific issues.

I think as we begin to unroll and publish where we are going the hon. Member will have a much clearer idea of the issues we have today, because to put in an online booking system we can do it 465 tomorrow but it will have the same problem we have today and that is not dealing with the problem that we have. And so what we are seeking to do is see how can we reduce the number of people engaging through the funnel, provide them with the service in different ways and then leave ... for those who absolutely have to use it. I hope that is what we are going to get to within a relatively short period of time, and I know that if we do not he will be reminding me.

GHA complaints –
Number received in last 12 months

470 Clerk: Question 113/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state the number of complaints the GHA has received in the last 12 months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the GHA has received 40 complaints in the last 12 months.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, may I just ask ...? I guess that spans a wide range of issues, because presumably it is all dependent on the unique circumstances of the patient, but is there any discernible pattern? For example, are patients generally complaining about a particular aspect of the service, or is it a mixed bag which covers all sorts of issues?

485

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, on the one occasion that I have the information on statistical numbers for previous years he does not ask me! In respect of the information he is seeking, I am afraid I do not have that information. I have the numbers in respect of what similar years' complaints have been for 2018, 2019, 2020 and 2021, which I am happy to share with the hon. Member if he wishes. I do not have a breakdown of what the nature of the complaints related to, I am afraid.

490

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, so that officials who are listening do not feel that their work is wasted, can the Minister give us an idea of how it compares with previous years?

495

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, officials who are listening will ensure that I have the information that the hon. Member is seeking available to me next time, as I wish I had had this time.

In respect of 2018 the number is 81; 2019, 94; 2020, 95; and 2021, 59. So up to date 40.

Q114-16/2022
Private care providers –

Number and nature of complaints received; standards; regulation and monitoring

500 Clerk: Question 114/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many complaints it has received about the conduct of private care providers and the nature of those complaints?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 115 and 116.

510 Clerk: Question 115/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state what standards private care providers in Gibraltar are bound by?

515

Clerk: Question 116/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

520 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how it regulates or monitors private carer provisions in Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

525 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, in respect of Question 114, the Gibraltar Medical Registration Board (GMRB) regulates professionals and not service providers. Since the current Director of Public Health commenced as Chair of the GMRB in September 2021, two complaints have been received regarding private doctors working within a private sector provider. One related to issuing of exemption letters and one related to prescribing practice. No further action was required following engagement with respective responsible officers.

530 In respect of Question 115, the professional groups that work within the private sector are bound by and regulated by the GMRB. These providers need to meet the requirements as set by legislation and policies developed by the Board.

535 In respect of Question 116, as this question relates to regulation, the Ministry with responsibility for the Office of Fair Trading has advised that providers of private care services are required to obtain a business licence from the OFT as part of the application process. The OFT will carry out enhanced vetting of the applicants or its directors in line with the OFT's vetting policy. The OFT will also require applicants to produce a copy of their safeguarding policy. All licences granted have the following standard conditions: (1) an adequate vetting policy must be adopted and applied to all employees and all workers associated with the business; (2) an adequate safeguarding policy must be in place to protect the business's service users; and (3) all nurses working for the business are required to be registered with the Gibraltar Nurses Registration Board.

545 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker does the Hon. Member agree, in the same way as people can make complaints about service received in the GHA generally – they do not make complaints necessarily of a regulatory nature; regulatory issues are dealt with by the GMRB, but they can make a complaint about a particular aspect of a service in terms of its quality – does the hon. Member agree that that should also be the case in terms of private health services in Gibraltar, and if so, how does the Government think that would be achieved?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, if any patient of any private clinic or private medical service is dissatisfied, they can always make a complaint to the appropriate regulatory authority, like they would in other instances. There is no ombudsman equivalent, if I can call it that, in terms of medical services.

555 I know from financial services and the gambling regulator that users make complaints to the regulators in respect of services they are not happy with or where they feel they have not been treated appropriately. I would see this as no different – complaints in respect of the individual as opposed to the clinic.

560 Hon. K Azopardi: And so – that is what I am asking – should there not be? Does he agree with me? Maybe he does not, but should there not be a wider ability of persons who are engaging with private healthcare providers or carers in the private sector to report a lack of quality to a particular independent body – that is really what I am asking – which is not necessarily dealing solely with the registration of clinicians?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, clinicians have to comply with the conditions of their registration and if there is a particular practitioner who is constantly having complaints through a lack of care or a lack of service, I would have thought it was highly relevant to the regulatory authority and the registration board that is responsible for it, and I believe that that would be the most appropriate place for such a complaint to vest. I do not see any gain or benefit in having a separate body that would receive these complaints. I believe that the appropriate place would be the regulatory authority in respect of service that is falling below the standard. It is a very good red flag to any regulator to know of repeated infractions of service levels or the quality of service being provided by any particular licensed individual firm.

575

Hon. K Azopardi: A final supplementary. But of course, Mr Speaker, if I may – if he permits me, the Hon. Minister – that is not what the GHA does. If I want to complain about something in the GHA I can go and see the complaints officer of the GHA. I may not necessarily be complaining about a specific doctor, I may be complaining about the communication in the Department or the quality of the service, but I can go. The GHA itself has set up an independent office – an office within it, not independent of the GHA, but still people you can complain to.

580

What I am saying is in terms of the private healthcare service, which is growing and is getting larger, there is quite a lot of interface, not just in terms of primary care but also now secondary care services and indeed carers that are being provided to supplement what the state does in Gibraltar. Should there not be a body to which you can complain, not specifically about regulatory matters but about the quality of the service?

585

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, no, I do not. I think it is actually right that the GHA should have its own complaints policy and complaints procedure in respect of the service that it provides, because it has over a thousand people working for it and therefore I think it is absolutely right and appropriate that the GHA should have its own system to deal with complaints. In the same way that I said before that I believe it is important for a regulator to know about individuals or firms that are not meeting the standards on a constant basis, it could be very interesting for the GHA to know of its own employees who may be repeatedly failing, so for that purpose I believe that we are doing it in the right way. Again, it is not dissimilar to how we deal in other areas outside the Health Service with regulated and Government ... Government has its own complaints process, quite rightly, through the ombudsman and other departments too. So I do not believe it is necessary or would benefit us to have a separate complaints process just for people working in the private sector.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q117-21/2022

Complaints and legal claims against GHA –

Number and value; clinical negligence/misdiagnosis; settlements and sums paid; legal fees

Clerk: Question 117/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many legal claims have been issued against the GHA in the last three years?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola):
610 Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 118 to 121.

Clerk: Question 118/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

615 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state: of the number and value of legal claims issued over the last three years, how many relate to clinical negligence and/or misdiagnosis?

620

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many complaints, as opposed to legal claims, have been received in relation to misdiagnosis?

625 Clerk: Question 120/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many GHA legal claims have been settled by payment of a sum to claimants in the last three years?
630

Clerk: Question 121/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state the total value of legal fees paid out to law firms on the GHA panel for legal services, broken down into law firms?
635

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, in respect of Questions 117 and 118 there have been 22 claims 640 issued against the GHA in the field of clinical negligence in the last three years. Eight of these claims relate to misdiagnosis. The total value of moneys paid by the GHA in the last three years in relation to the 22 claims that have been issued against the GHA is approximately £764,143.50. The total value of moneys paid by the GHA in the last three years in relation to eight of the claims that have been issued against the GHA that pertain to misdiagnosis is approximately £337,965.50.

In respect of Question 119, since January 2021 we have received a total of three complaints relating to misdiagnosis.

In respect of Question 120, in the last three years 15 cases have been settled by payments of a sum to claimants.

In respect of Question 121, the GHA panel that specifically deals with medical negligence claims 650 consists of the following firms: (1) Hassans, (2) Attias & Levy, and (3) Triay Stagnetto Neish. The total paid out is: financial year 2021-22, £606,827.69; and financial year 2022/23 to date, £132,153.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member was going a bit fast, so I am going to ask him ...
655 He may have given me the answer, but I just want to make sure that there is no overlap and there are no gaps to the information that we are seeking.

He gave a couple of big sums – £764,000 and about £337,000 – that I understood to be in answer to Question 118. I think that is right. Perhaps he can confirm.

660 In terms of Question 120, when he said there have been 15 legal claims settled by a sum to claimants is that the same figure he has given us, or is that a separate figure? In other words, is the total of £764,000 and £337,000 the same total that would be the settlement figure for Question 120?

665 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I appreciate this question is not the hon. Member's and he is asking it on behalf of another hon. Member, but I think it would be perhaps appropriate for him to register an interest before I carry on – in terms of one of the three firms – for the record.

670 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I am happy to do so in terms of Question 121 and I was not intending to ask any supplementaries on it as a result of that. I am asking in terms of the settlement sums that have been paid to claimants.

Hon. A J Isola: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

675 The first sum I mentioned was in respect of Question 118, which was £764,143.50, which is the total value of moneys paid by the GHA in the last three years in relation to the 22 claims that have been issued against the GHA. The total value of moneys paid by the GHA in the last three years in relation to eight of the claims in respect of misdiagnosis is £337,965. Those are the two numbers in respect of Questions 117 and 118.

I cannot recall the second question that he asked.

680 Hon. K Azopardi: The second question that I asked is: is the sum total of those – £764,000 plus £337,000 – the sum that has been paid under Question 120, or is it a different sum and are we talking about something else? If I can explain –

685 Hon. A J Isola: I am just trying to read.

Hon. K Azopardi: Yes. Question 118 asks about the value of legal claims –

Hon. D A Feetham: In the last three years.

690 Hon. K Azopardi: – in the last three years, and he has given a couple of figures in relation to clinical negligence and misdiagnosis. I am asking, really, have other claims, not clinical negligence and misdiagnosis ...? I cannot think what they would fall under, but is there a different figure in Question 120, or is it the same figure?

695 Hon. A J Isola: The total value of moneys paid by the GHA in the last three years for the whole of the claims relating to the five matters of misdiagnosis that have been settled amounts to approximately £245,546, which is a different number.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q122/2022
Local MRI scanner –
Plans re procurement

700 Clerk: Question 122/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state the plans for the procurement and provision of a local MRI scanner?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the Director General is considering options in relation to the provision of a local MRI scanner. Once these options are explored further, hon. Members will be updated accordingly.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, the information reaching us is that perhaps a charity may have made an offer to contribute to an MRI scanner. Is that the situation? Is that being considered by the Government?

715

Hon. A J Isola: Not as far as I am aware, Mr Speaker. It may well have been, but I am not aware of that. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) My hon. and learned Friend the Chief Minister is confirming that such an offer has been made but has not yet been finalised, hence I am not aware of it yet.

Hon. K Azopardi: Is that being considered as part of the mix?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I do not think that the GHA is able to consider that at this stage because the offer has been made to my office and I will be meeting with the group that is formulating the offer. In order to enable them to put an offer to the GHA for consideration they require certain assistance from my office – which we will be providing them – in formulating the offer, and then they can go and make that offer to the GHA and the GHA can consider it from their point of view. They have done a considerable amount of work outside of Gibraltar in respect of how they will propose to deal with the issues that arise, but they need some input from my office before they are able to actually formulate the thing called an offer to put to the GHA.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q123-24/2022

AC Ltd –

Relationship with Government; connection with any Minister

Clerk: Question 123/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state its relationship with AC Ltd, a company incorporated in Belize which has applied for consent to provide MRI services from premises within the Atlantic Suites complex?

740

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 124.

745

Clerk: Question 124/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state whether any Government Minister has any connection whatsoever with the Belize company AC Ltd?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, as per the answer given to Question 43 on 19th May 2021 by my predecessor, the answer remains the same. We discussed this yesterday. The GHA can therefore confirm that they have not entered into any contractual arrangements with any company for the local provision of MRI services.

In respect of Question 124, no, sir.

Q125/2022
Surgimed Healthcare Ltd – Relationship with Government

Clerk: Question 125/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

760

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state what relationship the GHA or the Government have with a Surgimed Healthcare Ltd, a company incorporated under the laws of England?

765

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the GHA has no relationship with Surgimed Healthcare Ltd.

Q126, Q138 and Q153/2022
Director General of the GHA – Remuneration; nature and term of appointment; extended leave

Clerk: Question 126/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how much the Director General of the GHA is remunerated?

775

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 138 and 153.

780

Clerk: Question 138/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, is the appointment of the Director General of the GHA a permanent appointment or a contractual appointment; and, if contractual, for how long?

Clerk: Question 153/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Can the Health Minister explain the reasons for the extended leave of the new Director General given his short posting so far?

790

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, in respect of Question 126, the Director General of the GHA is remunerated £195,000 per annum.

In respect of Question 138, his position is a contractual appointment. I cannot confirm the period because it is not here, but I know it was in the original press release when we appointed him, so it is in the public domain but I will confirm it to him later on today.

No extended leave has been granted.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for his answer. When I referred to extended leave it seems that many constituents have tried to access the Director General to meet with him and he has been away quite often. Is this perhaps the best strategy to achieve the Restart, Reset and Recover programme? Was it known that the Director General would be entertaining seminars in Harvard and other such entities which may have little to do with the GHA? Is this something that the staff are okay with, given their own restrictions with the COVID pandemic that have been put in place?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the Director General is a great catch for the GHA and for Gibraltar. I am not aware of any instance where he has not been available. He is available 24/7 to me and to the GHA. I do not know what ventures the hon. Lady is referring to, but from my experience in the last month since I have been here ... I have the dates he has been away, which is absolutely normal and I have absolutely no issue with it at all. I think you will find, when you allow him the time to deliver his vision for the GHA, which you will see in the strategy that he will prepare with us, you will be delighted with the work that he is doing.

I very much hope the hon. Lady will welcome the excellent work that he is doing and will be doing in the future, rather than seek to find the first possible opportunity to have a go at an individual who is devoting his entire capacity, energy and skills to the improvement of the GHA and the services we provide to the people of Gibraltar.

820

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I am sure the Minister knows deep down that nobody would want a Director General to fail, because if he fails then strategies fail and all our health is at risk, but obviously it is my duty to ask and hold the GHA – the Minister in this case – to account when multiple people and even members of staff are complaining that somebody under such a short posting is already not present at his office quite often. I am glad that he seems available for the Minister, but there are many who have not had the same experience.

825

I would ask the Minister to perhaps find out whether this gentleman has been away more than he is aware, given his only recent posting as Health Minister.

830

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the role of any CEO or Director General of the Hospital, as the GHA is, is not there to meet with people as and when they wish to see him; his role is to devise, implement and execute a strategy that will improve and safeguard the important critical care that the GHA provides to our community. So I do not agree with the premise of the question in that he has to be sitting at his desk meeting people. I want him to be doing the very opposite. I want him to be understanding what it is and where it is that we are failing and how we can improve it to improve the quality of care, improve the service it provides, reduce the waiting lists.

840 There are so many more things he needs to be doing than meeting with people, so I do not accept the hon. Lady's question and I believe that the Director General is doing and will be doing a very good job for us and for our community and should be welcomed.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

845 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, just a short supplementary, if I may, on the original question about the remuneration, which is tied up with my contractual term issue. He gave a figure of £195,000. Is that an all-in figure, or is that just salary? Does it include benefits? For example, does the GHA pay rent? Is there a rental arrangement? If there are other benefits, what is the all-inclusive value of the package?

850 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I do not have that information available. I will certainly get it to him. I am not sure if there is rental support or any of that, but I will certainly get that information to the hon. Member today.

855 Hon. K Azopardi: Okay, so to be clear, the £195,000 is the salary?

Hon. A J Isola: To be clear, Mr Speaker, I do not know if there is anything else, but if there is I will tell him.

Q127/2022

LNG –

Purchases from 1st January to 31st March 2022

Clerk: Question 127/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

860 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a schedule of LNG purchases in the period from 1st January 2020 to 31st March 2022, including volume and price?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

870 Hon. R M Clinton: While I wait for the schedule, to have a glance through it, if I may ask the Minister: given the obvious pressures of international prices for energy, what, if any, measures have his Ministry been able to take to mitigate any price effects due to events in Russia and Ukraine affecting gas supplies?

875 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member knows, the price of LNG gas has increased significantly as a result of the Ukraine crisis. I am pleased to report to this House that we have not been impacted by that increase because when the Financial Secretary negotiated the contract originally the price was, in a complicated way, linked to the cost of diesel as opposed to LNG and consequently, in the year 2021-22, if you were to look at the actual price and what we paid, the Government has enjoyed the benefit of a saving of over £8 million.

Patients subject to hospital orders –
Length of detention

880 Clerk: Question 128/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many patients in Gibraltar are currently subject to hospital orders, providing particulars of when they were admitted and the length of time they have been detained?

885 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, we have three patients subject to hospital orders, one for five years and five months, one for two years and 10 months, and one for five years and six months.

890 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q129/2022
Mental Health Act –
Measures to ensure safeguards

Clerk: Question 129/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

895 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what is the Government doing in order to ensure that the Lasting Powers of Attorney and Capacity Act is not used to circumvent the safeguards contained in the Mental Health Act in relation to oversight by the Mental Health Tribunal and the provision of second opinions?

900 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the Lasting Powers of Attorney and Mental Capacity Act (MCA) exists to provide care for patients who because of their cognitive impairment, usually due to dementia or intellectual disability, do not have capacity to consent to their treatment. For this group of patients we do not enforce treatment, we provide care.

The Mental Health Act provides for the compulsory detention and treatment of individuals with a serious mental illness. As these individuals receive compulsory treatment, there are additional safeguards – the tribunal system and a second opinion for treatment.

910 The MCA includes safeguards to ensure that the care delivered to patients is in their best interests, through a system of independent capacity assessments carried out by Independent Mental Capacity Advocates (IMCAs).

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister, with respect, has given me an explanation, which I knew, of the differences between the Lasting Powers of Attorney and Capacity Act regime 915 and the Mental Health Act. The question I asked was what is the Government doing in order to ensure that the former is not used to circumvent the latter.

The Hon. Minister will appreciate that this is not a question I have just plucked out of the air. It is far too technical for that to be so. It is just not the type of political question that I would ask. This is based on information that I have received that this is actually happening. Therefore, can I 920 ask the Minister whether at least he made inquiries when he read this question, to ascertain whether in fact the sting underlying this question is true or not, that the former is being used to circumvent the safeguards in the latter?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the answer that I have provided is the safeguard of what provides 925 in both of these cases. If the hon. Member has information which suggests that something different than that is happening I would be very happy for him to share it with me on a confidential basis and I will certainly look into it. I am not aware of any information that suggests that we are not doing things in accordance with what both pieces of legislation require us to do, but if he shares it with me of course I will look into it.

930 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, of course I will without divulging any sources. The point is that there are two separate regimes with their separate safeguards but one is intended to deal with a particular set of individuals and the other one is intended to deal with people with mental illness, essentially, and that contains its own safeguards. The information that I have is that one is being 935 used in order to circumvent the safeguards of the other because it is easier under the former than the latter.

I will talk to the Minister behind the Speaker's Chair. I apologise, Mr Speaker, that I have just given the Minister an explanation rather than ask a question, but it is an important issue and I will take the Minister up.

940 Hon. A J Isola: I would be grateful, Mr Speaker. I think it is not possible for me, however hard I try, to read the hon. Member's mind or try to ascertain the information that he has or guess what that information is. As he has kindly offered, I would be very happy to receive the specifics of the case. As he rightly says, they are very different Acts designed to deal with very different cases and 945 if these are not being met in any way I would be very happy to look into them for him.

Q130-31/2022

COVID boosters –

Number of first and second boosters

Clerk: Question 130/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, of the 38,037 COVID boosters administered to 5th May 2022, how many were first COVID boosters, i.e. a third dose of the COVID vaccine, broken down by 950 residents and non-residents?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola):
Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 131.

Clerk: Question 131/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, of the 38,037 COVID boosters administered to 5th May 2022, how many were second COVID boosters, i.e. a fourth dose of the COVID vaccine, broken down by residents and non-residents?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, out of 38,037 COVID boosters, 30,352 doses were third doses administered to 23,127 residents and 7,225 non-residents. The remaining 7,685 COVID boosters were fourth doses administered to 7,244 residents and 441 non-residents.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, the total would be under 8,000 for the second booster, is that right? Does the Minister have a view in discussion with the GHA and so on? There is quite a remarkable difference between the 30,000 people who took up the COVID booster the first time round and only 8,000 – I say ‘only’ 8,000 – people have chosen to take up the booster the second time round. Does he have a view on that? Does the GHA have a view? Does the GHA have a recommendation for people, given the disparity in numbers?

970

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, yes, the GHA mostly certainly would like people to get their fourth boosters and has said so publicly, repeatedly, and in many of their communications. I believe that there is a relaxation in people’s minds as to COVID and its possible effects and impact. People are much more relaxed about it in being able to travel more freely without wearing masks. There is a far lower degree of alertness, and that obviously is a risk.

975

I think also an interesting contributing factor is when people had their third boosters. Those who had third boosters late ... People normally like to wait six or seven months from their third time to their fourth, and so there is an element of that as well. We will continue to recommend to people that they should have their fourth boosters, we will continue to provide the fourth boosters for as long as we have them available, and yes, it is absolutely the policy of the GHA that we encourage all Gibraltarians and others to get their fourth boosters.

Q132-33/2022
COVID repeat positives – Numbers and vaccination status

Clerk: Question 132/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, of the 17,996 confirmed COVID cases detected in Gibraltar to 5th May 2022, how many people have contracted COVID once and how many have contracted COVID more than once – repeat positives – with a breakdown of how many people have contracted it once, twice, three or more times?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

995 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola):
Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 133.

Clerk: Question 133/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1000 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, to the extent that of the 17,996 confirmed COVID cases detected in Gibraltar to 5th May 2022 there have been repeat positives – in other words, cases of people contracting COVID more than once – can Government provide a breakdown of these by vaccination status, namely how many of the repeat positives have been vaccinated or were unvaccinated against COVID at the time of contracting COVID for a second time?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, of the 17,996 confirmed cases a total of 16,016 persons have contracted COVID once, a total of 987 persons have contracted COVID twice and a total of two persons have contracted COVID three times. The above totals 17,996, as confirmed by the hon. Member.

1010

Out of 989 persons confirmed COVID-19 positive more than twice – two or three times – 728 were vaccinated and 261 were unvaccinated at the time of testing positive.

Q134/2022
GHA COVID app –
Non-recognition of QR codes

Clerk: Question 134/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1015 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government update the House in relation to the resolution of the issues concerning the non-recognition of the GHA COVID app?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

1020 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola):
Mr Speaker, the EU recently approved the commencement of technical works to enable our access to the EU COVID Passport Gateway, which will allow the recognition of our GHA COVID app QR codes. The EU are preparing the final decision and we hope to see it adopted and operational shortly.

1025 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, that is welcome news for anyone who wants to travel on the basis of the COVID app until such time as it is no longer necessary to prove vaccination status – and who knows when that will be; different countries have different views of entry requirements right now.

1030 Can the Government perhaps give us a better idea in terms of the welcome news that there was an approval: when did that happen? Secondly, in terms of the entry into the technical works, how long is it expected that the technical works will take for there to be a recognition of our COVID app around the EU?

1035 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, indeed it is welcome news. It is something we have been working on, quite frustratingly, for months. The technical work has now commenced. When I say ‘shortly’ I mean shortly and I would expect that we will be able to make a positive statement before the next sitting of Parliament, so it is shortly – the next session of Parliament.

Q135-36/2022

Operating department practitioners –
Total number; number working elsewhere in GHA

Clerk: Question 135/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1040 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how many operating department practitioners exist in the complement of the GHA and are there any vacancies at 9th May 2022?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

1045 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 136.

Clerk: Question 136/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1050 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how many persons currently in the employment of the GHA at 9th May 2022 are qualified operating department practitioners but work in other posts or capacities in the GHA?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, in respect of Question 135, there are 10 operating department practitioner (ODP) positions within the complement of the operating theatre department. Of these 10 ODPs, one position remains vacant.

1060 In respect of Question 136, all qualified operating department practitioners working for the GHA are working within the operating theatres department in the capacity of ODPs.

Hon. K Azopardi: Did I understand he said that all persons who are qualified work in the surgical team as ODPs? Is that what he said?

1065 Hon. A J Isola: I will read that answer again – my apologies. All qualified operating department practitioners working for the GHA are working within the operating theatres department in the capacity of ODPs. So they are all qualified.

1070 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I am not sure if we are talking about the same thing. First of all, he has given me the answer to how many there are in the complement and there is one vacancy, I understand that; but I also then asked how many are there who are qualified ODPs but work in other posts. My information is that there are some people who have been sent for training and are qualified ODPs but are not ODPs – in other words have not filled a vacancy because vacancies may not have arisen, so they are working in other capacities but may be called upon to be ODPs from time to time. Could he perhaps check on that information?

1075 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I think the answer to the question is that all of the ones working in the theatre department are qualified ODPs. Two recently qualified ODPs are currently working within theatres backfilling pending vacancies. I think that is the information the hon. Member is referring to.

Operating department practitioners –
Amount spent on training

Clerk: Question 137/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1085 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how much money has the GHA spent on training in respect of operating department practitioners in the financial years 2019-20, 2020-21 and 2021-22, broken down by year?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

1090 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is set out in the schedule that I now hand to him.

Answer to Q137/2022

Bursary 1 student @ £650.00 per month x 12	7,674.19

1095 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, obviously there would need to be a calculation but this looks to me like a sum in excess of £250,000 – is that right, in total?

Hon. A J Isola: No, Mr Speaker. The number for 2019-21, which is two financial years rolled into one, is £234,000, the number in respect of 2018-19 is £70,000 and the number in the financial year 2021-22 is £61,000, so it is £316,000 total.

1100 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how many people qualified as a result of this process?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I do not have that information in respect of each of the years 2018-19, 2019-21 or 2021-22. I would need to refer back to my office to get that information.

1105 Hon. K Azopardi: The Hon. Minister just gave us the figures in relation to the other question ... that there are 10 ODP posts and there is one vacancy. (Interjection by Hon. A J Isola) I thought you said there is one vacancy.

Hon. A J Isola: I said in respect of his question ... [Inaudible]

Hon. K Azopardi: Yes, but unless I am wrong, as part of the other question you said that there was one current vacancy. The hon. Member can check, perhaps, and see that we are not talking at cross-purposes, but as I understood his answer there are 10 people in the complement, there is currently one vacancy and there are also two people who are recently qualified, do not work as ODPs and presumably qualified as a result of this programme. (Interjection) Yes, correct. I am assuming also that not all of them have gone through this training programme, but it just seems like a very high figure for training if, in effect, as a result of that process you have had two or three people qualify. So can the Minister check how many people qualified as a result of this investment of training? That is what I am asking him to check.

1120

Hon. A J Isola: Yes, Mr Speaker, and that is the information I will provide to him once it is available to me.

Mr Speaker: Hold on a second. The Hon. Mr Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1130 Just a quick glance at the table the Minister has kindly provided, with an interest in education it struck my attention that under 2018-19 it says 'Bursary 1 student @ £650.00 per month x 3'. That should be £1,950 and we come up with a figure of £1,635.48. It does not tally. For 2019-21 £650 x 24 months is correct, £15,600. But again, for the financial year 2021-22, £650 for 12 months is £7,800. I do not quite understand how we get £7,674.19.

1135 I appreciate that the Minister can only provide us with information that he is provided with, but if he is going to review some further information, perhaps he would like to double check that. It does seem very basic mathematics ... that you end up with pence on something where you did not start with any pence but whole-pound figures.

1140 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Member for his keen eye. I had not noticed that and I will certainly revert and make sure that it is correct. I am grateful.

1145 Hon. K Azopardi: May I ask just a final one, because staring at the schedule for the first time, as I do sitting here, I just wonder if perhaps part of the answer to what I was asking – which he is going to check, of course, because it may not be; we may not be making the right analysis ... I see from the breakdown by financial year that there is a payment of a professional association registration fee for students. There are two student registration fees paid for 2018-19 and there are three for 2019-21. I do not know how long this course is, so it is either five students or some of the students are registering in successive years because the course is longer than one or two years, but in any event, whether it is two or five students it seems like a relatively small number of people for whom there has been an outlay of training of £360,000, so perhaps the hon. Member can check that and revert to us with precisely how many people qualified as a result of this investment.

1155 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I do not know whether it is two, three or five and I would not want to guess which one of those or other numbers it could be. It could also be that these training programmes relate to conditional and continuing professional development for the existing members of staff. I do not know, so before I respond I would like to get the full information and not mislead the hon. Member or the House.

Q139/2022

Social workers –

Numbers re current employees, departures at end of contract and resignations

1160 Clerk: Question 139/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. K Azopardi: How many social workers are there currently working within the Social Services system, how many in the last three years have left at the end of an 11-month contract and how many have resigned in the last two years?

1165 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, at present there are 26 social workers working within the Social Services system. Seven social workers have left within the last three years at the end of an 11-month contract and in the last two years seven social workers have resigned.

1175 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for that answer. My question is: given the number of social workers who have left, which represents a fair portion of the number of social workers employed, can the Minister enlighten us on whether the Social Services system is looking into itself in order to find out why it is that there is such a quick turnover, how that might affect the end user, children and the vulnerable, and whether this represents a lack of continuity that might result in overall dissatisfaction or poor standards?

1180 Hon. A J Isola: I said that there were 26 social workers working within the system at present. Seven have resigned over two years – I do not think that is a particularly high number – and seven have left at the end of their 11-month contracts.

1185 As you know, the Government policy is that wherever there is a vacancy and a local resident can do the job that we require them to do, that is the preferred option of this Government and obviously that will deliver far better continuity of care than having people who come in and leave from other jurisdictions.

1190 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, is the Minister saying that nationality trumps longevity when you have a short contract among people who may be forging connections, trust and bonds with the end user? Is it more important to ensure that the nationality of that worker is Gibraltarian over the longevity and the service that that worker might be giving and fulfilling in terms of his or her role to the end user?

1195 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Lady listened to the answers I give she would not have to get up and ask these questions. I said local residents, nothing to do with nationality. The only person who has mentioned nationality is the lady herself: local residents.

Clerk: Question 140/2022 –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham would like to ask a question.

1200 Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

The Hon. Minister said seven had essentially done their 11 months and therefore had left. Presumably their contracts were not renewed or they had themselves decided to leave. He then referenced that with the statement about the Government's policy to fill vacancies with local residents, but have these seven that have left been filled by people who are residing in Gibraltar?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, my understanding is that of the people we need we have them in place, so if somebody was no longer required because an 11-month contract terminated or somebody resigned, then that position would be filled in order to ensure that we have the complement that we need to provide the service that we give. I am not able to say to the hon. Member these four will be replaced. What I am saying is that I am not aware of any that have not.

Hon. D A Feetham: I ask the question because of course when answering the question from the hon. Lady to my left the implication in the answer appeared to be, 'We have not renewed these seven but the Government has a policy of filling these vacancies with locals.' That appeared to be the reason why and that is the reason why I am asking.

Mr Speaker, I will come back next time round – or somebody from this side of the House perhaps – to probe the Government further in relation to some of these. Apologies, Mr Speaker, I just wanted to explain that.

1220

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can I just ask one more supplementary? I think if I did not make myself clear to the Minister, what my question was angling to was does the Government find it acceptable to have a revolving-door policy perhaps once you take a long term view over a few years of this 11-month contracting of staff in a sector where the users need the continuity?

1225

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the policy and the process of having people covering for each other is probably best known in the medical services area. Locums are brought in every day of the week in every hospital across the entire world to continue to provide services to patients when there is not sufficient resource from within. What we are seeking to do, and I think the hon. Members opposite will agree but the Hon. Mr Feetham has indicated he will come back with further questions and we will answer those when they come ... but if we have local residents we are paying to train who we know are coming back, it does not seem to be sensible, having funded their training, to then say when they come back 'no jobs' because all the jobs have been taken by non-residents. That is the issue.

If the hon. Lady is suggesting that by having locums we are not providing continuity of care, then I would not agree with the hon. Lady for the reasons I have already given.

1240

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can I just pick up something that the Minister just raised? I would like to make him aware – or ask in the form of a question – that there is a cohort of graduates in social care work, which ex-Minister Costa funded and there was a lot of press about it at the time, who are currently sitting without jobs or any opportunities. I asked this question some time ago and was told that there simply are not any, so I would like to ask the Minister where this funding has gone to, considering that I have spoken to a few of them and they are very frustrated that they are not being called upon to the system.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I am not sure if the hon. Lady is telling us that we should not give 11-month contracts so that we can provide continuity of care – with which we do not agree – and 1250 on the other hand saying we have local cohorts looking for a job and they cannot get into the service. It is one or the other because they diametrically conflict with each other. Either you support the notion that we should have 11-month contracts for non-residents in order to enable the local residents to have those jobs as and when they are trained and ready for those jobs, or not. What you cannot do is in one supplementary ask in one direction and then ask in exactly the contradictory manner the same question.

1255 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, it is exactly the opposite of what I have done. There is an issue where seven social workers have left the system after 11 months and you have a Minister telling me that it is because they want to have a different policy, have residents, and then you have residents who are sitting there without being called up for a job when they have been funded by the same system that is not employing them. The contradictions are not on my side; I 1260 am just here to ask questions on the contradictions coming from the Government side and the spending which apparently is not going anywhere in our system.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, no, the hon. Lady's first supplementary question was complaining that the granting of 11-month contracts deprives the users of continuity of care, so she was saying 1265 that it is wrong to give 11-month contracts. The last question she has asked why aren't we employing the locals who we paid to train and are back.

If we do what she said in the first supplementary question, which is stop the 11-month contracts and employ everyone indefinitely, then there is no chance of them coming back. It has to be one or the other, and that is the answer I have given. As far as we are concerned, we prefer 1270 to have locally resident people providing continuity of care within the Health Service, but when we cannot we issue shorter-term contracts.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: But, Mr Speaker, that is my question –

1275 Mr Speaker: This is the final supplementary.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Yes. That is my question. How can the Minister say that we cannot when we have people sitting there who have been funded by the taxpayer, who can? It is simple 1280 and I do not understand what is not comprehensible about it.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, if the people the hon. Lady is referring to are qualified for the vacancies we have, then of course they will be considered. That is exactly what we are trying to do.

1285 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, may I make a point about this matter, because it has arisen on a number of occasions in different guises in this House? It is only a very short point that I think all hon. Members should consider and it is that in relation to these contracts that we sometimes talk about of different longevity or whether or not they become indefinite, the liability is always on the part of the Government. People always seem to ignore in the debate that the 1290 employee may decide to go at any time, and then they are not criticised because they may have decided to go to another job which might be in Gibraltar or elsewhere at higher pay or because they simply got fed up with the sector. It is always when the Government says 'you have reached the end of your term of employment period' etc. that there is criticism, but these are contracts which require two parties to them and very often it is the other party that decides not to continue, 1295 and that should also be borne in mind.

Q140-43/2022
Dementia sufferers –
Numbers, residence, domiciliary care

Clerk: Question 140/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: How many people have been diagnosed with dementia, and of those diagnosed (a) how many are men and how many are women, and (b) how many men and 1300 how many women of those diagnosed with dementia are under 65 years of age?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola):
1305 Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 141 to 143.

Clerk: Question 141/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: How many of those individuals diagnosed with dementia are at 1310 ERS facilities and how many are in the community, living at home?

Clerk: Question 142/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Of those Individuals living with dementia in the community, how 1315 many are receiving domiciliary care?

Clerk: Question 143/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: How many people with dementia waiting for a bed at ERS are 1320 there (a) living at home, (b) at St Bernard's Hospital and (c) at Ocean Views.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, there are 180 people diagnosed with dementia, of whom 105 are 1325 female and 75 are male. Of those diagnosed, there are two females and two males under the age of 65.

There are 141 people diagnosed with dementia residing at ERS facilities. ERS also supports 39 people living with dementia in the community. There will be a number of people living with 1330 dementia in the community who are not necessarily receiving support through ERS, i.e. only receiving domiciliary care.

Of the individuals living with dementia in the community, 134 are receiving domiciliary care.

Out of the people living with dementia who are waiting for a bed at ERS, there are four living at home, 13 at St Bernard's Hospital and four at Ocean Views.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, when we talk about domiciliary care, is the Minister 1335 looking to increase the possibilities of that bracket of domiciliary care for patients who are living at home? Does he consider it satisfactory? From my understanding and my experience of people living with dementia, they have concerns and reservations – their families – that the domiciliary care is just a little bit less than they would need, or maybe more than a little bit less. So I would 1340 like to know if the Government is reviewing any more domiciliary care for dementia sufferers.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, in short, no, I am not aware of the instance that the hon. Lady refers to. I think that the services review each and every case individually and provide the care that they 1345 believe is necessary to support that person with the care that they need. I am not aware of that issue.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

1350 Hon. D A Feetham: Just in relation to the statistics that he has provided in answer to Question 140 – that is the 180 people who have been diagnosed with dementia – I have noticed that there is a considerable disparity here between female and male: 105 females and 75 males. Is that within international norms? Is that something that the Minister is in a position to answer, whether these statistics are within international norms? There just seems, to me, to be a considerably disparity between the number of females and the number of males suffering from dementia.

1355 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I would not be able to comment on that observation. I agree with the observation he has made. I am assuming there will be some reason for it – I will certainly ask – but I do not know the answer to that question.

1360 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Damon Bossino.

1365 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, in terms of the numbers, I am not sure if the categorisation is correct, or I may be misunderstanding it. The total number is 180 in response to Question 140, and then the numbers in relation to Question 141 add up ... I think it is 141 – I may not have taken an accurate note – plus 39. But then, with Question 142, the answer for domiciliary care is 134. I am not sure how those numbers correlate. Do you add the 134 to the 141? I am not too sure, because it seems like a bigger ... if you add them all up. I may be misunderstanding how the categorisations work.

1370 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

1375 Hon. E J Reyes: Perhaps if I put the question this way to the Minister: from Question 141 the Minister has told us that there are 39 individuals diagnosed with dementia who are living at home, and then for Question 142 – of those individuals living with dementia in the community how many are receiving domiciliary care – it is 134. If 134 with dementia are receiving domiciliary care, is it correct to assume that they are living at home? So then it does not tally with the answer to Question 141, where there were 39 living at home. That is where the confusion arises for non-mathematicians, like myself, Mr Speaker.

1380 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I will happily review the numbers. These are the numbers I have been provided with. I would just say that it also says at the end of the answer to Question 141: 'There will be a number of people living with dementia in the community who are not necessarily receiving support through ERS, i.e. only receiving domiciliary care.' I agree the 134 is larger than I would have expected to have seen and so I am happy to review that and come back.

1385 Hon. D J Bossino: The issue here is that it may have an impact on the overall number. So it may be, indeed, higher than 180, or maybe not, but I think it is a justified question in the circumstances.

1390 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you, Mr Speaker.
I do not know if the Minister is aware that the latest figures in 2019 are that there were 449 people in Gibraltar with dementia. How on earth can we now assume that that figure has gone down by more than double? Does that sound about right, Mr Speaker?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I do not know if that sounds about right but I will go back and have a look at the 2019 numbers and see how they compare to what we have today and why there has been any change as suggested by the lady, or at all. It may or may not be right.

1400 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q145/2022

Waiting lists –

Plans to improve waiting times and reduce backlogs

Clerk: Question 145/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1405 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Has the new Health Minister got any waiting list incentives to improve waiting times and the general backlog stemming from the COVID pandemic; and, if so, can he expand on these?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

1410 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the Director General has launched a review of all waiting times post COVID and will work with clinical colleagues in taking appropriate action. We will continue to discuss these issues in our regular meetings with a view to improving waiting times and backlogs moving forward.

1415 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, will these initiatives revolve around the GHA, or will we be seeing more of an outsource strategy, paying extra in order to reduce these waiting lists?

1420 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, there is a review ongoing, as I have said. I would expect the review, once it is completed, to cover whatever is the most efficient way of dealing with the backlog as quickly as we possibly can.

There is, at the moment, for example in the area of dental care, a tender out to private practice to help us to reduce the dental waiting list as quickly as we possibly can and as efficiently as we possibly can, so I suspect that once the review is complete it will be a mixture of how we can reduce this number in the shortest time.

Urology –

Number of specialists and on-call duties

1425 Clerk: Question 146/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: How many specialist urologists are there in the Health Service and how often are they on call?

1430 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, there are two consultant urologists in the GHA. At present they are covering the service between them on a one-in-two on-call basis.

1435 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, if we are being covered as a one in two, I believe that poses a risk. Would there not be a better strategy to ensure that urology – emergency urology and on-call urology – is covered all the time and not 50% of the time?

1440 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the professionals engaged with providing the quality of care that we require of them have advised that this is adequate and working. The urologists have agreed to continue covering on this basis until the job plan is agreed, which, as I mentioned earlier, is ongoing.

1445 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I genuinely do not understand. I know that the other side like to say that I do not understand things a lot of the time, but this is one of the times when I do not.

I would like the Minister to answer how a healthcare professional can state that the emergency cover is only ever needing to be available 50% of the time. How can they predict that the other 50% of the time there might not be a terrible emergency and that they know best, that the other 50% of the time it is not necessary to cover? Is the Minister saying that these urologists stare into a crystal ball and they know that on Monday, Wednesday and Friday there is going to be an emergency but on Thursday, Tuesday and Sunday they can be off? How exactly does that work?

1455 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I think the characterisation that the hon. Lady has made of the role that these professionals play is inaccurate. If somebody has an emergency, where do they go? They do not go looking for a urologist, they go to A&E, where they get seen by a doctor who deals with the emergency.

The person who is the specialist is on call. The on-call urologist will be much closer to the hospital here than in most parts of the world, so in terms of delivering the service that we believe we require, I think that the professionals advising us have come to the right decision. The hon. Lady is not right in her assessment of giving emergency service: we give it.

1465 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I really am trying to understand this. If there is a patient, for example, who turns up at A&E with testicular torsion and needs an emergency urologist and there is no emergency cover because it is one in two, and that night, when this patient is dying of testicular torsion, there is no specialist, is the Minister telling me that an A&E doctor will do, that they will scramble for the urologist who is not meant to be on call because, as he says, it is only one in two and that night it is not the one in two?

1470 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I do not believe the hon. Lady is qualified to make any assessment of what clinical needs the GHA may or may not have. The professionals have advised us that this works, it works for the community and provides the quality of care that we want for our people, which is the best available.

1475 As I have already said to the hon. Lady, on-call urologists are available to the GHA and somebody who is in an emergency will be dealt with, as everyone else is dealt with, at A&E and a urologist will be made – on call – available for that patient to be dealt with quicker than most hospitals in the world are able to get them, because of the size and geography of our wonderful homeland.

1480 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you, may I ask ...? Perhaps he does not know the answer to this, but how does this two to one compare to, for example, the United Kingdom or other jurisdictions?

1485 Presumably, in making that decision you have looked at what they do in other jurisdictions and made the decision as to whether this is adequate or inadequate.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I have not made any decision, as I have been at pains to stress to the hon. Lady in my answers. The professionals have made the decision. The professionals have given the advice and the professionals who are responsible for all operational aspects of the GHA have made that decision. I do not know, but I am sure they do, what the position is in other countries. I am sure that forms part of their assessment as to what they believe the GHA requires in order to provide the quality of care that we require of them.

1495 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, bearing in mind that the hon. Lady has brought it to the House, there is obviously a concern about that. Ultimately I understand that he does not make the decisions personally, that of course it is the GHA that is making the decisions based on advice that is provided by the professionals, but I would have thought that if something has been brought to this House the Hon. Minister would be interested in at least ascertaining whether this is comparable favourably to other jurisdictions. Will he undertake to go back and ask that question of the professionals concerned?

1500 Hon. A J Isola: [Inaudible] ... that it is good enough and I think there is really nothing more to talk about. To have a urologist on call in Gibraltar for the provision of care to our patients I believe to be absolutely reasonable and I am very grateful to the professionals who have given us the advice to be able to do that.

Mr Speaker: I think we need to move on now.

Q147/2022
Tubal ligation –
Current policy re women under 30

Clerk: Question 147/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What is the current policy on what is commonly known as ‘tube tying’ for women under 30 years of age at the GHA?

1515

1520

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can I ask the Minister, given that there are so many reviews going on since the community legalised abortion – and I think, whatever side of the argument one is on, we all want to keep them safe and rare – would the Minister be persuaded or is he at all having any discussions about making this more of a widely available option for women who want to be sterilised and not have to face the potential eventuality of going for an abortion instead?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, of course I am interested in anything that can deliver better care to our people. What I would say to the hon. Lady is that I have no doubt that this and everything 1530 else will form part of the review that is being carried out. Whether it is deemed to be okay or needs change or improvement in one way or another is yet to be seen, but I would tell the hon. Lady that there are three patients under the age of 30 in the last year who have had this, all for clinical reasons.

1535 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q148/2022
Defibrillators – Maintenance

Clerk: Question 148/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What is the GHA policy on maintenance of defibrillators around the city?

1540

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

1545

The advice of the ambulance staff was obtained in connection to the placing of the defibrillators around Gibraltar. GHA ambulance staff do review defibrillators as and when required. However, this is being looked into with a view to having a more formal arrangement being implemented as to their maintenance.

1550

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, it is my understanding that several of them are not working properly. I would ask the Minister in good faith to perhaps find out whether this is indeed the case, to ensure that they might work better and potentially help to save a life.

1555

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Lady lets me have that information, I will ensure that they are checked and are working as they should be.

Q149/2022
Ambulances – Supply and management

Clerk: Question 149/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is Government satisfied with the supply and management of our emergency and transport ambulances?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, although the GHA has not had issues in the past with the sourcing and supply of emergency and transport ambulances, the GHA is not satisfied and is disappointed with the delays with the recent purchase. The GHA, however, recognises that the delays have been due to the conversion of the vehicles and the required microchips, of which there have been shortages due to the pandemic. These issues have not only affected Gibraltar but worldwide. Two new ambulances are expected to arrive in September of this year.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for his answer.

I have had several representations, which I would happily share with the Minister behind the Speaker's Chair just to show him the veracity of these representations; these have been life-or-death situations.

Given that he has generously explained that they are waiting for more vehicles in order to improve the service, I would like to ask him how are incidents documented, if at all? How are they reported and fed back to the service so that he can understand the data which is out there of failings that are affecting people in our community?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the Director General is very much on the case in respect of ambulances. They form an important part of his review and he has some interesting ideas as to the way forward for our community to get better care quicker when ambulances are needed.

I think that the data available is now being considered and reviewed, and the extent of the data available is improving, which will help him in that assessment to ensure that the kind of incidences that the hon. Lady refers to do not happen in the future. If she has examples, I would be happy to receive them. All I will do is pass them on to ensure that that data is already with them; if not, it will be helpful for them to have it.

Mortuary –
Location and plans

Clerk: Question 150/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: What is the current status of the location where the mortuary has always been, and what are the plans for the mortuary now that the pandemic has eased?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, this is currently under review.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, so many reviews going on. I would like to know a little bit more about perhaps how long this review in particular might take, because of course Gibraltar being such a close-knit community, I know from many people I speak to that they really miss having a location to grieve the recently passed when it does happen, and there are many in our community feeling quite aggrieved by the current practices which are perhaps what we see in other countries but not what we are used to in this community.

I would appreciate it if the Minister could give us some kind of timeline as to when this mortuary status of limbo will be illuminated upon the community, because this is a very sensitive issue that people want to understand what to do with when the inevitable happens.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I accept that and I think that it is important in our community to be able to grieve with families in the way that the hon. Lady has described.

As the hon. Lady will know, during COVID the whole place was just shut off, for obvious reasons, and as a result of that it has led to a rethink. This is a cross-department rethink as to what we should do and how we should do it.

1615 I am afraid I am not able to give much more detail than I did in respect of the general review that is being carried out, which will be completed in the coming months. In terms of timetable I cannot be more specific than that because this service and many of the other services that we hope to bring back faster and better post COVID are all forming part of the one review of the global services the GHA provides, so I would ask the hon. Lady to be a little patient and give us some time to come back with some thinking on that.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for his answer. I just want to ask if at all the Health Ministry is considering outsourcing this service to another location outside of the Hospital, as we see in nearby La Linea, for example, or if the system will stay within our GHA.

1625 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I would not wish to pre-empt the review, but I am sure the review will consider all options and report back to us.

GHA staff professional development – Support re secondment

Clerk: Question 151/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

1630 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Is the Health Minister satisfied with his Ministry's level of support towards its staff with reference to professional development in the form of secondment for those within the organisation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

1635 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I am unsure as to what the hon. Lady is referring to in her question.

As from 10th January 2022 the Ministry of Health – my predecessor's team – was seconded to the offices of the Director General.

1640 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: No, Mr Speaker, I do not think that the Minister has – Sorry, did you finish? I do not think he understood my question in terms of what I was getting at. If I can just explain, I have received some representations that the GHA is no longer supporting staff in expanding their professional development in the form of secondment.

1645 In terms of the representations I have had from a few enrolled nurses who have reported that they were told that they could do their third-year top-up at Gibraltar University, they were told that they could apply after working for two years, which would then make them registered general nurses. They started this process and within a week they were cut off with the excuse of no funding available. Apparently there is only a two-year bracket in which to do this, so if they do not do it after the two years they have to start from scratch for the three years of university all over again, even though they have already banked two, as such. This cut means that none of these individuals can continue their development to further their careers and raise standards, effectively, for the GHA and for all of us. I know that this has led to a certain level of demotivation for these nurses who really want to expand their careers.

1655 Would the Minister be willing for me to perhaps explain this to him in detail behind the Speaker's Chair and perhaps find out whether there is any possibility of allowing these nurses, who want to continue their development, to find a place in which to do it in the correct timeframe?

1660 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, yes, and my apologies because we have completely misunderstood the question that the hon. Lady was asking. If the hon. Lady were to detail that to me I would be very happy to pass it on and get a response for her in terms of what the issues are, if there are any – because I am not familiar with the issue that the hon. Lady has raised – and then come back to her. So, yes, I would very much welcome that.

Q152/2022
GHA executive board –
Selection of members

1665 Clerk: Question 152/2022. The Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: How were the new GHA executive board members selected?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

1670 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, there are six executive directors on the GHA board. The appointments were made as follows: Director General appointed by the GHA Chairperson; Medical Director appointed by the GHA Chairperson; Director of Nursing appointed by the GHA Chairperson; Executive Head of ERS appointed by the GHA Chairperson; Executive Head of Workforce appointed by the GHA
1675 Chairperson; and Director of Finance, currently vacant, appointed by the Chairperson as and when that person is appointed.

1680 Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Mr Speaker, can I just confirm that these are remunerated positions?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, these are all professionals within the GHA.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

1685 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I do not know if I understood the Minister correctly. He just said they are all GHA personnel, yes?

Hon. A J Isola: Professionals.

1690 Hon. R M Clinton: I was looking through the press release and the non-executive directors of the board. Certainly there is an accountant who is not a health professional there.

1695 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the question was how were the new GHA executive board members selected, and that is the answer I have given. They are all executives within the GHA, the Director General, the Medical Director, the Director of Nursing, etc.

Hon. R M Clinton: Sorry, I understand now.

1700 Mr Speaker: There is a further supplementary coming from the Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

In terms of remuneration, are the non-executive directors receiving any fees?

Hon. A J Isola: No, Mr Speaker, it is entirely honorary.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, would this be a convenient moment for the House to recess for 15 minutes before we continue with questions on the environment?

Mr Speaker: The House will recess for 15 minutes and we will return at 6.25.

The House recessed at 6.07 p.m. and resumed at 6.27 p.m.

Procedural

1710 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Prof. John Cortes would like to say a few words before we start the session.

1715 Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Thank you. Mr Speaker, as I explained to you earlier, I have been suffering from a cough for a few days. I have been tested for COVID and I am negative – it is probably a bad cold or an allergy – so I am going to try to work my way through all the answers. It is possible that I will get a coughing fit and I will have to leave without being able to excuse myself, so I am excusing myself now. My hon. Friend Minister Linares will read any answers and I will come back after a few minutes and deal with the supplementaries.

1720 The Opposition can, of course, withdraw all their questions and save me the trouble, but as I guess they are not going to, with your leave and the understanding of the House I will try to soldier through.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1725 Clerk: Question 51/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Mr Speaker: Before we continue, because some of these answers are quite lengthy why don't we allow Minister Linares to answer the questions and you can reserve yourself for the supplementaries? That might be the way forward, but it is entirely up to you.

1730

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: I am grateful to you, Mr Speaker, but I would like to give it a go. I am a little bit better than I have been over the last few days. If I find that I am struggling then I will take you up on your kind offer. Thank you.

Q51/2022

Gibraltar Young Minds – Update

1735

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education provide an update in respect of the set-up known as Gibraltar Young Minds, which is, or was, run by a GHA employee seconded to the Department of Education?

1740 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for the Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, Gibraltar Young Minds is a specialist mental health service for children and young adults which was set up internally by the GHA on the arrival of new members to the clinical psychology team, with input from the consultant psychiatrist with responsibility for these service users. The Department of Education, which had conducted a comprehensive review of mental health, social and emotional needs in schools and the College in Gibraltar through a GHA employee seconded to Education, collaborated from an education perspective but was not leading or running this GHA service.

1750 The seconded individual together with the Educational Adviser for Child Welfare actively engaged with GHA and Care Agency colleagues to share outputs from the phased review and plan the development of referral pathways between organisations, and in particular those specific to school counsellors recently appointed. The Department of Education is a signatory to a memorandum of understanding with the GHA and the Care Agency which identifies priorities that all three agencies will work together to address in respect of children's mental health.

1755 The employee mentioned continues to work with the Director of Education, the Adviser for Child Welfare, Adviser for Special Educational Needs, educational psychologists and school counsellors along with staff across the service to continue to enhance and develop the education mental health strategy.

1760 I am informed that the GHA service is fully up and running.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker. Within all the information the Minister has given me, is he aware if the GHA employee is still seconded on a full-time basis at the Department of Education, or is it as and when he can be released from other GHA duties?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, he is seconded on a full-time basis.

Q52-53/2022

Counsellors and educational psychologists – Numbers available

Clerk: Question 52/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1770 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Education confirm that there are now six counsellors readily available in schools as per Government's election manifesto?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

1775 Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 53.

Clerk: Question 53/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1780 Hon. E J Reyes: How many educational psychologists are currently employed at the Department of Education to serve all schools?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there are currently four school counsellors employed. Recruitment will continue for additional counsellors during the lifetime of this Parliament.

1785 There are currently two educational psychologists employed at the Department of Education.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, since there are two questions, I have two minor supplementaries. The counsellors are still four in number, although I gather that it is the intention to aim to have six. Does the Minister have an indication by when he hopes the selection process will be complete?

In respect of Question 53 the Minister has confirmed there are two educational psychologists, but it is my understanding that we used to have three, so is the other one a vacancy that they are in the process of filling or has it been decided to cut down the number of educational psychologists?

1795

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I cannot tell the hon. Member when the recruitment will be completed. Clearly recruitment has been stalled as a result of the pandemic, but obviously it is still an aim; they are important posts and the Government still believes that they are important posts.

1800

In the case of educational psychologists, that is not quite correct. The number has been two substantive ... There has been one trainee who has been able to deal with some sessions, but because one of the former educational psychologists was promoted to education adviser, the trainee then slotted into that post and we are now looking at the possibility of engaging another trainee to understudy. So there have not been three. The fact is there have been three people but one of them has been a trainee.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that clarification, Mr Speaker.

Can I refer him back to the counsellors, the four that are available for schools? Is the Minister aware, because the secondary schools tend to be large in size, if these counsellors are in situ on a school-organised basis, or are they based elsewhere and have to be called in by the school and wait for them to be able to come down? I am pointing that question toward the advantage of having a counsellor readily available with immediate effect, if need be, in schools with a thousand pupils each.

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: It does not usually work like that. The counsellors do not normally deal with a critical case; they deal with referrals through educational psychologists or from the school teams.

1815

The counsellors were new. They were added by this administration around the time of the new comprehensives, the new secondary schools, and they are based there, but obviously they are available to all the schools.

1820

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q54/2022

Educational psychologists and the GHA – Evidence of multi-disciplinary approach

Clerk: Question 54/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1825 Hon. E J Reyes: Can Government provide details of any multi-disciplinary approach currently in place for the benefit of pupils between the Department of Education's educational psychologists and the Gibraltar Health Authority?

1830

1835

The educational psychologists attend paediatric multi-disciplinary reviews when invited to attend these by GHA staff. The educational psychologists liaise with relevant staff – primarily paediatric therapists and consultant paediatricians – from the GHA when they have shared cases of children and young people in common. They also attend educational multi-disciplinary reviews for pupils attending Government schools and other educational settings, and relevant GHA staff, primarily paediatric therapists and consultant paediatricians, are invited to attend when they are supporting the children and young people who are being reviewed. They form part of joint workstreams and work alongside relevant staff from the GHA and other agencies providing strategic liaison on pathways and policies pertinent to children and young people with additional needs – for example, the ASD pathway. The educational psychologists work closely with relevant staff from the GHA and other agencies to support pupils, particularly at times of transition across schools and across sectors, to ensure as smooth a transition as possible for the children and young people. They form part of the gazetted Special Educational Needs Assessment Panel, which also consists of GHA staff and Care Agency staff, to ensure children and young people's educational needs are met. They form part of the Disability Panel, which also consists of GHA staff and Care Agency staff, to discuss the needs of children and young people with disabilities in our community.

1840

1850

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q55/2022

Special needs learning support assistants – Number available in primary schools

Clerk: Question 55/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Education provide details of how many special needs learning support assistants are presently available in primary schools?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

1860

It is important to note that the assigning of SNLSAs to educational settings is entirely needs dependent. That is to say that the allocation of SNLSAs to educational settings is dependent on the particular needs of the children who attend those settings at that specific time. Each 1870 educational setting's requirements are subject to change as pupils' needs change, pupils develop, emerging needs are identified or pupils transition to a different educational setting. The number of SNLSAs assigned to each educational setting is dependent on the specific needs of each cohort of children each academic year.

1875 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I think the Minister has clarified some things there for me. Am I correct in deducing that because it is demand led, the 122½ in the primary schools which is lower and upper primary ... you could have a case that comes in September, the numbers in the lower primary could be lowered because as a pupil moves into upper primary the individual pupil takes it with him, and then there will be the whole process of the new reception year kicking in, the cohort? Is that a correct assumption, so that I know for future reference?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is correct.

Q56/2022
Bayside and Westside Schools –
Use of workshops designated for vocational courses

Clerk: Question 56/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1885 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Education provide details of what usage is being made of the workshops situated on the ground floors of both Bayside and Westside Schools which were purposely designated for vocational courses and trades such as mechanics and wet trades?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

1890 Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, some of these areas are currently being used to support the learning and teaching of existing curriculum subjects. This is the case for the engineering workshop. The garage and wet trade areas are currently not in use.

1895 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, if the garage and wet trades areas are currently not in use, is it that we are waiting for these particular courses to kick in, or is it that we have now abandoned, for example, the wet trade courses and therefore management would have to rethink their usage?

1900 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, the courses have abandoned us. City and Guilds, quite unfortunately, discontinued a number of courses from 1st August 2021: Level 2 Technical Engineering vehicle, Technology, Design and Planning in the Built Environment, and Cookery and Service for the Hospitality Industry. They are carrying out a whole review and they were the courses that we were going to offer, so unfortunately they are not available. The Department of Education is, however, in contact with other authorities with a view to being accepted as a location for these courses, and obviously as soon as we are able to start those courses we have the facilities available. Unfortunately it was completely beyond our control and the courses that we were going to offer have ceased to be offered by City and Guilds.

Vocational training –
Details of courses delivered in secondary schools

Hon. E J Reyes: Can Government provide details of vocational courses being delivered at our secondary schools for the academic year 2021-22 together with details of numbers of students following these courses, the educational establishment delivering the courses, the completion date of the courses and the qualifications obtainable upon successful completion of said courses?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there are a total of 18 students who will complete their Level 2 Hair and Beauty course delivered at Westside and Bayside Schools in salons that were created. Unfortunately those courses were not discontinued and they will be completing this academic year. An additional nine from Bayside School and seven from Westside School are expected to complete the same Hair and Beauty course next year.

We have 78 students at Bayside and 23 students at Westside who will complete their Level 2 Digital Technologies qualification at the end of this academic year. A further 24 students from Bayside and 12 from Westside are expected to complete their Level 2 Digital Technologies qualification in 2023.

1925

We must not forget that we also have 125 students at our secondary schools and 286 at the Gibraltar College who are following courses which are vocationally assessed. That is they are in subject areas not traditionally considered as vocational subjects but are being assessed in a vocational manner. This includes the four students who are now working towards the new Music Performance qualification which has been introduced this year. This number does not include the students who at some points in the journey complete ASDAN qualifications, which are vocationally assessed at Levels 1 and 2 at our secondary schools.

Hon. E J Reyes: I am very grateful for that information, Mr Speaker.

The Minister went on to save me the trouble of having to specifically go on to something ... He has given us the example of the music courses and so on. Can he confirm that these would end up leading to a Level 1 or Level 2 qualification and, the same as before, an estimated completion date when they are bound to finish this current examination period, or is there still another year to go?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the Music Performance course is a two-year course, so it is due to finish next year and it is an A-level equivalent. (Interjection) Yes. The Music Performance course which is being offered by the College in association with the Academy of Music and Performing Arts is A-level equivalent.

1945

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you that's helpful Level 3, rather than a Level 3, Am I correct?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, but it has the same value for university purposes.

Hon. E J Reyes: I know there is a Minister on that side of the House as well with that sort of educational experience.

The Level 2 is considered more or less equivalent to a GCSE, or it should be accepted internationally as that, and therefore the Level 3 is an A-Level; and the Level 1 – which unfortunately in some private sector markets is not given as much credit but from an educational point of view is also worthwhile – is equivalent to a foundation and almost quasi-GCSE?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Yes, absolutely, Mr Speaker, and this actually opens up an opportunity for young people who may not have wanted or may not have been able to follow a more strictly academic route, to gain qualifications which will serve them well in future life.

1960

School leaving age –
Update re possible changes

Clerk: Question 58/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Education provide updated details in respect of any possible changes it hopes to introduce in respect of the school leaving age, so as to bring this into line with the United Kingdom?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Government is considering increasing the school leaving age to 16 in its current review of the Education Act.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

We have spoken about this in the past, so it is still a work in progress, but looking further into the details of the United Kingdom, it is not as simple as saying the school leaving age is 16. The student may leave school at 16 if up to the age of 18 they are enrolled in a type of apprenticeship or employment programme that would teach them some skills and gain experience. Is the Minister inclined to hope that Gibraltar will follow a bit more that route? In other words, it is not a question of simply reaching a given birthday, like 16, and then saying the individual can stay at home and roam the streets, but rather that they be engaged in a recognised type of programme, as seems to be the case in the United Kingdom?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I personally would not be inclined to be so prescriptive. I am not sure that that may not be the outcome, but certainly that is not the way we are going at the moment. But as I said, this is currently under consideration in a wide review of the legislation and is something that clearly is under discussion. My personal view is that we should not be so prescriptive.

Q59/2022
Scholarship contracts –
Total amount outstanding re courses not completed and action taken

Clerk: Question 59/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can Government provide updated details of the grand total debt outstanding from students who have not successfully completed any courses for which they were granted scholarships, together with details of what actions are being taken against debtors who are failing to make repayments as required by their scholarship contracts?

1995

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the grand total debt outstanding as at 6th May 2022, when the answer was compiled, amounts to £1,107,436.20. Debtors who fail to honour repayments despite several written reminders are referred to the Central Arrears Unit.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I am glad to know that the Minister has done a good job: he has reduced by £199,000 the debt as of when he answered my Question 544.

Just a small point of clarification. In the past the Minister has answered and given me a footnote saying that those students who have not been referred to the Central Arrears Unit have been chased up by the Department of Education, and in today's answer he has made, again, a reference to the Central Arrears Unit. Is it a question of the Department of Education having first tried to contact these people trying to deal with them and all the pending cases now pass fully to the Central Arrears Unit so that the Department of Education per se has done its job and it is now all centralised at the Central Arrears Unit?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Yes, the Department of Education tries to assist, in a friendly manner, families who are facing the obligation to pay a debt which they would rather not pay. We are sensitive about it and the Department talks to the families and writes to them. On occasion, they reach a payment agreement, depending on means and so on, but clearly there are times when the Department is unsuccessful and it is those cases that are referred to the Central Arrears Unit. I believe that most of the older cases are now with them, but clearly these things happen all the time so it is quite dynamic. There will be new cases that maybe have happened a week or two ago and one or two that are coming in a week or two's time.

It is unfortunate. It has to be dealt with. The Department is as sensitive and understanding as possible, but the debt is there and they will try to recover it.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I tend to concur with the Minister that one has to approach sensitively those students who may have entered into difficulties and may not be able to complete their courses.

Given that we are now towards the end of an academic year, would the Minister accept ... 'advice' may be the wrong word ... a proposal from me that as some students now approach their final exams, if for medical or other genuine reasons they are unable to complete those studies, rather than become a debtor the Department of Education has an information leaflet giving them in bullet points what course of action the individual may take? For example, that individual could re-enrol next September at the university and sit any pending exams they have. Therefore, they comply with the requirement of having successfully completed their course, they do not become debtors to the Department of Education and all it requires is a small investment from their family for an extra term, or whatever the individual [inaudible] Would the Minister for Education take on board perhaps having a little information booklet or sheet with bullet points, or whatever, to assist students through these difficulties and thus enable them not to become debtors and eventually be referred to the Central Arrears Unit?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the information is provided when young people and families come. Whether it is in the form of a booklet ... It is more likely in the form of a pdf or an email. There are meetings held.

Obviously there are situations where, for example, it is for medical reasons that can be confirmed as genuine medical reasons. Obviously these are situations that could be abused. I think that is relatively rare but it is possible, so we have to be absolutely certain that the reasons are legitimate and there is a sympathetic interchange.

Quite the format of the information I am not absolutely aware of, but I am sure that the Department shares and assists as much as possible.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q60/2022
Vaping within school precincts–
Confirmation of reports received

Clerk: Question 60/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

2055

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state whether reports have been received by the Department of Education as to the prevalence of children vaping in and within the school precincts?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

2060

2065

The issue is being addressed in various ways including multi-agency collaboration, education on the dangers of vaping via sharing information on Google Classroom and school Twitter accounts, education on the dangers of vaping through the curriculum and sharing of resources via Public Health and PSHE working parties, identification of areas in school premises that are being used to vape and monitoring of these areas, liaison with parents/carers of pupils identified as vaping on school premises, liaison with RGP, parents/carers and students found vaping, and communication with RGP as regards concerns over illegal purchasing of vaping apparatus.

2070

In most cases the school has identified the specific vaping behaviour and contacted the parents. School staff have found that children who would prefer not to come to school have used vaping by other students as an excuse and have painted a more negative picture than what is happening in reality. For example, a child with friendship issues who did not want to come to school said he had not gone to school because this was happening.

2075

School staff have found that some of the reports of vaping have not resulted from first-hand observations of young people vaping. School staff feel that the vaping behaviour is one that only a small minority of young people engage in, and whilst they of course want to raise awareness as to the dangers, curb the behaviour and prevent others from following suit, they are not of the opinion that this is a widespread issue of significant concern.

2080

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Minister help us by telling us whether he has any information on the numbers of children who have been observed first hand and – because he made a distinction in his answer about the first hand observation and then the second-hand reports – the number of second-hand reports?

2085

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I have not been provided with those figures in the answer, but I am happy to chase them up and share them with the Hon. Leader of the Opposition and the Hon. Mr Phillips. I will do that very soon.

Hon. K Azopardi: Finally on that, he has spoken about awareness and so on, but to the extent that there has been first-hand observation, what kind of action are teachers recommended to take?

2095

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: I tried to summarise some of them, but they are spoken to, their parents are spoken to; if it is something that is getting out of hand then there might be police intervention, but normally, as the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition knows, the school will try to deal with it internally, try to give advice and try to stop the behaviour. It is challenging, of course. Smoking ...
2100 it is another version of that, but the school tries to control it as best it can.

Q61-62/2022

Used motor vehicles –

Intentions re banning non-hybrid/electric vehicles and promoting electric vehicles

Clerk: Question 61/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state its position on the importance of gas-guzzling used motor vehicles and confirm whether it intends to ban the importation of non-hybrid/electric motor vehicles?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question with Question 62.
2110

2115

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm what steps it is taking to encourage and promote electrification of motor vehicles in order to further the decarbonisation agenda?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.
2120

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, electrification of the vehicle fleet is one of the principal ways in which we will be decarbonising transport.

Import duty for electric vehicles is zero and cashback incentives are available of £250 for a hybrid vehicle and £2,500 for a full electric vehicle.

For the past three years any individual tax payer installing an electric vehicle charging point has been able to deduct the first £2,000 of the costs against their tax liabilities and we are considering extending this scheme due to increased interest. A cashback incentive of £150 is available for fully electric motorbikes and £200 for electric bicycles.

By 1st July 2030 every vehicle registered in Gibraltar will have to be at least a hybrid. This applies to new and second-hand vehicles being registered for the first time in Gibraltar as from the 1st July 2030.
2130

As from 1st July 2035 Gibraltar will only allow the registration of fully electric vehicles where the propulsion of the vehicle does not in any way rely on the internal combustion engine, whether fuelled by diesel or unleaded petrol.

The Ministry of Transport is also working on the rollout of further public electric vehicle charging points in addition to those already available at Midtown car park.

Government has committed, within the Climate Change Strategy, to purchase only electric or at minimum hybrid vehicles as of next year. The Government's position on combustion engine motor vehicles is clearly and comprehensively laid out in the Gibraltar Climate Change Strategy, which includes a roadmap for the decarbonisation of the transport sector. A ban on the importation of petrol and diesel mopeds will be introduced as from 2023. In addition, and in order to prevent the market from continuing to be filled with older, more polluting vehicles, the Government will also ban the importation of used passenger cars and light commercial vehicles with combustion engines in 2023. As part of its medium-term roadmap to net zero, the 2145 Government will introduce an outright ban on the sale and importation of new conventional petrol and diesel cars, vans and motorbikes as from 2026. Moreover, no vehicles fuelled by petrol will be allowed to be registered by 2030.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I welcome the hon. Member's answer on all those fronts.
2150 It struck me, listening to him, that I guess the success of that agenda must presumably depend to some extent on the number of electric charging points there are around Gibraltar. Does he have an idea of how many there are now – I do not, but he might – and how many he thinks are needed for a successful strategy, given the clear schedule of timescales of the banning of certain vehicles that he has rolled out? Does he have an idea, in the strategy that has been carved out, how many 2155 charging points are required? And then thirdly – I will just ask the question so I do not have to get up again – the kind of investment that he thinks needs to be made in terms of providing charging points?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not have the figures. I would say that at the moment 2160 we certainly do not have enough and there is pressure from vehicle purchasers for more.

I can say that we are in discussion with industry and they are working together with us to try and develop ... They themselves are having to respond to the move towards electric vehicles from manufacturers, so it is something that we are working together on because this is happening around the world. Again, this is something that we are working with industry on to determine how 2165 many we would need.

There are cities in other parts of the world that are developing electric vehicle charging hubs, very much like a petrol station but multi-layered for that purpose. It is a challenge that we will be facing like the rest of the world will be facing. I suppose it is not really more of a challenge than when people used to drive horse-driven carts and said, when they heard about petrol, 'How on 2170 earth are we ever going to have stations to fill up with petrol all around the country?'

So it is a challenge that is coming, but I am confident that, working within Government Departments and very closely with industry, we will be able to have a roadmap for that process which will be superimposed on the aims that I have described today.

Hon. K Azopardi: I hear what the hon. Member says, but given that the Government has quite clearly set out a roadmap of dates would it not be also sensible to have collated statistics on the number of charging points there are? From my own limited research on it, it is not the same as filling up a car with petrol, which may take three or four minutes. I understand the charging process is, in some cases, quite lengthy. To fully charge a car it could take a much more significant 2180 period of time.

It may be that there needs to be a better-planned roll-out in terms of things like ... For example, if a development is going to be done, for some decades we have had requirements for parking spaces per development ... those parking spaces should come with a certain number of electric charging points – things like that, which I am sure the hon. Member might have in mind in terms 2185 of new things, but of course that does not cater for existing developments or indeed the vast number of vehicles in Gibraltar and so on.

So, if they are going to take that brave decision of a clear roadmap on dates, I encourage the hon. Member ... Does he agree that there should be a collation of statistics and a well-planned-out strategy on charging points?

Hon. K Azopardi: Yes, Mr Speaker, absolutely, and not just on this point, on a whole range of issues that have been identified in the Climate Change Strategy. In fact, we are working interdepartmentally on setting up net zero delivery bodies and working groups to focus on each individual aspect and to come up with exactly this kind of roadmap.

2195 Already, as the Hon. Leader of the Opposition has stated, there is a requirement in every new development. It used to be 20%. Now the Development and Planning Commission is asking usually for at least 40% and I suspect that in future developments they will be required to ask for 100%. That is future-retro-fitting, will clearly be an issue, and this is what these working groups will focus on because we have to have a roadmap in order to achieve it, but I can assure the Hon. Leader of the Opposition that work is in hand to produce exactly that.

Chief Minister (F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, if it is helpful, because I think we need to also just bear in mind one thing, there is no such thing as an electrical charging point for a vehicle of one type, there are many different types, and so we have to be careful that we do not think that there is one way to charge an electric vehicle which works for every electric vehicle.

You can set up a thousand electrical charging points and find that they only charge 20% of the electric vehicles that you have in Gibraltar. There is not, at the moment, a standard, and one of the things that we have been very keen to do is not to do more until there is a standard because the industry is expecting to come up with an industry standard that will charge all vehicles, existing electrical and future electrical vehicles, and it therefore would be a problem now to choose one type of electrical charger and roll it out across the board. That is one of the reasons we have not done more yet.

As the owner, through HM Government of Gibraltar, of one of the first electric vehicles there was in Gibraltar – which we chose in place of the gas-guzzling Jaguar that hon. Members used to have their leader conveyed in, which used to cost between £85 and £120 to fill with petrol and which we have replaced with a Tesla that costs 85 pence to charge – we are very pleased to see the conversion to electric and hybrid on the other side.

2215

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: I thank the Chief Minister for that very helpful contribution in support of this discussion.

2220

If I may add a couple of things, one is that there are faster chargers and slower chargers; that, I think, is covered by the Hon. Chief Minister's contribution. The other things is that I would not be true to the aims of my friend and colleague the Hon. Paul Balban, who also reminds us that we have to reduce the use of cars as part of achieving this decarbonisation, and also that other technologies are coming on board.

There is a lot of movement now internationally – and I saw this in COP26 when I was in Glasgow at the end of last year – towards hydrogen as a fuel alternative, particularly for larger vehicles which might struggle ... the electric engine might struggle for heavier goods vehicles. The indication is that these will turn to hydrogen and that is something that we also have to be open to. When hydrogen is burnt in oxygen it produces water, so it is non-polluting.

2230

All these things have to be kept constantly under review and we have to wait for the industry to lead on this as well.

Q63/2022
No-idling legislation –
Update

Clerk: Question 63/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

2235

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that, despite previous questions in this House, nothing is done to strengthen anti-idling laws or prevent further damage to young lungs and our air quality?

2240 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the no-idling legislation is in near-final draft form. We expect to publish it in coming months. The Environmental Agency will be enforcing this legislation with assistance from other relevant bodies such as the Royal Gibraltar Police, as needed.

Q64-70/2022

Air quality –

Rational re location of mesh pods; monitor upgrades, periods offline, additional monitors to improve coverage; compliance with WHO recommendations; actions to improve

Clerk: Question 64/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

2250 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state the rationale for the positioning of the current AQ mesh monitors?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Clerk: Question 65/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

2260 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state what upgrades have been made to the current AQ monitors over the last two years?

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm how many occasions the AQ monitors have been offline over the last two years and for what duration?

2270 Clerk: Question 67/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state that it is in full compliance with WHO revised air quality recommendations?

2275 Clerk: Question 68/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

2280 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state why it appears that levels of nitrogen dioxide at Harbour Views Road are 15 times greater than the level of the WHO annual mean limit of nitrogen dioxide?

Clerk: Question 69/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

2285 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government set out what it has done to better improve our air quality over the last two years?

2290 Clerk: Question 70/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that it will roll out further AQ monitors to cover more areas of Gibraltar?

2295 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the Environmental Agency has three air quality (AQ) mesh pods currently positioned at Rosia Road by the clock tower, Devil's Tower Road and Harbour Views Road. These locations were identified in consultation with Ricardo, our consultants in the UK. The rationale for the positioning of these mesh pods at each location is as follows. Rosia Road is located specifically to investigate complaints of emissions from the dockyard. Devil's Tower Road is located to provide baseline data prior to the opening of the Airport tunnel road; it is anticipated that the increase in traffic will impact the concentrations measured on Devil's Tower Road. Harbour Views Road is located to investigate concentrations resulting from emissions from the cruise liner terminal and the Port.

2305 The Government has placed an order for replacement of eight of the fixed real-time analysers used within the monitoring network. These will be installed in the near future. They were going to be installed last week but they were not able to come over in the end. There have been some breakdowns of the equipment. The length of time of these breakdowns ranges from a couple of days to several months. The Environmental Agency can solve some of the minor issues but not most of the major fixes, which must be done by the company that installed the equipment, Ricardo. The ones that stayed unfixed for a number of months coincided with COVID, so they had problems visiting Gibraltar during the pandemic, but now they are due to catch up and all the monitors will be upgraded, repaired and fully functional.

2315 The World Health Organization revised their air quality recommendations in 2021 – they moved the goalposts – just as, for the first time ever, Gibraltar happened to have achieved compliance with the former PM2.5 levels. We are now not yet in full compliance with the revised WHO air quality recommendations. These are much more stringent than the legislative objectives that have governed air quality strategies both in Gibraltar and across Europe since 2000. For example, the annual mean World Health Organization guideline of 10ug/m3 is 25% of the corresponding EU limit value of 40 for nitrogen dioxide, and that sadly continues to be widely exceeded all across all of Europe. We continue to aspire to this but it is unrealistic to be immediately compliant with these revisions, which are focused, and rightly so, on health outcomes and not on achievability. The revised WHO PM2.5 guidelines, for example, could potentially be exceeded just by natural sources outside the control of governing bodies, such as Sahara dust or sea salt. Pollutants such as nitrogen dioxide are more controllable and we will continue to try to achieve the new standards.

2325 A quick analysis, for the site referenced in Question 68, of provisional data for 2022 – there still have not been the quality assurance and quality control applications, which will then modify the data – shows an average of around 43 ug/m3, and I stress the word 'average', which is consistent

2330 with roadside concentrations across other parts of Gibraltar and across the UK. This is an exceedance of the World Health Organization guideline but it is about four times the revised 2335 guideline, not 15 times. It is possible that the Hon. Mr Phillips has confused hourly and annual data here and is comparing one peak hourly value with an annual mean guideline. You cannot do that. When you have a graph like I have here, Mr Speaker, you cannot compare the peak with the average, and this may be what Mr Phillips has done in preparing his question. It is worth 2340 mentioning that these data have yet to be ratified; I have just said that. There is currently no modelled evidence to suggest a source, and source apportionment at this location is difficult, but it is possible that contributions from port activities combined with road traffic are causing this.

The Government has undertaken several projects to improve air quality in Gibraltar over the 2340 last few years. We have had the commissioning of the power station and LNG terminal, along with the decommissioning of the old power stations. The Environmental Agency has also increased its presence at all construction sites around Gibraltar with the aim of reducing dust being produced from these sites. Furthermore, as I previously stated, we now have new equipment on order which 2345 will allow us to capture better and more air quality data. In my answer to an earlier Question I also detailed measures in relation to traffic, to supplement those of my hon. Friend the Minister for Transport.

In answer to Question 70, the Environmental Agency has placed orders for two additional AQ mesh pod monitors, which will be located one in the Port and another in the City Centre.

2350 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, quite a lot there, so I will just try to ask a couple of questions, if I may.

First of all, I am glad that they are going to purchase more monitors to do things, to use the Chief Minister's new slogan, better and faster – and hopefully also cheaper. He did not mention cheaper, but hopefully it will also be cheaper. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) Well, it is your 2355 suggested slogan for us, but I thought you had adopted it quite successfully for yourself.
(Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

Mr Speaker, can I just ask, in terms of the upgrade, can he give us a bit more information? He has spoken about the three points where they have installed these air quality monitors. Is there a 2360 plan to install more of those types of monitors around Gibraltar? If so, why? If not, why not? He has explained the rationale of why those are there, but I guess you could construct a rationale for monitoring air quality in other parts of Gibraltar for different reasons. He is well versed in the area, so is there a plan to do that, given the desire to do more comprehensive air pollution monitoring?

In terms of Question 68 on Harbour Views, he says that the average is four times higher than,
I assume, the new level that he is talking about, and that the average is not 15, it is four. He showed 2365 us the graph, which viewers could not see, obviously, because it was facing us, but helpful in any event. The average may be four, but from the graph it did look like there were moments where it was significantly higher than four at moments of the day. Does he think that that is a worrying thing? Is there something that he thinks could be done to address issues like that, so that we all enjoy better air quality?

2370 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Leader of the Opposition for giving me the opportunity to talk a little bit more about this.

We already have more air monitoring equipment for a place our size than the EU requires. I know we are not in the EU, but we have said many a time that we wish to maintain EU standards.
2375 It is in Gibraltar's interests for many reasons that we should be seen to be environmentally up there with the EU, if not better.

The additional mesh pods are less expensive, actually, than the large monitoring stations, and we have deployed, as I explained, in a number of areas. The two additional ones that are coming ... and of course you could put them everywhere. There are less accurate diffusion tubes all over the 2380 place, which are also published regularly, but these are a little bit more detailed. At the two places where these are going to go, one is in the Port area, where we realise there is industrial activity, 2385 and the other one is in the city centre. We are moving the large monitoring point from Witham's Road, which has served its purpose. It was there to monitor how we could improve the poor air quality as a result of the temporary power stations that were there. That has now been totally resolved. That is now moving to Devil's Tower Road, where we will capture any changes as a result of the tunnel. The other one, therefore, is going in the city centre, where we also are aware that there is a lot of traffic and we want to capture that. So those are the two. If we could have more we would put more in, but there is also the possibility of overkill. We know we have to work on air quality; I do not have to see a graph to tell me.

2390 On the graph in particular, the World Health Organization is stricter. The EU requires a reading of 40 ug/m³. This one is averaging at 43, so we are a little bit over. We would not like to be that much over. Perhaps this could be one of the first Parliaments to allow Ministers to put up power points on the screen, and then everybody would see it. Clearly, peaks are not things that we would like to see, but if you have a monitor and there is a vehicle passing by, then it is going to pick up more; but the average is what counts, particularly when these standards are set internationally 2395 by organisations such as the World Health Organization.

I think I have answered most of the points. If I have not, I am happy to do so now if my voice – which is holding up – permits, or subsequently in another question or behind the Speaker's Chair.

Q71/2022
Elliott Hotel –
Fumes from vents at rear

2400 Clerk: Question 71/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state what measures the Government has taken in relation to the vents pouring fumes at the back of the Elliott Hotel on to Canon Lane?

2405 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Environmental Agency has had communication with the Elliott Hotel regarding smells starting in June 2020 and then again in June 2021. These smells have never been 2410 witnessed or verified from a complainant's home. The smells have been brought to the Environmental Agency's attention by pedestrians and passers-by. The Agency's involvement has been purely from a smells nuisance point of view. The complaints arose because the boilers were due to be serviced at the end of July. The complaints ceased on both occasions once the boilers had been serviced.

2415 In 2021 a similar issue was brought to the Agency's attention, this time due to the lack of maintenance on the burners, which are components of the boilers. The UK company could not fly to Gibraltar to service the equipment, due to COVID restrictions. The burners were serviced by August 2021 and the Environmental Agency has not received any complaints since June 2021.

EcoWave Power energy project – Government position

2420 Clerk: Question 72/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state its position in relation to the wave energy project?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, as we have informed this House in the past, the EcoWave energy project was undertaken as a pilot project by a private entity to demonstrate that the technology can be directly connected to an electricity grid.

2430

The pilot was built and originally supposed to operate for two years with the purpose of proving that wave energy can safely connect to the grid and withstand the Gibraltar storms using its storm-protection mechanism. However, the company decided to keep the pilot station operational for a longer time, as it was used as a real-conditions R&D facility for the company.

2435

After six years of successful testing operations in Gibraltar – three times the original period – the company, EcoWave Power, that owns and operated the floaters decided to remove them and relocate them to the Port of Los Angeles for testing in a different maritime environment. Government remains open to the possibility of installing further wave power in Gibraltar if suitable locations can be found.

2440

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, this is my colleague's question so he might have been more sighted on the detail than I am, but may I just ask the Minister: given that there was a long testing period, presumably that data was shared with Government – is that right? – and, if so, did the Government reach any conclusions in terms of the possible use of wave energy as an alternative?

2445

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, we have not specifically requested the information because this is information in developing a technology that we were not going to be carrying out ourselves. This was for them to develop their technology. If we were to feel that any of the information was useful to us, I am absolutely sure that it would be shared with us.

2450

The plant was not big enough to provide substantial amounts of energy, but the purpose was to prove that it did produce some energy and that it could be safely linked to a grid. The plants that they are installing elsewhere in the world are considerably larger. They have more space and more coastline, and therefore I am hoping, certainly, because this is good for the environment globally, that the lessons they have learnt in Gibraltar will serve them well, but at this point in time, as I said at the end of my answer, we will be happy to consider it if we can find suitable locations.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, given that presumably it was at no cost to the Government that they were here and they tested for a longer period than they originally had envisaged, wouldn't it have made sense and wouldn't it make sense now to ask the company to share its data and its conclusions with the Government, so that you can then, as part of a wider strategy, decide whether or not that kind of project would be even useful to look at for consideration? It may be that the statistics do not justify even it, but if it does then at least you have a bank of information.

2460

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, we have information from the point of view of the hours they operated, how much energy they produced and so on. The technical specification as to perhaps the angle of the floater or how to connect the floater to land is something that is important if you are developing a wave energy product, which we are not. We would buy the energy or we would commission the product, but we are not in the business of building wave energy plants. If we were to be in that business, then I am absolutely sure that they would share the data, but that is not the businesses we are in; we are interested in the output.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, finally, I understood that we are interested in the output, but ultimately if we are interested in considering the alternative and a possible investment into the area, we would need to be satisfied that it works. There are waves all around us. It may or may not work – it may simply not work, but I just thought it would be a useful exchange of information given our location and our geographical reality. That is why I asked the hon. Member.

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if it would assist, I am very happy to ask them for the information and then I will judge whether I think it is useful and I will let the Hon. Leader of the Opposition know. I do not think there is anything there for us, but let's have a go.

Q73/2022
Dog fouling –
Number of fines imposed

Clerk: Question 73/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide details as to the number of fines imposed by the pertinent authority in respect of dog fouling offences?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Environmental Agency has issued 21 fines in 2022.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, of those fines does he know how many were DNA-tested origin fines?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I could not confirm exactly how many are of DNA origin. I will find out, but if I interpret the figures that I have as my supplementary I think that of those 21 at least 12 are from DNA, but I need to confirm that.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, does the Minister have any information as to the DNA testing methodology? The information reaching us is that DNA testing is only done on one day of the week and in certain areas only. Is that true? Does the Hon. Minister know whether DNA testing is, as a matter of course, done every day and in respect of all areas? And if it is a much more constrained methodology, why is that, and doesn't that really not deal with the issue?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the testing itself, the analysing, is done in a laboratory outside Gibraltar. I believe it is in Germany – subject to confirmation, so if it is not please do not feel that I am misleading the House. I believe it is in Germany.

What I think the hon. Member is referring to is the collection of DNA samples. There is a weekly foray by Environmental Agency officers to collect samples of dog poop and they will go to different areas; if they have received reports of problems in particular areas then they will target those 2515 areas. I think there are other things that the Environmental Agency officers also need to do, so having them full-time collecting samples I do not think is correct. I think the balance of one day a week is actually suitable and good, and I am satisfied that the operation is handled correctly.

2520 There are other types of dog patrols, which are done partly by the Environmental Agency, sometimes with the support of the Royal Gibraltar Police and very often by the Environmental Protection and Research Unit, which approach dog owners and confirm that they have the proper licences and so on. There have been 12 fines on that specifically in 2022. In fact, only today, just outside here there was an event in which there was an educational initiative with representatives of the Environmental Agency, the Department of the Environment, the Environmental Protection Unit and the Royal Gibraltar Police, making people aware of these issues and going for responsible dog ownership.

2525 I am satisfied there is a lot more being done now than there has been before. Some members of the public have approached us and have been very proactive in working together on this. I must mention one particular member of the public, Mrs Julie Gonzales, who is very committed to this and she has assisted us and has been part of a group working on a strategy.

2530 I think that we are working well on this. Clearly there will always be people who allow their dogs to foul; it is the owner's fault, not the dog's fault, clearly.

Hon. K Azopardi: Thank you. Yes, absolutely – to the last comment.

Does it really need to go to Germany? Is there no better way of doing it, if it cannot be done locally, across the border somewhere closer?

2535 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the first lab that was being used was in Spain; I think it was Seville. We were not satisfied with the timescale in getting results back and there was a time when we were struggling with getting satisfaction – this is now some years ago – so we identified another lab, which is much more efficient and much more effective.

2540 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, a final one. Does the Minister know how much these tests cost?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: The Minister knew. I am going into my memory now – I think it is about £12, something like that. It is not massive and it is certainly less than people out there say about Government spending masses on so-and-so. It is not expensive.

2545 Hon. D A Feetham: Could I ask you to give way?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Yes.

2550 Hon. D A Feetham: I am grateful – so that I do not have to rise again. Per test presumably he means, and given that they do a weekly collection, does he know broadly how many tests are done a week?

2555 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, can I have notice of the detail? They are kept in fridges and sent over in batches in order to reduce transport costs, but if he wants more specific details I will have to have notice.

Cleanliness of streets –
Complaints and engagement with Britannia

2560

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many complaints it has received in relation the cleanliness of our streets and on how many occasions it has had to engage with Britannia to voice those complaints?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, for the year 2021, 42 complaints were received, of which 14 were engaged with Britannia. Up to 10th May 2022, 11 complaints have been received, of which six have been passed on to Britannia. These include, apart from general cleanliness, reports on accumulations, dog fouling, indiscriminate placing of refuse by neighbours and contractors – and lack of weeding in some areas has just come into my mind. Environmental monitors and litter wardens investigate such complaints to identify the culprits, who, if found, are told to remove them.

Other complaints come from private areas which do not come under the remit of Britannia to clean, hence the difference between the number of complaints received and those passed on to Britannia specifically to act upon.

2575

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, is the Government satisfied with how its engagement with Britannia is working and their dealing with these complaints?

2580

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, the Government is satisfied that when complaints are received by Britannia they are acted upon.

Q75/2022

Bin sheds – Lack of maintenance

2585

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state why bin sheds across Gibraltar have not been maintained?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

2590

2595

If the hon. Member or indeed the Hon. Mr Phillips have received complaints of a bin store not being maintained, we would be grateful to receive it in order to check and action as appropriate.

2600

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, if my hon. colleague who placed the question has any specific information, then of course I will encourage him to pass it on to the Hon. Minister, but anecdotally, when you drive around you do sometimes see bin sheds that are not in as desirable a state as possible, so I would encourage – and would the Minister agree? – that whatever efforts are being made to maintain the bin sheds obviously need to be maintained throughout the year, especially during the summer periods.

2605

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there are one or two that are quite old and need considerable work, and we are planning on renovating some of these during the course of the next financial year.

2610

Beaches –

Cleaning regime and ensuring standards are met

Clerk: Question 76/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

2615

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, now that the weather has improved, can the Government state how it will ensure beach cleaning standards are met given the increased building activity at both Eastern Beach and Caleta?

2620

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 77.

2625

Clerk: Question 77/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government set out the beach cleaning regime?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker. The environmental monitors, as well as lifeguard supervisors during the beach season, monitor the beaches to ensure that cleaning standards are met. This will continue.

The information specifically on the cleaning regime is provided in the schedule that I now hand over.

Answer to Question 77/2022

All beaches (Camp Bay, Catalan Bay, Eastern Beach, Little Bay, Sandy Bay and Western Beach)

From June – September – General beach cleaning, Monday to Sunday (Late evening)

Major cleaning operation including use of mechanic beach cleaning machine and power hosing where applicable, Monday to Sunday (Early morning)

From October – March – Major cleaning operation including the use of mechanic and power hosing, where applicable, once a week.

April and May – General beach cleaning Saturdays and Sundays

Major cleaning operation including use of mechanical beach cleaning machine and power hosing Saturdays and Sundays.

All inclusive of bank/public holidays.

The servicing of litter and recycling bins at beaches

April to September – Emptying of bins Monday – Sunday three times daily or as required

Cleansing and sanitising once a week or any ad-hoc extra as required.

October to March – Camp Bay, Eastern Beach (North), Little Bay and Sandy Bay – as required.

Refuse Collection at Western Beach – Monday to Sunday, once a day all year round except 25th December and 1st January.

The Management of Public Toilets, Changing Rooms and other facilities

June to September – All facilities open daily from 09:30 to 21:00hrs with the exception of Catalan Bay (North), Catalan Bay (South), Sandy Bay and Western Beach, close at 20:30hrs.

Cleaning and sanitising as required throughout the day.

A major clean-up operation of all the toilets and other facilities are carried out at least once a week.

All the above, inclusive of bank/public holidays.

April and May Cleansing is done by Upper Rock and Beaches Maintenance Team and not Britannia.

All facilities except Eastern Beach (North) and Catalan Bay (South) are open from midday to 20:00hrs Monday to Friday

Weekends and Public Holidays from 10:00 to 20:00hrs

All toilets cleaned and sanitised as required throughout the day.

October to March cleansing is done by Upper Rock and Beaches Maintenance Team and not Britannia.

Eastern Beach (South), Catalan Bay (North), Little Bay and Camp Bay are open from midday to sundown daily.

These are opened during these months because of their proximity to recreational areas.

These are cleaned and sanitised as required throughout the day.

2640 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I am just glancing through the schedule, which has quite a bit of information, but can I ask the broad question ...? Am I right in thinking that the major cleaning happens after April? It looks like that from the schedule. It may be that it is accurate, but I just put it to the hon. Member – given that he is more familiar with the schedule than I am, he can answer it more quickly – that the information we were getting was that from recent times, and I cannot give you a specific moment as to when that happened, the beaches were not being cleaned in winter at all, whereas before they were, although on a light basis. Is that true or not true? It may be that the information we are getting is inaccurate.

2650 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this is not in recent times. The beaches have never had the regular cleaning schedule in the winter – there is relatively little use and often the weather does its own cleaning – but there is refuse collection. As you can see, from October to March there is collection of refuse and if there are any accumulations they will be picked up. When there is a 2655 storm that instead of cleaning the beach may have delivered litter – as often happens when we have material coming down rivers from up the coast – which often ends up in Eastern Beach, then clearly there will be a cleaning operation, but there does not have to be and it would be wasteful of manpower and financial resources to have a regular beach cleaning process on all our beaches throughout the winter. It just would not make sense.

2660 Hon. K Azopardi: So as I understand, the hon. Member is saying that this practice of doing lighter cleaning in winter goes back a long way – that is not a recent thing?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it certainly goes back for as long as I have been responsible for the beaches, which is now probably six, seven or eight years – probably six or seven – and I suspect it predates certainly our administration.

2665 A Member: Yes, it does.

Q78/2022
Sewage plant –
Update re timing

Clerk: Question 78/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

2670 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government update the House of the timing for the sewage plant?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

2675 Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Government is in the process of closing the old sewage treatment plant tender which saw the appointment of a preferred bidder, being the joint venture between Northumbrian Water and Modern Water. This process is being initiated as a direct result of Modern Water going into liquidation; I have said this here before. The Government is already engaged in providing technical information to a number of new potential bidders.

2680 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, on that process can I just get a bit more information? When he says that they are engaged with new potential bidders, is the Government envisaging a new application process or is it that these are bidders that came through the old process and they are still expressing an interest?

2685 Secondly, if it is a new process, do you have a view on timescale? If it is not a new process, do you have a view on timescale? Can you give the House and the public out there more information on that?

2690 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this has been an unfortunate and legally complex situation already. The House is aware that there had been a pre-works contract given to that entity and works had started – the design had been taken all the way to planning and then one of the partners went bankrupt – so there has been a whole legal process, which is now culminating in a formal closure of that tender.

2695 We are still in the process of legal advice on how to take this further, but in order not to waste time we have been approached by a number of credible entities who have sought technical information, which is critical in this project. Fortunately, because a lot of the technical information

2700 had already been garnered and put together for the previous project, it is readily available, so we are now providing this technical information for a small number of serious potential bidders, and when we have legal clarity on the next steps following this removal of cancellation of the old sewage plant then we will announce how we are going to take it forward.

I am very confident that we are coming up with a number of very viable potential solutions.

2705 Hon. K Azopardi: It was two entities and one went bankrupt, as the hon. Member says: is it a question of finding a new partner for the one that did not go bankrupt, or are you looking at a new process, a new invitation, a new opportunity to see whether there is a replacement entity or parties that want to do this?

2710 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: While we are awaiting the final legal advice, I would rather not go into any detail, other than to say that the situation is not as he described. It is not a question of looking for another partner to the other entity.

Q79-83/2022

Upper Rock –

Thinning/clearance of vegetation; feral cats; diversification and protection of trees

Clerk: Question 79/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

2715 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can I declare that I of course live in the Upper Rock? These are questions about the Upper Rock. It is a matter of formality – everybody knows, but I just set it out for the record.

Is there any programme designed to thin out vegetation in the Upper Rock, allowing better habitats for birds and animals?

2720 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 80 to 83.

2725 Clerk: Question 80/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what is the Government doing in order to limit the damage caused by feral cats to wildlife in the Upper Rock?

2730 Clerk: Question 81/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what programmes are in place in order to introduce different species of trees in the Upper Rock?

2735 Clerk: Question 82/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what programmes are in place in order to ensure trees are not choked by overgrown vegetation in the Upper Rock?

2740 Clerk: Question 83/2022. The Hon. the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is it the intention of the Government to create more firebreaks in the Upper Rock by clearing areas of some of its vegetation?

2745

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, while I do not have the good fortune of living in the Upper Rock, I declare the interest that I absolutely love it. It is looking beautiful this year. The flowering is ... Sadly, for those of us who seem to be suffering from allergies that is not so good, but it is looking absolutely beautiful and the wildlife appreciates it. Apologies for digressing, Mr Speaker, but I could not resist because it really is beautiful up there at the moment.

2750

The Gibraltar Nature Reserve maintenance team have a regular programme whereby dense low-lying vegetation is cleared in dense woodland areas precisely to create better habitats for birds and other animals. This has been ongoing for 10 years and will continue. Similarly, this work ensures that trees are not choked, as the hon. Member suggests, by overgrown vegetation.

2755

The Department regularly assesses the impacts of feral cats in the reserve. When cats are identified and located, they are trapped when possible and taken to the veterinarian. If the animal is identified as having an owner, it is returned and the owner is spoken to, to ensure that cat owners are informed that cats should not be allowed to wander into the reserve. If the animal is identified as a stray, the animal is kept until it can be rehomed. If it cannot be rehomed, it is passed on to one of the cat charities for them to attempt to rehome the animal or look after it on a permanent basis.

The trees in the nature reserve are those which are representative of vegetation in the region and will survive naturally without human assistance in our climate. There is an argument for the reintroduction of tree species formerly part of the vegetation of the Upper Rock, such as the round-leafed oak, and this is being considered.

2765

In relation to fire breaks, the Department also assesses these regularly and ensures they are maintained on a yearly basis. That said, we are indeed looking at creating further fire breaks in specific areas of the reserve or increasing the size of some of the existing ones.

2770

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just dealing with the question of cats first, and then we will move on to some of the other questions that the Hon. Minister has answered, is part of the problem with feral cats that the charities that the hon. Gentleman has mentioned are in fact ...? One of them, at least, that feeds cats is very near the Upper Rock Nature Reserve – in fact, it is on the boundary of the Upper Rock Nature Reserve – and therefore it is very difficult in those circumstances to prevent those feral cats from actually going into the nature reserve and then causing damage to wildlife birds in particular.

2775

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: I am not aware of that. I have visited those premises and they are enclosed; the cats are kept enclosed. I know that the cat charities actually do great work in neutering cats in built-up areas, so much so – and I have this directly from the vet and from them – that the population of feral cats in urban areas is decreasing humanely because they are not producing kittens. I do not think they are the problem. There are feral cats on the Upper Rock. They do not really belong there and the cat welfare societies understand the pressures that feral cats put on wildlife and migrating birds as well, and that is being tackled in the way that I have explained. I do not think that those premises are an actual problem. I may be wrong, but I have no evidence to suggest they are.

Hon. D A Feetham: And in relation to neutering of cats – because at the end of the day, short of euthanising cats, and nobody is suggesting that that ought to happen, that is the only way really to control the population of cats – does he have any figures in terms of how many feral cats have been neutered and how perhaps the neutering of feral cats is having an effect on the overall population of feral cats?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, let me repeat that if a cat as identified in the Upper Rock, the exercise is not to neuter and release, it is to remove, as I have explained.

2795 In urban areas, the cat welfare societies do their work with the support and assistance of the Department of the Environment. I do not have statistics – I am sure my Department has and I am happy to ask for it – but I do have anecdotal evidence from the vet particularly, with whom I meet on a regular basis, that the number of stray kittens being brought in has decreased tremendously. He feels, and I agree, that it is directly thanks to the success of the work of the cat welfare societies, who want cats to be well looked after; they do not want them to increase, but they have a view as to how to deal with that.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you, Mr Speaker, and, in fact, as somebody who owns two cats myself, it is not that I am anti-cat or anything like that, it is that feral cats do cause damage to wildlife. I have to say that I accept, as I live up there, that the problem has been more acute in the past – they nearly wiped out the Barbary partridge – than perhaps at present, although I am told, and I do see them, that it is still a problem.

2805 Just turning to the question of the thinning-out of vegetation and the choking of trees, one of the things that strikes me – and I am talking here from my own personal experience but also from talking to other residents in the area, because of course there is a small community there – is that it is just a shame to see so many trees that are being choked by, in particular, the vines with the spines; I think they are called smilax, or something like that. This is not a criticism of the Government. We all want the Upper Rock to look at its best. It is a jewel in the crown and we want it to improve – that is why I am asking these questions – but it just seems that perhaps more could be done in order to thin out that that vegetation. It was not when he was a Government Minister, but it was in another incarnation that the hon. Gentleman had prior to becoming involved in politics ... there was talk of the introduction of the Iberian ibex, for example, which of course would have allowed the thinning-out of that vegetation because it would be beaten by the Iberian ibex. Aren't there any imaginative ways of basically thinning out that vegetation and allowing those trees greater space to grow?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, once again I welcome the opportunity to talk about an area in which I am very comfortable. Thinning of vegetation is continuous, it is labour intensive, so we have to be specific on when we do it. If you do it, you have to do it again probably in five or six years' time, but it does happen. Smilax is interesting. It does choke trees but it provides great cover for small birds and it also provides fruiting berries on which they feed, so you do not want to wipe it all out, but those are the plants that we would target in those areas that we are clearing up. One of the areas cleared, for example, is on the way down from the City under Siege exhibition above the Moorish Castle. That is much clearer than it used to be, and that is one of the areas. Certainly there is more to be done, and we will do as time and resources allow.

2825 The Iberian ibex is a project that I was very keen on, but in looking at it further and on seeking advice, because of the proximity of our cliffs to roads and living areas, these animals would go up and down the cliffs like they were completely at home and that could destabilise and cause rock falls. This is why a decision was taken by my Department, with my support, not to progress.

2835 There are other herbivores, but they would have to be semi-domestic. We could have a herd of goats if we had a goatherd looking after the fire breaks. That is actually a genuine possibility, and if anyone wants to offer that it is something that could certainly be looked at. There is one plan which may come to fruition, and we are talking about it, which is to introduce the roe deer – which is a little deer – into Gibraltar. The habitat is right. They would not have a big effect on reducing vegetation but they would have some effect on reducing vegetation. So these are things that are being discussed and I am happy to discuss them further, either here or outside the House.

2840 Hon. D A Feetham: I know it is getting late and this is now a conversation between my friend and I in relation to the Upper Rock, but –

2845 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): [inaudible] an adviser and you can [inaudible] (Laughter)

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes. But what we do see a lot of in the Upper Rock, and of course it is going to be native, because ... Wild olive trees – which I have to say I am extremely allergic to; that is why I have also had the same problem that the hon. Gentleman has – whilst native to the Upper Rock, appear to have taken over completely in the Upper Rock, hence my question about the introducing of other trees. He knows that I myself have introduced Holm oaks and cork oaks. Cork oaks do not survive in the Upper Rock; in fact, I have lost four or five. He did mention that there was a species of oak that he was looking to introduce. Where are these going to be introduced, because of course it is very difficult, bearing in mind that the whole area has been taken over by these wild olive trees?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am going to be brief – I could speak on this for hours, and give me the opportunity and I am going to, absolutely. So, very briefly, round-leaf oak is a variety of the Holm oak. It is a new name, probably, for the species you have. The problem is that you need to water them through the first summer – maybe you will offer to do so and we can do it – so we have to find an area where watering is not a problem, but it is certainly something that we are contemplating.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, perhaps that actually might be a convenient moment, given that we have talked about the jewel in the crown which is the Upper Rock in the jewel in the crown which is Gibraltar, which is the pearl of the Mediterranean, to such an extent and determined that we are not going to have ibex on the Upper Rock that might fall into the hon. Gentleman's pool, (Laughter) and with an assurance from me, as an early-morning Upper Rock cyclist, that there are plenty of partridge in the Upper Rock and they are often almost run over by me, can I move that the House should now adjourn until tomorrow at 3.30 in the afternoon, when we shall start with questions to the incumbent Chief Minister?

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Thursday, 19th May at 3.30.

I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Thursday, 19th May at 3.30. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Passed.

The House will now adjourn to Thursday, 19th May at 3.30.

The House adjourned at 8.05 p.m.

The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 3.38 p.m.

[MR SPEAKER: Hon. M L Farrell BEM GMD RD JP in the Chair]

[ACTING CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: S Galliano Esq in attendance]

Questions for Oral Answer

Procedural

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Thursday, 19th May 2022. We continue with Answers to Questions.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, just to give the House an indication that the magnificent parliamentary team at No. 6 is having a little bit of a printer issue this afternoon. I expect that all of my questions, with the voluminous amount of disclosure and the exercise of transparency that the Government is about to engage upon, is coming towards us. As soon as they arrive on the station – as GBC used to say in the old days, for those of us who remember that far back – we will be ready to start with my questions, but I am conscious that the Hon. the Minister for the Environment still has one or two to go, so we might continue with him before then.

ENVIRONMENT, SUSTAINABILITY, CLIMATE CHANGE AND EDUCATION

Q84/2022

Skywalk essential maintenance – Details of cost and company carrying out work

15

Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide details of the cost of the essential maintenance carried out at the Skywalk site resulting in its temporary closure from 18th to 25th February, together with details of the company that carried it out and the nature of the maintenance.

20

Hon. D J Bossino: Thank you. As a point of detail, can the hon. Member give me the full name of the company so I can carry out a search if I decide to do so? I think he said Integral Gibraltar Solutions. That may be the business name; if he has the full name of the company, I would appreciate that.

30 Also, the nature of the contract that the Government has with this company, was this a one-off, or is this the company that is assigned to maintain the Skywalk? And does it do other works for the Government, in particular in the Upper Rock?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the name I have given is the name that I have. If it has another expanded name I would need to find out. I am told they are called Integral Gibraltar Solutions. This work was put out to a number of quotes and they were the only company in Gibraltar who offered to do it, in the sense that it is a very specialist type of work and they were the only people who were able to do it. I believe, subject to confirmation, that it was a one-off, but if they remain the only company able to do that specialised work on that location then I suspect they may get to do it again, but I would need to seek further information on that.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, simply to find out whether it just has 'Ltd' at the end, or it may have a fuller name – perhaps he can give me that information later on. I will send him a message and if he can deal with it on that basis ... Presumably he does not have the details of the shareholders and directors with him. I assume it is a Gibraltar company. The hon. Member does not know?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, yes, it would be a Gibraltar company, and I do not know the details of those involved in the company.

50 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, if I may?

Mr Speaker: One final one.

Hon. D J Bossino: There is quite a bit of information there, and –

55

Mr Speaker: You are asking two supplementaries every time you ask a question, which is fine but let's not extend it beyond what is reasonable.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the issue here is that whilst I understand that you want brevity and you want the process to move swiftly, this is relevant information which one needs to determine, depending on the answer, so it is very difficult to be beholden to two or three questions.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): But it is the same question each time.

Hon. D J Bossino: It is not the same question each time.
If I may, in relation –

70 Mr Speaker: Just ask a question and then we will see how far we go.

Hon. D J Bossino: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

The other bit of information which the Minister kindly provided related to ... He split it into two. One, I think, was general maintenance – presumably a review – of the site. But then there was another one which dealt with flooring, which is quite a high number, certainly relative to the first tranche – £14,431.47 I think was the precise answer. Can he give us more details in relation to that? Does he have any more particulars as to what was wrong with the flooring that resulted in what is a relatively high number?

80 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker. There were some issues with the flooring, including some of the seals between the two laminies of the glass. It is sealed, and if you are not careful with the sealing then you can get humidity and mould in between, and obviously the transparency – which is what one wants to have in a skywalk – is compromised. It was that kind of fairly complex technical work.

85 I believe there was some damage also that had to be resolved, and some of the flooring –not the glass flooring but the other pathway – was also damaged. Remember this is a very exposed site. It is at the top of the Rock – Levanter, gales, what have you – so that needed work and it was identified and done quickly because otherwise it would have deteriorated further.

90 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member talked about going out for quotes, I think he said. Did it formally go out to tender? Was there a formal tender process in relation to this?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, even with the additional relatively small amount, practice is that you go to a minimum of three quotes and you work on that basis, and that is what happened on this occasion.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q85/2022

Solar panels abandoned at Mid Harbours – Plans for removal and details of cost of purchase

Clerk: Question 85/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

100 Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide details as to when the stacks of unused solar panels are going to be removed or otherwise installed, which now lay abandoned at the Mid Harbours Estate, together with the costs of the panels and from which company they were purchased.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for the Environment and Education.

110 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, these panels are in the Government estate. I am surprised by the answer. The information I have from the tenants is that they were advised that actually it already belongs to the Government.

115 Just to understand a bit more what is going on here, I understand it is an issue because where they are situated ... I am told they have already moved once. I think they were underneath one of the blocks and they had to be moved because – they are quite high; the stacks are about two and a half metres high – they caused an issue with one of the flats because anybody could have accessed or burgled the flats. That is why they moved them to where they are now, and where they are now presents an issue because a decision, I understand, has been made to remove the current children’s playground and put it very close to where the stacks are now. This is what was explained to me when I visited the area.

In that context, does the Government have an intention to deal with this in any way? Particularly I think what is of interest to the tenants is to have the stacks removed as soon as possible.

125 With the Speaker's permission, if I may, by way of a further supplementary ...? He says that the stacks do not belong to the Government. Is that because they have not purchased them yet but there is an intention to purchase? He says he is going to explain that point – I would be grateful for that reply.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares):
130 Mr Speaker, just in order to help the hon. Member, he is absolutely right, the park has to be moved for the simple reason –

Hon. D J Bossino: It is not safe.

135 Hon. S E Linares: No, it is not because it is not safe, it is because it creates water ingress down below to the car park because it was not done properly initially and we are putting right what was wrong. So the park is going to be moved where the hon. Member says and we are in the process of doing that.

140 The hon. Member will explain more about the solar panels but I can confirm that the park will be placed down below, yes, for that reason.

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: I am grateful to my hon. Friend for contributing that explanation.

145 Yes, the panels will not be there forever. As I said, it is a private company that owns them, but this is in relation to a power purchase agreement, so the panels belong to them. When they are installed, the Electricity Authority will purchase the power, as has happened, for example, in the Europa Business Centre, which is currently producing solar power successfully. There have been a number of delays due to technical issues, but I am informed – because I wanted to have the information before answering this question – that these are now resolved and that the work on placing the panels is imminent. Therefore, hopefully they will not be there in order to conflict with 150 the playground, as my hon. Friend has explained.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can he say – if he has not already, and I do not think he has – which company owns the panels? And, secondly, where is it intended to install them? I imagine it is in the estates, but he has not clarified the position.
155

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: I hesitate to give the name of the company that I have in front of me because the hon. Member is going to ask me for the name, like he did earlier, but I would rather just double-check and let him know.

160 These panels will go on the roof of the estate.

Hon. D J Bossino: He is more than welcome to provide any information he has and then he can back it up with further details, if required.

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: The name I have in my notes here is Park Solar One.

Q86/2022
Dog parks –
Progress and locations

165 Clerk: Question 86/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government update the House on the progress of the development plans for proposed dog parks and their works and locations?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for the Environment and Education.

170

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Government was looking at options for dog parks when the pandemic hit. We have, as yet, not revisited these but hope to do so in the near future. Dog parks are important but providing them comes at a cost, and as a result, although we continue committed to the provision of the planned dog parks, other areas of public finance must take priority.

175

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, that is understood, of course, by Members on this side. I was just asking does it remain the intention of the Government within the life of the Parliament to try to progress those ideas?

180

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it remains the intention, yes, but qualified by what I have just said.

CHIEF MINISTER

Q168/2022

Air traffic control services –

Reason for absence and lack of contingencies on 24th April 2022

Clerk: Question 168/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state why Gibraltar was left without air traffic control support on Sunday, 24th April 2022 and why no contingencies were in place to respond to this situation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

190

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar does not provide air traffic control services at Gibraltar Airport. These services are provided by the UK Ministry of Defence, who contract NATS Ltd, through Aquila Air Traffic Management Services, to meet the requirement. The Government is therefore not formally answerable in this House for any matters relating to air traffic control, as this is not our area of ministerial responsibility.

195

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, I think everyone in this House appreciates the answer provided by the Hon. Chief Minister, but I think it is a matter of public interest that visitors to our shores and residents returning to Gibraltar who have difficulties in landing ... and the excuse that is provided, or the reason that is being provided, that it is in relation to a lack of air traffic support ... that it is incumbent on the Government to reassure the public that insofar as civil aviation is concerned ... and commercial airlines coming to our jurisdiction are not affected by these difficulties.

200

Whilst I understand that it is not within the Government's remit, it would be helpful if the Government could reassure the public at least that these difficulties will not happen again and that there are contingencies outside the control of the Government that assist in this matter moving forward.

205

210 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is a boring issue of procedure in play, and that is that this is Question Time. The hon. Gentleman has not brought a motion about this subject, and perhaps he would not want to because he did not feel it was an issue that should be dealt with in that way, but there were press releases on the subject, I think from his colleague Mr Bossino, which were answered by the Government. I fully recognise that this is a matter of public interest, but this is not Question Time about matters of public interest, this is Question Time about matters 215 which are the ministerial responsibility of the Government.

I have information which the Government garnered about that incident, because of course the Government is very concerned about it and wanted to ensure that the MoD is doing everything possible to ensure for itself that the provision of air traffic control services was uninterrupted in the hours of the commercial operation of the airfield. Of course, Mr Speaker, I would like to share 220 with the House the information that I have, which is, I think, not too dissimilar to the information that was shared publicly already about the events of 24th April, but I think it is important that we recognise, for the purposes of giving business efficacy to the way that we do our work in this House, that at Question Time the Government answers questions about the things that we are ministerially responsible for, and formally we do not have ministerial responsibility for the 225 provision of air traffic control services.

We have an agreement with the Ministry of Defence for the operation of the airfield and we expect, under that service level agreement with the MoD, that they provide the service. I think the MoD were very candid and very open – at least they were with us, Mr Speaker – that they felt very let down by the circumstances of that day and that they are putting in place arrangements 230 with their provider to ensure that this does not happen again. It is the least that we would expect. It is what this community would expect. It is what this community would expect the Government to be doing to follow up in this instance in an area which is not an area of ministerial responsibility but which is an area of public interest.

I am just concerned, Mr Speaker, that in terms of questions we have to be careful that I am not 235 pretending that we have taken on a new area of ministerial responsibility, because we have not and we do not provide air traffic control services.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I address this point just to clarify, because the way we see it perhaps ... We can disagree on it, but the way we see it, Members opposite... in particular, the 240 Chief Minister is responsible for civil aviation. I believe he has that responsibility, or one of his Ministers is responsible for civil aviation; I cannot remember which one it is.

This is a question put to the Government, qua its responsibility for civil aviation, as to whether they have information that they can provide to the Opposition and to the public. It is no more than that. We are not trying to get into a spat with the hon. Member opposite as to who manages 245 the airfield. We accept what he has said at the beginning, but we do think it is a proper question to put. Mr Speaker, respectfully, we do think it is a proper question to put, in terms of responsibilities that Members have opposite for civil aviation, to garner that information and indeed to share it with the public and the Members on this side of the House.

250 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the hon. Gentleman's clarification. I was not challenging that it was a proper question. If I had felt it was not a proper question, I would have asked Mr Speaker to rule it out of order and I would not have provided the answer.

I was at pains to point out that what I am saying is that we are not acquiring ministerial responsibility for air traffic control by giving the answer with the information that we have 255 provided, which was not an answer to a question that sought information, as the hon. Gentleman suggested in his intervention when I gave way, because the question actually asked us why Gibraltar was left without air traffic control support and why no contingencies were in place to respond. So the hon. Gentleman will forgive me for thinking that it was a question that appeared to seek to assign responsibility on the Government side for this, and for that reason I gave the 260 answer in the way that I have given it, but I think that there is broad agreement across the floor of the House given what the hon. Gentleman has said.

The other information that I have is that as a result of the events of the day in question, one aircraft was delayed by 37 minutes and a second aircraft was delayed by six minutes.

265 I understand that the issue arose as a result of illness and therefore ... In every organisation, however well prepared, this could happen, of course, at any time. The contingencies have been strengthened, so that even in genuine cases such as illness this should not happen again.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q169/2022

Exhaust fumes at land border – Provision of masks for customs officers

270

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state why customs officers at the land frontier with Spain are not provided with masks to mitigate the effects of inhalation of harmful exhaust fumes from vehicles?

275

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the use of face masks by HM Customs officers is not mandatory. However, their use is not discouraged and they can be worn at the officers' discretion.

Hon. E J Phillips: Just one further question, Mr Speaker. Has the Government received representations from the customs officers or indeed their particular union in relation to face mask usage? My understanding is it is an issue with them, given the fact that they are obviously working with vehicles all day and it is quite clearly a health hazard for them. I just wanted to know whether 285 they had received formal representations or informal representations about the provision of certain facemasks beyond that discretionary point that he made before in the terms of their use?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I recall a discussion about this but I seem to recall it was here rather than anywhere else. It is not something that has ever been put to me in the many 290 discussions I have had with customs officers in the time I have been in government, although it may be that before I was in government it was discussed with me.

Masks have changed in the perception of the public in the past 24 months, haven't they? My position has always been as set out, that we would have no difficulty with an officer wearing a mask if they wished to. Indeed, these days we have, in respect of masks, an excess of them, so 295 that not just the appetite but also the smoke may sicken and so die, and so for anybody who wants masks for this purpose the Government would supply the usual masks and we would have no objection to them being provided.

I think we have been through this either in this House or elsewhere before. As it is, arrangements there, if we come back with a successful treaty, may change.

Q170-71/2022
Confiscated tobacco –
Value; whether subject to confiscation order

300 Clerk: Question 170/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state the value of tobacco, to include cigarettes, that has been confiscated by the law enforcement authorities in the last three years?

305 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer with Question 171.

310 Clerk: Question 171/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state of that tobacco confiscated whether it has been subjected to a destruction-type order by the courts?

315 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the value of confiscated tobacco, inclusive of cigarettes, in the last three years is £1,331,348 exactly.

All the confiscated tobacco has been destroyed. Destruction orders are used by the courts for confiscated tobacco.

320 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q172/2022
Eastside project –
Impact on natural and marine environment

Clerk: Question 172/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips.

325 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how it intends to monitor the Eastside project and the impact the development will have on the natural and marine environment of the surrounding area, most notably Caleta?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

330 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Environmental Impact Assessment for this project requires that the principal contractor, once appointed, produces a robust and comprehensive Construction Environment Management Plan (CEMP) ahead of works. The CEMP will need to be reviewed and approved by Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar. The purpose of the CEMP is to provide a plan that outlines all required mitigation and control measures to ensure that the development has no adverse environmental impacts.

335 The following outlines some of the requirements that will be included as part of the CEMP: soil chemical analysis; chemical and microbiological analysis of the surrounding marine environment; control measures to ensure encapsulation of accidental spillages and reduction of turbidity in the surrounding marine environment; dust and air quality control, including dust suppression; noise and vibration control; control of light spillage; control of HGVs and traffic management; and quality control of all plant and machinery. The intention of the CEMP is to provide a live document whereby control measures can be added or amended as required as works to the development progress.

345 In addition to the CEMP, both the Environmental Agency and Department of the Environment will frequently monitor works covering all potential environmental impacts and work closely with the developer and contactor to ensure not only that the environment is safeguarded but that there is an overall improvement in the area.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one further question. Does that also involve consultation 350 with the residents' representative association in the area? There have been a number of representations made to me about the impact on Caleta particularly and I just wondered whether the stakeholders and residents of the area will be involved in that process.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the short answer is yes, but there is another question on the 355 Order Paper that deals exactly with that. I do not know whether hon. Members actually discuss amongst themselves what questions they are going to put, but there is an exact question on the Order Paper about that. But I will give him the short and straight answer, which is yes.

Q173-74/2022

Victoria Keys –

Floating pollution in harbour; reclamation site rubble cleaning

Clerk: Question 173/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips.

360 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state why there is a recognisable increase in floating pollution in the harbour near Victoria Keys?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

365 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): I will answer with Question 174, Mr Speaker.

Clerk: Question 173/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips.

370 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm how it monitors the cleaning of rubble at Victoria Keys reclamation site?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

375 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Coaling Island reclamation is enclosed with silt curtains which contain sediment plumes and prevent the dispersal of any floating debris. Unfortunately, the major storm of 4th April 2022 caused severe damage to the silt curtain setup, particularly the seal between the silt curtain and the wharf wall. This has invariably led to the release of some floating debris.

380 The rubble that is being extracted from the Eastside site undergoes a number of processes before it is deposited at Coaling Island, including mechanical and manual cleaning at the Eastside to remove any unsuitable material such as wood, metals, plastics and so forth. Once the rubble is cleaned, it is mechanically processed to achieve the required geotechnical fill specification and then transported to Coaling Island, where it is subjected to further manual cleaning before being 385 deposited in the water.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, in relation to Question 173, can the Chief Minister confirm that the silt curtain issues that have arisen as a result of the major storm have now been remedied?

390 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as I understand it, repairs are under way and, as a result, because of the very severe damage there can be still some escape, which is kept to a minimum.

Q175/2022

Rooke site –

Progress re expressions of interest

395 Clerk: Question 175/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise what progress has been made in respect of the expressions of interest for the Rooke site?

400 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): The Government continues in discussion with the same preferred bidder.

405 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I may ask the Chief Minister: the same preferred bidder would, if my memory is correct, be this consortium that he made reference to last time?

410 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, given that I said last time that that was the preferred bidder and I have said the same bidder is the person that we are talking to, logically the answer to that question can only be yes.

415 Hon. R M Clinton: And is there any indication as to when there might be some form of agreement on the sites from the consortium that has expressed an interest? How long does he expect the process to go on? If I recall correctly, I think last time the original expression fell through and he had to put it out to tender again. Is he confident that this will result in an agreement?

420 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, to set out any timetable is to stymie the Government's negotiating hand. To give any indication of optimism or pessimism would be to perhaps send a signal to the bidder which might be contrary to the Government's negotiating interests. And given that in respect of this site he gave me very clear advice some years ago not to make any announcement until the ink was dry on the paper, I am going to follow his advice and say nothing more until the ink is dry on the paper.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q176/2022

Principal Auditor's Report for year ended 31st March 2016 – Whether acceptable that none tabled since

425 Clerk: Question 176/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it thinks it is acceptable that the last report of the Principal Auditor tabled in this House was for the year ended 31st March 2016?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

430

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member is aware, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar is committed to presenting all parliamentary reports to this House in a timely manner. However, as he is also aware, we have all been engaged in a global pandemic which, as he knows, has had a huge effect on the community as a whole. Additionally, since 2016 we have been dealing with the United Kingdom's exit from the European Union. This has delayed the Supplementary Appropriation Bills for some years, and that consequently has delayed the Auditor's reports.

435

Given how assiduously the hon. Gentleman follows these reports and that he is keen to ensure he has these more timeously, I am sure we will be able to ensure that there are no further delays in the tabling of such reports. The Principal Auditor is finalising the audit of the 2016-17 and 2017-18 Public Accounts of Gibraltar and these will be tabled in Parliament as soon as possible after they are complete.

440

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q177/2022

Small Boats Marina – Number of berths sold and amount raised

445

Clerk: Question 177/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how many berths have been sold at the Small Boats Marina up to 31st March 2022 and how much money has been raised?

450

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, no berths have yet been sold in the Mid Harbours Small Boats Marina up to 31st March 2022 and no money has yet been raised.

455

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Chief Minister for that answer. Given that this was announced in his Budget address last year, is there anything the Government intends to do in respect of the situation? Are they going to withdraw the berths from sale, or are they going to take some other measures to make the purchase of these berths more attractive to people, or not, as the case may be?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman does jump to conclusions. I have told him that we have made no sales and that we have had no income yet. I have not told him that we have had no interest. We have had considerable interest.

Because we are a small administration and we have been a little busy, what we are doing is trying to devise the right way to create the interest, not in land but in the berth, in a way that is the right way to convey that interest upon sale. That has not been something we have been able to resolve yet. We are taking advice from our property advisers and when we resolve that we will start the process of sale.

This is not a situation, as he has suggested in his supplementary question, of people not being interested in the purchase, which we would have to make more attractive in some way.

475 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can I ask how many people have indicated to the Government that they would like to prospectively – what is the word? – ‘purchase’ the berth, I suppose, subject to, obviously, the legalities of the water rates, presumably, and granting them suitable licences etc? How many are there, and how many people have expressed an interest in respect of how many births?

480 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will know from his training that he has put his finger on it. He has talked about the rights on water and he has talked about licences when what we are trying to do is sell something more substantial than a licence. And this goes beyond a riparian right because of course we are not granting riparian rights, because we do not want anyone to be able to build on a berth or reclaim on a berth etc.

Mr Speaker, I cannot give him the answer because I have not got it here, because it does not arise from the question.

485 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q178/2022
Haven building –
Whether sold

Clerk: Question 178/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

490 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if the Haven building has been sold by Gibtelecom; and, if so, for what amount and to whom?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

495 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, when Gibtelecom sells that building – and I understand it is presently negotiating – it will, no doubt, make an announcement.

Clerk: Question 179/2022 –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton wants to ask a supplementary.

500 Hon. R M Clinton: Sorry, Mr Speaker. So, the Haven building is obviously being negotiated. The way the Chief Minister has expressed it – ‘negotiated’ – would I be correct in interpreting it as there is actually a sale process ongoing as we speak, or is it, as per the annual report, that it is held for sale and you are looking for prospective purchasers? Or are you in the middle of negotiations with a purchaser?

505 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the practice has been established under successive Governments of Gibraltar, in particular after the incorporation of Gibtelecom. They were the ones who had been in government the longest. That information is provided here and tabled here in respect of Gibtelecom, but the day-to-day management of Gibtelecom is not something on which the Chairman of Gibtelecom, who is inevitably a Minister, answers questions in this House.

510 I have tried to give the hon. Gentleman all the information he has sought in his supplementary in my first answer, because I have told him that the sale is presently being negotiated – in other words, the supplementary that he asked is already answered in my first answer – and I have also said that if the sale is agreed, Gibtelecom will no doubt make an announcement. Mr Speaker, I 515 think everything he wants to know is in what I have already said.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q179/2022
GJBS –
Report on financial affairs

520 Clerk: Question 179/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it has commissioned and received a report in respect of the financial affairs of Gibraltar Joinery and Building Services Ltd; and, if so, what were its conclusions?

525

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government has a number of companies under its ownership and control. As shareholder, the Government is keen to ensure that the interests of the taxpayer are protected by verifying that all these companies are operating in the manner that is the most efficient and resilient to insulate the taxpayer to the fullest extent possible. In light of this, all companies are subjected to regular assessments of their performance. These assessments can sometimes be carried out on a desktop basis. They sometimes involve meetings with those at the coalface, however. On other occasions they require us to delve a little deeper and make adjustments to how functions and operations are carried out. These ongoing assessments are carried out on a regular basis in respect of all companies. It is right that they should be carried out and GJBS is no different.

A review was commissioned by Government through the Office of the Financial Secretary and its representative corporate director into the best way for GJBS to address and progress from the effect in the period of the pandemic and the exchange rate drop arising from Brexit. That report has been received. Indeed, the review into GJBS shows it is no different to most companies in the Gibraltar market and in the wider world. Over the last two years they have faced the COVID pandemic, with the impact this has had for construction. Additionally, the pandemic caught them at a time when they had suffered some losses arising from exchange rate fluctuations that surrounded the various Brexit cliff edges that we went through. In terms of construction cycle, GJBS now also finds itself at a time where there is limited construction work. In addition, it is facing issues of increasing costs and inflation. This situation will not persist indefinitely. It is therefore right, in this case, to delve further to review its activities very carefully to ensure that it is operating in a manner that is resilient and efficient going forward, such that it is fighting fit to meet the new challenges to come. Additionally, GJBS, like most entities, is facing the same challenges of Reset, Restart and Recover.

540

550

The conclusions of the report are wide-ranging. They have led to a series of changes in the structure of the management and operation of GJBS. Some of these changes have been implemented and others are in the process of being implemented. GJBS is a business that has grown both organically and haphazardly. It has had to react out of necessity and step in where other contractors have failed, as was the case with the Bayview and Cumberland projects when OEM and Haymills collapsed.

555

As part of this process we have embarked on a process of seeking a new managing director. I need to advise Parliament that Mr Michael Estella, who has been the company's managing director and under whose leadership many of Gibraltar's key projects have been delivered, has announced his retirement, which is effective from 30th June 2022. Michael has provided Gibraltar with 37 years of service in GJBS and he is widely recognised as having been the rock upon which the foundations of GJBS have been built. Mr Estella has served three administrations of the 560

565 Government of Gibraltar without permitting his transparent party political allegiance to interfere with his duties to the company and professional loyalty to the Government as its shareholder.
Michael Estella has been on every building site at all hours to ensure quality control and timely completion of projects. I extend to him the gratitude of the people of Gibraltar for the hugely important work he has undertaken for the Governments he has served, and I am sure that my two predecessors, Sir Peter and Sir Joe, would join me in the praise I have set out. Interviews for a new 570 managing director of GJBS have already been held. I expect that an announcement on whose appointment has been recommended by the interview board will be made in coming weeks to ensure that there will be a seamless transition from the current managing director to the new managing director.

GJBS has an exemplary workforce who are incredibly hardworking and competent. The projects 575 that they have successfully completed speak for themselves and are simply too many to mention.
The Government is committed to drawing on its own commercial experience, in addition to the recommendations made in the review, to structure GJBS and secure its continued success into the future for the benefit of the people of Gibraltar with shareholders and its workforce. This new structure will also heed some of the recommendations that have been received directly by the 580 Government from its consultation with GJBS staff.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Chief Minister for his comprehensive report on GJBS.
If I may ask, can he advise who undertook the report?

585 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it was not one person, so I cannot advise him of a name.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, it is quite a simple question. Was it an individual or was it a professional body or a committee? How was this report undertaken?

590 Hon. Chief Minister: It was undertaken by the Office of the Financial Secretary, Mr Speaker, so all of the people in the Office of the Financial Secretary who assist the Financial Secretary have been involved in assisting him in this respect. It was not undertaken by a particular entity charged with undertaking it, as I understand it.

595 Hon. K Azopardi: The Office of the Financial Secretary: presumably there are identifiable people. I am not sure if the hon. Member has that information with him. Perhaps he can find out and then let us know.

On the issue of the management structure, he mentions the retirement of the managing director. Are there going to be other management changes envisaged likely? In relation to his 600 replacement, the Chief Minister indicated that interviews have been held. I have not seen any sort of advertisement, so I assume that is an internal processes. Is it likely that it is someone drawn from the company or from the wider public service? I am not sure if the Chief Minister knows who exactly has been interviewed, but perhaps he can share with us the kind of profile of the likely replacement managing director.

605 And then, in terms of going forward, other than managerial recommendations are there specific financial recommendations as to the operation of the company that he can share in a bit more detail with us?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the names of the people in the Office of the Financial 610 Secretary who did the work ... I do not think that is something that the Government would think is relevant in any way. If he wants me to find out and call him and I tell him it was Peter or Jane, or Richard or Judy ... I do not know whether he would have more confidence in Peter or Jane or Richard or Judy than in Albert or Fabian. I am happy to try to find out and tell him, but he knows that we do not like to share the names of civil servants across the floor of the House. We do not 615 think that is fair.

620 If there is any other entity that I do not have in my mind that was involved I am quite happy to tell the Hon. Mr Clinton and him if I have not been able to provide the answer. People should know that despite the pugilistic style sometimes in Parliament, we do have a WhatsApp group where we share information once in a while and I am happy to put it there. I suppose the modern digital equivalent of 'behind the Speaker's Chair' is 'in the WhatsApp group'.

625 In terms of the advertisement of the vacancy, as I understand it, from memory, the vacancy was advertised. I believe it was advertised in the company because the profile of people being sought ... are the sort of people who have the skills that the management team in the company have, and so the answer to his questions is linked because if there is a recommendation that somebody who applied from within the company should be promoted, then there would have to be other changes throughout the chain of the structure of management at GJBS.

630 I think there have been three senior retirements at GJBS now with Michael's departure, which has seen the three most senior members retire through age-related reasons, nothing else. Lest anybody suggest that the review might have led to those retirements, they have not; they have been age-related retirements and therefore there may be a recommendation that comes that with the appointment of a new management director there should also be other changes, but to a very great extent that would be something that the Government would look to receive the advice of the new managing director on in the way that he or she would see the future of the entity.

635 I think, Mr Speaker, I have dealt with all of his questions. Other recommendations ... Of course, in everything that we look at, especially when the Financial Secretary's Office is the one leading any review, we are going to be looking at robust financial management, which, however good, can always be improved. We are going to be looking at having better structures for the management of payments. As the Government's own payment systems evolve and procurement systems evolve, we would like to see the company's procurement and payment systems evolve, so that we have a more current and better picture of liabilities and of debts due to the company as well, which is the important way of having a full picture of a company's fortunes.

640 We will want to see human resources evolving so that we make the best of the people we have in GJBS. I have said in my first answer we believe we have an excellent and very competent workforce there. I have only had one reflection in respect of the interviews, I have not had any advice yet, but I was told that one individual had made the suggestion that GJBS could do even more in terms of the provision of support for the University in respect of some areas of expertise that GJBS has in engineering etc. So there are many ideas there.

650 I think the next 30 years of GJBS will be even brighter and even stronger. No doubt under successive administrations as the political pendulum swings, they will have their fortunes bloom in favour under any complexion of future Governments of Gibraltar, and I am very excited both to bid a very fond and positive farewell to Michael for the work that he has done and to welcome whoever is recommended to be the new managing director and the workforce that will flourish under him or her.

655 Hon. K Azopardi: The Chief Minister in his original answer spoke about, I think, exchange rate issues that the company had had and so on, which had been part of the review. Did the review come to any conclusions as to any specific financial losses that the company suffered as a result of whatever the review was looking at it; and, if so, what were they and to what extent?

660 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not have any information about any such conclusions here with me today, but I do recall that we have had discussions about this in the past when we have discussed the fortunes of GJBS. There was a period, of course, through which GJBS was trading, and every other company in Gibraltar, where the euro to the pound rate went, as he knows, through the floor, and I think it caught every construction company out in that period, but I do not have the information.

670 Hon. K Azopardi: If I recall that discussion, if it is relevant to this, we were talking about sums in the millions, I think. I will not ... All right, yes. My hon. colleague has just passed me an extract from the Hansard of 2021 which talks about an advance of around £23 million. I am not sure if that helps the Chief Minister, if those are the exchange rate issues he is talking about which were also discussed as part of this review, or we are talking about something different. He may not have the full report with him, but does he recall from the full report whether it is that kind of sum or a different sum?

675 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker. Again, he must not jump to conclusions, as he did last time when we have asked this question – he then went on to say in his Budget speech a month later that we had bailed out GJBS in the sum of £23 million, which was not the case.

680 In the course of that discussion I told him that one of the things that has affected –

Hon. K Azopardi: I am sure I did not say that at all.

685 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, in fact, Mr Speaker, I will tell him that in his Budget speech – if he wants to look at Hansard for 21st July 2021 at page 12, line 480 – although he has said from a sedentary position, ‘I am sure I did not say that; I am sure I did not say GJBS had been bailed out,’ he said: ‘We have seen GJBS bailed out with £23 million.’

690 Well, Mr Speaker, we had not bailed GJBS out with £23 million. That was the issue that they had on their balance sheet and what I told him was that one of the elements that related to the issues that GJBS was having was the collapse of the pound sterling against the euro. He will find that at page 24, line 960 of the May 2021 Hansard that he is referring to. So it is not £23 million by any stretch of the imagination, it is an element of the issues that afflicted GJBS at that time in that period that the euro exchange rate was affecting them as it affected every other construction company in Gibraltar.

695 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q180-81/2022

Government- and GDC-owned companies and subsidiaries – Overdue filing of accounts and audits

Clerk: Question 180/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

700 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a list of all companies owned by it or the Gibraltar Development Corporation and associated subsidiaries for which the filing of accounts is overdue at Companies House as at 31st March 2022?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

705 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer with Question 181.

Clerk: Question 181/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

710 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a list of all companies owned by it or the Gibraltar Development Corporation and associated subsidiaries which have not been audited since incorporation to the 31st March 2022?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

715 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know they are chatting amongst themselves but they should listen – they are going to enjoy this.

The Government owns 59 companies directly or via the GDC. When we took over, all that were then incorporated were overdue their accounts. At the moment, 21 are already up to date, 26 are overdue and 12 have not had any audit since incorporation.

720 The information requested by the hon. Gentleman to Question 180 is provided in the schedule I now hand over to him.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in relation to Question 181, the companies which have not been audited since incorporation as at 31st March 2022 are in the second schedule I now pass to him.

Answer to Question 181/2022

Europa Incinerator Company Ltd GAR Ltd
GEP Ltd
GEWP Ltd
Gibraltar Air Terminal Ltd
Gibraltar Freeview Ltd
Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners Ltd
Gibraltar International Mint Ltd
Gibraltar Mechanical & Electrical Services Ltd
Gibraltar National Mint Ltd
GSBA Ltd
GSF Ltd

725 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that really concludes my answer to his question, I suppose, but additionally I now pass to him a third schedule of a type which could never have existed in their time – namely, a list of companies which are already up to date with their filings at Companies House. I am sure the hon. Gentleman will be delighted.

The following are the companies which are up to date with filing at Companies House:

Brympton Co-Ownership Company Ltd	December 20
Credit Finance Company Ltd	December 20
ES Ltd	December 20
GBIC Ltd	December 20
GDC (Directors) Ltd	December 20
Gibraltar Bus Company Ltd	December 20
Gibraltar Co-Ownership Company Ltd	December 20
Gibraltar Estates Management & Administration Ltd	December 20
Gibraltar Estates Maintenance Services Ltd	December 20
Gibraltar General Support Services Ltd	December 20
Gibraltar Investment (Directors) Ltd	December 20
Gibraltar Manchester Property Company Ltd	December 20
Gibraltar National Exploration of Minerals, Gas & Oil Company Ltd	December 20
Gibraltar Residential Properties Aerial Farm Ltd	December 20
Gibraltar Residential Properties Bishop Fitzgerald Ltd	December 20
Gibraltar Residential Properties Coach Park Ltd	December 20
GOC (Secretaries) Ltd	December 20
GRP Management Company Ltd	December 20
RMB Investments Company Ltd	December 20
Westside Two Co-Ownership Company Ltd	December 20
Zero Carbon Footprint Company Ltd	December 20

730 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I thank the Chief Minister for the various schedules he has handed over and I would note – to give credit where credit is due – that compared to the position as at December 2019 when there were 31 companies which had filings overdue, we are now down to 26, which is obviously an improvement but not a complete solution, although perhaps a movement in the right direction.

735 In respect of the companies that have never been audited, can the Chief Minister comment as to why that would be the case? There are some entities here, for example – and I think I have had this discussion with the Father of the House before – Gibraltar National Mint and we even have Gibraltar Air Terminal Ltd. Should these not at least have an audit?

740 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I agree, they should have had an audit and what he will be very happy to hear is that one of the things that we did when we were first elected was to start the process of getting these companies' books into a fit state.

745 I do not want to be exceedingly partisan, but he does need to understand that there are certain dates which are relevant here. The Government companies, the GDC companies which existed as at May 1996, all had their corporate books in order as at May 1996. After May 1996 a legal requirement is transposed into law – coming back to yesterday's discussion about European conventions about transposition, implementation etc. The transposition into law of that arises

750 from a European directive. The European directive says every company must file its accounts. So, after 1996 the GSD Government, by bringing into effect a European directive, make it a legal requirement that companies should file their accounts and fine any company that fails to file its accounts. And yet they did not file the company accounts for the Government companies, and there were more Government companies after 1996. So, what we find when we are elected in 2011 is not that the companies have failed to file accounts and we simply file the accounts which are ready to be filed, it is that the companies have not had their accounts prepared in some instances from 1996-97, and so the exercise is an exercise of reconstruction.

755 There are some companies that I incorporated after 2011 which have not yet had that exercise completed but it is on the way to being done and being totally completed, and those entities which were incorporated before 2011 which have not had their accounts since incorporation or have not had their accounts since 1996 in some instances have already had them or in other instances are about to have them. This is not an easy process, as the hon. Gentleman knows, because to reconstruct the accounts of a company going back to 1998 is extraordinarily difficult and it is costing the Government a lot of money, but it must be done because it is a legal requirement. Even if it is going to take us a decade, as it is taking us, I am committed that we will have completed the exercise of ensuring that all of the Government's companies will have their accounts properly filed and they will have been properly filed and audited.

760 Because of the dates that I am referring to, there is a party political point – it is inevitable – but he and I agree that a company must comply with the law. It must have its accounts, it must have its audits, where appropriate, and it must have those audits and accounts filed. Although he gives me faint praise – it is only five that we have improved on, because he has asked for up to date – a lot of the others are now almost up to date and I do anticipate that that number, 26, will be reduced greatly very soon and that we will soon get what we both want, which is that the third schedule, which is the one that he did not ask me for, will be the schedule which will have all of the Government's companies on it. Then the discipline should continue under, again, successive administrations I have no doubt, but the political pendulum swings, and we should never once again fall into the trap where we fail to see a Government keep its company accounts in order, keep its company audits in order and file the accounts of the companies, as the Government requires every other entity to do that is a shareholder of a company in our jurisdiction.

775 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I think on that point we agree across the House – for once!

780 In terms of his characterisation of these companies going back to 1996, I have to point out to him that, as he has already recognised, there are some entities that were incorporated here after 2011. Is he still going to use the characterisation of having to reconstruct accounts for entities such as the National Mint, which was created under his Government? Surely not. What would he say is the reason for companies such as National Mint not being audited since incorporation? This is a company his Government created.

790 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, sometimes companies are incorporated but they have no activity, in which case it is very easy to do an account etc., and in some instances they have a lot of activity and we have failed, like they failed, to have the accounts prepared timeously. That is why I am telling him that there is a commitment to ensure that those are put in place. It is not as if I have suggested that all of the companies that are not up to date and have not been audited are all the ones incorporated in their time; I have set out in my answer that there are some in our time also, but that we are very close to finalising that.

795 The thing is that it is remarkable to think about – how long have we been around, Mr Speaker? – but 25 years ago they went to an election, with the hon. Gentleman looking particularly young, saying that they were going to publish the company accounts. They were in government for a decade and a half and they did not publish the company accounts. Well, we have published a lot of the company accounts: we had 59, we have 26 that are not there yet. We are getting there and we are going to give effect to our commitment to ensure that the accounts

800 are filed and we are going to give effect to their commitment that the Government company accounts be filed, even though after a decade and a half in government they did not give effect to that commitment.

We should all, I think, on this one, seek to find the thread of agreement in what we are doing.
On this, Mr Speaker, he rightly clock-watches the Government because this is an external legal 805 requirement – it is a requirement of the law of Gibraltar – and we are putting it right, and I am very proud of the fact we are putting right. He must not underestimate how many hours are going into putting this right and the effort that is required to put it right, in particular when it relates to another administration, because obviously at least in the life of an administration decision makers 810 are still around and you can still contact them etc. In the context of a company that was trading in 1997 and 1998, we will have to call up the hon. Gentleman who is now the Leader of the Opposition and ask him what his travel expenses were about if they were charged through a company, because we are literally having to reconstruct stuff.

But I think it is a good-news story for all of us that the Government of Gibraltar is putting its company house in order. We have been doing so for some time. I have given this information 815 periodically when the hon. Gentleman has asked. The direction of travel, he would agree, is the right one. He will tell me it is not fast enough, and if he tells me it is not fast enough I will reply saying at least in 10 years we have got more or less there, in 15 years the party that you represent did not get there. I have no doubt, Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman had been in government between 1996 and 2011 this would not have happened because this is an issue that with him 820 sitting at the Cabinet table would not have happened. We have a lot of lawyers sitting round the Cabinet table. We talk a lot, we count a little less. This is being put right and I think that is the good-news story for all of us.

Hon. K Azopardi: On a point of order, Mr Speaker, some minutes ago the hon. Member accused 825 me of having said that as part of my Budget speech I had said that GJBS had been bailed out by £23 million. I said from a sedentary position that I could not recall that I said that and he insisted that I did and directed me to an extract. Well, I have the extract on my phone, and if you scroll up the page you will see that it was another hon. Member who said it and not I. I want to give the Hon. Chief Minister an opportunity to correct the record. I have Hansard on my phone.

830
Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is referring me to a matter of public record, and so ... The thing that I have is this extract which has been provided to me, which is that page that I have told him about, which says 'Azopardi Budget 2021'. If he tells me that that is not 'Azopardi Budget 2021', I am happy to correct the record. Can he tell me who the speaker was, so 835 I can check?

Hon. K Azopardi: Let's be clear: the page does not have 'Azopardi Budget 2021' on it, it has 'Gibraltar Parliament, Wednesday, 21st July 2021'. He has asserted in this House that it was me. I am telling him that, if you scroll up, it was not me and I am giving him the opportunity to correct 840 the record. It was another Member on this side of the House, but he has assured the people of Gibraltar it was me. I am now telling him it is not true. He should check his facts and not be so enthusiastic about the stuff that he spins out for the people of Gibraltar that is plainly untrue.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman seems not to have heard me in his 845 enthusiasm to win a minor factual point. I have told him, as he can see, that I have been given the extract with the words 'Azopardi Budget 2021' written on it. He can see that because I am holding it up, and he can see that the words 'Azopardi Budget' are written in blue ink. That is to say they have been written in by somebody for me. What I said was – in case he did not hear me, in case his enthusiasm is so effervescent inside his brain that it did not allow him to hear the speaker – if 850 he assures me that it was not him and he simply tells me who the other speaker was, I will check and confirm that he is right and I am wrong. That is all I am asking, Mr Speaker.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, it is quite basic, actually. Let the Chief Minister not point to civil servants who have scrawled my name at the top of a piece of paper. He is the one who is supposed to do his homework. He is the one who comes to this House. He is the one who assures the people of Gibraltar, because he thought it was a political point that he was making, that it was me, because he thought it was put-down. It was not, in fact, me and he should correct the record.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman knows me well enough to know that of all the people he has come across in this House, the one least likely to try to deflect a bullet and try to make it hit an innocent civil servant is me. It was the former Chief Minister who used to blame those who would be preparing him for anything that might go wrong and take the credit for anything that might go right. He might recall that, because he used to sit next to the former Chief Minister before taking against him and leading another party. (Interjections)

So, Mr Speaker, it is very simple – (Interjection by Hon. K Azopardi) Because I was doing the thing he says I should do, which is be honest with him, which is what I always try to do. Why did I tell him that? Because I was given this page and it had his name on it, and I rely on the people who assist me. I do my homework, but I do it to the extent that time allows. In other words, coming here to answer his questions is not necessarily the thing that is going to take up most of my time.

I have now checked, Mr Speaker. The person who made the statement that I attributed to him is the man that he entrusts with the public finances of Gibraltar, the Shadow Member for Public Finances, Mr Clinton, not him. I am very happy to correct the record and say that it was the GSD, if not him, who had said that we had bailed out GJBS in the sum of £23 million, which was not correct.

Mr Speaker, can we now get on with it?

Hon. K Azopardi: What I was seeking was a point of order so that the hon. Member corrects the record. He has done it in a sour way. He has chosen to do it in a sour way instead of actually being man enough to say, 'I made a mistake, mistakes are human, and fair enough.'

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I thought I had done it in the most magnanimous way possible, which was to accept that I was wrong, to try and move on but to reflect who it was. It must have been obvious to you, as it was to me, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Gentleman did not want to tell me who had made the statement. (Interjections) He simply wanted to make the assertion that it was not him. (Interjection by Hon. K Azopardi) If the hon. Gentleman simply wants to be the Macavity of Gibraltar politics, showing that it is just not him and he is not there, that is fine. (Interjection by Hon. K Azopardi)

People in Gibraltar, I think, respect those who take responsibility. I take responsibility for the things that I say in this House and I take responsibility for the things that go wrong in Gibraltar. The things that go right are to the credit of those who have done them; the things that go wrong are my responsibility. The buck stops with me. He has heard me say it on television. He is not going to find me cowering out of anything – whether it is the debt or the deficit – like he is doing now, despite having agreed that we should do all the BEAT measures.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q182/2022
Eruca Investments Ltd –
Subordinated liquidity facility

Clerk: Question 182/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if Eruca Investments Ltd has drawn upon the subordinated liquidity facility made available to it; and, if so, when and in what amount?

900 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government is unable to answer the question as Eruca Investments Ltd is a privately owned company held by investors in Gibraltar. The House will nonetheless wish to note that the accounts for the year ending 31st March 2020 for that company are filed at Companies House.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, yes, but the facility was, I think, between Gibraltar Properties Ltd, which is a Government-owned, directly or indirectly, company and Eruca Investments Ltd, so surely the Government would know if the facility had been drawn upon.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the question is specific: if Eruca Investments Ltd has drawn down upon that subordinated liquidity facility. He is asking the Government. The Government is not the proprietor of Eruca Investments Ltd.

Hon. R M Clinton: Yes, Mr Speaker, we know that, but the other side to the transaction is a Government-owned, directly or indirectly, company, so the Government would know, or should know, if a call has been made upon that facility.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government is accountable in this House for the actions of the assets it controls, and we do not control Eruca Investments Ltd.

920

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I think we all understand that. The question I am asking is the other party to the transaction ... There is a facility arrangement, a subordinated liquidity facility, which Eruca has the benefit of. The other side to that transaction is the Government-owned, directly or indirectly, entity. All I am asking in this question is has that facility being drawn upon. You must know, having the control of the other side to the transaction, whether that has happened or not. I am not asking about Eruca.

925

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, the question is about Eruca.

930

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, there are two parties to this subordinated liquidity facility, one of which is Eruca and the other side is a Government entity, owned or controlled directly or indirectly. Is the Chief Minister telling us that he has no idea whether this facility has been drawn upon? It is as simple as that.

935

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister is saying that the question as drafted we consider to be a question about an entity that we do not control, and therefore ... The Government cannot be drawn to answer questions about an entity that it does not control in this form, I am sorry to say. This is not for lack of transparency, this is not for lack of accountability, as they will pretend, it is just that they ask us about a company that we do not control and they ask us, in the context of that company, to make a statement. I have directed him to the fact that the accounts of that company have been filed because they have been provided to me. They are at Companies House, in case he has not seen that they are filed for the period which I have referred to the House, but I am advised that the Government cannot answer the question as drafted because we are not the controllers of that company.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Chief Minister has given an answer. It may not be the answer that perhaps the hon. Gentleman was expecting or hoping for, but I will allow the Leader of the Opposition one final question.

950

Hon. K Azopardi: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

The question as drafted says: 'Can the Government advise if Eruca Investments Ltd has drawn upon the subordinated liquidity facility ...?' The subordinated liquidity facility is made with a company controlled by the Government, so really what this is saying is can the Government confirm if the Government company has given Eruca the money? That is really what this is and everybody understands that, so can the Government say whether the Government company has given Eruca the money? Yes or no? The Chief Minister is refusing to say, or it has not happened?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is not the question that is on the Order Paper, and that is not the question that I have been asked to answer. I am very happy to answer the question if he puts it like that next time.

960

Hon. K Azopardi: He is playing on words. It is posed like that.

Mr Speaker: I think both Members may be playing with words. The Hon. Chief Minister has said that if you put a question at the next meeting of the House he will be able to answer the direct question with a direct answer.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, we are happy on this side of the House to put a direct question as long as we then do not get an answer that it is within the six-month rule. He has invited the question –

970

Hon. Chief Minister: Will the hon. Gentleman give way? The Government would not raise an objection because it would be a different question. That is what the Government is saying. The Government is not playing on words, Mr Speaker. The Government is trying to play with a straight wicket to ensure that people have the information they should have in order to ensure that we follow parliamentary rules, which is also our obligation, and give the right information in the context of the right questions. If they make it difficult for us, we cannot give the information, but if the hon. Gentleman puts a question in the way that he has now proposed, we will be able to give the answer from the Government side, and we of course could not suggest that it is the same question within six months because it would be a completely different question, which would be capable of being answered.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I had given way to the hon. Member. Can I just say that of course we will file a question? If he is not prepared to say now because he has put himself in a particular position and he now insists that it must be repeated, that is fine, but everybody who picks up this question would understand that we are asking can the Government advise if the Government-owned company has paid Eruca the money which it contracted to do.

985

We are not making it difficult for the hon. Member opposite. The hon. Member opposite went to Oxford. He is one of the most intelligent people I know. He understands what this question is about. He refuses to answer. It is a matter for him. We will ask him again in different language, that is all.

990

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is the nicest thing the hon. Gentleman has ever said to me. (Laughter) He has added cream and chives to my sour: I now feel like a complete political Pringle, and tasty at that.

995

1000 We are genuinely trying to achieve the aim for which we are here, which is to provide the information. I do not think there are many experts in subordinated liquidity facilities who will go around saying, 'Well, yes, absolutely right, I could have read it that way.' This is a complex area of law and the Government is trying to ensure it complies with its legal obligations to its contractual partners and answers questions that it has to answer and not questions that it could be suggested are not questions to the Government but questions to the Government's contractual partners as drafted.

1005 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q183/2022

Finance Bill –

Whether to be brought to Parliament during Budget debate

Clerk: Question 183/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1010 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it intends to bring a Finance Bill to Parliament during the 2022 Budget debate?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1015 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman raises a question that was discussed at quite some length during the Appropriation Debate last year. We explained our position that we will keep to the Appropriation Bill that is passed in Parliament and seek, where possible, to pass contemporaneous legislation that addresses some of the issues that are raised as part of the Budget, thereby ending a Budget session week or 10 days with as much legislation in place as deals with all of the issues that are raised in the Budget process. This has not always been the case, as it is not always possible to put legislation in place ahead of the Budget session, but we will seek to do so wherever possible. This is somewhat different from having a Finance Bill.

1020 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am glad that the Chief Minister recognises that is different to a Finance Bill because there is provision within our Standing Orders specifically as to how a Finance Bill should be debated in this House and in terms of the timeframes for presenting it. In fact, there is no need for notice but there is a process by which the contents of the Finance Bill are digested and then debated.

1025 I would only ask the Chief Minister to at least consider, for the sake of expediency, putting all these measures into a Finance Bill. It does no harm, and in fact it may be more efficient to do it in that way – and he may even be pleasantly surprised, as he was on the last occasion when we actually found agreement on elements of measures that would be in the Finance Bill. I would just ask the Chief Minister to consider that.

1030 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful to the hon. Gentleman. He knows that we have slightly different interpretations in this respect.

1035 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q184/2022

Review of senior public sector salaries and relativities – Completion and publication

Clerk: Question 184/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1040 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it has completed its review of senior public sector salaries and relativities, as announced by the Chief Minister in his 2018 Budget address; and, if so, will the Government publish the report?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1045 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, this has indeed commenced, although, given the circumstances of the last two years, it has not yet been finalised.

1050 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister advise whether this review is being conducted internally, or has somebody externally been contracted to undertake it?

Hon. Chief Minister: It has been externally undertaken, Mr Speaker.

1055 Hon. R M Clinton: Would the Chief Minister be able to identify the external party undertaking the review?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, Ernst and Young as it used to be known, although it is just known as EY now.

1060 Hon. R M Clinton: One last supplementary from me, Mr Speaker: when did they commence their review?

1065 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not know, but I know that the work goes back to April 2021. I cannot tell him the commencement date but the work that I had seen was work that was done in April 2021 and there has been some more work since then as well, so considerably before April 2021.

Q185/2022

Campion Park – Payment from Trusted Novus Bank

Clerk: Question 185/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

1070 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it has received payment from Trusted Novus Bank in respect of the cost of the Midtown (Campion) park; and, if so, how much and on what date?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1075 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the total development cost for Campion Park was £3,917,879. HM Government of Gibraltar received £3,874,595 on 8th December 2021 from Trusted Novus Bank as a donation towards the costs incurred by Government in connection with the development of Campion Park. The balance between the donation received and the total development cost is £43,283.64. This balance has now been settled by Trusted Novus Bank with the funds being received this month.

1080

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q186-87/2022

Borrowings from GIB and RBSI/NatWest – Security provided to GIB; extension of time sought from RBSI/NatWest

1085

Clerk: Question 186/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it has provided the Gibraltar International Bank with any security in respect of the £150 million borrowed from it?

1090

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer with Question 187.

Clerk: Question 187/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if it has sought an extension of time for the £500 million revolving borrowing facility with RBSI/NatWest secured by a UK guarantee that falls due on 3rd December 2023?

1100

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government did not provide any security in respect of the £150 million borrowed from Gibraltar International Bank. The facility was repaid in full on 7th April 2022 by drawing down the full £150 million from the £500 million RBS facility. This was always the intention from the outset.

Repaying the £150 million temporary GIB facility and transferring all the outstanding liabilities to the RBS facility has consolidated all of the COVID-19 pandemic-related expenditure in one facility. As a result, when full Government revenue is restored and the need to borrow subsides we will be able to crystallise this amount into a new single facility and provide for a sensible and affordable longer-term repayment plan.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the information the Chief Minister has provided, especially in respect of the repayment of the £150 million.

1115

I just have two supplementaries. The first one is in respect of Gibraltar International Bank. In their accounts for 31st December 2020, in 'Related party transactions' on page 44, 'Advances of interest receivable', which will include the ultimate controlling party, being the Government, it says: 'Outstanding balances at the year-end are secured.' Would it be, in his view, that the statement perhaps needs clarification, or is there some other form of security that the bank may have that perhaps is not in the facility letter, by way of some other side letter?

1120

Secondly, Mr Speaker, as the Chief Minister is aware, the facility with RBS/NatWest, which is guaranteed by the UK government, falls due on 3rd December 2023. I appreciate what he has said about consolidating everything in one place, but is he suggesting that he would seek to somehow obtain a loan from another party on perhaps a longer-dated basis; and, if so, have those sorts of negotiations already started and in fact he has not requested an extension of the UK guarantee?

1130 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman at the end, seeking to deal with the second point first, makes assumptions which are not correct and which I will not address during the course of this Question Time because I think they are issues better addressed during the course of the Appropriation debate when dealing with the debt. He is now talking about the current financial year and the next financial year, so I am going to deal with issues relating to that during the course of the Budget debate.

1135 In the context of the note to the accounts of GIB, I would need to take advice on whether that is correct, despite what I have said, or would need to be corrected. The definition of security in those accounts may or may not include a loan to a shareholder, which may or may not fall within a different definition, and so I do not want to venture into having a discussion without appropriate advice.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q188/2022
Migrants entering Gibraltar without valid documents –
Number not yet repatriated

1140 Clerk: Question 188/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please look at the answers to Written Questions W17 to W21/2021 and state, by reference to the nationalities listed in answer to Questions W18 and W21, which of those nationals have still not been repatriated?

1145 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, there is currently only one individual, of Moroccan nationality, who remains to be repatriated from policing year 2021-22.

Q189/2022
Widows and Orphans Pension Scheme –
Update re Government promise

1150 Clerk: Question 189/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, when is the Government going to keep its promises to people in relation to WOPS?

1155 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government fulfilled its promise to people in relation to WOPS. In fact, the answer to this question has not changed since my answer to Question 79/2021.

1160 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that cannot possibly be right because there is a Bill on the Order Paper which was published in 2020 that the Government still needs to take, and people are not being paid out, presumably until that Bill actually becomes law. Is that the case? I will be corrected if I am wrong.

1165 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman asks a question about promises made to people. The promise was honoured when the Government opened the window, as we had said that we would, for people to register. We then published a Bill. We have not yet been able to pass the Bill, but we have already done the exercise that we needed to do. All we need to do now is finish the Bill becoming an Act and then the whole process will be complete, so I do not understand why the hon. Gentleman thinks that we have failed to keep our promise in relation to WOPS.

1170 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, it is simple: there are a number of people who have approached me on a number of occasions asking me to ask the question – I did so last year and I have repeated it this year – because they have been told that until this Bill is actually made law they will not be paid what they are owed in relation to WOPS. That is the information that I am receiving and that is the reason why I am asking the question.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think he has got it behind over breast, so to speak. It is not that they will be paid when we pass the Bill into an Act, it is that they will pay the Government.

1180 Hon. D A Feetham: No, they will be not entitled.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, but we have already told all those who have registered ‘Don’t worry, if the Bill does not become an Act we are going to give effect ... you are going to have the benefit of it.’ So we have fulfilled our promise. We are just in the process of putting in place the formalities, which we have not been able to do but we are in the process of doing.

1190 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but there are people who are going to the Treasury Department actually prepared to pay, because then they qualify for WOPS later on, and are being told, ‘No, you cannot pay because the Government has to pass this particular law.’ That is what people are telling me. That is the reason why I am asking the question. Surely the promises to people cannot have been completed until the Government has done everything possible to allow these people to qualify – that is go to Treasury, make the payments and then they qualify.

1195 Hon. Chief Minister: So, already, Mr Speaker, he has changed from saying that we are not making the payments to saying that we are not able to receive the payments.

I have already told him that nobody is going to suffer because we have told them that as long as they are registered, and if something were to happen, they make the payment even after the inevitable event, which deals with the vesting for WOPS. People will have that honoured, even if we have not been able to put in place the legislation. So, as far as the client is concerned – the constituent in this case – they are covered. We just need to ensure that we make provision for this in the law, which we are in the process of doing – we have already published a Bill.

1205 Hon. D A Feetham: May I therefore ask my last question? When does the Government intend to take this particular Bill, which was published in 2020? Is it going to take it this session; and, if it is, when is the Government going to commence the Act when it becomes an Act?

Hon. Chief Minister: In the lifetime of this Parliament, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q190/2022
Fortress House –
Whether purchased by Government and cost

1210 Clerk: Question 190/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Has the Government purchased Fortress House; and, if so, for how much?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1215

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, no; neither have we expressed an interest in doing so. We already indicated that we were not interested in this asset for the taxpayer, in answer to Question 404/2020.

1220 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q191/2022
Eastside project –
Density and urban impact

Clerk: Question 191/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

1225 Hon. D J Bossino: Does the Government have any intention of addressing the concerns as to the density and urban impact of the development raised by representatives of Catalan Bay Village in connection with the Eastside project; and, if so, how?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1230 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the representations made by members of the public on any planning application are taken into consideration by the Development and Planning Commission when making its decisions. This applies to the representations made by Catalan Bay Village in respect to the outline planning application submitted for the Eastside development. It is not for the Government to intervene in the DPC's processes when considering planning matters. No doubt, if we did, we would be accused of interfering with the DPC's processes.

1235 The Government notes the concerns that we have seen on social media in relation to the Catalan Bay Village on this item. Many of the images which have been provided by some on social media appear, to us, to be inaccurate. Nonetheless, the Government believes that the Eastside project is a very positive project, not just for Catalan Bay but the whole area, which will be renovated and much improved. Each part of it will require full planning permission from the DPC.

1240 At present, there exists a derelict piece of land that has been accumulating waste over the last 30 years, and this development is on a scale that we have not seen before and in a way that will beautify and improve the area very significantly. Nonetheless, the Government defers to the DPC to ensure that the project is done in a way that meets environmental impact assessments and is done in a sensitive manner. The developer and any objections will be heard at the full planning application on all subjects.

Thanks to our policy of openness, transparency and accountability at the DPC, all interested members of the public will be able to object, be heard, and the community as a whole will be able to follow every aspect of the discussion and debate at the DPC. The days of the closed and secret DPC that the GSD asked us to keep secret and closed when we passed the amendment to the Act

1250 are gone. The Government has clearly entered into arrangements with a developer for this project to go ahead because we believe it is a positive project for Gibraltar.

1255 It is important to note that the marina in question, which many have promulgated images of that we do not think are accurate images, effectively provides a breakwater for Hassan Centenary Terraces and the rest of the Eastside development. We think images of it on social media, as I said before and I reiterate, are inaccurate. Without protecting the land of what is now the reclamation, it is not possible to build or insure a building for habitation. The cost of this breakwater is subsidised by the economics of the revenue-generating marina. The reduction or removal of the marina may impact the financial viability of the Eastside project which the Government is contracting for. As a result, delays in protecting the land will also impact the completion of Hassan Centenary Terraces. The marina arm in any event, I should inform the House, will be accessible to the general public and will provide a promenade that can be used by pedestrians, joggers, cyclists and those seeking to fish throughout the whole year.

1265 Hon. D J Bossino: I thank the hon. Member for that very full reply. The question really is whether anything at all can be done in relation to the size of the marina. He has made reference that that could have an impact – I think he even said a reduction could have an impact, in terms of the size and the massification – in terms of the finances. That seems to be the focus of the complaints of the Catalan Bay residents.

1270 I saw part of the DPC hearing, where I was able to listen to and watch, through the website, Mr Riddell's contribution in that regard. I must say that when I initially read some of their complaints I thought it was far-fetched. I think it was suggested that it would block the views all the way through to the Caleta Hotel, but I have been shown plans, and from what I can see, it seems that that accusation – that observation; should I put it in more neutral terms? – may actually be more accurate than I originally thought. I thought it was literally just a line going out and it would impact on the northern side rather than on the southern side, but if I can visualise it, it just basically does that and it does align with the Caleta Hotel. But the hon. Member says that the images which have been shown on social media are inaccurate. The Government will have a view. From what I was able to hear in the initial stages of the DPC process, both the Hon. Prof. Cortes and the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister were really supportive ... and dismissive of Mr Riddell's contribution, but the Government can have a view and I would ask the Chief Minister to consider perhaps more carefully the representations being made by the Catalan Bay residents.

1285 The Government has form in relation to this. It took a very bold and firm view, for example – I think it was just before the elections in 2019 – in relation to Queensway Quay Marina, where an application was filed. Admittedly, the Government members in the DBC also had expressed their objections in that process, but then the Government said that if re-elected ... I think he personalised it to himself. The Chief Minister said that if he was returned to office as Chief Minister he would not allow that particular project to go through.

1290 Simply to make this point, if I can assist: it is true that the development plan of 2009 – I think I got the date right on this occasion – does allow for a marina in the area. However, I will just make these two observations. First, the hatched area which is visualised in one of the plans of that development plan is much smaller than the current project, and although the plan says that it should allow for a marina, it is actually a much more reduced area and I am sure that that would be something which the Catalan Bay residents and many people who visit that area, who use that beach, would welcome. Secondly, the expressions of interest image – which I have only just seen because my learned friend has it here – accords with what the Development Plan 2009 envisages, so basically what I am saying is that this project is a lot bigger than was originally envisaged in the development plan. Simply to make this final point if I may, Mr Speaker: the Queensway Quay project was in some part stopped because it was envisaged that a new development plan would be produced, and I think tenders at that stage had gone out.

1300 I just make those points and I would ask the Chief Minister to consider them in the reply. I will welcome his views.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, the only question is that the hon. Gentleman will welcome my views, so I guess I have as much leeway as he had.

1305 I am delighted that he started by telling us that he was able to follow the DPC online. I assume that he therefore regrets that he voted against our move to make the DPC open. In the time that they were in government, the DPC was not open and even the minutes of the DPC were kept secret.

1310 I am very proud that this Government subjects every project, and now even every Government project, to a full and transparent process where the whole community can take part, people at their desks can see what is happening and everybody can turn up and give their point of view. As a result, it will be possible for people to see that the density of this project is much lower than the project that they approved. The Sovereign Bay project, which was being done at the time by Multiplex and the Reuben brothers, had a much higher density, a much greater density than the density of this project. This is a low-rise project, in the main. There was provision for one tower. I think the DPC knocked that tower back, or the area of it. There is a provision in this project for a botanical garden to be included as part of the project, and so the hon. Member talks about the hatched area in one plan, but of course although the hatched area may now be different to what is being proposed to the DPC, on the other side there is a whole area of nature reserve and botanical garden that has been added to the plot.

1320 The hon. Gentleman speaks about Christopher Riddell and the representations that he made. I have to disclose an interest. Christopher Riddell is a friend and I consider him a close friend. I think it is also proper, and I think it was done in the DPC, to indicate – there is another question on the Order Paper about bidders in respect of the Eastside – Mr Riddell was himself also a competitive bidder in respect of plots on the Eastside in respect of this expressions of interest. I am sure the hon. Gentleman knows, because it was said in the meeting of the DPC that he says he followed. We have to put everything in its context. Because he is a friend of mine, I have the greatest respect and affection for Christopher Riddell and I think that he was an exemplary servant of the Government when he worked for the Government. Previously, he was also a colleague of mine at Hassan's and I thought he was an exemplary member of our firm as a lawyer. Before that, he was an engineer and a teacher. I am sure, though I did not know him then, he will have been just as good an engineer and a teacher as he was a lawyer and public servant. In this instance, the advice that the Government has is that the concerns that Mr Riddell has about the marina arm are not accurate. I think Prof. Cortes at the open meeting of the DPC indicated that he thought the environmental issues that were raised by Mr Riddell were misconceived. I also have the highest regard, of course, for Prof. Cortes. I take legal and engineering advice from Chris Riddell and I take environmental advice from John Cortes.

1340 We genuinely believe that some of the issues that seem to concern people at Catalan Bay are not concerns which are scientifically well grounded, and that indeed the area it is proposed the marina should take in the visual representations that have been produced are incorrect and that they will not, for one moment, get anywhere near the line of the Caleta Hotel. Indeed, if you were sitting in the centre of Catalan Bay, the line of the marina will not impede the view of open water from Catalan Bay at all. That is the advice that the Government has, and that, in fact, is what the Government believes it is contracted for and will contract for. There is another question on the Order Paper as to where we are in terms of the contract in respect of the Eastside.

1345 Mr Speaker, few Gibraltarians can pretend to love Catalan Bay more than other Gibraltarians. I think all Gibraltarians love Catalan Bay and want to protect Catalan Bay. Of course, people who live in Catalan Bay are entitled to say that they have that additional interest and demonstration of their love and affection for Catalan Bay, but as the hon. Gentleman knows, I am often to be found there in the better weather, and sometimes in the not so good weather, because I have close personal friends there. I have seen him there when the Deputy Chief Minister and I have been hard at work campaigning and he has been sunning himself on the beach, as the result of the election has subsequently shown!

1355 There should be no suggestion that there is any division between the Government and the people of Catalan Bay in respect of the protection of Catalan Bay and the enhancement of Catalan Bay. Indeed, for 30 years we have all failed Catalan Bay because we have all promised the people of Catalan Bay that we are going to get rid of the reclamation and the mountain etc. This, we believe, is finally a situation in which we will be able to get rid of that unsightly dust-producing mountain on Catalan Bay in a way that does not produce any prejudice for Catalan Bay. But in the 1360 process of finalising contracts in respect of the Eastside the Government will ensure – we will bend over backwards to ensure – that none of what we do creates any adverse consequences for Catalan Bay. Quite the opposite, we want Catalan Bay to be enhanced by this project and our discussions with the TNG Foundation, the party we are working with in respect of Catalan Bay and the Eastside, suggest that there is genuine good faith on the part of the developer in wanting to ensure that what they do there enhances Gibraltar, enhances the Eastside and enhances, in 1365 particular, Catalan Bay, which becomes a central and most attractive area of that development, with the Caleta, such as it may be after it goes to DPC, also forming a final part of that. The GSLP once again fulfilling the GSD’s political commitments of 1986 where they promised to beautify the east coast for the benefit of residents and tourists and did nothing other than enhance the rubble mountain.

1370 Mr Speaker, I would sit down there, but I just note that it is Ernest Britto who is on this we send him all the best.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q192/2022
Eastside reclamation –
Discussions with Spain re reported complaint

1375 Clerk: Question 192/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, has the Government been in discussions with the UK or Spain in respect of the reported complaint by Spain in respect of the Eastside reclamation?

1380 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government has not engaged in any discussion or negotiation with Spain in respect of their note verbale in respect of this matter.

1385 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, Spain has, from time to time, said things about the Eastside. This is not new. During the hon. Member’s tenure I think probably his first contact on this issue was, I think I found in my research, some complaint by Spain in 2012, so this is long running and it is not about this particular administration because of course it goes back a long time. But I ask this question in particular because there was a suggestion when Spain made clear again its complaint 1390 about this, that they were calling on the UK to discuss it within the context of the MoU on the environment, so I was wondering whether, in the subsequent period, it had been formally tabled in the discussions. That is really all I was asking.

1395 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman’s question asked about the reported complaint by Spain. The reports that I saw related to a note verbale filed by Spain in respect of the announcement by the Government of the heads of terms with the TNG Foundation. Spain’s notes verbales in respect of the Eastside in this matter and in respect of all the administrations that have dealt with it relate to that area of water on which the reclamation is to be found being Spanish

1400 water which we have no right to encroach upon. And so the Government's position is very simple and I am sure would be the same if it were him: we are not going to engage in a discussion, let alone a negotiation, about that water because it is ours.

1405 In the period of our membership of the European Union we have always adhered to the principle that our neighbour has not adhered to, that if a reclamation has transboundary effect we give notice to the other side – and we have only one other side here, Spain – and we act in keeping with the European Directive on Transboundary Effect. The EIA tells us that this reclamation, and indeed the EIA which was put before the DPC for the proposed marina arm etc., concludes – and this is not the Government's conclusion, this is external experts' conclusion – that there is no transboundary effect and therefore the engagement which would be required in keeping with European law would not become engaged.

1410 Indeed, Mr Speaker, one of the things that I have found out during the course of the negotiations etc. is that the European directive is derived from an international convention called the ESPOO Convention, and the ESPOO Convention means that even states outside the European Union who are parties to the ESPOO Convention give notification of transboundary effect to each other and there is a criteria engaged for transboundary effect, and Gibraltar is actually a party to the ESPOO Convention through the United Kingdom. So, even outside our membership of the 1415 European Union, Gibraltar remains committed to doing things properly, and if a reformation in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters, as undoubtedly the waters for three miles to the east side of Gibraltar are, were to have transboundary effect, we would engage with the neighbouring states which it would have transboundary effect on – aka we only have one, Spain – and we would comply with the provisions of the ESPOO Convention to consult, because that is what the law 1420 requires and we comply with our international legal obligations.

I would also say, as I have said previously in this House, that unfortunately, when we were members of the European Union and both the convention and the directive applied, Spain did not do the same thing in relation to reclamations it created in the Bay of Gibraltar which have had a seriously adverse effect on Gibraltar and, indeed, on the neighbouring municipality of La Línea de la Concepción, where we have recently seen its mayor complain that actions have been taken by the Municipality of Algeciras controlling the port without regard to the damage that would be done to parts of the seafront in La Linea, and indeed, in the last storm, which was the storm we were debating in the context of the works being done at Coaling Island, we saw considerable damage to La Linea which the Mayor of La Linea, in public, attributed to the reclamation works of 1425 a place called Isla Verde – Green Island – just off Algeciras.

1430 Mr Speaker, I hope that is a helpful statement of the position of the Government of Gibraltar, which will always comply with its international and, whilst in the European Union, European obligations in respect of transboundary effect.

1435 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q193/2022
Eastside project –
Expressions of interest

Clerk: Question 193/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1440 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how many expressions of interest were received in the Eastside expressions of interest process, and can the Government list the interested parties by name of entity submitting an expression of interest and in respect of which plot?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1445 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, 19 expressions of interest were received in answer to the Government's advert for expressions of interest for plots on the Eastside reclamation. I cannot give him the names, but I will give him the following information, which I hope will satisfy him.

1450 Applicant 1 applied for plots 5, 11, 12 and 13. Applicant 2 applied for plots 1, 2, 3, 4, 6 and 10. Applicant 3 applied for plots 1 to 13 – that is to say the whole of the plot. Applicant 4 applied for plot 6. Applicant 5 listed one proposal for plots 1 to 13 and a second proposal for plots 4, 5, 10, 11, 12 and 13. Applicant 6 submitted a proposal for plots 1 to 13. Applicant 7 submitted a proposal for plots 12 and 13. Applicant 8 submitted a proposal for plots 5, 12 and 13. Applicant 9 submitted a proposal for plots 1 to 13. Applicant 10 submitted a proposal for plots 6, 7 and 9. Applicant 11 submitted a proposal for plots 1 to 13. Applicant 12 submitted a proposal for plot 6. Applicant 13 submitted a proposal for plot 7. Applicant 14 submitted a proposal for plot 2. Applicant 15 submitted a proposal for plots 1 to 13. Applicant 16 submitted a proposal for plots 12 and 13. Applicant 17 submitted a proposal for plots 5, 12 and 13. Applicant 18 submitted a proposal for plot 4. Applicant 19 submitted a proposal for plots 1 to 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 12 and 13 – that is to say all plots except plot 6 and plot 10.

1460 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I asked can the Government list the interested parties. The Hon. Member has not. Is there a reason for that? Is it because he does not want to – as a matter of policy they just do not want to share that information?

1465 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the position that has been taken in this House – which I am quite happy to discuss with the hon. Gentleman – by successive administrations is that we do not disclose the names of parties that are not successful. Very often we are asked by parties not to disclose the nature of their applications unless they are successful. For example, a party may have many irons in the fire for finance and this may be one of them, and they will only progress it in the event that they succeed with a tender process and they do not want other potential lenders to know that they are doing this if they are not going to be successful, because they might be seen to be overextending themselves.

1470 I have no difficulty with giving the hon. Gentleman these names on the basis that it is confidential, but we are not spreading it across the floor of the House. He has another question on the Order Paper in a moment about whether a particular party was one of these bidders, and I will answer that question directly. But I am advised that, like civil servants, the practice has been that we do not give the names across the floor of the House unless it is the successful bidder, and we are advised that we would have to change our tender process to set out that we would be sharing the names of those that bid in order, as data controllers, to be able to share that information publicly.

1480 I have no inconvenience in giving the hon. Gentleman the names. I have got them here in some form, but I would write to him and give him the names and relate them to the applicant number that I have given across the floor of the House, if he is interested.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q194/2022
TNG Global Foundation –
Expression of interest re Eastside development

1485 Clerk: Question 194/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, did TNG Global Foundation submit a bid for the Eastside development expressions of interest process before the closing date?

1490 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the last expression of interest into the Eastside project closed on Friday, 4th September 2020.

1495 The Government carried out an exercise to determine the highest bidder for each plot and the highest bidder for the entire site. It was found that the latter formula achieved a higher premium for the taxpayer. On that basis, the Government opened negotiations with the highest bidder for the entire site. The Government, as part of its due diligence, sought to establish from this bidder its capacity to pay the premium and capability to carry out the project. After a series of delays and requests for extension before placing £10 million of the total premium in escrow, which the 1500 preferred bidder never did, the Government terminated the negotiations and the expressions of interest in July 2021.

The Government was approached by TNG Global with a considerably higher premium offer in the first week of June 2021 and negotiations concluded with the public announcement made on 18th October 2021. We commenced discussions with TNG only after the preferred bidder failed 1505 to provide the deposit required.

Hon. K Azopardi: Given I do not have the advantage of the list, do I take it that TNG Global did not submit a bid, so it is not one of the 19, one of the 19 became the preferred bidder, there were negotiations, those negotiations fell through and at that stage TNG Global emerged? But it was not one of the 19 – is that right?

Hon. Chief Minister: TNG Global was not one of the 19. The preferred bidder was the highest bidder. We were negotiating with the highest bidder, and before the negotiations with the highest bidder fell apart, which was at the end of July, in early June TNG expressed to us directly an interest with a much higher bid than any of the other bids that had been received, and indeed the bid that we were negotiating.
1515

I do not know whether, in fact, already at that stage the preferred bidder had been asked to put down a deposit of £10 million to demonstrate its ability to pay the premium and also to demonstrate its capability of carrying out the project, because we were talking about a project that is going to involve hundreds of millions of pounds over a period of 10 years. And so I want to be specific. Before TNG had approached us we had already asked the preferred bidder to do that. TNG approached us whilst we were waiting for the preferred bidder to do that and came with a bid that was higher than anything we had seen in the 19, and for that reason we started the negotiations with TNG.

1525 Hon. K Azopardi: I understand, but given that there were 18 other parties, did the Government engage with the other 18 parties to see whether, once the highest bidder falls through ...? The highest formal bidder has gone through the process, the negotiations do not work, there are 18 other people on the list. Some of them are for single plots. It may be that the Government had by then formed the view that it wanted to take a holistic view instead of a parcelled view. I do not know if that was part of the thinking, but even if it was part of the thinking, some of the ones on the list of 19 that he has rattled off are bids for all plots, so why not go back to those parties that had formally gone through the expressions of interest process within time and then get them to either put in a second bid or compete with TNG Global? Why wasn't that done on a second-round basis?
1530

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, let me just deal with the first point that the hon. Gentleman raises, which is whether to do individual plots or the whole thing. I said in the course of my first

1540 answer that the Government carried out an exercise to determine the highest bidder for each plot and whether the highest bidder for each plot and the highest bidder for the entire site gave us the best for the taxpayer. It was found in the exercise done by LPS that the latter formula, that is to say the whole plot, achieved a better price for the taxpayer. That was something we wanted to test. That is why he will see the expressions of interest that we put out actually parcelled the area 1545 into plots, because we thought, 'Look, this has not been able to take off in 30 years as a whole plot – shall we try to see whether you can get entities interested in single plots? We might be able to get more in total for the Eastside by parcelling it up into plots.' In fact, once we had received the information from the bidders, there was no way you got anywhere near the premiums that you were being offered for the whole plot when you looked at the individual plots.

1550 The exercise of choosing a preferred bidder involved going from 19 to six. So, of the 19, six were assessed to be serious and in the interests of the taxpayer. Those six were interviewed at length. They made presentations to the Financial Secretary, to the Deputy Chief Minister and, I think, to the Minister for Economic Development as well, and we went through the six proposals.
So we had a lot of information about the six most lucrative proposals for the Government, and the others, it is fair to say, in the Government's view were not mature proposals.

1555 The six proposals that were put produced considerably less for the taxpayer than the TNG proposal. Even the preferred bidder, which was the highest of the six, produced considerably less for the taxpayer than the TNG proposal. So, in the context of the TNG proposal, the reason the Government decided to proceed with it was that it was considerably higher than the 19, considerably higher than the six, and of course serious and self-financing. With the TNG 1560 Foundation what you have is an entity that is the same entity that controls a Gibraltar retail bank and is approved for that purpose by the Gibraltar Financial Services Commission and wider international interests of substance, of which the Government has serious and real cognisance, so that we have no doubts over the ability of this party to carry out the works which are required for the full Eastside development as proposed to the Development and Planning Commission.

1565 In the context of the six that we were dealing with, a number were for single plots and a number were for the full plot, but all of them would have had to prove to the Government – other than one that was seeking a single plot and is well known to the Government and is well known to have the substance to do that single plot, which was a very low premium for one single plot – their ability to pay the premium, which was lower than the premium being offered by TNG, and 1570 to have the ability to finance the works, whilst TNG offered a higher premium, the ability to pay the premium is well known and the ability to carry out the whole of the works is well known. For that reason, in this instance the Government, having tested the water of what the market believed the plot was worth months before and being in the process of doing so, decided that it was in the interests of the taxpayer to continue with TNG because they paid considerably more than any of 1575 the other bidders that had submitted any proposals whilst the expressions of interest period was initially open.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q195/2022
TNG Global Foundation –
Beneficiaries

Clerk: Question 195/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1580

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can Government confirm who the beneficiaries of the TNG Global Foundation are?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1585

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government is unable to confirm the exact beneficiaries of the TNG Global Foundation. The publicly available information in respect of foundations is generally limited to the identity of its counsellors. This information can be readily obtained from Companies House by requesting a foundation profile. We can confirm, however, that they are the entity approved by the Gibraltar Financial Services Commission to own Trusted Novus Bank.

1590

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, we have a profile of TNG Global and, as the hon. Member knows, the profile shows who the counsellors are – and the Act says that the beneficiaries are whoever is in the constitutional documents, which obviously we do not have.

1595

The reason for the question is because obviously the Government has undertaken this process ... It is explained now in some detail as to what happened in the expressions of interest process, of which TNG were not originally part but it was finally adjudicated the plots. I would assume that in that context the Government would have done due diligence and discovered who the beneficiaries were said to be by TNG Global Foundation, and really what we are asking is who those people are. Will the Government say?

1600

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, a foundation is a little like a trust. I think, for the purposes of this basic debate, we can establish that a foundation is like a trust. The Government knows who it is dealing with. The Government has done its research and its due diligence, and so has the GFSC, and so have other entities that have licensed this entity to own financial services companies in the European Union and outside the European Union. And so there is not anything to be concerned about here because you have this entity also doing regulated business and being approved to do regulated business.

1605

The problem with giving an answer to the hon. Gentleman ... If he looks at my first Answer, I have said we cannot confirm what the exact beneficiaries of the TNG Global Foundation are, and that is because in a trust beneficiaries can change at any time. Beneficiaries can change by somebody telling somebody – the founder telling his appropriate counsellors – that he wishes to change who the beneficiaries are, or sending a note of change of his wishes or changing the schedule, and because these things are private the Government might be giving information which is not strictly accurate. Unless I have the founder standing next to me, confirming that now the beneficiaries are X, Y and Z, I could be giving information which has become incorrect. We have had this debate before about trusts; that is the issue.

In the context of the Government knowing who it is dealing with, I have said before in this House I think it is incumbent on a government to always know who it is dealing with, unless it is dealing with a public company the shareholding of which is in the market. The Government knows who it is dealing with, the GFSC knows who it is dealing with, the Swiss financial regulator knows who it is dealing with, the Portuguese financial regulator knows who it is dealing with. It is a regulated entity and therefore I do not think there are concerns about identity here, but I do have concerns about giving information that I cannot nail to the mast as correct the moment that I give it. The founder of the Foundation, as we said in the Government press release and as was said in the press release in relation to Jyske Bank, which became Trusted Novus Bank, is Mr Tuan Tran.

Hon. K Azopardi: I appreciate that explanation that he has given, but the Government issued a press release on 18th October 2021 which said lots of things, but one of things it said is 'The TNG Global Foundation is the highest of all the proposals put to the Government', adjudicating the project to TNG Global at that moment, so what I am really asking ... We are now in May, but I will ask a more precise question, if I may. On 18th October, when they issued this press release, they presumably would have known at that point who the beneficiaries of TNG Global are. Can he say that he did? If so, who were they? The situation may have changed, but that may invoke all sorts of other issues under the agreement in terms of change of control. I am not asking about that. What I am asking about is a point in time: at the time that they issued the press release, did he know who the beneficiaries were, and who were they?

1630

1640 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, beneficiaries do not control trusts or foundations; counsellors control trusts or foundations. It is a basic [inaudible] point, Mr Speaker. Let's not get too technical about it. I do not think we have to have an argument about that. I know that he wants us to know who we are dealing with in the context of who the beneficiaries of the foundation are. The Government knew that the beneficiaries of the foundation were the same 1645 beneficiaries that had been approved as beneficiaries at the time the entity was approved to own a regulated financial services business in Gibraltar, and therefore we had no concerns about that. We have had no notification that that has changed and the Government, in its guise as wider Government, has not been notified under relevant banking statutes by the Financial Services Commission that it has been notified of a change of beneficiaries of the ultimate beneficial owner 1650 of structures that involve the ownership of a regulated entity in Gibraltar.

Hon. K Azopardi: So, just to be clear on the answer I am getting, at the point in time when they issued the press release they believed that the beneficiaries of TNG Global Foundation were the same beneficiaries that had been approved to own the bank – that is what we are talking about – 1655 through a different entity, because I presume that it is a different entity that owns and controls the bank. As I understood it, they assist the entities with sharing common beneficiaries. That is what he is saying? It is the entity that we are talking about, which is common. The regulated entity is the bank – is that right? It is the same beneficiaries?

1660 Hon. Chief Minister: Those were the assurances that we were given, Mr Speaker, and the contracts that are being negotiated require us to be told if there are any changes to that.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q196/2022
Eastside tender –
Payment of premium

Clerk: Question 196/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1665

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, has the premium for the Eastside tender/development been paid in whole or in part; and, if so, when and in what amount and by whom?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1670

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the beneficiaries of the TNG Global Foundation have not yet paid the premium to the Government and no cash has yet been received by the Government for the Eastside project as at 11th May 2022. The Government is in negotiations with TNG to move from heads of terms to a finalised detailed agreement that will result in the premium 1675 of £90 million in cash being paid to the Government.

TNG has already spent a considerable amount of time in carrying out its planning, surveys and environmental work leading up to the application for outline planning submitted to the DPC and the grant of it by the DPC. Hon. Members will appreciate that paying the premium ahead of having the clarity that the DPC would grant them approval was not possible, and indeed that is what we said would happen, that they would make the payment only after they had received outline planning, and that is what we are now negotiating to do, to receive that payment once we have the actual contract provided for.
1680

1685 Hon. K Azopardi: So that we understand, as part of the arrangements there was no escrow or deposit payment by TNG at all – is that right?

1690 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, not in this instance, because we did not believe and do not believe that it is necessary to seek an escrow payment from this entity. We are very close to finalising the agreement that will see not in escrow but the full payment of the £90 million to the Government.

1695 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I understood from the earlier answer that one of the reasons that the negotiations with the top bid of the 19 fell through was because they did not stump up a £10 million deposit, so why not ask for a deposit from TNG?

1700 Hon. Chief Minister: For a very simple reason, Mr Speaker: the preferred bidder of the 19 whom we were negotiating with had been involved in the negotiations for the Eastside project that fell through – that was Blue Water – and they had not been able to come up with the money there, and so we said, ‘Well, fair enough, this looks okay, but you have to demonstrate that you have the money now.’ Here, in the context of the TNG Foundation, you are talking to the guy who owns Jyske Bank and other banks. He has the ability to pay the £90 million and that is the assessment that the Government has made. If he does not pay the £90 million, it will be not because he has not got the money, it will be because we cannot come to terms – but we are now very close to coming to terms, the outline planning is in place and the £90 million, we believe, will be paid and it is just a question of finalising the agreement.

1705 Successive Governments of Gibraltar have been here before and we have not been able to make the Eastside stick. I trust that they wish upon us success in this respect, not just so that we complete their manifesto commitment of 1996 but so that we can all have the benefit of £90 million for our public coffers.

1710 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, he may not believe it, but I actually wish him success in everything that he does. I may criticise him when he gets it wrong, but at the end of the day I live here, my daughters live here, they have to find jobs and I want him to be successful as much as he can because (Interjection) it will make Gibraltar economically and politically sustainable for many decades to come. We may still want to win the next election, but I am sure if he is on this side he will do the same with me.

1715 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, there is a heads of agreement they are trying to move to final agreement. Can I ask him: at that time, when they negotiated the heads of agreement, were there any time clauses in the heads of agreement? He has explained about the outline: the payment of a premium is conditional on the obtaining of the outline. Were the negotiations up to the final agreement also time limited? Were there any time clauses there? If not, can he give us any kind of idea of timescale? Given that the press release was issued in October and there was quite a lot of detail in the public domain put therein, it has been a few months now already, so how close are they to final agreement?

1725 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there were some timelines which did not relate to payment. There were timelines which related to works that need to be done to protect the plot in order to be able to complete the Hassan Centenary Terraces site. As I indicated to him, that protection is required in order to be able to finish those works, insure those homes and sell those homes.

1730 The reason we have not yet completed heads of terms, or rather the agreement, is because now the outline planning has been granted we are very advanced in finalising the full agreement, and it is in everybody’s interests, not least to ensure that costs are kept to a minimum, that we just go straight to the final agreement and finalise the whole agreement and see the payment of the £90 million now with the outline planning permission already in place.

1735 Mr Speaker, I am grateful for his words about wishing us success on this. I know that it is in the interests of all of us economically, not just in the context of the public finances but also in the context of the economic development of Gibraltar, the socio-economic development of Gibraltar and the GDP of Gibraltar, that we see this project actually finally take off.

1740 I, also, wish him great professional success, as he knows, and I do hope that he has many decades from now still there, still wishing us success, although many decades from now, I have to confess – there is only one Joe Bossano – I will be neither here nor there.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q197-98/2022

Eastside site –

Removal of rubble; signing of agreements re financing/development

Clerk: Question 197/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1745

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, by 1st May 2022 how much rubble had been moved from the Eastside site to the proposed Victoria Keys site, at what cost and paid by whom?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1750

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer with Question 198.

Clerk: Question 198/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1755 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, has Government now signed the agreements with the Victoria Keys developers in respect of the financing and/or the development of the site?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1760 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, to date the Government has not been able to finalise the agreement with the proposed consortium of Victoria Keys developers.

1765 Up to 1st May 2022, approximately 121,000 tonnes of material has been moved from the Eastside reclamation to the Victoria Keys site. The cost up to this date for the testing, extraction, processing, transportation and placing of material at Coaling Island is £1,697,438.57, paid for by an advance from HM Government of Gibraltar from the Improvement and Development Fund.

1770 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, in the context of the Eastside development, is the Government expecting to recover that money? I think there was some discussion – I believe it was the Father of the House, where he gave an interview, I think, talking about the rubble costs. I am not sure if that is going to be recovered, this part – or is it future rubble transportation?

1775 On the second question, on the agreement on Victoria Keys, the press release that announced the Victoria Keys development was, I think, released well before the 2019 election, so the negotiations have now been ongoing for some time. We ask for updates from time to time. What is it that is holding up the process, given the length of time? Obviously, the reclamation is going on – it is quite active now; at least there is dumping of rubble into the sea, so it appears that there is a partial reclamation going on – so can he update us on the process on the agreements?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the information that he is relying on is a little dated.

1780 The recovery of the cost for the movement of the rubble will form part of the arrangement with the Victoria Keys consortium, but the original discussion with the Victoria Keys consortium and the original proposal which was being discussed with them was for the movement of all of the rubble at the Eastside. When the TNG proposal comes on to the scene, it changes the canvas in the sense that TNG want to keep the rubble because they have a use for it. In their proposal, they use it to fill caissons which produce the marina. Of course, that is environmentally the best 1785 use of that rubble because, first of all, it is encased, and second, it does not have to be moved from the Eastside to the western side of Gibraltar.

So the new agreement is that the rubble that is moved is only the rubble that is needed to be moved for the purposes of the second phase of Hassan Centenary Terraces to be erected as quickly as possible. You would wait an extra six months or a year if you were just moving that part 1790 of the rubble for the marina arm for the TNG foundation, so instead of now going forward to move all of that spoil to the western side of Gibraltar to create Victoria Keys ... For hon. Gentlemen just to understand this, as I tried to understand it when it was technically explained to me, if you look at the rubble mountain on the Eastside as we know it, and you turn that upside down and put it in the Bay of Gibraltar, that is Victoria Keys. That is where it was going and it would become 1795 Victoria Keys. Now the majority of that mountain is going to be encased in the caissons and involved in the flattening of the plot that will become the Eastside. So what we are moving and have now almost entirely moved is what you need to move in order to be able to build Hassan Centenary Terraces, which means that the transaction with the Victoria Keys entity is a different transaction, because we are now talking about using different rubble to create Victoria Keys.

1800 So – I do not mind sharing this information with the hon. Gentleman – one of the things that we are looking at is using the Victoria Keys site as it develops in order to be able to process new rubble and use new rubble for reclamation in that area, or another reclamation which may provide for that. As the hon. Gentleman knows, the disposal of rubble in Gibraltar can add considerable cost to any development, because if you have not got a site in Gibraltar it has to go across the 1805 border and be processed, not just as it needs to be processed here, but it has to be processed in order to be able to cross a frontier, which is already much more problematic.

In that context, the proposition in respect of Victoria Keys is now a slightly different proposition and requires a different negotiation, and it has just been impossible, in the context of the work that we have had to do in the past two years, to have a discussion with the consortium that will 1810 be doing Victoria Keys with us – if we are able to reach terms with them, which we sincerely believe that we will – on the new proposal for Victoria Keys. There have been a lot of discussions with them, they are aware of a lot of this, but we have not been able to agree final terms.

We want to agree, obviously, the best terms for the taxpayer. The terms that we had on the table we thought were extraordinarily good terms for taxpayer, probably one of the best deals 1815 the taxpayer had ever done in respect of property in Gibraltar. The taxpayer was going to see huge returns and benefit and the problem of the rubble mountain also dealt with by the creation of a new asset.

So it is a slightly different position and therefore the negotiation is not yet on foot as it needs to be, but I hope it will be on foot soon. We are, at the top, a very small team doing as much as 1820 we can as quickly as we can, and it is just not possible to finalise and do more at this stage.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, just a final question, if I may? As I understand his explanation now, with more updated information, it is not about the transportation of the rubble but rather partial transportation; the rest of it is being flattened – if I can put it in a very simplistic way – to 1825 use as part of the Eastside development, and there is a renegotiation going because that has impacted on the original scope, the original idea, or at least one of the elements that was in the Victoria Keys project. Am I right in thinking, though, that the drawings that were published in 2019 ... the end product has not changed; what might have changed is the mechanics of doing it in terms of the logistics of the rubble that was going to be used? Is the financing also perhaps a 1830 different discussion that needs to be had in terms of the carve-up of the plots, the contribution that Government was going to make? Is that also part of what is holding up the discussion?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the artist still has the same impression because what was published was an artist's impression. I do not know whether the shape of the reclamation would be the same. We have had a lot of discussions internally and externally with our Victoria Keys partners, as they will be, about what the shape of the reclamation should be and where it should be wider, where more value can be added etc. The finances will depend on the structure of the final deal, but we continue to seek the best deal for the taxpayer, and although I have read some unmerited criticism of the proposal, anybody who understands subordinated liquidated 1835 finances and all of that sort of thing, in their heart of hearts when they do an analysis will say, 'Shucks, that is an excellent deal for the taxpayer, undoubtedly the best deal the taxpayer has ever done.'

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, just one question. Given the explanation the Chief Minister has given about the rubble mound and who is getting which bit and the inverted [inaudible] land, is it that effectively what he is saying is the Victoria Keys site is going to continue – to use his words – as a rock store until something is decided with the area? But in terms of the actual surface area of the reclamation, is it still envisaged to be the same number of square metres, or is it to be a more modest proposal?
1845

Hon. Chief Minister: Is he talking about Victoria Keys or the Eastside, Mr Speaker?
1850

Hon. R M Clinton: Victoria Keys.

Hon. Chief Minister: The same number of square metres, if not more.
1855

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q199/2022
Hassan Centenary Terraces – Updated cost

Clerk: Question 199/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, will the Government provide an updated cost of the Hassan Centenary development?
1860

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the updated cost of the Hassan Centenary Terraces housing project up to the end of April 2022 is £63.35 million.
1865

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, in terms of the projection of the final cost of the development, has that changed also? Has that been impacted by the current spend? What is the trend for that?
1870

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the anticipated contracts done for the whole project, the whole of the six blocks, is in the region of £168.5 million. Of course, this will reflect the fact that there has been considerable inflation in respect of the cost of the second phase.

1875 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q200/2022
Airport tunnel –
State of works and opening date

Clerk: Question 200/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1880

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, what is the state of the works on the Airport tunnel, and when will it open?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1885

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government is represented by the hon. Member's firm in these matters. I say that for the purposes of the record.

1890

The civil engineering and structural engineering works on the tunnel are almost complete, with final snagging and defects correction taking place at the moment. The mechanical and electrical equipment is mostly installed, although not fully completed. This is also undergoing testing and commissioning, and once all is successfully completed the contractor should be in a position to hand the tunnel over. It is not possible to provide a definitive date of when the latter will take place – 'Don't we know it,' he said as an aside (Interjection) – but, the anticipated date given by the contractor at the moment is 16th August 2022.

1895

Once the tunnel is handed over and before it can be opened to traffic, there will be a need to carry out a number of works which are outside the scope of the tunnel contract. These are primarily in the area of Devil's Tower Road, Eastern Beach Road and the southern tunnel approaches, and are programmed to take 12 weeks.

1900

Hon. K Azopardi: Of course I am not going to hold him to it, but in terms of from handover to when it might actually be in use, is there some kind of projection of how long that would be?

1905

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have told him that the works that are required are around 12 weeks. He might have asked me, 'Well, why don't you start doing those works now?' As he knows, we have had a very fractious relationship with the contractor. The fraction happened in their time and continued in our time. A lot of these approach works involve areas which connect to areas that are still controlled by the contractor for the tunnel. Some of the work that we have to do is in the tunnel site, and we would have to have a good relationship with the contractor in order to be able to start our works in a way that would be completed satisfactorily with the best interests of the taxpayer in mind in order to be able to say let's press the button and do those works now. We do not have that relationship with the contractor. We therefore do not want to start works that will potentially go on for longer and cost the taxpayer more because of the nature of the relationship with the contractor, and so we will not be prepared to start spending money on the approach works until we actually have the tunnel site in our own control.

1910

We also do not want to put a date out there for the simple reason that if we put a date out there that people are going to hold the Government to, the Government will be embarrassed if it does not meet that date. Then the contractor, with whom we have a very fractious relationship, will say, 'Now I have one over the Government, because if they do not complete by 16th August 2022, the Opposition and the public will be saying, "Ha, ha, you see: you have failed the deadline."'

1915

We are not prepared to stick our colours to the mast on any date that we are given by this contractor. We have seen the most disgraceful Spanish practices in the context of the relationship that we have had with this contractor and we look forward to no longer having them on site in Gibraltar.

1920

1925

Q201/2022

British residents of Gibraltar not holding red ID cards – Frontier mobility

Clerk: Question 201/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1930 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how has the Government taken up with Spain and/or the UK and/or the EU the current problems of mobility across the border faced by British residents who do not hold red ID cards, and what indications of resolution have there been?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1935 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member opposite is aware, and as I have said publicly on a number of occasions, the United Kingdom, Spain and Gibraltar have been in continued contact on this issue. However, this must sadly be seen against the legal reality that exists for British citizens as a result of the United Kingdom's departure from the European Union.

1940 The fluid movement of persons across the border between Gibraltar and Spain remains a key part of the envisaged agreement for the future relationship of Gibraltar with the European Union. Until that agreement is concluded, however, Spain is bound to apply the EU Schengen Border Code. This provides for a greater intensity of controls at the border with what the European Union terms 'third country nationals'. The code obliges border guards to check and stamp passports and also to question border crossers on matters like the purpose of their visit into the Schengen area and to request proof of their means of subsistence.

1945 Gibraltarian residents of Gibraltar who hold red ID cards have been temporarily exempted by Spain from this requirement pending the negotiation of a new treaty. In the event of no negotiated outcome, the full application of the EU Schengen Border Code would be the default position for all third country nationals entering the Schengen area and this would include Gibraltarian red ID card holders.

1955 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, clearly we hope that there will be a successful, safe and beneficial agreement negotiated, but in terms of this specific aspect can I just ask this. As the Chief Minister knows, the situation has changed twice. Originally there were assurances given – public assurances – that there was going to be status quo at the border, and in fact, if I can loosely call them blue ID card holders, blue civil registration card holders were going across the border in the same way as they were before. Then it changed at some point. Several months ago it changed to the point where they were still able to do so, but on the basis that their passports would be stamped on the way in and on the way out. It has changed again recently, as he knows, so that 1960 they are now requiring documentation to justify where the person is going and that sort of thing. I understand the answer that he has given, but of course assurances had originally being given during the course of the initial throes of the discussions or negotiations. Is it the case, therefore, that we now need to await the negotiations, and is it the case that it is not possible to obtain interim assurances of original status quo for those holders of non-red ID cards?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government of Gibraltar has vociferously sought that blue ID card holders have the benefits that they had, which are the same benefits that red ID card holders currently continue to enjoy, until we have a negotiated outcome in the discussions between the European Union and the United Kingdom which involve Gibraltar and Spain. We have 1970 been unable to secure that. We are seeking a concession in that respect. It is not impossible that by seeking that concession too aggressively we may simply lose the concession that we presently enjoy. I do not want to say too much about this because I do not want to put at risk the concession that we presently enjoy, but I would say that it is legally wrong and politically unhelpful, or rather 1975 ... let me rephrase that. It is legally wrong and diplomatically unhelpful for people to allege that they are being discriminated against because one class of ID card holder in Gibraltar is being given a more favourable treatment, because those who are not being given favourable treatment are being given the treatment that European law requires.

The hon. Gentleman should take it from me and every blue ID card holder should take it from me that the Deputy Chief Minister, the Attorney General and I, and indeed the United Kingdom 1980 authorities, have made vociferous representations seeking to have blue ID card holders continue to have the concession that they had until recently. We have not been able to achieve that. We will continue to try to seek that. We will continue to be vociferous behind closed doors in seeking that concession and seeking that goodwill, but we have to understand the parameters in which we are operating.

1985 In order to try to represent this in some way that is less, perhaps, controversial, if you were entering a state that deals with everyone in the same way and that state were to decide that it wants to deal with one particular group in a particularly positive way, and that group is discernible in some objective way, then by everybody else alleging discrimination all that is likely to happen is that the party that is giving the concession is going to say, 'Bugger it, I don't want to be called a 1990 discriminator, I'll treat everyone the same way.' So we have to be very careful. That is not to fail to understand the plight that some of those who are blue ID card holders are in. That is why the Deputy Chief Minister, the Attorney General and I have invested so much time in making the argument in their favour in these negotiations, but the reality is that we either favourably finish these negotiations or we will all always get the same treatment that blue ID card holders are 1995 getting at the moment. Indeed, let us not be discriminatory ourselves: that is the treatment that is given to all other category of ID card holders who are not also EU nationals, because we have other third country nationals in Gibraltar, who are not British citizens, who are also going to be subject to that treatment. We have green ID card holders, for example, who are non-EEA nationals who are resident in Gibraltar – they are having the same treatment as well, and we must not 2000 forget them either.

So this is a vexed issue. I can see that there is an opportunity to try to make oneself the champion of this class of person. I have received an extraordinary number of communications from people in this situation. I have tried and I think I have replied to all of them. If I have not, I encourage those who have got in touch with me to get in touch with me again. The former 2005 Minister for Europe, Wendy Morton, was in touch with a large number also. We have a communication that we agreed with the former Minister for Europe we would send which sets out some hints and tips as to how to deal with this issue in a way that is, we think, helpful.

Mr Speaker, all I can say is that we need to ensure that we do not cause all ourselves a problem by failing to understand the legal nature of what is happening at the crossing point between 2010 Gibraltar and the European Union at La Linea at the moment. That frontier is, at the moment, already an external frontier of the Schengen space subject to the Schengen Border Code. We must not pretend it is not.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

2015

Q202/2022

Non-red civilian registration card applications –
Total and numbers granted, refused and pending

Clerk: Question 202/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

2020 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how many applications for non-red civilian registration cards have there been since 1st January 2021; and, of those, how many have been granted or refused and how many were pending at 9th May 2022?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2025 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will now hand over a schedule with the information the hon. Gentleman has sought.

Answer to Question 202/2022

Breakdown of applications received by category, since 1st January 2021:

Category	Granted	Pending	Refused
Non-EU Nationals (Green Cards)	1,984	149	1
EU Nationals (Blue Cards)	3,701	306	2
British Nationals (Magenta Cards)	822	94	2

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, may I just ask the hon. Member ...? Some months ago I asked him about a policy issue that was holding up the so-called self-sufficient applications. Has that been resolved, or is that still pending the discussions?

2030 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the outcome of that discussion will depend very much on the outcome of the treaty negotiations.

Q203-04/2022

Government public counters –
List including opening hours and plans to increase

Clerk: Question 203/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

2035 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a list of the Departments and public authorities and agencies that currently operate public counters for interaction with members of the public and the opening hours of each such counter?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2040 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question with Question 204.

Clerk: Question 204/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

2045 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, will the Government be increasing the opening hours of public counters operated by Government Departments or public authorities, or opening counters at departments that do not currently operate open public counters?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2050 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I now hand over a schedule with the information requested. All other Departments that do not operate public counters or have not returned to their pre-COVID-19 counter services interact with members of the public via e-Government services, email, telephone or by pre-booked appointment.

2055 In relation to Question 204, there are currently no plans to open public counters longer, or indeed open new ones. HM Government of Gibraltar is, however, planning to develop a one-stop hub to afford help and support to those persons who require assistance with online systems.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I do not know if the Chief Minister is aware but this is one of the more municipal issues that constantly gets the attention of people and gets raised with Members on this side of the House.

2060 There is significant public disquiet about public counters. He has handed me a schedule and I will look at it and review it, but there would be significant public disquiet to hear him say that there are no plans to open for longer hours or new ones. People's engagement with e-Government is not a smooth or seamless process. It sometimes does not work in the way that people would like it to work, so in terms of finding alternatives people still think that there should be public counters open across the board in terms of all public services, so that they can engage with real people to solve the problems that they have on the ground.

2065 Can I ask him to reflect on the second aspect of his answer? While of course it is right that they should look for alternatives, like bolstering the process of e-Government and making sure it is more efficient and so on ... I know that they have invested money in e-Government and it is a different debate to see whether there is value for money on that investment, because many millions have been spent on it and it does not appear to trickle down to people in a fast and efficient way.

2070 That is a different debate for another day, but in terms of this issue, giving alternatives to people so that they can engage with public servants, can I ask him to reflect on the second aspect of the answer, because people will be saying, as they do to Members on this side, that they want counters open across the board and for longer?

2080 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it will be no surprise to him that, although I have no time to follow him on social media, people have nothing better to do than send me what he says on social media, so I end up having to see it, as it floods my WhatsApp feed when I have better things to do – like, for example, communicate with him on some matter or other. I found it particularly entertaining that he made a headline of the issue of opening public counters on one of his social media feeds, with big blue letters.

2090 We have said we are opening a general counter, and that general counter, the hon. Gentleman reminds me, as I thought, will deal not just with digital issues: it will be a general counter where you can do all of your counter stuff with the Government. So there will be a counter, you can do all your counter stuff with the Government at that counter, and therefore honour should be satisfied and counters should be provided for all the Government stuff.

2095 But I just want to ... because I have tried to understand the point ... This point was raised in the Cabinet long before it was raised in his social media feed and we have been wrestling with this since the first lockdown and the aftermath of the first lockdown. I have given him some answers and the only counters that are not open at the moment are six, so the Government has 10 Departments with counters that are open and six have not reopened, so of all of the counters that we had before we have less than a third that have not reopened.

2100 One that has not reopened is the Human Resources department. That is really an internal issue, because there is not much interaction with the general public in Human Resources. The other one is Maritime. Maritime is principally an area of international business that we do online. I have had no complaints about either the Human Resources department counter being closed or the Maritime department counter being closed.

2105 The other one is Town Planning and Building Control. I have had absolutely no complaints whatsoever about that counter being closed, because most people were urging us to be able to do those things more efficiently online.

2110 The Government Law Officers and the Office of Criminal Prosecutions and Litigation had a counter, and that has not reopened. Apparently, it was a historic counter. I do not know whether it was in a historic building or ... historically we had had a counter, I am told, which was for Gazette matters. Again, nobody has complained about that because most of the people who were involved in putting adverts in the Gazette were gagging for us to be able to offer them the opportunity to do it online and send us the money online and send us the advert as a PDF. So nobody has complained about that.

2115 There are two other counters. I have now dealt with four. There are 10 that are open, these are the other four and nobody has complained about these four. The other two we have are the Civil Status and Registration Office and the Housing Works Agency. The Housing Works Agency has traditionally always taken its complaints by phone. Some people wanted to turn up to make their complaints in person, but the phone seems to be the most efficient way of doing it. I have not had any complaints myself about the Housing Works Agency counters being closed.

2120 The only other counter that remains closed is the Civil Status and Registration Office, but of course the Civil Status and Registration Office, which deals at its counters with passport and nationality matters, immigration and visa matters, births, deaths and marriages, has not failed to deal with every birth, every death and every marriage in Gibraltar. The applications for immigration and visa that we have had, most of those were always dealt with remotely because it was people applying for visas to Gibraltar, so they made the application remotely. And passports and nationality – well, I can tell the hon. Gentleman from the volume of applications for exemptions in respect of nationality and passports I have dealt with I cannot imagine that we would have had more applications if the counter was open, and I personally have had no complaints about people saying, 'I cannot go to the counter at the CSRO.'

2130 So I am left with the concern that people are expressing, for some reason, a concern about Government counters, which I do not think is related to the fact that these six have not reopened in the way that they were open before.

2135 A lot has been done online. The process of going online is painful because you have to register. The system is imperfect, but we are getting there. I have had my own issues with going online and registering, and I do not mind saying so – the Hon. Minister for Digital Services had to hold my hand through the process of registration etc., but once you get there, that is it, you are registered. If you are of an age, you do not want to do that, you might not understand it. There are very few people now of an age who do not want to do that – because remember that 20 years ago, when somebody who was 60 retired they were probably already using email; that person is 80 now – but we have a place where they can be guided through these issues, and we will continue to support paper because, as the Hon. Minister has said, we are going to have a general counter not just for digital services but also for all paper services. So now there will be a counter that would deal with all matters that the Government deals with.

2145 And so, Mr Speaker, I think that this is the direction in which we have to continue. If the hon. Gentleman receives a complaint about a particular counter, please, he should get in touch with me because I am trying to understand where it is that the failing to the public is, so that we can put it right if it will not be put right by the general counter that we will open, which we think is the 2150 right way to resolve this problem. But he should note that we have a lot of counters in operation and some of them are open extended hours already, until five o'clock. That is why we are not thinking of extending to later. Some of them are on extended hours until seven o'clock at night, and obviously the RGP counter is open 24 hours a day.

2155 So it is difficult to see where the problem actually lies, but we are listening and we want to resolve the problem, if we can, in a way that makes sense as we go digital and make the investment into digital and see that bear some fruit.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, obviously I will look through the schedule, but it did strike me ... Just looking very quickly through the schedule, there are areas of public service engagement where it is not mentioned. Things like DLSS, for example: traditionally, you have been able to, I think, engage with DLSS. The Health Service is not there. I can see it on the list. I may have missed it, but I do not see the Health Authority there. I do not see the Tax Office. It may be that there needs to be a wider trawl of services, because clearly people engage with different aspects of the public service, not just the ones on that list, and it may be that the list that has been provided to the Members opposite does not actually cater for everything in all aspects – so worth looking at in perhaps a bit more detail.

2165 Secondly, can I just ask, in terms of his answer that there will be a general counter that helps you across the board on all services, he gave a long answer at the beginning, so he may have said it, but where would that be and when will it open?

2170 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, let me just take the last question first: on 15th June, in the building which is opposite Mackintosh Hall – which used to be Lloyds Bank, as people know it – which is presently being used to help people through the digital process. There are some building works to finalise, but we understand that that is on time and we will be able to provide that service from then, or thenabouts.

2175 I do not think that the Health or DLSS counters came into scope, in the sense that they were never closed, as I understand it; there was always different provision made. All that has happened there – in DLSS, for example – is that a counter became an appointment service and people are seen, but they are just not seen at the counter anymore, which in any event we were always told did not provide the privacy required when people arrived at the counter. DLSS payments continue to be made on a counter basis and we were only shut down for a very short time there, when we did the direct payments, as I understand it.

2180 I do not know whether the Tax is something that shut down and did not reopen, and I think we have approached this on the basis of things that shut down and did not reopen. I think that the relationship now with Tax is done in a different way; it is just not done on the basis of making people queue up. I think people are given an opportunity to register online etc.

2185 I am keen to see where it is that the hon. Gentleman thinks the problems are, so that we understand it as well, in case there is any lacuna after what we have said and the opening of the new facility and the online facility. But I would urge people to give the online facility a chance, even though the registration process is initially a difficult one. I found it extraordinarily difficult to register for online banking. It took me ages to do, and it was always an imperfect process for me. I left it two or three times halfway through because I could not find the sort code and I could not find the account number etc. When I finally did it, a whole new world appeared to open up for me in which now, with my phone and my thumb, I am able to buy the occasional chocolate bar – if I am allowed it by my dietician etc. I think that when you go through that process it works and it works well, and it makes everything easier going forward.

2190 Many years ago, I stopped using cheques to pay for stuff and I went on to direct debit – this was in the days before digital and all the rest of it. I have never missed a bill since, because I went on to direct debit, and that is what we are encouraging people to do. It has an extraordinarily positive effect also on debt to Government. When the hon. Lady was at Housing, for example, she managed that process for new tenants, so that new tenants went on to direct debits and elderly tenants were also assisted so that they went on to direct debits. Although I know that lots of people like to go out to the counter and all the rest of it, on rainy weeks having to go out to the counter was not exactly a pleasure and a lot of people welcomed the fact that they could go on to direct debit.

2205 So there are different ways of engaging with the Government, more modern ways of engaging with the Government. It is never going to be seamless, but we try our best to make it as seamless as possible and I would be very interested to hear and to co-operate with the hon. Gentleman if he identifies areas, as I said, of lacunae, gaps, between the service that we will provide from 15th June, the service we are starting to provide electronically and the service we continue to provide at counters.

Hon. K Azopardi: I detected from his answer that perhaps the answer provided to me has been drafted on the basis that I was asking about which Department had closed its counters. That is not what I asked, Mr Speaker. What, in fact, I asked was for the Government to provide a list of the Departments and public authorities that currently operate public counters for interaction with members of the public. If the Health Authority had not closed its counters but had continued to operate them, they should be on this list; so if, for whatever reason, the list has been prepared wrongly, on a different basis, then can I ask if perhaps he could ask whoever has prepared this list to do a wider trawl across Departments, and if that is the case then an updated schedule could perhaps be sent to me once it is ready?

2220
Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am happy to look at that. I think that 'not currently operate public counters' has been read, as previously did and no longer do. I do not know whether that is a helpful indication –

2225
Hon. K Azopardi: If the hon. Member gives way ... That is the second question. The first question says 'Can the Government provide a list of the Departments and public authorities and agencies that currently operate public counters ...?' The first question is 'give me the list of everybody who is operating a public counter'. That is clear. It does not ask whether it has been closed and has reopened. I can see the point that he is about to make on Question 204, but not on Question 203, I would say.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, I appreciate his point and I can see why on Question 204 the interpretation would have been correct, and why on Question 203 it is a request for a general trawl. The hon. Gentleman has said 'Departments and public authorities', and I do not know whether it has been interpreted as Departments, and public authorities has not been deemed to include the GHA – he will note I did not challenge that part of his first statement; (Interjection by Hon. K Azopardi) yes, indeed – or whether somebody has decided that a counter is not what we operate at the GHA because we do public interaction in the GHA but we may not formally do it at something that is a counter.

2240 I am quite happy to ask that this be checked, to ensure that the trawl has been as wide as the hon. Gentleman wished us to trawl and we can have greater clarity going forward if, when he sees the new list that I will send him, he considers it necessary.

2245 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

2250 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you, Mr Speaker, just one supplementary. Not too long ago, for the information of the Chief Minister, I was stopped down Main Street by a businessman who found it very frustrating that he could not get through to the Tax Office. He could not get a response by email, he could not get through on the telephone, he could not get any kind of interaction with them. Obviously that is not good for the Government because he may have to pay taxes or something else.

Hon. Chief Minister: [Inaudible] not take his call for everything?

2255 Hon. R M Clinton: Well, who knows? But of course the Government services are there to serve the public and there has to be an interaction.

I understand the desire to move towards e-Government, but in a specialist area such as tax, for example, I cannot quite see how a general counter would work. You would have to have it staffed by a Tax Office specialist who would have to have access to their records and everything else. That is purely an extension of the Tax Office. Why not just keep it at the Tax Office? Why spend the money to set up a branch of the Tax Office? Just send people to the Tax Office, which is where the information is.

2260 I think all I am trying to say is I would ask the Chief Minister to consider that when he is considering his wholesale reforms, at least phase them in and bear in mind that if you are going to withdraw one form of interaction you have to either allow time for it or make sure that if they are not going to be able to have face-to-face communication, the other lines of communication are retained open.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman because that is exactly the indication I was asking that we should get, so that we can try to understand where these complaints are coming from.

2270 I am surprised that the hon. Gentleman has referred us to the Tax Office, because I know the Tax Office does an excellent job of communicating with taxpayers. He just needs to look at the amounts that we have paid in rebates to see just how well we are communicating with taxpayers. Of course, if a taxpayer wants to get in touch with the Tax Office, it is for good reason and we are there to serve the public, not just in the Tax Office but in every Department, and we must be accessible to the public.

2280 Undoubtedly, everywhere around the world the COVID pandemic has made government more remote from the citizen, and as we go back we have to ensure that we go back to providing the service not just to the standard that we used to provide it to, but to a higher standard, which is what we think we can do with the introduction of electronic systems.

2285 We do not agree with him that the central counter becomes an outpost of every Department. In fact, in many instances many people attend counters simply to collect or deposit forms and you have, in many Departments, people staffing counters for the purposes simply of waiting for somebody to come to deposit a form, or ask for a form, or make a payment. In some instances, people come to a counter to, in effect, make an appointment with somebody who is not the person behind the counter but is the specialist who will deal with them in the Tax Office. In many instances, you will turn up, you will speak to somebody who is at the counter and you will then go inside to speak to the person who is the specialist in the field that handles your particular tax affair, and so it will be possible to have that initial interaction in the central area and then make the appointment to go to the Tax Office on the day you are going to be seen by the specialist, for example.

2290 There is a lot more that can be done in a central Government counter which is more efficient and not less efficient. The way that the hon. Gentleman has presented it, it would be less efficient to create a colonial outpost of each Government Department in a central Government Department for Government Departments – so that would be a new Department, which would be a Department of Departments, to put it in Yes Minister speak. That is not what we are seeking to pursue, and I would not dare to suggest that sitting next to the Minister for Efficiency, Mr Speaker. It is quite the opposite and I hope that after we have opened the counter of counters, we will be able to see an appreciable increase in the efficiency of the service, the availability of the service and the ability of the citizen to interact with the public sector in a way that is favourable for those who do not want or are not able to do so electronically or through the existing counters.

2300 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q205/2022
Child grooming case –
Update re further investigation

2305 Clerk: Question 205/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, what is the state of the further investigation being conducted into the child grooming case in respect of which a report was delivered to Government by Gillian Guzman QC; what issues are being considered and investigated, and by whom?

2310

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2315 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the investigation is led by the Office of the Chief Secretary. The investigation is considering, first of all, whether any changes should be carried out or conducted in respect of laws or practice in this subject-matter area as a result of the Guzman report and whether any Human Resources issues arise in respect thereof.

2320 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, as I understand it, the report was delivered some time ago, so was the further investigation commissioned immediately thereafter or more recently? If so, irrespective of the timing of when it was commissioned, does he have a ...? I assume he commissioned it. I am assuming that, but he will clarify whether it was somebody else who commissioned it. Did whoever commissioned it give the Chief Secretary an indication of when they would like to receive the report of that body?

2325 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I did not commission the investigation. I referred the Guzman report to the Chief Secretary because of the concerns it raised with me. The Chief Secretary himself had received a copy of the Guzman report – he is a former Director of Education – and he himself considered that it was necessary, as a result of the report and the things that the report told us, to do some further work with the benefit of the report on the basis of reviewing whether anything should now change as a result of Ms Guzman’s recommendations and whether any Human Resources consequences should arise. That is, therefore, his investigation under his remit being run by his office.

2330 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, has he decided that? Is he running the investigation or has he tasked other people to run with that investigation within his Department? Is it just people within his Department? Does it have external support of any type? Does he know who is doing it? I am not asking for names, but ...

2340 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as far as I am concerned, the Chief Secretary is running this, but I do not know whether the Chief Secretary is actually doing the running of this. This is his investigation or review, and he is the person who is deciding who should be doing any work that is required. I assume he will be doing some work with some of the hon. Lady’s Departments, some of Prof. Cortes’s Departments and with some of my Departments, in the sense that the Human Resources Department is also formerly my Department. But he is doing that, and it is being run entirely independently by him. His view and my view of the issues that the Guzman report raised were probably, in the same way as with him, exactly the same, and we both agreed that this needed to be now looked into in these respects because I think the Guzman report made clear what the next steps should be.

Q206/2022
PossAbilities –
Financial assistance from Government

Clerk: Question 206/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

2350

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, will the Government be financially assisting the charity PossAbilities in its project; and, if so, has it made an assessment of the likely financial or other assistance to this project?

2355

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, we are considering some financial assistance to PossAbilities to help them with refurbishing the old St Martin's School. This is a matter that we will touch upon as part of the Budget debate, given that all liabilities in respect of this will arise in this financial year.

Hon. K Azopardi: Is the Chief Minister willing to share the kind of projection, or is he saying read between the lines and wait for the Budget debate?

2365

Hon. Chief Minister: Read between the lines, Mr Speaker, and wait for the Budget debate. Because it is a liability arising in this financial year, it requires a debate, and formally I think the money cannot actually be deemed to be used for this purpose until the House has voted it, because it is money arising after 1st April.

2370

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, is this going to be a one-off financial assistance in terms of the refurbishment of St Martin's, or is this going to be recurring assistance in terms of the management of the project and so on – or is that going to then depend on, in effect, private sector or charity funding?

2375

Hon. Chief Minister: It will be a combination of all those, Mr Speaker, in the sense that we anticipate assisting the fantastic people who have set up PossAbilities, who have brilliant ideas to extend what they used to do already as Little Smiles and to provide a magnificent service going forward, which the hon. Lady has looked at in great detail and Prof. Cortes has looked at in great detail.

2380

They are an absolutely impressive bunch of people. Ironically, they are an impressive bunch of ladies. I do not say that to be discriminatory, but only because all of the people who have come to see me about this on every occasion have been ladies and they are really committed. They are really working and have been working for many years to have the credibility to put to the Government that we should support them. They have been working for many years providing services to end users who have benefited from what they do, whose parents have entrusted the people behind PossAbilities with their children. And so, given that we have nothing more precious than our children, when we entrust them to someone, those persons have really demonstrated their bona fides and their ability and their commitment.

2385

I do not want to anticipate the debate on the Budget, but the model that we have in mind here is very much the model that has worked so well in the context of Clubhouse. The problem is I think Emily Olivero every time I think of Clubhouse and I forget the name of the organisation, and Emily has now retired.

2390

The incredible work that is done by some people in Gibraltar, which sometimes we do not speak about often enough ... When it comes to mental health issues, when it comes to issues of childcare, like Childline, when it comes to issues of mental health also like GibSams and when it comes to issues like PossAbilities and assisting people with disabilities, governments can do things

2395

2400 but no government of any political hue or complexion can do things with a heart, because we end up doing things in a way that is institutional. It is impossible for us to do them in any other way, however much money we might throw at it, whatever disguise we may put upon it. But when you 2405 have people who are themselves touched by these issues, who are deeply personally committed to these issues and – and I emphasise this – have the track record of having delivered services to people who have entrusted them with their children and have demonstrated that they can discharge those functions for years, then the Government is able to say this is a worthy recipient of Government support, in combination with charitable moneys, in order to continue to provide 2410 that service in an enhanced way to the benefit of people in our community who require these services. Clubhouse is perhaps the most striking and successful example to date, alongside other examples such as Childline and GibSams, where the Government helps.

In the context of the Clubhouse proposal, hon. Members will know that Government seconded an individual who had an interest in this field, from a Government job to Clubhouse, and this is 2415 the same model that we are looking at here, seconding a Government individual – or an individual who is employed by the Government will now be involved in running that. Part of the Government's contribution is that person, because that person will no longer be discharging a function doing something else in Government, they will be doing that.

I have only praise for the way in which those who are behind PossAbilities have approached us, 2420 the way they have worked with us, the way they have answered lists of questions that are necessary to answer these days under MAPPAs rules and the safeguarding rules, the establishment of the whole principle. These are not things that can be done on the basis that they might have been done before, where you thought something was a good idea and you would just run with it.
You have to really go through vigorous processes, and we have. I very much look forward – if there 2425 is anything left to be said in the Budget debate – to saying so and seeking an appropriation from this House to support this magnificent group of people, which I hope people will all vote in favour of, because if they vote against it they will be voting against these magnificent people and the work that they do.

2425 Mr Speaker: We have two sets of questions from two separate Ministers.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker. If I may be of assistance, my throat is dry and you have been sitting there for three and a half hours hearing me a rabbit on. I wonder whether this might be a convenient moment for the House to at least take a 15-minute break and then return for 2430 other questions.

Mr Speaker: The House will recess for 15 minutes and return at 7.15.

The House recessed at 7.02 p.m. and resumed at 7.19 p.m.

ENVIRONMENT, SUSTAINABILITY, CLIMATE CHANGE AND EDUCATION

Q87/2022

St Mary's School – Agreement with developer

Clerk: We will now resume with Question 87/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

2435 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, has the Government signed the contract in respect of the future St Mary's School with the developers of that site; and, if so, what are the financial terms of the agreement and how long will the agreement run for?

Clerk: Answer, the Minister for the Environment and Education.

2445 The term of the agreement for underlease is not specified, as it continues only until the underlease itself is signed, albeit there are terms that have a continuing effect and continue for as long as is necessary to give effect to the provisions of the agreement for underlease. The underlease itself, which will replace the agreement for underlease, would be signed only once the property is completed and ready for occupation and all areas properly measured.

2450 The financial terms of the agreement for underlease remain the same as those laid before Parliament in the December 2019 session by the Hon. Gilbert Licudi in answers to questions from the Hon. Roy Clinton and are therefore already public.

2455 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, my recollection – hence the question – of that session in Parliament in December 2019 was that there was an aspect where the Minister of the time, the Hon. Mr Licudi ... I had an exchange with him where he indicated that there still had to be an agreement on the ... They had roughly agreed the price per square foot, but there had not been a final agreement of the financial terms. That is the reason for the question. There was an indication of possible terms but not final terms, and perhaps the hon. Member could update that.

2460 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I will refer the hon. Member to the answer to Question 245/2019, which actually does give a figure per square foot, and, unless it is a different question session, from my reading it now again, it does not refer to any uncertainty. So perhaps that was previous, but the answer to Question 245 seems, to me, to very clearly state how much it was.

2465 Hon. K Azopardi: I am trying to pull it up on my screen, but if the hon. Member has it in front of him, towards the end I think there was a discussion, an exchange with me, where the Minister at the time indicated that there were aspects that needed to be negotiated. If that is not the case in the current answer he has got in front of me, well then I will go back and reflect on the answer he has pointed me to, and if there are follow-up questions I will do it again at the next session.

2470 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am happy to entertain any queries, whether at the next session or between.

Conversion of supply teachers to permanent posts – Cost effect re future pension entitlement

2475 Clerk: Question 88/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm whether the recently announced decision to convert a number of supply teachers into permanent posts had any cost effect in terms of future pension entitlement?

2480 Clerk: Answer, the Minister for the Environment and Education.

2485 Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, supply teachers engaged on fixed-term contracts are eligible to subscribe to the contributory pension scheme. The only increase projected, therefore, relates to progression on the salary scale, for which supply workers are not eligible.

2490 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, may I get a clarification? I was under the impression that a supply teacher with a fixed-term ... if they are lucky enough and later become substantive in that position, there is a time period when they may opt – for example, if they have worked as supply for one or two years before – to make payment of the contributions that would have been payable then for their part of the pension and therefore that would equate to ... the Government, as the employer would also have to pay a contribution. Is that interpretation correct?

2495 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, that is not what I have said. The fixed-term contract supply teachers are eligible to subscribe already, as a result of that fixed-term contract, to the pension scheme.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q89 and Q154/2022
Cycling infrastructure –
Plans re new schools and Eastside project

2500 Clerk: Question 89/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, are there any plans for cycle lanes in the new schools?

Clerk: Answer, the Minister for the Environment and Education.

2505 Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 154.

Clerk: Question 154/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips on behalf of the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

2510 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, what provisions will there be in the new Eastside project to incorporate cycling infrastructure?

Clerk: Answer, the Minister for the Environment and Education.

2515 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the provision of cycle lanes in the area of the new schools being built on Europort Avenue and in the area of the Eastside project are being considered as part of the wider cycling infrastructure project for Gibraltar. Plans are being developed to provide these in these areas and others.

2520 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just in relation to the schools, was there no consideration given to the potential for the use of cycle lanes during the period of time when the schools were envisaged? I would have thought that, given the commitment contained in manifestos by the Government, that might have been a bit more of a priority rather than looking at the scoping beyond that, as they seem to be doing now.

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as I have said, the school project team is discussing ... I did not say who it was discussing with, but it is discussing with the Traffic and Transport department the incorporation of cycle lanes around the schools.

2530 Clearly I mentioned the one in Europa Avenue because at the new secondary school at Town Range there is not the space, but in Europort the discussions are now around how we can align it in such a way considering the changes that are also going to happen in Europort Avenue. In fact, I had discussions only last week with the Hon. Paul Balban about the matter.

Jewish Home –

Privatisation;

Social Insurance study credits –

Policy re awarding;

Public finances and borrowings –

Updated figures;

Economic Development and Employment Company Ltd –

Subsidiaries and legal entities where shares held

Clerk: Question 155/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise if the Jewish old people's home has been privatised; and, if so, to whom was the contract awarded and on what date?

2540

Clerk: Answer, the Minister for Social Security, Economic Development and Enterprise.

Minister for Social Security, Economic Development, Enterprise, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. Sir J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 156 to 161.

Clerk: Question 156/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise what is its policy in respect of the claim and award of Social Insurance study credits?

Clerk: Question 157/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide the total gross debt, aggregate debt after application of the Sinking Fund to gross debt, cash reserves and net debt figures for public debt for the following dates: 1st September 2021, 1st October 2021, 1st November 2021, 1st December 2021, 1st January 2022, 1st February 2022, 1st March 2022 and 1st April 2022?

Clerk: Question 158/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the balance on the General Sinking Fund on the following dates: 1st September 2021, 1st October 2021, 1st November 2021, 1st December 2021, 1st January 2022, 1st February 2022, 1st March 2022 and 1st April 2022?

Clerk: Question 159/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

2550

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a list of subsidiaries and legal entities in which Economic Development and Employment Company Ltd owns shares?

Clerk: Question 160/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a breakdown of its gross direct borrowing as at 31st March 2022 listing all debentures issued and banks borrowed from?

Clerk: Question 161/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the total and a detailed breakdown of external gross borrowing of all Government or Gibraltar Development Corporation owned companies, with the exception of the Gibraltar International Bank, as at 31st March 2022?

Clerk: Answer, the Minister for Social Security, Economic Development and Enterprise.

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the Jewish Home has not been privatised.

The policy inherited from the previous administration is as follows. The Income Tax Office receives applications and awards study credits to students on the basis of documentary evidence being provided as to the period and place of study for which the credits are being sought. The underlying requirement for eligibility is that the applicant must be in insurable employment as defined in the Social Security (Employment Injuries Insurance) Act. The credits are applied for the weeks during the whole of the duration which the applicant is undergoing the study.

The gross debt estimate for September 2021 to January 2022 was £747.7 million. For February and March 2022 it was £727.7 million.

The aggregate debt was: September 2021 to January 2022, £727.7 million, and February and Mar 2022, £752.7 million.

The estimated cash reserves have been as follows: September 2021, £33 million; October 2021, £31.8 million; November 2021, £44.1 million; December 2021, £29.1 million; January 2022, £19.5 million; February 2022, £33.7 million; and March 2022, £32.7 million.

The net debt has been as follows: September 2021, £694.7 million; October 2021, £695.9 million; November 2021, £683.6 million; December 2021, £698.6 million; January 2022, £708.2 million; February 2022, £719 million; and March 2022, £720 million.

The requested figures for April 2022 are in the draft Estimate Book, which the hon. Member already has.

The balance on the General Sinking Fund until March 2022 was the same as previously stated for April. With effect from 1st April 2022, the balance is £25.4 million.

Economic Development and Employment Company owns shares in the following: Construction Training Company Ltd, Employment Training Company Ltd, Graduate Research and Development Company, Skills Enhancement Training Company Ltd, Supported Employment Company Ltd, Gibraltar General Construction Company Ltd, Gibraltar National Exploration Minerals, Gas and Oil Company, RMB Investments Company Ltd and Zero Carbon Footprint Company Ltd.

The breakdown of gross direct borrowing as at 31st March 2022 was: debentures issued September 2014, £147.7 million; debentures issued October 2014, £100 million; debentures issued October 2019, £75 million; and debentures issued June 2020, £50 million.

2595

The banks borrowing are Gibraltar International Bank, £150 million; and NatWest International, £275 million.

The borrowing of all the companies was £383.29 million, of which £300 million was by Gibraltar Capital Assets in respect of the housing estates, which the hon. Member already knows. The 2600 balance of the others was ES Ltd, £52.8 million; Gibraltar Bus Company Ltd, £53,000; GCP Investments Ltd, £9.32 million; and Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd, £21.44 million.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I beg your indulgence as I go through.

2605 Just a very simple question. I think I may have misheard the Hon. Minister on the gross debt level at 1st February 2022. If he could just give me that number again, I would be grateful.

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: It was the same for February and March: £747.7 million.

2610 Hon. R M Clinton: If the Minister could check he gave me the aggregate debt, i.e. after Sinking Fund of £752.7 million? Does he recognise that number? And if the Sinking Fund was £20 million, would the gross debt be £772.7 million?

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: A mathematical error. I would have to go back and check. I am giving him the numbers that have been provided to me by the Treasury.

Hon. R M Clinton: I am grateful to the Minister.

2620 Mr Speaker, I am not going to ask much in the way of supplementaries in terms of the answers he has given to me on the financial information – I will digest that later – but I would ask him about his answer to my Question 156 on the claim of Social Insurance study credit. As he knows, we have corresponded on one particular case, but the issue is this: according to the Social Insurance (Contributions) Regulations section 14B(1):

A student shall not be liable to pay contributions under the Act as an insured person in respect of any week in which he is a student including any periods of vacation.

There is a case that has come to my attention and I passed it along to Sir Joe, where one person was refused study credits. I will quote from the letter this person was sent. It says:

In order for these credits to be awarded, a person should have been registered for Social Insurance purposes before starting studies in the UK.

2625 This creates a perverse situation, where if you have a summer job at the age of 15 selling sweets and your colleague beside you does not, you can then claim study credits later, whereas if he has not had a summer job he cannot, if he has not registered for a job in Gibraltar. I am not sure that was the intention of the Act. I am just wondering whether the Minister has been able to come to a determination as to what is the application of the Act. Otherwise, the Government should be advising all students who go away to study to ensure that they are preregistered for employment. Otherwise, there will be this kind of – I do not want to use the word 'discrimination' – unequal effect of the application of this provision in the Act, where you can have one individual who may have spent one hour selling sweets during the summer and will get four years' worth of study credits, and his colleague who has not and gets nothing. I was wondering if the Minister had come to a determination on that.

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the question is what is our policy on this, and I have pointed out that we have not introduced any new policy, it has always been like that. It might even have been like that when I was in government in 1996 for all I know, so I am surprised that there should be a loophole of that magnitude and in the 50 years that I have been here nobody has raised it until now.

All I can tell him is that I am providing the explanation that the Tax Office has provided me with, and it appears that it has always been the case that you cannot get credit if you are not in the insurance schemes before you ask for the credit. I can see that there is some logic in that. If you are not insured in Gibraltar under the Social Insurance Scheme, then you are not a member 2645 of the scheme. Presumably the reason why you have to have paid at least one contribution beforehand is to be in the scheme in order to be able to apply for the credit, because if you have never been in the scheme then there may not be a way of making the application, I imagine.

I think, as a result of this exchange, I will ask the Tax Office to take a look at this and see if there is a loophole where people are being unfairly left out of this opportunity, and look at the possibility of amending if it is possible. It may be that if we remove that criterion of being a member first, we will open it to many other categories of people than the one it is intended to help. I think we would need to have technical advice from the people in the Tax Office on that.

Hon. R M Clinton: I am grateful to the Minister and I do appreciate his assistance on this.

2655 Mr Speaker, just one other supplementary. In terms of the Jewish old people's home ... The reason I raise the question is because Unite, in a public statement, suggested that some form of privatisation had occurred at the Jewish old people's home. Is it perhaps not that the entire service has been privatised but perhaps elements of it? If the Minister would care to perhaps clarify.

2660 Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, nothing is being privatised. The position is that there are currently eight senior citizens who are resident in the John Mackintosh Home who will be moving to the refurbished former Jewish Home, which was closed some eight years ago, but the eight beds left vacant will continue to be in the John Mackintosh Home in the public sector. This is not beds being taken from the public to the private; this is people moving from the public to the private and the beds in the public remaining at the same level. So it is not a conversion of existing facilities into the private, which privatization. This is creating a private facility which will have additional beds, and the beds that are being vacated will then be filled by people who are on the waiting list to enter into the Elderly Residential Service.

2670 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, if I understand the Minister correctly, then effectively it is a return to the status quo in terms of what happened in the past, when the provision of services in the old people's Jewish Home was effectively private. That is effectively what he is telling us?

2675 Hon. Sir J J Bossano: The refurbished home that was closed eight years ago will hopefully be ready by the end of this month and then it will be taken over by the Jewish community and they will run it. The beds that are there are going to be lost, so the number of beds in the ERS will not diminish, but there will be vacant beds and eight people who are on the waiting list will be accommodated in what is vacated in the Mackintosh Home.

2680 Hon. R M Clinton: I am grateful to the Minister for that clarification. Just one final one on this. The facility has been refurbished. The cost of that was borne by whom?

2685 Hon. Sir J J Bossano: This is one of the projects that is included in the National Economic Plan and is being financed by private capital, by the same entities that are doing all the other works in the National Economic Plan. Eventually, of course, the Government will be paying for the people in the home, and that will provide a return for the person who has invested in the home.

2690 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, the National Economic Plan ... Am I correct, because I did see signs up for GBIC on the building, that this is the entity that has effectively undertaken the investment? That is the joint venture entity, if I recall.

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: The joint venture is the contractor who has done the refurbishment.

2695 Hon. R M Clinton: So the investing entity is this Community Supplies and ...? I forget the last word.

2700 Hon. K Azopardi: A very net question. The Minister gave a long list of entities that were owned by the Economic Development and Employment Company Ltd, one of which was ... I cannot remember exactly the name – Oil Exploration, or something like that. What does that company do?

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Gibraltar Economic Development and Employment is responsible both for training people and for guiding economic development through ventures that are set up.

2705 There are three companies here which are not trading and never started trading because proposals were put to us for doing things, for which we created a vehicle, but then the proposed project did not materialise. Therefore, the companies are still owned but have never actually started trading because the proposals that were put to us were never fulfilled.

2710 Given that my job is to get economic development going with minimal delay, when somebody comes along and says they want to do something with the Government in a certain area, what I do is create the vehicle to do it with £1,000 nominal capital, and then if it happens, it happens, and if it does not happen, the company is still there but it has never actually been able to carry out the investment that was intended.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q162-65/2022

Disability Benefit –

Applications and appeals against refusal and number not yet determined; reform of system

2715 Clerk: Question 162/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please look at Questions 9 and 10/2021? How many applications for disability benefit and appeals against refusal have there been since 20th April for the former and 3rd March for the latter, setting out the date when each application or appeal was made, i.e. – just to make it clear – by the applicant/appellant?

Clerk: Answer, the Minister for Social Security, Economic Development and Enterprise.

2725 Minister for Social Security, Economic Development, Enterprise, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. Sir J J Bossano): I will answer this question with Questions 163 to 165, Mr Speaker.

Clerk: Question 163/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

2730 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please look at Questions 9 and 10/2021? How many of the applications and appeals referred to in the answers to those questions remain to be determined?

Clerk: Question 164/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

2735 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, when is the Government going to reform the Disability Benefit system?

Clerk: Question 165/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

2740 Hon. D A Feetham: Of the applications for Disability Benefit and appeals against refusal made since 20th April 2021 for applications, and 3rd March 2021 for appeals, how many (a) remain to be determined and (b) have been determined?

2745

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, 97 applications have been received since 20th April 2021 as follows: 21/04/2021, 23/04/2021, 26/04/2021, 07/05/2021, 10/05/2021, 18/05/2021, 18/05/2021, 20/05/2021, 24/05/2021, 25/05/2021, 25/05/2021, 25/05/2021, 01/06/2021, 04/06/2021, 07/06/2021, 11/06/2021, 21/06/2021, 24/06/2021, 29/06/2021, 02/07/2021, 05/07/2021, 13/07/2021, 30/07/2021, 21/07/2021, 03/08/2021, 03/08/2021, 09/08/2021, 13/08/2021, 13/08/2021, 13/08/2021, 23/08/2021, 26/08/2021, 23/08/2021, 02/09/2021, 03/09/2021, 06/09/2021, 15/09/2021, 21/09/2021, 09/09/2021, 13/09/2021, 24/09/2021, 30/09/2021, 29/09/2021, 08/12/2021, 11/10/2021, 13/10/2021, 13/10/2021, 21/10/2021, 27/10/2021, 27/10/2021, 01/11/2021, 04/11/2021, 10/11/2021, 12/11/2021, 10/11/2021, 15/11/2021, 17/11/2021, 22/11/2021, 26/11/2021, 01/12/2021, 29/11/2021, 03/12/2021, 08/12/2021, 09/12/2021, 08/12/2021, 13/10/2021, 21/12/2021 – that is 67, so far, (Interjection and laughter) so you have 67 in 2021 (Interjection) – 06/01/2022, 07/01/2022, 11/01/2022, 07/02/2022, 02/02/2022, 15/02/2022, 18/02/2022, 01/03/2022, 01/03/2022, 08/03/2022, 07/03/2022, 07/03/2022, 24/01/2022, 15/03/2022, 23/03/2022, 23/03/2022, 21/03/2022, 04/03/2022, 05/04/2022, 04/02/2022, 28/03/2022, 28/03/2022, 20/04/2022, 25/04/2022, 28/02/2022, 28/02/2022, 12/04/2022, 03/05/2022, 04/05/2022 and 06/05/2022. That is the 97.

2750

2760

Eight appeals against refusal have been received since 3rd March 2021, as follows: 15/06/2021, 01/09/2021, 14/10/2021, 24/11/2021, 09/12/2021, 09/12/2021, 12/12/2021 and 18/02/2022.

2765

Twenty-two applications remain to be determined. Six appeals of the eight remain to be determined.

Any reform of the Disability Benefit system will take place when it is ready to be implemented.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, has he answered Question 165? I do not think he has.

2770

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Ninety-seven applications have been made since 20th April 2021, of which 16 have been determined and 82 remain to be determined. Eight appeals against refusal have been made since 3rd March 2021, of which all eight remain to be determined.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

As the Minister for Efficiency, I do wish that he would introduce greater efficiency in the way that he answers the questions, perhaps providing us with a schedule rather than the way he has answered it, but of course that is a matter for the Minister.

I take it from the answer he has provided, which is essentially ‘we will make an announcement when we are ready’, that the Government is committed to reforming the Disability Benefit system.

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the Government is committed to considering a number of issues and then will decide whether the answer, having considered the issue, is in one direction or another.

2785

What is obvious from these numbers is that there has been a very substantial rate of growth in the number of people in Gibraltar who become disabled and require help because of their disabilities. It is an extraordinary rate of growth with the present system and I think one needs to look at what we have to do to help more those who need it and whether, in fact, the system is actually being successful in giving the money to those who need it and may be giving money to those who do not need it. Otherwise, something very serious is happening which we need to be conscious of and need to be active about if there is a ...

2795 We are now talking about a hundred extra people claiming disability every year. That is a huge number compared to what it was. This has resulted in the cost, without any reforms, going up from £5 million to £20 million – 400%. By comparison, the Care Agency, which provides wider cover for people with disabilities on a bigger scale, has gone up by 128% as opposed to 400% in this area. This is certainly something that requires study in depth, in my view.

Hon. D A Feetham: So is he suggesting that the direction of travel in any intended reform is to narrow the availability of Disability Benefit rather than widening it or leaving it as it is?

2800 Hon. Sir J J Bossano: I am not suggesting anything other than my concern that there should be a 400% increase – the biggest increase in the entire Estimates Book – on something that appears to still be failing.

2805 If the argument is that we are not doing enough or helping enough and we have had a 400% increase since he was in government, it must have been disastrous then if this is really the situation.

I think there has to be a real study. We have had a situation in children with health and educational needs of a similar nature. The numbers there were in 2011 ... and the numbers now ... The difference is astronomical. It is not something that you can say is happening because of an increase in population. There is no visible explanation. If the figures are accurate in reflecting something that is happening, then it is something that is of great concern and we need to listen how it is happening and why it is happening. And if it is that we are measuring things in a way that is not realistic and the criteria are not in fact working as they should, then it is something that we need to discover.

2815 But in my view, what this reflects, having also been involved during the Budget estimates in looking at the need we have for special needs assistants, for which the numbers are in the Book and Members can see the huge increase there has been in that area ... It is something that I think ... Whatever we thought was going to be done two years ago, I am looking at this perhaps from a different perspective of saying, 'Look, we cannot just say there are more people and we give money to more people and that is it.' Why are we experiencing this level of need now, which was not there 10 years ago?

2825 Hon. D A Feetham: I can postulate a reason as to why there are more applicants and more successful applicants now than perhaps that were in the past, and that is because (Hon. K Azopardi: More cases.) Well, my learned friend to the right says more cases, but actually I think it is to do with the fact that there is a recognition in society today that you may be disabled in circumstances where perhaps 10, 15 or 20 years ago there was not that recognition. That is the reality. There is more awareness of disability today and what constitutes a disability today than there may have been in the past. That is the reason for this.

2830 Does he not agree with me that the root of the problem ...? I have made this point in this House in debates and, I think, in exchanges across the floor of the House in the past. The root issue is actually getting to grips with the definition of disability for the purposes of this benefit, and there is great uncertainty ... Well, first of all, I would ask that question and perhaps I can ... Otherwise, it will become a little bit unwieldy.

2835 Hon. Sir J J Bossano: The answer is that the system was changed a few years ago. Before, it was based on identifying medical conditions that were considered to be inevitably leading to people having a disability in leading a normal life because the medical condition created that situation. Therefore, if you had one of a list of medical conditions you were entitled, and if you did not have one you were not entitled. That was changed to a concept which is how you manage yourself, so it seems, from what I can see from having looked at it with fresh eyes, that you can have two people with the same condition, one of whom is better at coping with the condition and they do not get anything, and the other does not even try and he gets it.

I think that the way of assessing this may be part of the explanation for the otherwise quite worrying increase in numbers and cost, and therefore it may be that we need perhaps a better way of assessing it and then provide the money to those who really need it, whereas we may be giving money based on a criterion which has such a wide range that there are people who are in serious trouble and cannot cope and people who really do not need it and get it. It would not be unusual, because it happens in a lot of things that Government does. You try to draw a line and sometimes you find that you are not doing enough for the people who really need it and you are doing things for people who do not need it. There is more than one example of that.

I think that in looking at the criteria we need to see exactly what it is by looking at how it used to be before the change and how it is now, and maybe look at demographics. Are we talking about more young children coming along with problems – and then it is something we need to be concerned about – or are we talking about some things that people say ... You could argue that everybody who has a stroke, subsequent to the stroke is less capable of looking after themselves than they were before the stroke. That is obvious. So do we say everybody in Gibraltar who has a stroke will now have a disability and we will give them ...? If that is how it is happening, then that could explain how there is no criteria as to if somebody is totally incapacitated or somebody is not able to write with his left hand because his right hand is [inaudible] by the stroke. There are people who lead full and normal lives and it is the shift that has been the focus of the thing, where you know they have a medical condition but you look at how well the person is coping. It seems that the person who makes the effort and copes and cannot produce evidence that he cannot cope is put at a disadvantage from the way the description of the criteria is drafted.

I think since we are going to be continuing standing. There are a number of papers that have already been written and which I have gone through, but they do not point in one direction. They just say when it is this issue you can do this or you can do the other. So it seems to me that the way it has been approached is not sufficiently thorough and more needs to be done so that we can come up with something that we are comfortable is actually going to deal with the nature and the content of what is creating the need that is now not being addressed.

Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman is ... Though I am concerned about his motivation, which is pretty transparent – he basically says we have to be very careful about this because it will become unaffordable – of course my concern is that what we do not do is cut down to the detriment of people who genuinely need Disability Benefit.

But the hon. Gentleman is right that it is a question of not only getting the definition of disability right, which is the question that I put to the hon. Gentleman, it is also about the impact of that disability on that person, and in fact that has been the criterion upon which these sorts of applications have been determined, because the test, according to correspondence that I have seen with the many people who come to me about this particular issue, is ‘does your disability affect you in your everyday life?’ – in other words, has a severe impact on your everyday life. That has really been the test, although I have to say that I have also seen some boards that have introduced things such as whether that person could work, and if the person could work the disability was being refused. For example, in England it does not really matter if you are a stockbroker – you may be rich, but you may qualify for Disability Benefit – it is about the condition and potentially the impact of that condition on your life, not on the means of the person.

Does he not agree that at the very least what needs to happen is that people should be left in no doubt at all what the criterion is? In other words, it should be transparent, it should be published, there should be guidelines so that people can look at those guidelines, can look at the test and can say, ‘I qualify’ or ‘I do not qualify’? At the moment let me tell you that that is part of the problem, because the concern of people is that they do not know on what basis perhaps somebody gets it but they do not get it, because they appear to have the same conditions as somebody else. Does he not agree that that must form part of the Government’s review in this area?

2895 Hon. Sir J J Bossano: We know what he is saying because he said it before and he also put before the stockbroker example. I certainly would not be in favour of giving it to stockbrokers – for the avoidance of doubt.

I am not willing to commit myself until I get to grips with this. I can tell him that I am not in favour of putting this on a statutory level – I will be clear about that – and I am willing to explain to him outside why not, and then maybe he will understand.

2905 Hon. D A Feetham: I am grateful for that offer and of course I will take the hon. Gentleman up on it. It does not need to be statutory, but at the very least there has to be publication of guidelines, very clear criteria so that people know whether they qualify or they do not qualify. Does he agree that at the very least that needs to happen?

2910 Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I am not going to commit to agreeing to anything until we have gone through the process. I will bear in mind the importance he attaches to this, but I am not going to say yes, we are going to do this, until we have done the work that I think needs to be done.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q166/2022
DSS building at Governor's Parade –
Intentions re future use and reason for recent closure

Clerk: Question 166/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

2915 Hon. D J Bossino: Please state what the intentions are with regard to the Department of Social Security building at Governor's Parade?

Clerk: Answer, the Minister for Social Security, Economic Development and Enterprise.

2920 Minister for Social Security, Economic Development, Enterprise, Telecommunications and the GSB (Hon. Sir J J Bossano): I will answer this question with Question 167.

Clerk: Question 167/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham on behalf of the Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon.

2925 Hon. D A Feetham: Far less glamorous, I have to say! Why has the DSS building –? (Interjection by Hon. K Azopardi) I am glad that you disagree! (Laughter and interjection)

Why has the DSS building been closed and staff relocated only in the last month, when the building has been known to be unsafe for the last three years?

2930 Clerk: Answer, the Minister for Social Security, Economic Development and Enterprise.

Hon. Sir J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, as regards the future use of the building, no decision has been taken. It is likely that an assessment will be made of how much it would cost to make repairs and improvements. Possibly an invitation for an expression of interest would be issued for its redevelopment, so as to make the decision as to which option produces better value for money.

I am informed that the DSS building has not been unsafe for three years. The electrical infrastructure at the former DSS premises at Governor's Parade was advised as unsafe by the Gibraltar Electrical Authority in January 2022. The staff have been continuing to work from multiple locations since then, including the Royal Gibraltar Post Office and EDEC premises at New 2940 Harbours. Government has committed to the full relocation of the Department on 20th June 2022 – next month.

2945 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, as far as my question is concerned, I understand that, from what he is telling us, it is very much at the preliminary stage in terms of the decision-making process, but can he commit to just one aspect of the building, given its obvious intrinsic heritage value? I think it is actually quite a beautiful building from my point of view. Can he commit that that aspect will not be in any way impacted or affected, because I think – it depends what is built there – it would have an effect on the surrounding area as well. So could I have that commitment from him just in respect of the heritage aspect?

2950 Hon. Sir J J Bossano: I think those are issues that would arise if there was a proposal that the Government considered was worth supporting, and then it would have to go through the whole heritage and planning and everything else. In a building of this age and character, all those things would have to be taken into account anyway before anybody was given permission to do it.

2955 There has been interest from people before we were in a situation of having to take this decision, because of its central location, but now that we are in a position where we either have to spend money on it or see how much we can be [inaudible] that building because somebody wants to come in and use it, it is an opportunity to test the market and then we might decide that we do not want it used for anything else and then have to spend the money to make it fit for purpose.

2960 I think it is not something that is going to happen in the near future. There has to be a fairly long process before we get to that stage, and when that stage comes I have no doubt that the heritage and the architectural value of the thing will prevent anything being done. Nobody is going to come in and knock it down, as far as I can see. (Interjection and laughter)

2965 Hon. D A Feetham: Don't be sexist!

Mr Speaker, I am going to read to the hon. Gentleman passages of the GGCA press release in relation to this, and then I am going to ask a supplementary question.

The GGCA has said this, and I quote:

the building was severely deteriorated due to water penetration. This resulted in the collapse of the ceiling in the vault area in 2019, the floor of which has been supported by scaffolding since that date. Luckily, no one was in the vault room when the ceiling collapsed, so nobody was injured.

2970 They also say:

the staff would have to use their umbrellas when going to the bathroom ... fuses in the building would blow on a regular basis, resulting in light shortages and fear of electrical shortages and electrocution.

Does the Government feel a sense of shame that there have been civil servants working since 2019 in those conditions?

2975 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I was conducting the negotiations with the GGCA in respect to those matters, and the leadership of the GGCA – when they came and told us that, at the same time as they issued the statement – said, 'We cannot believe that the staff of this Department have not told us before that they were working in these conditions, otherwise we would have brought it to you earlier so that you could have acted earlier.'

2980 The staff of the GGCA at the DSS are, I can only say, a magnificent bunch of people because they have been jovial in dealing with the problems that they have had. They have not raised the alarm until the last minute with their union, so that the union raised it with us even later. Of course we knew that there was a need for a relocation. We had committed ourselves to a relocation, but we did not appreciate that matters had got to that extent and neither had their own union when they brought it to us.

2985 I can only, once again, thank the members of staff of the DSS because they have been absolutely magnificent in the way that they have continued stoically to provide the service to the public. Recently, they were frustrated, as much as we were frustrated, by our inability to move them, finally, when we wanted to. We had a serious logistical issue –

2990 I know that they are laughing, Mr Speaker, because they laugh at everything. They do not really care about the staff of the DSS, and if only people could see their faces now when I am explaining these issues ...

3000 We continue to work with them, Mr Speaker. We were able to give them the satisfaction that there was a final date on which they would move. They really are the best of us, and I will not stand up and express anything other than huge pride in the public servants that Gibraltar has, in particular the public servants we have in the DSS. I was going to have a meeting with them. On a number of occasions I have had to cancel because of the treaty negotiations. I had a date in the diary when I was able to go, and then five of them caught COVID and it was advised that we should not all meet for that reason. But they really are the absolute best of us, and it ill behoves anyone to try to play politics with them, as the hon. Gentleman is.

Hon. D A Feetham: Perhaps he might wish – and I invite him – to apologise to the staff for having worked under these conditions for such a lengthy period of time.

3005 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, the thing that he does not know, in trying to dramatically get up to draw me to an apology and then be able – as he has already in relation to the WOPS issue – to post on Facebook about how high-handed the Government is in giving him an answer which sets out an explanation for the things he failed to understand and the questions that he asks ...

3010 I am not going to do anything that the hon. Gentleman invites me to do, because I know that every chalice he hands me is laced with hemlock. I am going to, instead, continue my direct communication with the excellent people, the men and women who work in the DSS Department. I look forward to being able to see them face to face when that part of their cohort have recovered from COVID.

3015 They were incredibly well led in the period of the pandemic by a senior executive officer who has demonstrated a maturity beyond his years and an ability to represent Gibraltar in the negotiations on matters related to the sensitive area of Social Security, which has won plaudits even from the Minister for Economic Development, who is ... Getting plaudits from the Minister for Economic Development is like getting blood out of a stone. I have never had one and I have won three elections! The SEO in question has done an incredible job because the Minister for Economic Development and the DSS has been fulsome in his praise, as has the Attorney General.

3020 Mr Speaker, this is a magnificent bunch of people. Let's leave them out of politics. It is not elegant for us to play games with people, as the hon. Gentleman is trying to do. (Interjection)

Procedural –
Questions for Minister Balban to be answered in writing or orally at the next session of the House

Mr Speaker: With that, we end the question-and-answer session for the moment.
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to table the answers to Written Questions –

Mr Speaker: May I interject here? What is happening to Minister Balban's ...?

3030 Hon. Chief Minister: Sorry, Mr Speaker, you are absolutely right. Minister Balban is not in Gibraltar because of a family emergency – I think hon. Members are aware – and therefore his questions can either be answered in writing, if they wish, or they can be set aside to be answered orally at the next session of the House, if they prefer. The last time we had this, I think the Rules said that they have five days – I think five days, it may be longer – to tell us whether they want 3035 them in writing or orally.

Hon. E J Phillips: I am grateful. We will reflect on that suggestion and within the five days we will communicate that to the Speaker.

3040 Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I had completely forgotten that we had to put that option to hon. Members.

I should say that I am sure the whole House will join me in wishing all the best to the Balban family at this difficult time and wishing all of the members of the family a speedy return to Gibraltar with all of them healthy to be able to return to us.

3045 Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Questions for Written Answer

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, it is now my honour to table the answers to Written Questions W1/2022 to W8/2022.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you.

Mr Speaker, I move that the House should now adjourn until next Tuesday, 24th May at three in the afternoon, when we will move on to other matters on the Order Paper.

3055 Mr Speaker: I now propose a question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Tuesday, 24th May at 3 p.m.

I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn until Tuesday, 24th May at 3 p.m. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Passed.

This House will now adjourn to Tuesday, 24th May at 3 p.m.

Procedural – Proposal to adjourn to Wednesday, 25th May 2022

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Tuesday, 24th May 2022. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as I have informed all hon. Members, this 5 afternoon we are going to see a continuation of the ongoing discussions that the Deputy Chief Minister and I are involved in, which will require that we be involved virtually from No. 6 Convent Place. Therefore, we will not be able to continue, this afternoon, with the business of the House.
The Deputy Chief Minister, I know, has been in touch with the Leader of the Opposition and that we have a quorum, so that we can adjourn until tomorrow at 3.30 in the afternoon.

Q179/2022

GJBS –

Supplementary information – Mr Charles Savignon appointment as managing director

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, before I adjourn, I should just inform the House that in relation to Question 179/2022, which related to Gibraltar Joinery and Building Services Ltd, I had told the House, in answer to that question, that there was an ongoing recruitment process for a new managing director. That matter has been resolved in the past 24 hours and I am very 15 pleased to inform the House that Charles Savignon has been appointed the new managing director of GJBS. No doubt he will enjoy the best wishes of all Members of the House for the work he will do as managing director of that company.

I now move, Mr Speaker, that the House should adjourn until tomorrow at 3.30 in the 20 afternoon.

Mr Speaker: I now propose a question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Wednesday, 25th May at 3.30.

I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Wednesday, 25th May at 3.30. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Passed.

25 The House will now adjourn to Wednesday, 25th May at 3.30.

The House adjourned at 3.16 p.m.

Standing Order 7(1) suspended to proceed with Government Statement

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Wednesday, 25th May 2022.
Suspension of Standing Orders. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

5 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move, under Standing Order 7(3), to suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with a Government Statement.

Mr Speaker: Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Gibdock lease – Statement by the Chief Minister

10 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government has agreed to the grant of a new lease over the Gibdock dockyard premises. The new lease has been granted to Balaena Propco Ltd, part of the Balaena Ltd group of companies who have today announced their acquisition of Gibdock. The Balaena group is an offshore utilities business based out of the United Kingdom. The ultimate beneficial owner of these companies is Simon Gillett, a British, UK-based entrepreneur. Mr Speaker, I recognise Mr Gillett in the Gallery today.

15 Change of control protections are included in the new lease, which were not provided for in the old lease.

The new lease terms meet three of the GSLP/Liberal 2019 manifesto commitments. These commitments were to, first, renegotiate the lease so that the dockyard is operated in a manner that does not pose a health risk to the surrounding areas – this is now specifically provided for in the lease as a key performance indicator; second, that the Government is able to ensure that the shipyard is operated in full and proper compliance with the highest environmental standards – this is now also provided for by the inclusion of another key performance indicator requiring adherence to three defined ISO certificates and the application of relevant Gibraltar law on pollution and environmental protection, and additionally there is a KPI commitment to best industry practice and the introduction of best available technology; and thirdly, there is a transition in the lease to shore power, also known as cold ironing, and this will have to be provided, under the lease obligations, within three years.

25 The new lease follows months of collaborative discussions between Balaena and the Government. I want to thank the Financial Secretary, Albert Mena, for his work on this, as well as 30 John Paul Fa alongside him with the support of Land Property Services throughout, our land property agents.

In addition to our manifesto commitments, there are also various other Government objectives that have been hardwired into the new lease, representing a significant improvement over the previous lease. In this respect, the lease now includes environmental, operational and financial key performance indicators, some of which are entirely new and some of which have been carried over and updated from the previous lease, such as the minimum number of resident employees required.

Residents of the area will particularly be very pleased to hear that any noisy works will no longer be allowed outside the hours of 8 p.m. to 8 a.m. Under the current lease, works can continue throughout with no specific reference to noise being curtailed. Works outside of those hours will now only be permitted on the basis of an extenuating works licence, which will only be granted for works for Royal Navy vessels or for works which the Government accepts are urgent. Noise will therefore become an unwelcome exception rather than a constant, unwelcome norm.

There are also various other lease terms that are sensitive to Balaena's growth plans, with the Government keen to give Balaena the greatest possible prospect of success for its new business venture in Gibraltar.

The Government has also felt that it was important, at this challenging time in our political and economic development as a result of Brexit, to keep the dockyard operational as a shipyard and provide a continued element of diversification to Gibraltar's economy at this time. We considered this issue with the benefit of the advice of the Minister for Economic Development, whose relationship with the dockyard goes back at least half a century – which I think is a fair portion of the period in which the dockyard has existed – the same half-century he has been an elected representative of the people of Gibraltar, some part of which he has also spent as a trade union leader, spending many days and hours in the dockyard as a result. In this respect, we will all be happy to hear also that the lease now beds in the continuation of an apprenticeship scheme going forward.

As a result of these arrangements, the Government will immediately start to work closely with Balaena to also explore the feasibility of constructing an access lane through the shipyard that would connect Queensway Road and Rosia Road. I am sure that all hon. Members will know that the Minister for Transport would wish to have been here today to hear this happy announcement. Further details of this will be announced as soon as possible.

The dockyard has been in need of an update to its lease to align with current requirements. Today we have delivered one that is in sync with Gibraltar's modern-day environmental obligations. The terms of the new lease that have been negotiated are highly positive for Gibraltar. As the Government, we have been ready to help out and play our part. I am excited to see what the future is going to bring for Gibdock, its employees and its new owners.

I take this opportunity to congratulate the new owners on their acquisition of Gibdock. The dockyard represents a key part of Gibraltar's real estate and I therefore welcome them to Gibraltar. I wish them great success in their operations. Their commercial success as a company will be our economic success as a nation. I am encouraged to see the drive and energy shown by the new owners, who seek to grow the Gibdock business from strength to strength whilst reducing the negative impact that the previous operations have had on the surrounding area. I consider the acquisition to be more than simply an acquisition of Gibdock: this as an investment in Gibdock and in Gibraltar, yet another vote of confidence in our economy at a sensitive time in our history. The conclusion of this deal at this time, with other competing priorities, is also proof of the Government's relentless desire to continue to grow Gibraltar's economy and our success in attracting quality investment.

Mr Speaker, given the seminal importance of the dockyard in our commercial, military, economic and political history, I am exceptionally – and without establishing any precedent in doing so – laying the new lease on the table of the House for all hon. Members to have immediate access to it.

Mr Speaker, I am grateful for leave to have made this Statement.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, we welcome the Statement by the Chief Minister and look forward to digesting the lease that he has kindly said he will lay on the table of Parliament.

90 Just a number of observations and one question for clarification. Whilst we welcome the change of control and the commitment to the environment first and foremost, and to the working hours that have been the bugbear of many residents of the south district – and, indeed, other areas of Gibraltar that have complained about noise pollution and working hours at Gibdock – just one point of clarification in relation to those environmental KPIs. How is the Government going to monitor compliance? That will be a key question that a number of constituents will undoubtedly have running into the future and insofar as the exception that the Chief Minister spoke about in relation to the Royal Navy, which I think is understandable but obviously we would need to look into that as well.

95 In relation to matters which the Government considers urgent, has the Government formed any view as to, insofar as complying with that test, what ‘urgent’ means in that context? We are just cautious that we still might see those hours in the 8 p.m. to 8 a.m. bracket being offended in some way, but if it is for supremely urgent works that need to be conducted I am sure that the whole community would support it – if those matters were urgent. If the Chief Minister could explain what he meant by that further, then I would be grateful.

100 Thank you, Mr Speaker.

105 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am very pleased to have been able to come here to make this announcement today in the way that I have. I wanted to do so for the reasons I have set out in my Statement about the seminal importance of the dockyard in our political and economic and social history, as I have already provided for here, but not least because of how this was handled last time it happened. We have to remember that the last time there was a transfer of a lease we even had a situation where private conversations of the then Leader of the Opposition were bandied about by hon. Members when they were on this side of the House, so I think it is important that we put into context the way that the Government is seeking to deal with this matter properly.

115 I hope that when hon. Members do see the lease, which I understand is now with them, they will be able to digest it and not just indigest it, because of course the comparison that they will have to make will be with the lease that they agreed themselves when they were in government, and this is a considerable improvement for the people of Gibraltar, for those who will be running the yard as well and who have acquired it. We have found a new symbiosis between Gibraltar and the yard, which we think is the modern symbiosis that it was right to find at this time, but which could also have been found earlier.

120 In the context of how we will monitor compliance with the environmental KPIs, the first point I want to make to hon. Members is that of course the law of Gibraltar continues to apply as it has applied to date, even under the old lease. At the same time, there are onerous obligations under the lease which reflect the law of Gibraltar and go a little further by setting out more clearly what those obligations are and what they imply and mean. The agencies of the Government of Gibraltar – in the context of the environment, the Environmental Agency – will be how we monitor compliance with particular parts of our environmental legislation and those parts of the lease which require compliance with environmental provisions, but we will also have a role there as landlord, because by bringing some provisions into the lease we have a power as a landlord, not just as a regulator of all of the space that is Gibraltar through the Environmental Agency.

125 Recently, we have been remembering the magnificent work done in that yard at a time, in fact, when there was industrial action; but the unions – then led by Sir Joe – and the Government and all of Gibraltar joined forces to ensure the conversion of two commercial vessels into vessels that could sail to the Falklands as part of the task force. And so I think as we look back we remember what it is that has been done at this yard and what it is that may need to be done at this yard at any time – although we always hope in times of peace and not in times of war – and I think the Royal Navy exception, in terms of works that will have to be done to a vessel, is one that everyone in Gibraltar will understand. It goes beyond the commercial. This is something that, because it is about the Royal Navy, runs in our veins and we all understand that exemption.

In the context of urgency, the standard here will be one that is to be set, but it will be the ‘man bites dog’ category, not in the ‘man eats steak’ category. That is to say it will be in the unusual category, not in the normal category, and so simply because something is commercially urgent it will not automatically trigger that the Government of Gibraltar will be prepared to grant a permit. There may be some things that are commercially urgent for which the Government is prepared to grant a trigger and permit works, but those are circumstances which we believe will be few and far between.

What will the standard be? Well, when hon. Members were in government they passed a law that permits the Government to grant such permits in respect of any activity in Gibraltar, any commercial building work in Gibraltar. In the last 10 years I think we have used that power once and we have done so very sparingly, I understand, in relation to, from memory, something to do with the Airport approach lighting etc. So the standard will be a high standard. Hon. Members passed that law and immediately granted a number of permits. We have not done so. We are very conscious that people who live around this yard want to be able to live their lives without the constant difficulties that some have experienced – those who have lived closer to the yard. Indeed, it is true that some of this housing that has been developed around the yard has come after the yard, but as hon. Members who are legally trained will know, the fact that the nuisance comes to [inaudible] is no reason why it is no longer a nuisance. Therefore, we will be very careful to continue the work that we have been doing, and have now seen materialise in this lease, to protect all those who live around the yard at the same time as we protect the yard, its viability and its commercial ability to be a success for all those who work in it and for the Gibraltar economy, which includes all of us.

I hope I have dealt with all the points the hon. Gentleman raised.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I echo my colleague’s welcoming of the Statement. Any form of inward investment to Gibraltar at this time is, of course, to be welcomed and I think we look forward to this new partnership as set out in the lease – which, as it has just come into our hands, I have only quickly perused.

I note from my quick perusal of the particulars that it is a 35-year lease. My only question to the Government ... I can see there is a reduced rent, a stepped rent and a ceiling rent as a whole calculation based on profitability, but can the Government advise, in terms of immediate cashflow – and I cannot see, looking through the lease, just a quick scan – whether there is any form of premium paid up front? All I can see at the moment is perhaps the first instalment of the first year’s rent of £50,000. Is that correct?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if hon. Members look at the rent clause, they will see that there are a number of different provisions. There is a provision on rent in the first seven years, a provision in year eight onwards, a provision if KPIs are failed and a provision on rent increase. There were none of those in the lease that they agreed and there was no premium in the lease that they agreed.

This is an assignment of the original lease dealt with by way of new lease because there was a dispute between the Government and the previous leaseholders as to whether they were holding over properly or not, but there is no premium in respect of this lease, as there was not before.

In the context of the rent, if hon. Members look at the stepped rent and they look at the reduced rent, as it is called, versus the market rent and the ceiling rent, all of which are set out in the document, they will see that this is a considerably better deal for the Government and for the taxpayer than was the case before.

190

In the context of the term, the hon. Gentleman is right, this is a 35-year term. Of course, terms need to be agreed on the basis of what needs to be done commercially to finance the ability to enter into these arrangements – that is why the Government has agreed that period – but there are breaks provided for in the lease, which hon. Members will be able to see.

195

Mr Speaker, the premium here for the people of Gibraltar, for the taxpayer, is not just in the context of the much higher rent that is payable, but also in the obligation to maintain the number of locally resident employees which is now fixed into the lease itself, which was not the case before; the environmental benefits provided for; and the cost, for example, involved in all of those – in particular the cold ironing cost, which would otherwise have been a cost which the Government would have had to meet, and the obligation to provide the 60 Hz generator, which was previously an obligation of the Government and is now an obligation of the tenant and which they have to comply with in 70 working days. So we have shifted obligations with big financial consequences, and that is the premium to the Government because we no longer have to put out for those costs; they are costs that are being taken by the lessee.

200

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to seek any further clarification?

Order of the Day

FIRST AND SECOND READING

University of Gibraltar (Amendment) Bill 2021 – First Reading approved

Clerk: (ix) Bills – First and Second Reading.

A Bill for an Act to amend the University of Gibraltar Act. The Hon. Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education.

210

Minister for Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the University of Gibraltar Act be read a first time.

215

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the University of Gibraltar Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The University of Gibraltar (Amendment) Act 2021.

University of Gibraltar (Amendment) Bill 2021 –
Second Reading approved

220 Minister for Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

The Bill makes a limited number of amendments to the University of Gibraltar Act 2015. The principal aim of the Bill is to make the University operationally more independent. There are some other amendments, as I will explain.

Clause 3(2) amends section 2 of the Act, which contains definitions.

225 Clause 3(3) amends section 8(1) of the Act and aims to streamline the functions of the University. Current descriptions are somewhat prescriptive. If amended, and if, in the future, there are further facilities, centres or academies, the Act will not need to be amended as any new areas would be covered. Moreover, the amendments provide the University with the ability to respond to local and regional opportunities and needs as they arise.

230 Clause 3(4) amends section 9(1) of the Act so that the appointment of the chancellor is undertaken by the Minister after consultation with the vice-chancellor.

Clause 3(5) amends section 11 of the Act. As amended, appointed of the vice-chancellor will be undertaken after consultation with the Minister, as opposed to with the Minister's consent. The vice-chancellor's powers will include the ability to summon meetings for both faculty and other academic administrative divisions.

235 Clause 3(6) amends section 13(3) of the Act to provide a suspended or expelled student with a right of appeal to the Public Services Ombudsman in place of the board. Currently a student appeals to the board. However, the amendment means that a neutral third party will be making the final decision, rather than the board, which is affiliated to the University. This also aligns with the University academic regulations.

240 Clause 3(7) substitutes section 15 of the Act, which provides for a registrar. The role is better defined and the registrar's appointment is moved from the board to the vice-chancellor. Their duties will be in accordance with the University academic regulations.

Clause 3(8) makes a consequential amendment to section 16.

245 Clause 3(9) amends section 18(2) of the Act, which sets out the board's powers. The main change is that the appointment of academic and administrative staff and office holders will now be made by the board in consultation with the vice-chancellor. Also, as with previous amendments, instead of requiring ministerial consent, the obligation in paragraph (f) is predicated on a consultation with the Minister.

250 Clause 3(10) substitutes section 19 of the Act with a new section that amends the composition of the board. The board will now be composed of up to eight members rather than seven, including one enrolled degree-seeking student who has been elected by the student body, two persons appointed by the Minister rather than four, and up to two persons appointed by the board. Furthermore, the director will not be entitled to vote at the meetings of the board. The board, rather than the Minister, will appoint their own chairperson. However, this person cannot be a student, the director, the vice-chancellor or the University's financial controller.

255 Clause 3(11) amends section 21 of the Act as a consequence of earlier amendments.

260 Clause 3(12) substitutes section 22 of the Act relating to terms of appointment. Appointment to the board will be for a period of three years; however, if renewed, may not exceed a total period of nine years in office. The enrolled degree-seeking student referred to above may only serve to the end of the academic year in which they cease to be an enrolled degree-seeking student.

Clause 3(13) amends section 44(1)(a) of the Act. The change of the accounting date from 31st December to 31st July is in order to align the financial year with the academic year.

265 Clause 3(14) is a minor amendment to section 56(2) of the Act as a direct consequence of Brexit.

I commend this Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

May I start by thanking the Minister, who had a brief interchange with me after the publication of this Bill and so was able to clarify some things for me?

In the Bill, in clause 3(10), which amends section 19(1) of the Act, it says:

The board of the university shall be composed of up to eight members ...

275 and in (b) it says:

one enrolled degree-seeking student, elected by the student body,

280

I speak from personal experience because I happened to hold one of those positions when I was an undergraduate at Urbaniana University. The wording that brings in a little bit of doubt to me is where it has to be an 'enrolled degree-seeking student'. Does that mean a student following just a bachelor's degree or, for example, a postgraduate, which could include a master's degree? There may not be a need to modify the Bill per se, but a record of what the intention of the legislators is ... And technically, those graduates who are following a Postgraduate Certificate in Education (PGCE), which the University is running nowadays, are they, generally speaking, classified as degree-seeking students? At the end of the PGCE they obtain a postgraduate certificate, not a degree; they are already graduates holding a degree in their own right. So perhaps a little clarification on that point may help to solve problems in the future.

285

Perhaps, Mr Speaker, with your guidance ... I do know – it could be more a question of seeking an amendment to the wording in Third Reading or Committee Stage, but on the amendment, when trying to amend section 22 sorry.... Section 21 has some words struck out and then section 22(1) and 22(2) as existing are deleted completely, and then a new section 22(1) says:

Subject to subsections (1)

290

– well, subsection (1) is this one itself now –

and (2),

– which is what follows underneath – appointments to the board shall be for periods of up to three years,

295

I think that should read 'Subject to subsections (2) and (3)' because there is no reference to subsection (3), which was the one I am asking about now, where the enrolled degree-seeking student can only serve to the end of the academic year, and in the new section 22(1) there is no reference to that subsection (3) which is now introduced and did not exist before.

If I am out of order, I can bring it up at the Committee Stage, but perhaps the Minister may appreciate the time to look into it, or offer me some clarification so there is no need to raise the topic at the Committee Stage.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

300

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

305

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, in 2015 we established the University of Gibraltar through Act of Parliament. It was not an Act which we took, for example, from the UK, because in the UK we saw that most universities were established through Royal Charter rather than through Act of Parliament. We did look at various jurisdictions and various models as to how other jurisdictions did that, but what we did in 2015 was to create something which was fit for Gibraltar, which was fit for a University in Gibraltar.

310 It was always thought at the time that, because we were doing something new in a place like Gibraltar, a small jurisdiction with its own specific type of University, there would come a time when some provisions in the Act at the time would have to be changed and we would have to learn through experience, learn through operational practice and learn through contact with students, the academic board and the regulator, and then bring improvements to the Act.

315 So that was always in the making, but it has been almost seven years since we have had the University of Gibraltar Act and essentially this Act, which was tailored for Gibraltar, almost in a little bit of a dark ... has stood the test of time. It is a testament to those involved at the time in putting this together, in structuring this, in the drafting, in all the research and the trips that were made to learn about how all this should be done. It is a testament to the very hard work of all of those involved at the time that we are here now, seven years later, making some what the Minister has rightly described as limited amendments to the Act which clearly are improvements to the Act.

My understanding is that these improvements arise following discussions with members of the University and recommendations made by the regulator, the University of Gibraltar Regulatory Authority, in order, as the Hon. Minister said, to make the University more operationally independent. All of this is, of course, to be welcomed.

At the time when we established this, we did not have a regulator of universities in Gibraltar. We had the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority, but the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority did not regulate any university or any academic institution, and therefore the feedback that we now have, as a result of the practice of these last seven years, from the regulator and from others involved in the University, was simply not available in 2015. Therefore, we created a model which has worked and has actually worked very well indeed, but there was always going to come a time ... and it has taken seven years, but that is in itself a testament to how good and how solid the legislative foundation of the University was, that it has taken seven years for these recommendations to be made, for the practice of the Act to be in place and for these limited amendments to be made.

335 The Hon. Mr Reyes makes a point and asks about the issue of the degree-seeking student on the board, and it obviously will be a matter for the Hon. Minister to answer the specific question but let me say that I certainly recall that that was one thing which was in the thinking of those putting together the Act at the particular time when we brought this together. We knew that at some stage the Government would want to make an amendment to the Act to bring in a provision such as this whenever other amendments were made, because it was always intended that it was a good idea to have a representative of the student body on the ultimate decision-making body for the University, which is the board of governors, and therefore that is something that is certainly to be welcomed.

345 Aside from the specific legislative provisions, it is worth noting – I think it is a good opportunity, now that we are debating issues to do with the University of Gibraltar – that the University of Gibraltar continues to be a great institution and a source of great pride for me and for others who were involved in establishing the University, and for Gibraltar generally. It has become not just a useful but I would suggest a vital academic component of what Gibraltar has to offer. It is recognised internationally and it is well recognised, and it has an excellent international reputation. The University has been training Gibraltarians and others, each year in greater numbers, for almost seven years. There are a number of courses aimed at professional development across various sectors in Gibraltar, which has benefited many professionals in Gibraltar and many businesses in Gibraltar, and it is always looking to expand its offerings. It has become what all of us who were involved at the time hoped that it would become, a beacon of excellence in the Mediterranean, even to the extent that the University is now blessed with having, as we know, Sir Lindsay Hoyle as the Chancellor.

360 Just to end, Mr Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to Vice-Chancellor Prof. Catherine Bachleda, her staff, the board and everyone who is involved with the University for the excellent work that they are doing and for the continuing expansion that we will see of the University over the years.
Thank you.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Prof. John Cortes.

365 Minister for Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, first of all, I would like to thank my hon. Friend the Hon. Gilbert Licudi for his intervention. It is, in fact, a testament to the quality of his pioneering work when the University was set up that we are able to now develop and mature the University with minimal changes at a time when we more or less expected the time would be right to move forward. I completely
370 support his praise of the University's vice-chancellor, the staff and the board.

The Hon. Mr Licudi is absolutely correct: these changes, which have the support of the University's board, are the result of their interaction with the University Advisory Board of the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority. As the Hon. Mr Licudi has said, this process could not have 375 happened at the time the University was set up. Whereas in 2015 the University aspired to international recognition, now it is actually obtaining international recognition. It is in contact with Universities UK, it is in contact with the Quality Assurance Agency, and they all have recommended that these steps are logical steps in the maturing of an institution such as the one that the Hon. Gilbert Licudi set up back in 2015. It is a testament to that and also proof of the ambition of the University to become ever more established in the international academic world.

380 In relation to the point that the Hon. Mr Reyes has brought up, I agree with him: I believe that it is an error and that section 22(1) should, in fact, read 'Subject to subsections (2) and (3)' and I would ask that these amendments be made at Committee Stage.

In relation to 'degree-seeking', 'degree-seeking' would include masters and PhD students. It would not, in my opinion, include PGCE students. Whereas I am tempted to suggest an 385 amendment at Committee Stage I will resist the temptation because this was the wording agreed by the board. By me, here, in this place agreeing to a change in what the board has recommended I think would be a little bit of interference or involvement at a level which I do not think I should involve ... If the board feels that they should extend this to PGCE students, or indeed if my interpretation is incorrect, then that will resolve it, but if they feel that this should be extended 390 and there should be wording, then I will bring another Bill with this minor amendment to the House, but I think I owe it to the board to seek their advice, which I am not able to do right now.

Having said that, Mr Speaker, I once again commend the Bill.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the University of 395 Gibraltar Act be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The University of Gibraltar (Amendment) Act 2021.

University of Gibraltar (Amendment) Bill 2021 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Minister for Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill 400 be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Employment (Bullying at Work) Bill 2022 –
First Reading approved

405 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Employment (Bullying at Work) Act 2014. The Hon. Minister for Housing, Employment, Youth and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Employment (Bullying at Work) Act 2014 be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Employment (Bullying at Work) Act 2014 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

415 Clerk: The Employment (Bullying at Work) Act 2022.

Employment (Bullying at Work) Bill 2022 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

420 The case of Stagnetto v Cassaglia under the 2014 Act in the Employment Tribunal, which has resulted in the proceedings before the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeal, has shown that there are a number of issues concerning the interpretation of the 2014 Act. In particular, difficulties have arisen in relation to the meaning of bullying and the liability of employers of the acts of employees. The Court of Appeal judgment described the 2014 Act as a very puzzling piece of legislation. Sir Patrick Elias JA went on to state in his judgment:

It will be obvious from this judgment that I have not found this Act easy to interpret or apply. There is a lack of clarity about fundamental questions, such as precisely what amounts to unlawful bullying and when the employer will be personally liable for the acts or bullying of his employee. Parliament might think it appropriate to amend the legislation to clarify these difficulties and important issues.

425 The Court of Appeal made observations, which can be summarised as follows. Section 4(1) cannot be looked into in isolation. ‘Conduct’ in section 4(1) must be viewed objectively in the context of section 4(2). Section 4(2), for all practical purposes, contains an exhaustive list of conduct which amounts to bullying. Section 4(2)(a) sets out the kind of conduct required under section 4(1) and identifies the typical characteristics of bullying. Section 4(2)(a) captures the main categories of bullying with (b), (c) and (d) seen as specific examples. It is difficult to think of 430 examples of bullying which do not fall within section 4(2)(a). Sections 4(2)(c) and (d) are single incidents, but acts should include at least some of the characteristics of bullying behaviour in section 4(2)(a). This is why the first amendment requires the replacement of the word ‘include’ in section 4(2) with ‘means’. This would clarify the interrelationship between sections 4(1) and (2), confirm that section 4(2) provides an exhaustive list and remove any doubt about the conduct 435 required to amount of bullying.

The Court of Appeal commented about section 4(2)(a) capturing the essence of bullying and that everything else should include some of the characteristics in section 4(2)(a) ... ought to be adopted by spelling out what it is intended to capture by section 4(2)(b), (c) and (d). This will be done by adding the new section 4(2A) as follows. Section 4(2A) should read:

For the purposes of subsections 4(2)(b), (c) and (d), the conduct in question must include behaviour which is offensive, intimidating, abusive, malicious or insulting.

440 The next amendment to this Act is in relation to the liability of employers of bullying by employees. Liability under the 2014 Act is set out in section 6(1), which states:

An employer (A) must not, in relation to employment by A, subject an employee (B) to bullying.

It is immediately apparent that it is the employer that must not subject an employee to bullying. It is therefore the act of the employer that must be looked at in consideration of whether there has been bullying. The problem is that bullying will often not be an act of an employer. In most cases it will be an employee that subjects another employee to bullying.

445 The fundamental problem with section 6, as the Court of Appeal decided, is that the 2014 Act does not give rise to vicarious liability on the part of the employer for the act of the employee. Vicarious liability is a secondary form of liability, which only arises when there is a primary liability by the employee. In the case of the 2014 Act, there is no liability at all of the employee and therefore no vicarious liability of the employer. In the absence of primary liability on the part of the employee, the only way in which the employer can be liable for the acts of the employee is to attribute such acts to the employer or to deem such acts to be the acts of the employer.

450 The Court of Appeal noted that there was no equivalent in 2014 to section 47(1) of the Equal Opportunities Act 2006, which states:

Anything done by a person in the course of his employment shall be treated for the purposes of this Act as done by his employer as well as by him, whether or not it was done with the employer's knowledge or approval.

455 Therefore, the Bill proposes to amend the 2014 Act on the same terms as section 47(1) of the Equal Opportunities Act.

After having discussed this with the Hon. Mr Bossino, who contacted me with some suggestions, and Mr Licudi QC, who has actually been the instigator of these amendments, I propose a further amendment to the amendment before you to, which I have given notice and set out in my letter to you. This is to be able to deal with the issue of the defence to the employer. This will be done by introducing a defence similar to that provided in section 47(3) of the Equal Opportunities Act 2006. This reads as follows:

460 In proceedings brought under this Act against any person in respect of an act alleged to have been done by an employee of his it shall be a defence for that person to prove that he took such steps as were reasonably practicable to prevent the employee from doing that act, or from doing in the course of his employment, acts of that description.

465 So, in order to capture both section 47(1) and (3) of the Equal Opportunities Act 2006, a new section should be inserted – and this is the amendment which I have proposed, which is extra to what already was in the Bill, so this is an amendment to the Bill – which should read:

7A(1) Subject to subsection (2) anything done by a person in the course of employment shall be treated for the purposes of this Act as done by the employer as well as by him, whether or not it is done by the employer's knowledge or approval.

(2) An act done by a person in the course of his employment shall not be treated as done by his employer if in the proceedings brought under this Act the employer proves that he took such steps as were reasonably practicable to prevent the employee from doing that act or from doing in the course of employment acts of that description.

Mr Speaker, I commend this Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Damon Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, thank you.

I think, firstly, to recognise and acknowledge the assistance that the hon. Member has given. He is right, I did approach him and I made a few points. They were explained to me, the points that I had were clarified, and we were then able to enter into discussions with the Hon. Mr Licudi yesterday in order to improve this legislation.

475

The focus of this particular Bill is to take account of the live issues that were before the Court of Appeal in the Stagnetto v Cassaglia GHA matter, and that is precisely what this Bill does, so in that sense it is certainly an improvement. I think it has been very much focused on that, and it has dealt with those discrete issues, which although discrete were very important and are a fundamental understanding of the Bill, so most definitely it is an improvement.

480

Simply to go through some aspects of this, the substitution of the word 'includes' with 'means' in clause 3(2)(a) of the Bill, which, in turn, amends section 4 of the Act, is in order to deal with an issue which was before the Court as to whether the four items under section 4 which are matters that amounted to bullying should be considered exhaustive or non-exhaustive. By the addition of the word 'means', in effect my interpretation has been confirmed by the hon. Member: it makes it an exhaustive list, so that is now being set in stone, the definition of bullying.

485

Furthermore, there has been a further improvement because we now have the addition of a new subsection (2A) under clause 3(2)(b) of the Bill before the House, which very clearly sets out in statutory wording that those examples, in order for them to amount to bullying, must include behaviour which is ... and then it lists the adjectives that apply and currently feature in section 4(2A), which are 'offensive, intimidating, abusive, malicious or insulting'. I think that is going to be of great assistance to the law, to practitioners in the field and to those who fall victim of this very vile and foul behaviour.

490

I ask a particular question, simply to clarify: why it was the case that it was decided not to include the word 'persistent' in (c) and (d), which relate to punishment imposed without justification and changes in duties or responsibilities of an employee. In those two instances, if that happens, there is not a requirement for it to be persistent, but the addition of the words that I have just talked about in new section (2A), if it is passed by this House – and is likely to be passed because it is going to have unanimous support, at least from the GSD Opposition, I can say so now ... is that that action has to be offensive, intimidating and so forth. That has been explained to me, that is a policy decision that the Government has taken and that is fair enough, but at least there is clarity in relation to that.

495

If I can refer to my notes, there is one point that comes to mind ... I want to make sure that I do not leave anything out ... This would be the final point and I would invite the hon. Members opposite ... I think Mr Licudi may have something to say about this. It arises from my discussions with him yesterday and I think it would be of assistance for the record of this House that he speaks on it, if he may. I raise the point that there was an importation – a very important one, I may say – as a result of clause 3(3), which includes new 7A – again, if passed, but it will be – that, in effect, it is a deeming provision. It really was a failure of the initial Act and one which it is fair to say I do not think was spotted by anybody in the House at the time when we passed it, not even on this side of the House and certainly not on the other side of the House, that if an employee does something, how is the employer made responsible? That was the subject of argument before the Court of Appeal as to whether an employer in those circumstances could be found to be vicariously liable. My hon. and learned Friend, I think as a result of his arguments, said that it was impossible to impose vicarious liability on an employer without there being primary liability first on an employee, and therefore this deeming provision was deemed crucial in order to address that point.

505

515

I do not say this in any derogatory way, but it is, in effect, a copy and paste of the provision – which I think the hon. Member Mr Linares mentioned earlier – from the Equal Opportunities Act, 520 so I went to that and I saw that there was a defence in there available to ... I think it is employers in that Act, yes. I put that to the hon. Members opposite and an explanation was provided that in fact there is already a defence available to employers in section 6(5) of the Act, which is a statutory defence, so long as the employer has a Bullying at Work policy in place and it is properly 525 implemented and they have adequate reviewers and training and all the rest of it. And then there is a section 5(b), which says:

as soon as reasonably practicable, he

– the employer –

takes all steps as are reasonably necessary to remedy any loss, damage or other detriment suffered by the complainant as a result of the act or acts of which he complains.

That provides the employer a statutory defence. Nevertheless, the Government took my 530 suggestions on board and was careful that there is not a confusing interplay between the deeming provision defence or qualification or exceptional and the statutory defence which is already there.
They did not quite import the language in section 47(3) of the Equal Opportunities Act, but it was slightly amended.

I would invite the Hon. Mr Licudi, if he may, to address the House on that particular point, because I think it is going to be of assistance in the future in interpreting those provisions, precisely 535 because I still think that there could be room for some confusion. In fact, it is indeed possible – and I again invite the hon. Member to address the point I am going to make – that if you qualify for the exception under the deeming provision, it is possible for an employer to go scot free, even if that employer does not have a Bullying at Work policy in place, which is something I would have thought this legislation wants to encourage all employers to have in place. If he could address that 540 particular point ... I do appreciate that the wording is slightly different, but again ... I know that this is now the third occasion, but I do invite the hon. Member to address us on that point.

Other than that, I think, Mr Speaker, I have covered all the points. Simply to repeat that this side of the House – certainly the GSD side – will be voting in favour.

545 Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member of the House wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Gilbert Licudi.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, first of all, I wish to declare an interest in this matter – not in the legislation itself, but I was, as has been mentioned already, professionally involved in the cases 550 before the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeal which have given rise to consideration of the impact of the Court of Appeal decision in particular and the advisability, requirement or necessity to make these amendments. I should also say I have also been involved in advising the Government as to what the impact of the Court of Appeal judgment is and the amendments that ought to be made.

555 Having said that, the Hon. Minister has explained the background to these amendments, how they arise, the issues which arose in the Court of Appeal, what essentially has been decided and how that has impacted on the Act as we had it, the 2014 Act. There were two issues – in fact, there were four issues before the Court of Appeal. Two were substantive and two were procedural. We do not need to deal with procedural issues, but the two substantive issues 560 concerned the meaning of ‘bullying’ under, in particular, section 4(1) of the Act, and also the liability of the employer. Issues of, firstly, interpretation arose in respect of both the meaning of ‘bullying’ and the liability of the employer, on which the Court of Appeal helpfully made some comments and interpreted the legislation in a particular way in order to give the judgment of the court in that case. As a result of those interpretations, we now know what the judicial 565 interpretation of this Act is in respect of the meaning of ‘bullying’, so strictly speaking, it is not necessary to introduce these changes in respect of section 4 of the Act, because all we would need to do ... anybody who is involved in any case or advisory work would need to look at the Act, would need to look at judicial pronouncements and say, 'This has been interpreted in this particular way.'

570 What could not be done is ignore the second issue, which is the liability of the employer, because what the court has recognised is that there is, in fact, a lacuna in the legislation. Although vicarious liability was mentioned during the course of the debate in 2014, what none of us who were here – and there are a few lawyers on this side of the House and there were a few lawyers on that side of the House – realised at the time was that, as a matter of law, vicarious liability, for the reasons that have been explained, does not apply in respect of this particular Act. That was 575 something that we did not realise. It has been picked up as a result of argument before the court. There is clearly a lacuna in the legislation which needs to be remedied, and therefore the second amendment that the Bill seeks to introduce is absolutely necessary.

Given that that amendment is necessary and it was required to bring legislation to Parliament, it was clear that this was an opportunity, which has been taken by the Government, to clarify the 580 first issue, which is the meaning of 'bullying', by essentially giving effect to what the Court of Appeal has decided is the proper interpretation of this particular Act. Therefore, the first part of the amendment, which seeks to essentially change in subsection 4(2) 'includes' to 'means', arose as a result of the discussion and argument as to whether the list in section 4(2) was exhaustive or non-exhaustive, but not just that: more importantly, if it was non-exhaustive, what else did it
585 include? That was the crucial issue. What everybody involved in the case came to realise was that it was very difficult – in fact, just about impossible – to come up with examples of what could properly and objectively be viewed as bullying conduct which would not fall within one or other of the provisions of section 4(2) of the Act. Therefore, the court was satisfied and said that for all practical purposes section 4(2) provides an exhaustive list. What the amendment does is clarify 590 that that is, in fact, what is intended and that is, in fact, what is going to be the case. The list is now exhaustive and it is clear from the language which is now used, which now leaves no room for any doubt whatsoever.

The hon. Member opposite raises the issue of some provisions in section 4(2) requiring persistent conduct and others are not required persistent conduct. Section 4(2)(a) talks about 595 abusive, insulting, intimidating, malicious behaviour; section 4(2)(b) talks about unjustified criticism. Those require persistent acts, and it is now clear, as a result of the clarification and the rulings of the court, that where the behaviour in question falls within those particular subsections, it involves criticism or it involves abusive, intimidating or malicious conduct etc., those acts are required to be malicious for the purposes of falling within the definition of bullying.

600 It is worth noting also at this stage that what section 4(2) does is set out the meaning of 'conduct' where conduct is referred to in 4(1), because the basic definition or meaning of 'bullying' is in 4(1), where it talks of a person engaging in conduct which has the purpose or effect of causing humiliation, distress etc. When you consider what does 'conduct' mean, you now look exclusively at 4(2) and the list in 4(2). One of the difficulties that arose is if you look at 4(1) in isolation and 605 forget 4(2), and see that a person carries out bullying if he engages in conduct which has the purpose or effect of causing distress etc., the question that arises is what does 'conduct' mean? Does it mean any conduct at all which has that purpose or that effect? What the Court of Appeal has decided – and this is a very important interpretation – is that 'conduct' does not mean any conduct. The conduct in question must be viewed objectively and be capable, when viewed
610 objectively, as amounting to bullying conduct. That is why the Court of Appeal then went on to say the typical characteristics of bullying are actually in 4(2)(a), which is behaviour which is insulting, abusive, intimidating, malicious, etc., and given that those are the typical characteristics of bullying, those are the ones that should permeate throughout all other forms of conduct to determine whether there has been bullying conduct or not. That is what has given rise to the other 615 amendment to section 4, which is, in introduction, that for the purposes of (b), (c) and (d) in subsection (2), some of the characteristics in (a) must be present because those are the characteristics that define bullying. What is clear is that this Act is about preventing and providing remedies for bullying conduct – not for any type of conduct which has certain purposes or certain effects, but for bullying conduct – and we now know what that type of conduct is.

620 As regards the issue of (c) and (d), which is punishment imposed without justification and changes in duties without reasonable justification, and the fact that the word ‘persistent’ is not present in there, which the hon. Member has raised, that was always the case. In 2014 when we introduced this legislation, a distinction was drawn between (a) and (b), which mention persistent, and (c) and (d), which do not mention persistent. I would venture to suggest that ‘persistent’ in 625 the context of (c) and (d) does not really make sense because then you would need to have persistent punishment by the employer or persistent changes in duties and responsibilities. Now what you will require, as a result of the decision and these amendments, is not persistent punishment or changes but punishment which is imposed without justification or changes without justification but which also include behaviour of a type which is abusive, insulting, malicious, etc.
630 That is what brings it within the context of being bullied rather than looked at in isolation as a punishment.

Those are the issues that arise in relation to section 4, and I understand that I have covered the issues that the hon. Member has raised.

The second issue concerns the liability of the employer, and the principal problem of this Act 635 is that it does not provide for liability by employees. It does not provide that an employee is liable for bullying somebody else, or that an employee must not subject another employee to bullying. It provides that an employer must not subject an employee to bullying. Therefore, given that there is only primary liability of the employer, there is this issue with vicarious liability, which is a form of secondary liability. The absence of that primary liability means that the employer is not 640 vicariously liable at all, although I recognise ...

I do not want to bore anyone with the legal language. Just to put it in a practical context so that the point is clearly understood, let us take the example of a negligent surgeon who performs an operation, does it negligently and causes harm to the patient. Typically, the patient or the family of the aggrieved patient will take action against the health authority involved – against the 645 hospital, against the clinic/provider – although they can also take action against the surgeon. The reason that the hospital/clinic/health provider is liable is where the surgeon is acting in the course of his employment as an employee of that institution and because the surgeon is liable himself. So the surgeon can be sued, he has primary liability for his own negligence, but then there is secondary, or what we call in legal terms vicarious liability on the part of the employer, and that 650 arises only where somebody acts in the course of employment. That is a typical example of where vicarious liability arises. But you must be able to sue the person who does the act, you must be able to sue the person who is primarily liable – in that example the surgeon. Under this Act, you cannot do that with an employee because the Act does not provide that an employee must not subject another to bullying or is liable for bullying, and therefore there must be another way in 655 which an employer can be liable, so that, as the hon. Member said, the employer cannot simply get off scot-free saying, ‘Well, that wasn’t my act and therefore I am not liable.’ We saw that there was a similar provision in the Equal Opportunities Act section 47(1), which is essentially a deeming provision. It treats the acts of employees, when done in the course of employment, as being the acts of the employer. It is important to say that that is not the same as vicarious liability. That is 660 deeming those acts to have been the acts of the employer; therefore, the employer is primarily liable and is caught by the provisions of the Act.

The hon. Member raised, in correspondence with my friend the Hon. Minister, the issue of section 47(3) in the Equal Opportunities Act, which provides a defence or an exception to circumstances when acts of an employee will not be treated as an act of the employer. This is 665 something that had been considered at the time, certainly when I was looking into this and suggesting to the Government what amendments ought to be proposed. As the hon. Member has said, there is already a statutory defence in the Act at section 6(5), in the context of bullying in particular. Section 6(5) provides a general defence to employers where the employer adopts the Bullying at Work policy, which is in the Schedule to the Act, where the employer implements and

670 takes reasonable steps to remedy any loss or damage caused by any wrongful acts of the employer or an employee. So that provides a general defence, and the view that was taken originally was you have already got a defence and it would be unusual to have two statutory defences in the same Act.

675 But given that the point was raised and was looked at again, it is clear to see that what is now going to be section 7A(1) deals with something slightly different to section 6(5). Section 6(5) deals with proactive steps taken by the employer putting in place the policy and acting pursuant to that policy. Section 7A focuses on the acts of an employee and the circumstances in which those acts of an employee are to be treated as the acts of the employer. There may be occasions when the two may overlap – the issue of the proposed amendment to the exception when acts will not be 680 treated as acts of the employer, and section 6(5). There may be some overlap, but essentially, once the amendment is done, the focus on what is looked at in terms of whether the employer is liable or not and whether there has been bullying depends on the question being asked of the Employment Tribunal and the particular circumstances that arise in the case. If the question is ‘Is the Employment Tribunal considering whether the employer has adopted and implemented the 685 Bullying at Work policy and therefore has a general defence?’ it would look at section 6(5). If the question is different, and if the question is ‘Are the acts of the employee to be treated as the acts of the employer?’ then the focus will be slightly different, and that is where 7A(2) would come in.

The hon. Member raises the question and suggests that there should be no room for confusion and we should not have a confusing overlap. I recognise that there might be some overlap. There 690 might be circumstances where the employer has adopted the policy, has implemented the policy and therefore says, in response to a suggestion that acts should be treated as his, ‘I have acted reasonably: this is what I have done.’ So it is possible that both elements can come into play, but there may be circumstances where, for the particular reasons which apply in any particular case, the employer has taken reasonable steps in respect of specific acts – outside the policy, nothing 695 to do with the policy – of an employee or a group of employees, the employer takes reasonable steps to prevent that happening, and that would allow the employer to say, ‘In these circumstances, the acts of the employee should not be treated as my own, because I have taken steps a, b, c and d to prevent all this happening, separate from the policy.’ It may be that the policy 700 is one of those steps, so the policy could be one of those steps, but there may be other steps that the employer takes in respect of specific acts or specific employees or specific groups of employees which fall outside the policy and would therefore allow the employer to say, ‘Because I have acted reasonably, in these specific circumstances these acts of the employee should not be attributed to me and I should not be made liable as a result.’ That seems reasonable and sensible.

I give way to the hon. Member.

705 Hon. D J Bossino: I know he was in mid-flow. Just two points. One is a general point of slight disagreement, but simply to congratulate the Government for undertaking this piece of legislation, which is actually ... The Court of Appeal encouraged legislators to amend not just the issue about the deeming provision point but also what amounts to bullying. They made those two 710 points and encouraged Parliament to make the amendments in order to clarify those two points.
But it did include also the statutory definition of what amounts to, as they put it, bullying.

Secondly, Mr Speaker, just one point of detail which he and I have discussed, but again it is to place it on the record the House. The soon-to-be new section 7A(2) talks about the employer proving that he took such steps as were reasonably practicable. Any lawyer looking at this would 715 assume, I think quite rightly, that the standard of proof would be on the civil standard on the balance of probabilities, but if he could simply clarify that by way of reminder before he sits down.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, yes, certainly that would be the intention of those words.
Whenever you have a provision where a defendant or a respondent in a particular case ... the 720 burden of proof shifts as a result of certain things being established and the burden of proof shifts to the defendant or the respondent, the standard in order to satisfy that burden of proof will be on a balance of probabilities and on what is known as a civil standard of proof. That is certainly, as far as I understand ... Although I am not part of the Government and the Hon. Minister can confirm for the Government that that is also the Government's understanding, that would certainly be the intention of this particular provision. As it is in relation to section 6(5), the Bullying at Work policy, it would be for the employer to prove. In order to have that general defence, it would be for the employer to prove that he has adopted a Bullying at Work policy, that he has implemented it, and it is only the employer who can do that. The policy talks about training, for example, so it is only the employer who can come along and say, 'I have trained x, I have trained y, and this is how I have done it; this is how I have implemented the policy.' So the burden is on the employer and the burden would be satisfied on a balance of probabilities.

Mr Speaker, I believe that I have dealt with some of the issues. The Hon. Minister who moves the Bill may have other points to make, but it seems to me that this is certainly an improvement. It is listening to the courts when they have interpreted. As the hon. Member has said, although we could simply have limited to this to curing the lacuna which existed, this Bill goes further, takes on board the comments of the courts, the hon. judges, and, in particular, the suggestion that Parliament might want to consider this. That is the reason why this Bill has been put to the House today.

Mr Speaker: Does the mover of the Bill wish to respond?

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker – very short. It is great to see that on both sides we have been able to make amendments and improve a Bill which has been there, which the Court of Appeal has actually indicated to us, as legislators, to improve. It is great to see that it closes down what amounts to bullying, in the first place, and in the second place it clears up the liability of the employer to actions of an employee. It has been great to be working on both sides to improve this Bill.

I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Employment (Bullying at Work) Act 2014 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Employment (Bullying at Work) (Amendment) Act 2022.

Employment (Bullying at Work) Bill 2022 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

British Sign Language Bill 2022 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to recognise British Sign Language as a language of Gibraltar, to require the Minister for Equality to report on the promotion and facilitation of the use of British Sign Language by public authorities, and to require guidance to be issued in relation to British Sign Language.

Clerk: Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to recognise British Sign Language as a language of Gibraltar, to require the Minister for Equality to report on the promotion and facilitation of the use of British Sign Language by public authorities, and to require guidance to be issued in relation to British Sign Language be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to recognise British Sign Language as a language of Gibraltar, to require the Minister for Equality to report on the promotion and facilitation of the use of British Sign Language by public authorities, and to require guidance to be issued in relation to British Sign Language be read a first time. 780

Clerk: The British Sign –

Mr Speaker: Just a second, Mr Clerk. I just want to confirm that the Hon. the Chief Minister wrote to me certifying that the Bill was too urgent to permit the expiry of six weeks.

785

Clerk: The British Sign Language Act 2022.

British Sign Language Bill 2022 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I beg to move that the Bill for the British Sign Language Act 2022 be read a second time.

Today is a pivotal and historic moment for the deaf community in Gibraltar, particularly users of British Sign Language. This Bill provides for the recognition of British Sign Language as a language of Gibraltar and requires the Minister for Equality to report on the promotion and facilitation of the use of British Sign Language by public authorities. The Bill also requires the Minister to issue guidance in relation to British Sign Language. Our ambition is for this Bill to create a more inclusive society, improving the lives of deaf people and ensuring public services are more accessible for them. This will be yet another step in making Gibraltar a more inclusive society.

Our Government has always led the way in respect of providing British Sign Language support for those who need it in Gibraltar. Indeed, we have been making provision for this for many years. In 2012, we established a contract for the provision of British Sign Language services in person at the Gibraltar Health Authority and this was later extended to the rest of the public sector. Provisions were later also made to extend this facility to online video conferences. British Sign Language is also very visible at National Day and other cultural events.

795

This Government has been committed to the requirements of the deaf and hard-of-hearing community generally in a way that is unprecedented in any other before us. This represents yet another step in our journey for the inclusion of people with disabilities – for example, the provision of British Sign Language services at the Government Departments I have just mentioned, the provision of hearing loops across Government Departments, the provision of e-Gov services that will make interaction with Departments a lot easier to communicate with electronically, the provision of tech services at the Primary Care Centre and the WhatsApp service at the GHA’s 111 call centre, which can also be used to dispatch other emergency services, if needed. I would also add that the 111 service also serves the mental health crisis line. Of course, the icing on the cake will be the brand new audiology suite at the GHA.

This Government has shown its commitment to the provision of British Sign Language by ensuring that Government employees have been given the opportunity to learn British Sign Language at the Government’s expense. At present, there are 17 public servants who have received some training in this regard, either at BSL Level 1 or 2, and we are waiting for the current British Sign Language class to finish before embarking on funding a new group of trainees. There still is, of course, further work to do.

I would like to take this opportunity to extend my gratitude to all of those involved in making this a reality, but especially GHITA and Mr Joseph and Brugada and his family, who have constantly and rightly worked with Government in respect of our responsibilities towards the deaf community in Gibraltar and who have inspired us to do so.

I would like to turn to the clauses of the Bill. Clause 3 includes a definition of ‘relevant public authority’, which means all Government Departments, authorities, agencies, commissions, corporations or other bodies established by statute, and a person or body declared by the Minister by notice in the Gazette to be a relevant public authority. This definition ensures that all public bodies are in scope of the Minister’s reporting obligations under the Act.

Clause 4 recognises British Sign Language as a language of Gibraltar.

Clause 5 states that the Minister must prepare and publish a British Sign Language report after each reporting period. The report must describe what each relevant public authority has done to promote or facilitate the use of British Sign Language in its communications with the public. Such communications include any public announcement which it makes about policy or about changes in the law; the publication of any plan, strategy, consultation document or consultation response or any explanatory or supporting materials; and its use of press conferences, social media or a Government website to publicise any of its activities or policies. The Minister must publish each report no more than three months after the end of the reporting period to which it relates. The first reporting period shall be the period beginning on the day on which this Act comes into force and ending with 30th April 2023.

Clause 6 states that the Minister must issue guidance on the promotion and facilitation of the use of British Sign Language. Guidance may include advice for relevant public authorities on providing information to the Minister, advice on best practice for communicating with British Sign Language users and case studies to illustrate the value of providing British Sign Language interpretation in communications with the public. I can confirm that the Ministry of Equality is already one step ahead and has already drafted the first set of guidance notes for this Act, and preparations are already in place to reach out to all relevant bodies to ensure that their duties under the Act are fully understood and therefore comply.

Clause 7 includes a regulation-making power in respect of matters relating to the application of this Act and for more effectually carrying into effect the objects of this Act.

Mr Speaker, I commend this Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, thank you.

The Opposition, of course, will support the Bill. We agree with the hon. Lady that it is a historic and seminal Bill before this House, namely the British Sign Language Bill. The reason why I have 855 learnt a bit of sign language over the last couple of weeks is to, hopefully, present to our community that even MPs on this side of the House are able to pick up a bit of sign language, now that we are recognising, fundamentally, British Sign Language as a language of our community. I would like to say a big thank you to our deaf and hearing loss community, because I think is important on this seminal day that Members of this House attempt to learn British Sign Language so that we can do our bit, as well as those in our community who are going through the training courses that the hon. Lady articulated before.

860 It is important to reflect on how this Bill came about, what it seeks to achieve, what more can be done in this area and, fundamentally, to honour those who have made it their life's work to improve the lives of the deaf and hearing loss community.

865 I have enjoyed a close working relationship, as I know the hon. Lady has, with our deaf and hearing loss community, and I am very pleased that the Government has listened to our community and their Opposition. We note that we have played our part in bringing a motion before this House to encourage the law in this area and we are pleased to see the Government follow where we have led politically on this issue. But today is not about political point scoring, as I did say in relation to a question that was put before this House last week. Today is about unity across the floor of this House, today is about the celebration of deaf and hearing loss rights, today is about setting aside discrimination, and today, most importantly, is about establishing a platform for us to put into action the steps that need to be taken to provide important resources to our deaf and hearing loss community.

870 The people who should be applauded for this Bill are our deaf and hearing loss community, who have for decades been ignored, to be fair, by successive Governments, in particular the present Government, who have been in office for the last 10 years, and whilst this Bill will finally recognise British Sign Language and is supported by our deaf and hearing loss community, much more work will need to be done on the ground to make provision of British Sign Language in our community a reality. It is, no doubt, as the hon. Lady has said, a step in the right direction, and whilst it has the support of the entire House no doubt, there is a real and substantive need for change in the area of BSL provision.

880 As David Buxton, Chair of the British Deaf Association, said on the BSL Bill receiving Royal Assent in the British Parliament:

While today is a day to celebrate, we are all aware that this marks the first step on a long path towards truly equal access to public services, information and opportunities for BSL users in Great Britain.

885 The same is true here, our home. When responding to the publication of the Bill, GHITA Chairman Edgar Triay described it as a milestone but one that needed to be matched with real action with the establishing of the BSL Advisory Board on implementation of the provisions of the Act, a rolling out of information in GHA and educational establishments.

890 The hard word does not stop at the passing of this legislation, and whilst, for the first time, it recognises British Sign Language as a language and is a welcome step towards a more inclusive and accessible society, the proof of the pudding is in the eating and we must ensure the daily lives of our deaf and hearing loss community are improved by better access to BSL provision across all public services, most importantly education and health. It is an initial step in building a road map so that the deaf and hearing loss community can access services where there is a lack of provision.

895 I must say when the deaf community approached me eight months ago and since the House last met, I was shocked that in 2022 we effectively cannot provide BSL interpreters, qualified and experienced, so deaf members of our community can communicate with their doctors, nurses, RGP or other public services. You only have to reflect for one moment – and I think I was responding to a question that we had put in this House and the Chief Minister engaged on ... You only have to reflect for one moment the daily basis and the impact that hearing and speech have on everyday life: not to be able to communicate with your doctor about how you feel, so that a diagnosis can be properly informed; not being able to tell your teacher about the support you need at school; not being able to tell a pharmacist what medication you need; not to understand an emergency situation, such as when a fire alarm is triggered; and not being able to watch the news, importantly, in order to understand what is going on in your community. God forbid not to understand the Chief Minister's Statement last week on the treaty, and, indeed, potentially this afternoon in relation to Gibdock!

We need to make sure that the Bill before the House is not a token Bill and that there is a meaningful and genuine understanding within Government and the wider community of the real and urgent need to back this Bill with action – namely, the provision of BSL support: qualified interpreters across our public services, including broadcasting.

910

We will support this Bill. As we have said, it is a start. It cannot be a token Bill. It must be a signal to our deaf community that we hear you and we have your back. We must now, without delay, take important steps to increase accessibility, so that our deaf community feels included in our community.

915

Lastly, Mr Speaker, and by no means least, I wish to recognise GHITA Chairman Edgar Triay, Joe Brugada and the many others who have pushed forward in relation to deaf and hearing loss rights; and, of course, Bobby and Ana Maria Gomez, who are on their massive walk from Gibraltar to the north of the Iberian peninsula, and whilst we sit in this air-conditioned Chamber they make the epic hike of half a marathon each day in the scorching Spanish sun to raise awareness of deaf issues in our community. We must match this massive effort and the efforts of GHITA and recall the daily struggles of our deaf and hearing loss community by ensuring that BSL resource is made a top priority.

920

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon.

Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I welcome this long-overdue Bill and commend the civil society groups whose lobbying has made it possible. Eight years of fighting for the rights of the disabled have given us all an example of how to unite to achieve lasting political change, and their efforts are being extremely successful in giving visibility to a collective that has been marginalised in Gibraltar for far too long. In this case, it is the work of GHITA, and in particular its chairman, Edgar Triay, that deserves praise and recognition. I also think it is fair to thank the Hon. Elliott Phillips, who presented this topic as a motion following an appeal to MPs in this House by BSL advocates, a motion which has, in turn, spurred this Bill.

Unfortunately, as we have seen in the past, policies such as this one often become a purely symbolic exercise. This Bill will be empty of substance if it is not accompanied by rigorous implementation, the investment of public resources and a profound cultural and institutional change. Currently, in Gibraltar, we are far from providing adequate levels of accessibility for deaf people and BSL speakers. Government press conferences and other institutional messages are also not, by default, subtitled and therefore still not inclusive for deaf people. We need BSL interpreters on public counters, in educational and healthcare environments and the widespread introduction of hearing-loop infrastructure in our society. We need BSL to be introduced in our education system in order to bridge the hearing divide that exists in our society.

940

We need to do much more to ensure that we provide equal opportunities to the most vulnerable members of our society, and I hope that this Bill, which I shall be supporting with my vote, is the first of many changes to come.

945

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to contribute? The Hon. Prof. John Cortes.

950

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will let my hon. Friend the Hon. Samantha Sacramento rebuke the preposterous claims from the Hon. Mr Phillips that we have followed anything that they did in this – or anything else, for that matter. If we had followed their lead, we would not have got anywhere in the past seven years and all the achievements would have not been there.

955

I can say that some years ago, when I was Minister for Health and my hon. Friend was Minister for Care, we worked very closely together and we took landmark steps in response to approaches from GHITA and from Mr Brugada and his family, because it was clear to us that there was absolutely nothing in place to support and help those who have hearing impairment. We took steps then. I can remember some of them, including the text messages for the Health Centre, the provision of online connections when there was a need to have a consultation with somebody who could work in sign language, and many other things which were not in place at the time.

960

Today's step, as we all agree, is a hugely significant one and I want to congratulate my friend the Hon. Samantha Sacramento for taking it. Knowing how determined she is in everything she does, I am absolutely convinced that it will not just be something that lies on the statute book, and that we are making tremendous progress and we will continue to do so in the future.

965

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I want to agree with one of the things that Mr Phillips has said, which is that today is a historic and seminal moment. It is a historic and seminal moment because we are adding a language to the official languages of Gibraltar. That is not something that can be done easily, it is not something that can be done without considerable thought and considerable preparation, and so today is historic and seminal and that is how I would have described the presentation of this Bill by the hon. Lady, the Minister with responsibility for equality if he had described it in that way himself. And so we are in agreement.

Mr Speaker, when something is historic and seminal it is a pity to sully that moment with party politics, but that is exactly what the hon. Gentleman has done. The Hon. Prof. Cortes has been absolutely right to say that there is no question of this Government following hon. Members – absolutely no question, because the hon. Members have presented policies in this House which are entirely contrary to the progress that we have represented.

975

In the time since we were elected in this place, what they have told us to do is not to open the Development and Planning Commission to the public, not to facilitate minutes, but to keep them entirely confidential, as they were. And when it comes to the particular issue that we are dealing with, this Government is not for one moment following a motion that the hon. Gentleman put without consulting with the Government – that is to say without gauging whether or not the Government would support it.

980

This Government is following the advice of the Minister with responsibility for equality, the advice of those who advise her and the work done by GHITA – not just in the work that they have done recently when they were outside my office and I was able to become involved in a discussion with them where they explained a lot of the issues about BSL, in particular how BSL had been in the process of becoming an official legislated-for language in the United Kingdom, not just in the context of the Westminster Parliament's legislative action, but in the parliaments of the nations that make up the United Kingdom: in the Welsh parliament, in the Scottish Parliament, the last one being the British Parliament for England rather than for the whole United Kingdom.

985

It is therefore, in my view, totally wrong and it is totally misleading the public to suggest that the Government is somehow following the Opposition. In fact, what hon. Members need to reflect on is that this is a Government Bill. It is not an Opposition Bill, it is not a Private Member's Bill – which is what the hon. Gentleman's motion called for. This is a Government Bill. It has been given Government time, it is going to be passed with Government votes, and if there is anybody who is entitled to claim the credit for this, it is the NGOs, the one that the hon. Lady mentioned – GHITA – and the ones that the Hon. Minister mentioned. I will say a little more about that in a few moments.

990

1005 How can the hon. Gentleman get up and say that we have been ignoring the deaf community?
It is all very good to say things in the context of trying to score party political points – and I see him shaking his head, but that is what he said – but when you say things when you want to make a party political point, you have to make a serious party political point.

1010 And so, let us reflect on what we found when we followed them into Government. We found absolutely no provision whatsoever. We were elected into Government and immediately the hon. Lady started to make provision for British Sign Language to be provided at events for the Government. There are not enough people to help us with this and that is one of the challenges, but immediately we were providing British Sign Language on National Day and on other occasions.

1015 I do not know whether in saying that we have ignored people who are suffering from hearing loss, tinnitus etc., the hon. Gentleman has forgotten that in our manifesto for the 2015 election we had considerable provision in respect of the deaf, and indeed in our manifesto for the 2019 General Election. I imagine that we want to forget these things because I am talking about elections that they lost, so they do not like to think back, but we have more provision on page 109 of our manifesto – ‘Working with GHITA’, ‘A strategy to deal with deafness’, ‘Screening children for deafness’, ‘A study on hearing loss’, ‘Hearing aids’ and ‘Services for the deaf’ – and there we set out again:

We established the use of a British Sign Language interpreter on National Day and we are committed that this will always be provided for as long as we are in Government.

The way that we provide for this, to ensure that it continues when we are not in Government, is to entrench it into legislation, which is exactly what we are doing today.

1025 I hope that GHITA sees that it has support across the floor of the House, but we should, I think, be hesitant to get into a competition of showing GHITA who supports them more or less. But if a competition is what hon. Members want, the Government that they led did nothing and the Government that we lead has incrementally done things and now has brought this Bill and is going to pass it. I think, frankly, therefore, that it ill-behoves any of us to play a party political game on a day that we have said is historic and seminal.

1030 Having said that, I was surprised to hear the hon. Lady say that this is long overdue when I have certainly not heard her voice on this issue at all, before. It is surprising that somebody who has not raised the issue, who has not campaigned on the issue and who has not even brought a motion says that something is long overdue. (Interjection by Hon. Ms M D Hassan Nahon) Well, then, Mr Speaker, in that context, it must have been long overdue for her to do something about it, and in saying that at least – which I do not recognise is the right approach – we are recognising the works of the relevant NGOs, she is recognising that we recognise the work of the NGOs and therefore I hope she will not be saying that we do not listen, because we have listened and she was wrong to say that it was the motion that had spurred on this Bill: completely wrong.

1040 The Government has certified this Bill today as urgent for a reason: because if we had not certified it we would not have been able to proceed with it until 27th May, which means we would not have been able to come back to it until the next meeting of the House. There is no reason why we should not be getting on with the things that GHITA wants us to be getting on with, and that is what we are going to do, get on with the things that the people who have a need in this area want us to be doing, rather than simply continuing to engage in a baseless exchange on the party-political aspects of who did what, when.

1045 What we have to recognise is that there are two people with a link to Gibraltar – one of them is a Gibraltarian, and they are a married couple – walking to raise funds for people who have difficulties with hearing. What we have to recognise is the incredible work done by Edgar Triay. We have to recognise and remember that he is supported by people like Mrs Facio Beanland, who gave an extraordinarily moving talk in February 2020 at one of the Gibraltar Talks about the difficulties that people with hearing loss suffer. We have to recognise that for many years Joe Brugada has been campaigning on this issue. He described himself as wanting to be a thorn in my side until we took the steps that we had to take, and here we are taking them. His daughter, and her husband as well, and Jackie Dalli and Tony Gomez. These are the people who deserve recognition today for the work that they have done – and many others, I am sure, who I cannot name-check because I simply do not know their names.

This is not about some sterile argument between some politicians on a hot day, late in May, about who did what and who said what, when; but if it were, hon. Members have to remember that the only ones who can do are the ones sitting on this side – and doing we are, Mr Speaker.

1060

Mr Speaker: Does the mover of the Bill wish to respond?

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can I –?

Mr Speaker: Can I just interject before we continue? I would just like to read out something that I thought might be useful for today, but mainly for the future, about the way we cover the general principles and merits of Bills. It says here:

Members must confine discussion to the main purpose and the contents of the Bill and not deal at length with matters not provided for therein. The reference may be made to such matters if related to the Bill. It must be confined to the Bill as printed.

We tend, many times, to stray from this. I am just reminding Members what is required of everyone.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, of course that is right, but as we are midstream in the debate on the principles of the Bill and certain things have been said beyond that passage, with your indulgence on this occasion I would like to respond not just on matters which are relevant here but also the things that have been said, because at the end of it that passage could have been read also a bit earlier. Certainly, going forward, I think that is an important passage that Your ... that Mr Speaker has read. I was about to call you Your Lordship – but not yet!

1075

Mr Speaker, this is indeed a day that is a cause for celebration, as has been said on both sides of the House, and I agree that the true heroes of this are the people who have had been mentioned by the Chief Minister and my hon. colleague Mr Phillips, and also those who have suffered silently and have wanted more assistance, more help, and are slightly frustrated and have encouraged Members of the House to vote in favour, as indeed we are. It is a cause for celebration that this is happening and, indeed, that we are taking these steps forward. I hope that this framework – because it is only a framework – provides a basis for us to move forward and deliver that package of support for people who have these hearing issues.

1080

In saying that, the Chief Minister in his contribution seems to take any opportunity to engage and widen the debate beyond things that are not in the principles itself. He may criticise my hon. colleague Mr Phillips for having taken a particular stance, he may not have liked the comments that he was making, but with all due respect, Mr Phillips's comments were restricted to the subject matter of the Bill – but he widens it to who improved the planning processes. It has nothing to do with the Bill. If he really wants a history lesson on who opened up the planning process, well, it was not them first, because when we inherited the Government in 1996 we first injected provisions on public participation, which they improved – and I am the first to acknowledge they improved subsequently in 2011, but life did not begin in 2011 when the hon. Member took that chair. The GSLP were not first in office in 2011. We can all play history lessons, but it is a jaded process, and when the hon. Member talks about the motion that my colleague Mr Phillips presented on British Sign Language, still relevant to the principles of the Bill but he casts aspersion as if we did not consult on this motion, it is a peculiar view of democracy, (Two Members: Hear, hear.) because democracy ...

1090

1100 This is what we are supposed to do as parliamentarians on this side of the House. We are supposed to raise issues, hold the Government robustly to account. Sometimes we can get things done by agreement, sometimes we can get things done by persuasion, but motions can be presented by first showing them the draft motion, or they can be presented because it is our democratic function. Or is he saying that he is only willing to agree a motion that is first put to him? I would say, Mr Speaker, that is a slightly peculiar form of democracy because it might be that I file a motion on which he says, 'I never thought of this, and this is a great motion.' If I were 1105 sitting on that side, I might say, 'This Opposition motion is bang on point – I actually think we are going to support it,' but he is saying, in a slightly warped kind of view of democracy, that unless we negotiate it with him he is unwilling; he is going to blind himself in a party-political partisan kind of view to saying no, just because the Opposition have done what we have been elected to do by the people of Gibraltar. It is a matter for him.

1110 And then he goes on to talk about what they have done on sign language and so on. I congratulate them for things they have done in a positive sense. I honestly do congratulate them if they have made improvements for people who are vulnerable people in this community or people who want things. But he casts that point on the basis that it is a sort of lecture point: 'I am not taking lessons from the hon. Members on the other side,' and all of that. It is slightly aggressive 1115 on the basis of a Government that does no wrong. He really needs to calm down. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) He needs to calm down, Mr Speaker. He really does need, on this issue which actually we agree on, to calm down. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

This Bill, which we are supporting, will hopefully provide a basis for significant improvement for people who have hearing disabilities, and we think that is a great step forward. It was 1120 signposted by my hon. colleague's motion. It has been put in the body of a Bill by the Government.
We have supported it. We are going to vote in favour. It will, hopefully, deal with the frustration that we hear from people on the ground in this community, and we think that this will be a step forward – and that is why we are supporting it, but on the basis that I have indicated.

1125 Hon. E J Phillips: Hear, hear.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, at least he made it in time to make a speech.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Samantha Sacramento.

1130 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, how regrettable that the Members opposite have turned this Bill, which was something landmark and representing positive progress, into an attempt at party political point scoring. It is not something that I would have wanted to deal with in that way, but given that the hon. Member Mr Phillips, in his intervention, made it party political, 1135 I am left with no choice but to answer the points that he raised in that respect.

The hon. Gentleman started by saying that this was not about political point scoring but proceeded to make two party political points. The first one was his attempt to take credit for the presentation of this Bill. In the hon. Member's mind, this Government that has a Minister for Equality and a Ministry for Equality, both of which enjoy an excellent relationship with NGOs in 1140 this respect and were already working on this ... No, he ignores that point, he ignores that fact, he ignores the reality and he wants to believe, himself, and by extension he wants the community to believe that his motion was a trigger for this. I therefore have a responsibility to clarify, given that I am the Minister presenting this Bill, that nothing could be further from the truth.

1145 When, regrettably, the Leader of the Opposition aggressively tells us that the motion was ignored, the point that we need to make is that ... I will paraphrase what the hon. Gentleman said.
He said that in an ideal situation we would have agreed with the motion and said, 'Oh, this is fantastic, we agree with your motion.' But no, the reason we did not reply to the motion was because had proper protocol and Parliament etiquette and courtesy been extended, had the hon.

1150 Member opposite informed us that the GSD – Mr Speaker, perhaps if I could have silence in the Chamber, I could hear myself think. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: I have to say that it is really unparliamentary to be murmuring – (Interjections) It applies to both sides. (Interjections) No, I said it applies to both sides, but it is rude and unparliamentary. It works for both sides. (Interjections) No, I am making it –

1155 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, I was heckling, not murmuring. (Interjection)

Mr Speaker: As I said, the last group of persons who were murmuring were the Opposition and that is why I directed my view towards them, but I accept that both sides are guilty of this practice – and it should stop; it is not right.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

My team at the Ministry for Equality and I were really positive and really excited about doing this today, and it is so regrettable that we are being dragged into this by the Opposition, but because they raise it I need to address the issues.

I am going to raise the issue of a technicality, which is a parliamentary process which the general public may not understand, but given that they want to take credit for this, it is important that the public do understand the procedure and the technicalities. The Hon. Mr Phillips presented a motion for there to be a Private Member's Bill on the matter, which would have required the majority of this Parliament. This is a Government Bill. So, we find ourselves in a situation where the hon. Member has found an interest in BSL – and I thank him for that and I commend him for that – but if the hon. Member had done the normal thing, which most Members on the other side do when they find themselves in the situation, called me and said, 'I want to propose a motion to Parliament that will give us this end result,' I would have said, 'Don't worry about it, we are already working on this Bill.' Therefore, the hon. Gentleman cannot pretend to take the credit for the Government Bill that has been presented today, because work was already well on its way. This is the business of the Ministry for Equality, who were already engaged with GHITA and other stakeholders in this, because there were other people whom we were speaking to in this respect, and the foundation work had already been commenced. So, absolutely not, Mr Speaker. As the person who presents this Bill, I can tell the hon. Gentleman very clearly that he was not the trigger for it; it was the advice of the Ministry for Equality and the people we engage with who were the trigger for this.

The hon. Gentleman Mr Phillips also makes another point where he tries to score party political points and which is, indeed, inaccurate. Quite apart from clearly not listening to what I said in my original speech, as well as what I said in answer to Parliament questions last week, Mr Phillips says that we cannot provide British Sign Language interpreters. He does not accept, and we have heard it not only from myself but also from my friend the Hon. Minister Cortes that when he was Minister for Health we made arrangements for BSL provision, initially in the Health Authority because it did not exist. So what we have is a contract between the Health Authority and a provider, for BSL. We have a procedure where if someone who uses BSL needs to see a doctor, they make arrangements in advance by text message, notify the Gibraltar Health Authority that they need to see a doctor so an appointment can be made for them electronically – something which did not exist before either. So there are arrangements for them to be able to make electronic appointments and there are arrangements for them to be expected, and therefore, in the meantime, as much provision as possible. Arrangements will be made for a British Sign Language interpreter to be there to assist. Sometimes, of course, if it is an urgent situation and it is an emergency, it may not be possible to make those arrangements. On that basis, as an alternative to that and as a contingency we have an app, where a British Sign Language interpreter will be available online. For the hon. Gentleman to try to pretend to the community that there are no facilities for people who require British Sign Language is not accurate, and therefore I cannot leave it unanswered in this House.

1205 Mr Speaker, it was more eloquently put by the Leader of the Opposition when he said that more assistance can be provided, and that is what I said in my speech. This is not our starting point, this is a progression of our starting point from 2011 and all the things that we have done in relation to progress on British Sign Language, and we have now entrenched and enshrined it in legislation so, as the Chief Minister said, it will have longevity and posterity because it is now on our statute books. That is an accurate reflection of what we have done, and not what the hon. Gentleman was trying to pretend was the reality.

1210 On the final point, the hon. Gentleman seems not to have read the Bill, because the Bill makes provision for accountability. Section 3 of the Bill clearly states the public authorities the Bill places this responsibility on, because the hon. Gentleman mentioned particular institutions and they are, of course, captured by the Bill. There is provision for accountability, and therefore the Government will have to hold these entities to account, to ensure that the intention of the Government in passing this Bill is actually happening. I hope that the hon. Gentleman now understands and rests assured of the intention of the effect of this legislation.

1215 Mr Speaker, I cannot emphasise enough that a day when we should all be together as a Parliament to speak about the progress that we are making and the inclusion of people with disabilities by the passing of this Bill has been dragged down by the Member opposite because he wanted to make party political points, because he wanted to take the credit for the work that the Government has done.

1220 Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to recognise British Sign Language as a language of Gibraltar, to require the Minister for Equality to report on the promotion and facilitation of the use of British Sign Language by public authorities, and to require guidance to be issued in relation to British Sign Language be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The British Sign Language Act 2022.

British Sign Language Bill 2022 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

1230 Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Pensions (Widows and Orphans) (Amendment) Bill 2020 –
First Reading approved

1235 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Pensions (Widows and Orphans) Act. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Pensions (Widows and Orphans) Act be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Pensions (Widows and Orphans) Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

1245 Clerk: The Pensions (Widows and Orphans) (Amendment) Act 2020.

Pensions (Widows and Orphans) (Amendment) Bill 2020 –
Second Reading approved

1250 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

This is a short Bill that is designed to give effect to my commitment in the Budget speech of 2007 to bring about legislation to enable the widows and orphans provisions to be open to certain members of the community who had evinced an intention to wish to be covered by the provisions of what is known as WOPS.

1255 I recall, Mr Speaker, that at the time we first had debates in this House about this matter, you were, at that stage, the Clerk, not elevated yet to the role of Speaker, and the former Chief Minister used to remind us all in the House that you were the last remaining member of the Civil Service on WOPS.

1260 In 2017, I said, during the course of my Budget address, at paragraphs 505 and 506, the following:

Also in relation to pensioners, the Government has been approached by a number of those entitled to re-enter the Widows and Orphans Pension Scheme who were not married to their current partners at the time that they retired. The law states that any marriage of the pensioner whose rights would be assigned to a widow or orphan who was not married by the time he retired would not be eligible to entitlement. This is grossly unfair and is based on an old law which has not kept pace with modern life.

– in fact, Mr Speaker, the original Bill comes from 1961 –

It is, in any event, an issue that affects only a handful of those who would re-enter the old WOPS scheme. The law will therefore be changed to allow for marriages after the retirement of the contributor if he opts back into the scheme to count also.

[...] The window to re-enter the WOPS scheme [...] will be open again, from midnight tonight until 30th September 2017, to allow those who have previously been denied membership on the basis of the application of this aspect of the law to apply.

1265 That was done, and subsequently we published a Bill, which fell when the General Election was called in 2019 and we then republished a Bill on 20th February 2020 which would deal with the changes that needed to be made. The Hon. Mr Feetham asked me about the progress of the Bill at the last session of the House, and having regard to the Bills that were still outstanding I have seen it is possible for us to take it today.

1270 Mr Speaker, 20th February 2020 was almost exactly six weeks before the pandemic began. I hope that that helps the House to understand the reason why this Bill has not progressed. We have done precious little of the ordinary legislating that we do in this time. We have brought some extraordinary Bills that we have had to deal with. Indeed, in 2020 we did not even have an Appropriation, we had an emergency Appropriation. As I have already said, we have already given a commitment to all those who registered in time that the absence of the Bill would not prevent us from giving them the benefits that they might have registered for.

1275 I believe it is now time for the Bill to be passed. Hon. Members will see it is actually a Bill which has very little effect. It has the effect of making some amendments to deal with the issue that I raised in my Budget speech and permitting, under the relevant provisions, a resumption of contributions where that is relevant – although I do not think there is anyone in the service who will be involved in that.

1280 And so, Mr Speaker, I move that the House should now approve this Bill, which I think is one that all sides agree needs to be put in place to give effect to this part of the Budget Statement of 2017.

1285 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the Opposition is going to be voting in favour of the Bill. It is a very welcome Bill and it will be very welcome in particular to those who are affected by it.

1290 I have had an opportunity now to consider the Bill in the light of the statute that it amends, and in my view it does deal with a concern that I have had at the back of my mind, and I do not for one moment hesitate in saying this. At the end of the day, we are not here ... although we are here to, of course, make political points in the right way, we are not here to make political points that may cause concern amongst those who may be affected.

1295 The point that I was concerned about was, because the commitment by the Hon. Chief Minister was made in 2017 – as he rightly says, the Government published a Bill but that Bill went by the wayside because the House dissolved and the Bill had not been brought to Parliament; a new Bill was then published in 2020 – whether the time period from 2017 all the way to today, in 2022, had the propensity to cause a prejudice, in particular to the widows of those contributors or ex-public servants who may have died from 2017 to 2022, or whenever the Bill is taken. In fact, the combination of the amendments together with section 18A(2) of the Act that we are amending will allow a contributor's widow to make the contributions if her ... or his wife, or whoever it may be, the partner, has died in that five-year period. I have no hesitation in expressing my view that that is the effect of the amendments when taken together with the principal Act, and for those reasons I have no hesitation in saying, on behalf of the Opposition, that we will be supporting the Bill. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

1310 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am very pleased to hear that from the hon. Gentleman. I think I have given an indication that the thing that he says concerned him should not concern him, and I am very pleased that he has de-concerned himself in that respect.

1315 What I would say is that one of the things that they have always criticised that we introduced, which was the principle of commutations, has meant that there are fewer and fewer people who are going to be interested in respect of this particular Bill, going forward. It is true that they were not supportive of that, but I think it has worked very well. Then again, they were not supportive of so many things that have worked so well, not least ... I am just remembering the things that they used to say about the Future Job Strategy, let alone commutations and how they were going to ruin us. And so I am very pleased, Mr Speaker, that they are going to support this Bill.

1320 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Pensions (Widows and Orphans) Act be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Pensions (Widows and Orphans) (Amendment) Act 2020.

Pensions (Widows and Orphans) (Amendment) Bill 2020 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting 1325 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of this Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

1335 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should now resolve itself into Committee to consider the following Bills clause by clause, namely the Pensions (Widows and Orphans) (Amendment) Bill 2020, the University of Gibraltar (Amendment) Bill 2021, the Employment (Bullying at Work) (Amendment) Bill 2022 and the British Sign Language Bill 2022.

In Committee of the whole House

Pensions (Widows and Orphans) (Amendment) Bill 2020 –
Clauses considered and approved

1340 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Pensions (Widows and Orphans) Act. Clauses 1 and 2.

Mr Chairman: May I interject at this point and point out that in the title and commencement it refers to the 'Act 2020' – should that not be 2022?

1345 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Chairman, yes, I am grateful. Because the Bill has been on the Order Paper for some time now, the Act will have to be read as 2022. The Bill is still the 2020 Bill, but the Act will have to become the 2022 Act, which is clause 1.

Mr Speaker: Clause 1 stands part of the Bill.

1350 Clerk: Clause 2.

Mr Chairman: Clause 2 stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: The long title.

1355

Mr Chairman: The long title stands part of the Bill.

University of Gibraltar (Amendment) Bill 2021 –
Clauses considered and approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the University of Gibraltar Act.

Clauses 1 to 3.

1360 Minister for Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Chairman, in the same way as we needed to amend the year, we need to do so in clause 1.

Mr Chairman: Clause 1 stands part of the Bill.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, if I may: in clause 3(12) I propose that where it says 'For section 22 substitute' that part now reads 'Subject to subsections (2) and (3)' as opposed to subsections (1) and (2).

1370 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Absolutely, Mr Chairman, we agreed that earlier, so that is ... I think we agree on both sides.

Mr Chairman: Clause 3 as amended stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: The long title stands part of the Bill.

Employment (Bullying at Work) (Amendment) Bill 2022 –
Clauses considered and approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Employment (Bullying at Work) Act 2014.
Clauses 1 and 2.

Mr Chairman: Clauses 1 and 2 stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 3, as amended.

1385 Mr Chairman: The amendment in clause 3 which was circulated earlier in the month, if the Opposition is content with that.
Clause 3, as amended, stands part of the Bill.

1390 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, you have just indicated the amendment circulated earlier in the month. Is that an amendment which was circulated today or yesterday?

Hon. Member: No, it was circulated on Monday.

Mr Chairman: I clarify that: it was earlier in the month, but it was really on 25th May.

1395

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Yes, it is the one I sent Mr Speaker to give notice that I would be moving the amendment.

Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: The long title stands part of the Bill.

British Sign Language Bill 2022 –
Clauses considered and approved

1405 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to recognise British Sign Language as a language of Gibraltar, to require the Minister for Equality to report on the promotion and facilitation of the use of British Sign Language by public authorities, and to require guidance to be issued in relation to British Sign Language.
Clauses 1 to 7.

Mr Chairman: Clauses 1 to 7 stand part of the Bill.

1410 Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: The long title stands part of the Bill.

Pensions (Widows and Orphans) (Amendment) Bill 2020 –
University of Gibraltar (Amendment) Bill 2021 –
Employment (Bullying at Work) (Amendment) Bill 2022 –
British Sign Language Bill 2022 –
Third Reading approved: Bills passed

1415 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report that the Pensions (Widows and Orphans) (Amendment) Bill 2020, the University of Gibraltar (Amendment) Bill 2021, the Employment (Bullying at Work) (Amendment) Bill 2022 and the British Sign Language Bill 2022 have been considered in Committee and agreed to, some with amendments.
I now move that they be read a third time and passed.

1420 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that the Pensions (Widows and Orphans) (Amendment) Bill 2020, the University of Gibraltar (Amendment) Bill 2021, the Employment (Bullying at Work) (Amendment) Bill 2022 and the British Sign Language Bill 2022 be read a third time and be passed.

Those in favour of the Pensions (Widows and Orphans) (Amendment) Bill 2020? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

1425 Those in favour of the University of Gibraltar (Amendment) Bill 2021? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Those in favour of the Employment (Bullying at Work) (Amendment) Bill 2022? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

1430 Those in favour of the British Sign Language Bill 2022? (Members: Aye.) (Interjection) Thank you. Those against? Carried.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, given that we have now dealt with all of the business of the House, I move that the House should now adjourn sine die.

Procedural –
Leader of the Opposition’s motion on mental health to be deferred to a future meeting

1435 Hon. K Azopardi: Sorry, Mr Speaker, if the Chief Minister will give way, I just wanted to record the fact that I have a motion standing in my name on the subject of mental health. I have agreed with the Hon. Minister for Health to defer it to another meeting, so that a meeting can take place between us and the hon. Lady on the issues.

Procedural –
Private Member’s motion re British Sign Language withdrawn

1440 Mr Speaker: I must enquire about the motion taken by the Hon. Elliott Phillips: is that to be withdrawn or remain on the Order Paper?

1445 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, in relation to the advances made today, I will be withdrawing that Bill – given, of course, the Government has indicated it would oppose it in any event, but it is withdrawn.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

1450 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, it was not a Bill, it was a motion, and it is not that we would have opposed it, it is that it became hypothetical as a result of the Government’s action.

Adjournment

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I now move that the House should adjourn sine die.

1455 When we return, in June, depending on how Government business progresses but in order to give hon. Members a heads-up, I do intend that June should be the month in which we take the Budget, the Appropriation Bill. I am in contact with the Leader of the Opposition about dates. Unfortunately, at the moment, the dates that the Government considers are the ones we need to take may not be convenient. It may not be possible to move them, but we will obviously try to come back to deal with the Appropriation debate on dates when all Members can be here, if possible.

1460 Mr Speaker: I now propose the question, which is that this House do now adjourn sine die.
I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn sine die. Those in favour?
(Members: Aye.) Those against? Passed.
This House will now adjourn sine die.

The House adjourned at 6.08 p.m.

PRAYER

Mr Speaker

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Wednesday, 22nd June 2022.

Order of Proceedings: (i) Oath of Allegiance; (ii) Confirmation of Minutes – the Minutes of the last meeting of the Parliament, which was held on 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 24th and 25th May 2022.

5

Mr Speaker: May I sign the Minutes as correct?

Members: Aye.

Mr Speaker signed the Minutes.

COMMUNICATIONS FROM THE CHAIR

Condolences to the Clerk

Clerk: (iii) Communications from the Chair.

10

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I rise, today, with a heavy heart, to start the proceedings with various condolences, the first to the Clerk upon the death of his well-known and well-liked father, Charlie.

Tribute to Lady Marcelle Hassan

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, since the last session the community has learnt of the death of two of our most prominent and strongest women, Lady Marcelle Hassan and Claire Borrell. I know the whole House will wish to make tributes to both and will want to do so separately, to give each their due. I shall start with Lady Hassan.

20 Marcelle Bensimon was not a native Gibraltarian, but she became one. She arrived in Gibraltar from her native Morocco to work for a worthy and charitable purpose, which was to help Jewish immigrants using Gibraltar as a staging post in transit to the state of Israel.

25 Having been married to Sir Joshua in 1969, she experienced with him his only – short-lived – election loss and his subsequent four consecutive election wins. As the spouse of Chief Minister Hassan, Lady Hassan carried the burden of being in the public eye at an immensely difficult time. In fact, for the lion's share of that time, the Frontier was closed. Let us not forget how hard those times were. Every day would have been a struggle to maintain supplies and even a working economy. More than that, every day there would have been one mission: to maintain morale in this community. Lady Hassan was the non-political focal point for many in that respect. She was 30 also the ray of glamour in that period that so many looked at, as well as being a close political adviser to Sir Joshua and the AACR team.

35 Whilst he was Chief Minister, Lady Hassan bore Sir Joshua two daughters, both of them following him into public life. The youngest, Marlene, is well known in this place in her own right as an hon. Member. The eldest, Fleur, is Deputy Mayor of Jerusalem and does not fail to evangelise her Gibraltarian origins, whether in Israel or elsewhere. I know Lady Hassan was more than proud of her daughters and their own contributions to public life in different jurisdictions of such importance to her.

40 A personal reflection for a moment, Mr Speaker. I remember Lady Hassan telling me not to get into politics. She told me – for my good, she said – that no one would thank me for anything once I was in politics. When I did take the first steps into politics, she took me to one side in the lift at the law firm that bears her late husband's illustrious name and said, 'Now, don't cower when they criticise you, do what you think is right and do what you have to do. That is what my husband did.' Both pieces of advice she gave me were good pieces of advice. Having failed to follow the first, I was clear that I at least had to follow the second, because it was equally clear that it was advice
45 given from the heart to el hijo de Magda. My mother, in particular, was an admirer of Lady Hassan's style. In fact, she had been Sir Joshua Hassan's secretary when they married, and I recall the warmth between them.

50 Mr Speaker, the pressures on the spouses of those at the top of the political hierarchy are often overlooked. At least those of us who are in the public arena are here because we choose to be here. Those who accompany us – our children, our spouses, our partners – are, in effect, volunteered for the role by us. Theirs is the part that is often as hard as ours, however, and no doubt Lady Hassan carried that burden lightly.

55 In her time, Lady Hassan represented us on royal visits – including the visit of the next monarch, Prince Charles – innumerable ceremonial functions, innumerable local events, and for 16 years she was at the very top of the representation of our people, alongside Sir Joshua Hassan. I recall a photograph of Sir Joshua and Lady Hassan and Joe Garcia Snr and Mrs Garcia being feted together at the Marbella Club just after the Frontier opened. That photograph is an illustration, after the end of the last Siege of Gibraltar, of Gibraltar's success in surmounting that challenge under Sir Joshua's leadership, with Marcelle at his side.

60 Lady Hassan came from beyond our shores, but she became one of us. She is now buried amongst us and she will forever remain with us. May she rest in peace. I extend the condolences of the whole of Gibraltar and the whole House to her daughters and grandchildren.

65 Marlene Hassan, who is a Member of this House, has asked that, as Leader of the House, I should extend her apologies to the people of Gibraltar for her absence today and from this session. There is no need for her to apologise. I have no doubt that we all agree that she should absent herself from this session and we support that she tend to her family at his time and address, together with them, the pain of this sad bereavement.

70 Mr Speaker, after tributes from others, I will invite the House to observe a minute's silence in honour of Lady Hassan's memory.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, on behalf of the Members on this side of the House, of course I associate myself with the comments of the Chief Minister. He started by making the observation and also his condolences on the death of the father of the Clerk of the House, and I do so as well.

75 Lady Hassan, as the Chief Minister has said, was Sir Joshua's partner and confidante for so many years. She was part of the public life of Gibraltar. During that period when Sir Joshua was Chief Minister, between 1972 and 1988, she was by his side not only politically but also bringing up the family.

80 As the Chief Minister has said, the recognition of spouses, who are ... he used the more elegant term 'volunteered' for the role, but almost pressganged into public life. The role of the spouses is not perhaps recognised enough. The family comes under pressure when someone is in politics. I was a very small boy, but I am sure that during the Frontier years, in leading Gibraltar, Sir Joshua did ... In that very difficult time the political pressure must have been intense, and also the intensity of the proximity of voters to his own immediate family at the time of the closure of the border and the pressures that Gibraltar was feeling, both in terms of social pressures and confinement, must have been intense, and Lady Hassan played an impressive role in assisting Sir Joshua during those years.

85 So, certainly on behalf of Members on this side of the House I associate with everything the Chief Minister has said in respect of Lady Hassan. She played a significant role, not least of course in the community, in public affairs, but also as a mother, and you see that combination of efforts in the work that Sir Joshua and Lady Hassan's daughters do today. Both have gone into politics. Both, in their own right, have carved out their path in political roles in this community and in Israel, and it is clear when you look at that, both in the case of Fleur and Marlene, that you see that combination of the efforts and upbringing of Sir Joshua and Lady Hassan.

90 So, on behalf of the Members on this side, I certainly extend our condolences also to the family and our thanks as parliamentarians for the role she played during so many years in this community to assist one of our Chief Ministers, our longstanding Chief Minister, who had a very difficult role to play – and an excellent role he played – during so many years.

95 Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

100 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, I would like to add a few words to what has already been said in expressing my own sincere condolences on the sad passing of Lady Hassan.

105 I had the pleasure of meeting her on several occasions, obviously not recently but Sir Joshua and Lady Hassan and my parents were close friends for many years, so I was able to meet her and my impression was that she was a passionate, forceful and determined lady, particularly in relation to her husband, the AACR, the Government at the time and the political issues that were current at that moment.

110 As has rightly been said, she fulfilled a personal role – obviously, as Sir Joshua's wife and as a mother – but also a political one in advising and in having very strong political views, which is what I remember. That is my own enduring memory.

115 I would like to express my deepest sympathy and condolences to Marlene, to Fleur and to the family. May she rest in peace.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I now invite the House to hold a minute's silence in honour of Lady Hassan.

Members observed a minute's silence.

Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Tribute to Mrs Claire Borrell

120 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the sad news has also reached us that women's champion Claire Borrell passed away this weekend also.

Mrs Borrell was the force behind the creation of the charity Women in Need and she was exactly that: she was a force. I remember working with Claire in the law, in Opposition and in Government, and I can tell the House that there was little chance of not agreeing to give Claire the support that she might be seeking from time to time, whichever role she might have found me in.

125 She was a person who, herself, had suffered marital abuse. She stood up to it in a society where those things were still taboo, and she took a stand for her children and for herself. In doing so, she was, in fact, taking a stand for other women. She really did trail-blaze in this area and her work helped hundreds to free themselves from similarly abusive relationships. Claire made us talk about these uncomfortable truths and realities that had lain hidden in our community for so many years. The fact is that those issues have not gone away, even if they are no longer hidden away. In the last years she was working in Women in Need she was also providing some services to men who were abused and found themselves downtrodden; such was the nature of her approach to helping everyone who found themselves in that sort of situation.

130 I enjoyed working with Claire immensely. She was not a do-gooder, she was a go-getter who wanted not to give people charity but help them to get back on their feet and move on to a better place. I confess that she also had a wicked sense of humour and there was not one time when we met when she did not tell me off for something and make me laugh over something else, most especially when she broke off into her heavily accented Spanish.

135 Mr Speaker, Claire Borrell House is a fitting tribute to the work of this magnificent pioneer, who was recognised by Her Majesty the Queen with an MBE for the work she did in Gibraltar. The condolences of all of Gibraltar, in particular on behalf of all those she helped, go to her children, Amanda, Jonathan and Theresa. None will have suffered this loss like they have, but we will all mourn the loss of Claire.

140 Again, Mr Speaker, after tributes from others, I will invite the House to observe a minute's silence in honour of her memory.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

150 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I first met Claire ... I think it would have been in the mid-1990s. We were still in Opposition then, but she was already engaged quite heavily, and had already been for some time, with one of the leading voices on domestic issues, bringing those issues to the fore and lobbying hard on those matters.

155 Her career speaks for itself. She worked for decades tirelessly to bring these issues to the fore, to ensure that women got a home that they could go to as a shelter, so that they could be safeguarded and protected in a better way. She was one of the leading lights behind Women in Need and indeed the establishment of the refuge, and her work has served many families and put many families in a better place than they would have been had she not done that tireless work.

160 When you are involved in politics you meet a lot of people and a lot of people working for sectoral organisations and individual groups. They usually are unpaid servants who have a particular interest and are working tirelessly, and it is those people who actually are bettering the quality of life of many people in this community on the ground. Claire was one of those people who worked so hard, and even though, yes, she was recognised towards the end, sometimes it is difficult when you do that kind of balance sheet ... Was it enough recognition of all her work, because of the incredible efforts that she gave this community for so many years?

165 So, absolutely, on this side of the House we also associate ourselves with the comments of the Chief Minister and extend the condolences of Members of the Opposition to her family at this 170 time. She was, as I said the other day, a champion of women. She will be remembered as a champion of women and she will be fondly remembered.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Samantha Sacramento.

175 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I first met Claire when I was in private practice and it was at that time that I was introduced to the problem of domestic abuse in Gibraltar. Subsequently, when I became Minister with this responsibility, in my capacity as Minister for Equality, I worked very closely with Claire and her team at Women in Need and I can truly say that, as we have already heard, Claire was very much a force to be reckoned with all the time and she was equally inspirational in reminding us all of our duty to help support and protect victims of 180 domestic abuse. She has set a legacy, which we will, of course, continue.

I would also like to take this opportunity to express my condolences to her family.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I ask that the whole House now join us in one minute's silence in memory of Claire Borrell.

Members observed a minute's silence.

185 Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Armed Forces Week

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Finally, Mr Speaker, this week is Armed Forces Week. The whole of Gibraltar will want to join me in wishing all members of the British Armed Forces all the very best for the week and for Saturday, which is Armed Forces Day.

190 The British Armed Forces are amongst the best in the world and the most professional. Our own Royal Gibraltar Regiment is a part of the British Armed Forces, and today the Speaker of the House of Commons wore the regimental tie of the Royal Gibraltar Regiment during Prime Minister's Questions there, as I do this afternoon in this House.

The British Armed Forces are the best of us and we thank them for what they do.

195 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker. May I concur fully with the Chief Minister's comments?

This House, believe it or not, actually represents Members who have been in the reserve forces in all the three armed services. If we start by seniority with the prestigious Mr Speaker himself, who was a Royal Navy reserve officer and indeed the recipient of the reserve decoration for that ... I am one of those peculiar characters who has actually managed to wear both uniforms, both 200 Army, as a reservist in the Royal Gibraltar Regiment, and then later, when I was commissioned in the RAF Volunteer Reserve Training section.

Certainly it should be recorded here, and I think it echoes the Chief Minister's words, that those Gibraltarians, men and women, who are very prominent in this day and age in the services ... we stand and admire their service to Queen and country and it is very fitting in this special anniversary 205 year of Her Majesty the Queen.

PAPERS TO BE LAID

Clerk: (iv) Petitions; (v) Announcements; (vi) Papers to be laid – the Hon. the Chief Minister.

210 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table the Annual Report of the Independent Monitoring Authority 2021 and the Gibraltar Annual Policing Plan for 2022-23.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Questions for Oral Answer

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS, EMPLOYMENT, HOUSING AND SPORT

Q207/2022

Youth clubs –

Opening times during school summer holidays

215 Clerk: (vii) Reports of Committees; (viii) Answers to Oral Questions.
Question 207/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, further to the answer provided to Question 32/2022, can Government provide details of the opening times at the youth clubs for the forthcoming summer school holidays period?

220 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

225 Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares):
Mr Speaker, during the summer months, club users will be able to take part in the following activities: club outdoor patio games, collaboration Army sessions with the Royal Gibraltar Regiment, interclub sports events, movie nights at the clubs, community barbecues, paddle boarding activities at local beaches, arts and crafts projects, cooking projects, upcycling fashion project, karaoke sessions, leadership programme, pre-work campaigns and elections of youth club representatives, space to relax ‘chill-out’ sessions, rehearsals and practice for the end of summer show, ‘Time to Shine’ end of summer showcase, and barbecue for friends and family at the Youth Centre courtyard. Please note that some of these activities will also take place during the weekends.

230 I now hand over to the hon. Member a schedule with information on the youth clubs’ opening times.

Answer to Question 207/2022

During the summer months, club opening times will be as follow;

Youth Center

- Tuesdays 11:00am -2:00pm — Youth Committee / GYPT
- Wednesdays 7:00pm-9:45pm — Youth Café drop-in
- Thursdays 11:00am-2:00pm or 7:00-10:00pm — Joyful Riot
- Fridays 7:00pm-9:45pm — Youth Café drop-in

There will be a Rockthrifters (upcycling Fashion project) week for ages 11-15 from 18th — 22nd July.

Dolphins Youth Club

- Tuesdays 7:00pm — 10:00pm
- Wednesdays 10:00am — 1:00pm
- Thursdays 7:00pm — 10:00pm

Laguna Youth Club

- Tuesdays 10:00am-1:00pm
- Wednesdays 6:30am-9:30pm
- Thursdays 6:30am-9:30pm

Plater Youth Club

- Tuesdays 10:00am-1:00pm
- Wednesdays 7:00pm-9:30pm
- Thursdays 10.00am-1:00pm

235 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I am grateful for the handout. Just one minor clarification: these times are irrespective of the activities that the Minister read out? So, whether a youngster is taking part in any of those activities or not, he can expect the Youth Centre to be open during the times as per the schedule?

240 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker. As soon as a youth club is open, not only do these activities happen but the Youth Service will provide for anybody who wants to come in. The hon. Member should note the timings because it is during the morning time when the children, during the summer, are not in school, and that is why they are catering in the morning for the children who are not in school.

245 Hon. E J Reyes: Can I be pedantic and double-check that in respect of the Laguna Youth Club it is open, on Wednesday and Thursday, as early as 6.30 a.m. – or is that a typographical error?

250 Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, I do not see it as a typographical error. I am sure that they start early in the morning, even at that time, at 6.30 in the morning. I will, nonetheless, check, but I am sure, because if the hon. Member looks at the Plater Youth Club, they start at seven on Wednesday, so they do start pretty early and I am sure it is to do with children whose parents go to work and they have nowhere to go, so they will probably pop into the Youth Service.

255 Hon. E J Reyes: As you know, we are both reading the same sheet, Mr Speaker. The Plater Youth Club on a Wednesday opens at 7 p.m. and closes at 9.30 p.m. I was referring to the Laguna Youth Club, where on Wednesday and Thursday it is open for something like 15 hours from 6.30 a.m., which is ... I have grandchildren who are very early risers, but to be at a youth club at 6.30 a.m. takes the biscuit.

260 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I will check whether it is a.m. or p.m.

Hon. E J Reyes: And while that is common, from my general knowledge, the footnote at the end of the Youth Centre says 'There will be a Rockthrifters (upcycling Fashion project)'. I know the keenness of certain Ministers in getting us all to cycle to work and so on, but could we please have 265 a layman's explanation of what 'upcycling Fashion project' is?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, in today's age, upcycling has nothing to do with actual cycling, it is to do with recycling. Nowadays, due to the young people looking after the environment, they will get all the things that are in fashion and which people with a lot of money use once, and they 270 upcycle – which means recycle – the clothes. There is a big market in that now. You can see in the clubhouse a shop where there are second-hand clothes – very good quality, may I add, and I would ask everybody to have a look and see if they can buy clothes from there. My passion is to go to vintage shops in London to buy many of my clothes, because I think we should be looking after the environment. 'Upcycling' means 'recycling'.

275 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q208/2022
Sports facilities –
Update re expected completion dates

Clerk: Question 208/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Further to his answer to Question 35/2022, where he stated his hopes of 280 completion by the month of June, can the Minister for Sport update this House with details of which remedial works in respect of sporting facilities have now been fully completed, together with details of those still pending and their revised completion dates?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.
285

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares):
Mr Speaker, I am glad to confirm that the subcontractor responsible for completing the track at the Lathbury Sports Complex has been on site for over two weeks. Works are progressing very well, with completion and subsequent line marking to be completed as expected.

290 The swimming pool testing and commissioning continues progressing. As explained in our last session, whilst a very slow process, this is a necessary step to ensure that any issues are dealt with immediately.

In terms of Europa, works on the wicket will commence on 4th July with the specialist contractor undertaking their portion of these on 18th July. This final phase should take two to 295 three days at most. Whilst on site, the contractor will review the pending fencing issues and address accordingly.

Q209/2022

Customs Marine section dispute – Actions to resolve

Clerk: Question 209/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: What is the Government doing to resolve the dispute that Unite the Union 300 has declared with Customs over the issues relating to the Marine section?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares):
305 Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the dispute is now on hold and that HM Government of Gibraltar has entered into a consultation process with Unite the Union on the matters pertaining to the Customs Marine section. This process is ongoing and both parties are working together on the drafting of policies specific to the Marine section.

Hon. D A Feetham: Arising out of the answer the Minister has kindly provided, what are the 310 matters that are currently in discussion?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as I said in the answer to the question, this is pertaining to policy 315 specifics. It is to do with the policies of each section. They are undergoing reviews of policies. We are working at them and, as the hon. Member knows, they have already lifted the industrial dispute completely.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but let's drill down in relation to that: what policies? Of course, 320 'policies' is generic, but it is policies on some aspect of the job they are doing. Can he give details about the policies of what specifically, so that this House is informed about that?

Hon. S E Linares: On policies pertaining to the Marine section. Therefore, it is to do with having 325 policies on working practices, issues with shift work, issues which are completely and utterly pertaining to them. That was the crux of the dispute, that the two unions would not agree to what should be done. When we sat down together and said let's draft out what needs to be done ... both unions are now satisfied that we are working at that and therefore have lifted the industrial action.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am sorry to persist, but all he has really said in relation to the 330 matters ... This is the word that he used originally in his answer, the 'matters'; then he used the words 'the policy'. The only specific he has provided is in relation to shift work, so is he saying that this underlying dispute was about shift work and that is what the Government is now in discussions about, or are there other matters, which the Government is also discussing with the union, that provoked the industrial action in the first place?

Hon. D A Feetham: In order to assist the Minister, let me just read a report of the actual press release that Unite 335 issued when it declared a dispute with Customs. It says that it related to a question in relation to 'a rotation period of eight years' for the Marine section. I was not sure what that meant, whether it related to simply shift or, for example, that somebody is allocated to the Marine section for a period of eight years and then comes off it after a period of eight years. Those are the types of 340 issues that I am trying to elicit information on, so that we understand what this dispute was about.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, he has answered his own question. He has said about the eight years – that was another issue, and we have now cleared those issues. Therefore, there is not any 345 longer the issue of the eight years; we have cleared it. So, he has actually answered the question.

If he knows that it is to do with the eight-year period, then it is exactly what we have agreed to.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I –

350 Mr Speaker: This will be the final one.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes. I do not know whether the Chief Minister is in a position to assist the House in relation to this. We are, on this side, I have to say, quite confused about the answers that the Minister is providing about this.

355 Let's see whether we can at least distil what the Minister is saying, so we can get some clarity. The underlying dispute is about shift work and it is about this eight-year rotational period. Those are the only two issues – one I have proffered, and the other one he has proffered to me.

360 Given the eight-year rotation period has been solved, according to the Minister, can I ask him at least to inform the House as to how that eight-year rotation period reason for the dispute has been solved?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government conducts its industrial relations negotiations with the unions, not with hon. Members in this House.

365 The issue has been resolved in a manner which I commend the Hon. new Minister for Industrial Relations for. I was unable to deal with many of these issues because of the other pressures of work I had and therefore had to pass the industrial relations brief to a man who had previously been president of one of our national unions, and it has been resolved to the satisfaction of all involved.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q210/2022
Work permits –
Policy re non-EU and non-British residents

370 Clerk: Question 210/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

375 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain the reasons behind the policy where a non-EU and non-British resident in Gibraltar with a residency card, married to a Gibraltar believer, is not provided by the ETB with a work permit where a recruitment agency wants to place him in firm employment, albeit under a zero-hours contract or a contract below a certain number of hours?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

380 Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I can assure this House that the Department of Employment reviews all applications received from employers who wish to engage non-entitled workers fully in accordance with the Employment Regulations 1994.

385 The hon. Member must know that whether or not a work permit is granted is not a matter of policy but a matter of law. In particular, whether or not to grant a work permit is a determination to be made by the Director of Employment under the Employment Regulations 1994 in her sole and absolute discretion.

390 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the Minister will forgive me, but I have been helping a particular constituent; it is a couple. She is British-Gibraltarian, has been in Gibraltar all her life and is married to somebody born in Africa. I just use the continent because I do not want her to be identified. I have looked at the law. The law does not prevent, as far as I can see, a work permit from being issued, but I am being told by the public servants I am dealing with at the ETB that if the contract that underpins that person's potential employment or potential placement by the recruitment agency is zero hours or below a certain number of hours, the policy is not to issue a work permit. Therefore, the problem is the chicken-and-egg situation that he cannot get the employment because he does not have ... The recruitment agency will not place him where the recruitment agency would want to place him, and he is very happy with that, because a work permit does not issue. Of course, simply because the contract is a zero-hours contract does not mean that he is not going to be working, because people on zero-hours contracts ... whatever the morality of that is, the reality is that they may work for many hours in a week, and he is quite happy to sign a zero-hours contract – at least he is working in the placement where it was proposed that he was going to work.

405 I have raised this matter with Debbie Garcia, whom I have to say I have no criticism of at all. I want to put that beyond doubt because she is probably, out of all the public servants I have dealt with, one of the most helpful. She is a person who always knows what she is doing and she is very helpful and keen to help. But of course we have this situation. Can, at least, the Minister undertake to me to try to look at this, liaise with Debbie Garcia at the ETB and see whether I am right that nothing in law prevents the issue of this permit? And if there is nothing in law that prevents it and it is just a policy, that perhaps that policy might be dealt with in more a malleable situation to prevent injustice? Certainly I think there has been an injustice in this situation. Will the Minister undertake to do that?

415 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has brought up three issues: one pertaining to a personal problem that someone has, which obviously I am not in a position to discuss at all. There is a law that says data protection ... and therefore what pertains to the particular person he represents is not something I am going to answer at all.

420 The second thing is that I totally agree with him in the characterisation he has given to Debbie Garcia, because she is absolutely a person who does take her job very seriously and has been dealing with this case. That is as much as I am going to say about this case.

425 The third was the zero-hours contract issue and the policy. It is a matter of law, as I have just said in answer to the question. It is not a matter of whether we should or should not do it, it is a matter of law, so I stick to my previous answer, also adding about Debbie Garcia and adding that I will not comment on any personal issues pertaining to somebody specifically.

430 Hon. D A Feetham: I have not mentioned this person by name, but when they were in Opposition – I do not criticise him for it at all because it is completely proper – and when we are in Opposition it is completely proper for us to bring to this place the personal issues of constituents that may have some wider implications. It is also, with respect, not impermissible or inappropriate for me, across the floor of this House, to try to help a constituent – because, at the end of the day, here we are all servants of the people, servants of constituents – to try to see whether at least we can get some justice for an individual, even if we do not mention that individual's name.

435 With that in mind, can he at least ask one of his public servants to write to me referring to the provision in the piece of legislation that says it cannot be done because of x, y and z provision? It may well be that I can write back to them and say 'That cannot be right for these other reasons'. Perhaps we can, by working collaboratively with each other, at least do some justice in this individual case. Will the Minister at least undertake to do that?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is absolutely right, there is absolutely nothing wrong with Members of the Opposition bringing to this House, by way of question, matters which relate to a problem that a constituency member has had – a member of our single constituency, because they are all constituents of ours. We used to do the same thing and we encourage them to do the same thing when they think it is appropriate. We also encourage them to get in touch with us if there are things which affect individuals, which hon. Members very often do and we try to assist when we can, without it having to become a ding-dong across the floor of this House.

On the subject matter in question, the hon. Member will know that the rules were much tighter when they were in government. One of the things we did when we were elected was loosen these rules. It was remarkable for me, when I was elected, to receive applications from people who were locally resident British Gibraltarians – that is to say a British Gibraltarian who has not moved away, a locally resident British Gibraltarian – who wished not to have their spouse start work but wished to marry someone who was from outside Gibraltar and, depending on what continent they might come from, permission would or would not be granted by the person sitting in No. 6 Convent Place. I found it, in my view, an intolerable interference with the personal liberty of the individual to fall in love and make the decision to marry that the permission should be granted for the marriage licence from No. 6 Convent Place, or permission for entry in order for people to marry, so we released that.

In these circumstances what we are dealing with is the right to work after a marriage, and in those instances the question is: is there a real state of work? This is what will be the subject of an issue: is there a real state of work, or is the zero-hours contract a pretence of work? There, we must be very careful not to become the jury of fact. The jury of fact is the official who is making the determination downstream of what is happening.

He is, these days – I cannot remember what his position was when he was in government; I think he was supportive of them, so I will say the usual caveat ‘these days’ – the staunchest enemy of zero-hours contracts. So, in the context of him saying that zero-hours contracts are a bad thing, I am surprised that he is taking the position he is taking at this time, but I encourage him, if he wishes, to write to me or the Hon. Minister with the details of the case in question, so that we can find out whether there is any circumstance in which we could assist in some way, or whether there is a very appropriate and right decision being taken by an official who has been mentioned across the floor of this House – and I think that was not necessary, but who enjoys the full confidence of us on this side of the House, who does a diligent and careful job on every application that is brought to her attention to ensure compliance with Government policy, Government’s compliance with the law and fairness to the individual who may be an applicant in any particular case.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, whilst I do not accept the comments the hon. Gentleman has made in relation to zero-hours contracts – I dislike them, I do not agree with the issue of zero-hours contracts – this is wider than that. This is about somebody who says, ‘I understand that I am being given a zero-hours contact but it is the only way I have to access this particular job, which is a job that I really want to do, and in all fairness I have been told that even though it is a zero-hours contract I am going to be doing x number of hours a week.’ In those circumstances is not for me to say do not take the job because it is a zero-hours contract. This is a decision that the constituent has taken.

Nonetheless, I will take up the offer that he Hon. the Chief Minister has made and I will write either to the Minister or to him about this particular case, to see whether we can unblock it.

Hon. Chief Minister: The hon. Gentleman may or may not accept what I have said about zero-hours contracts and he may characterise it as he wishes, but what is engaged in his question is none of that. What is engaged in his question is the discretion to grant the work permit, and in granting the work permit the nature of the work will be relevant where it is a discretionary permit.

That is the point, Mr Speaker, and that is what he is trying to avoid in trying to present his remarks – which are not a question – at the end of this exchange.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q211/2022
Mid Harbours estate –
Update re construction of new play park

495 Clerk: Question 211/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide an update with regard to the construction of the new play park at Mid Harbours estate.

500 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority and the Housing Works Agency are working closely together to deliver this project soonest. Quotes are currently being revisited with a decision to commence works to be taken shortly.

510 Hon. D J Bossino: May I raise this with him? I received a copy of an email which a member of the tenants' association there wrote to his Department. It may have been the Department of the Environment – I am not too sure about the accuracy of that – but it was a very similar response I then received in early June, which the hon. Member has just given us. The comment made by this gentleman is that the GSLA already sent a quote last year which was approved this year and the only issue was whether it was going to be done in the previous financial year, in this financial year or the one coming now. I just raise this by way of greater specificity, so that he can consider in his ... whether he can comment on that, basically.

515 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, it is obvious that we have gone beyond 31st March, we are now in a new financial year, and therefore it cannot be last year's, so it will be this year.

520 Hon. D J Bossino: But why the need for new quotes? I thought that issue was settled and he could go and basically build the thing.

525 Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, because, as I have said in answer to my question, it is two entities. They are two different things. The GSLA are the ones who procure the equipment and the Housing Works Agency is the one that contracts whoever is going to do it, i.e. the plinth, prepare the place, and place the equipment. They have to get together. They have done that. They are now getting quotes. We can budget. We know, more or less, what it is going to cost. This is what you put in the budget, and then, if you get that budget, you spend it, and this is where we are now. We are getting the two entities to get this done. I cannot now say whether it is in the Book or not in the Book until next week, when we can see whether it is in the Book, or not.

530 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can I drill down on 'soonest'? Is he able to say with more particularity when he thinks this is going to be done?

535 Hon. S E Linares: I would not like to do that because when you procure things like equipment, which needs to be procured, we would also look at if we could make some savings by looking at the old equipment and whether it can be fixed – that is another issue we were looking at – but I would not like to commit myself, like I have probably done too many times in this House, and then the next question is ‘Why didn’t you do it by this date?’ ‘Soonest’, for me, is a very, very short time.

540

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q212/2022
Housing Department –
Complaints re answering correspondence

Clerk: Question 212/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

545 Hon. D J Bossino: Thank you. Please state what efforts are being made to improve and resolve what the Public Services Ombudsman has described in his 2020 report as ‘an unacceptable level of complaints’ relating to non-reply and/or delay in replies to letters to the Housing Department/authority.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Ombudsman’s report only captures a number of complaints and not the full volume of correspondence received by the Department, which is answered in accordance with established protocols.

555 Nonetheless, since the report was made public the Housing Department has introduced an in-house complaints procedure, as recommended by the Office of the Ombudsman, to enhance the quality of the service provided by the Housing Department. Subsequently, the Department has also created specific emails for each section to further facilitate their dealings with the public.

560 Hon. D J Bossino: May I ask him when these measures were introduced?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, without trying to give away what I probably will be mentioning in my Budget speech, it was a couple of months ago. I am going to give him the specific date.

565 Hon. D J Bossino: Is he able to say, from his point of view, whether there has been an improvement, as was being called for by the Public Services Ombudsman? And if I borrow from the Ombudsman’s report, where he suggests that senior management will have to nip this in the bud, would he say that this has been nipped in the bud?

570 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, sir.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q213/2022
Government rented accommodation – Means testing

Clerk: Question 213/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

575 Hon. D J Bossino: Please state whether the Government is considering adopting a policy for means testing in connection with Government rented accommodation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

580 Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, no, sir.

585 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, is the rationale behind that negative that this party does have a policy in relation to that? They put it in their manifesto in the 2019 election. Is the rationale behind that an ideological one, or is it more – as I heard, I think, other politicians in the past say – that introducing this measure would prove administratively burdensome?

590 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, this Government is not very keen on doing means testing in general since, in the past, where the GSD Government has done so, it has mainly affected those on PAYE as opposed to targeting those who can afford or not, as the case may be. It has become an unfair system.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can I glean, from that, that the Government is not keen because of those reasons, rather than from a firm ideological basis or premise for it?

595 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I refer to the answer just given.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q214/2022
Housing Allocation Scheme –
Update re review

Clerk: Question 214/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

600 Hon. D J Bossino: Please provide an update with regard to the Government's review of the Housing Allocation Scheme.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

605 Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member is aware, the Housing Department is reviewing the Housing Allocation Scheme and this should be completed soon – and 'soon' means exactly the same as I said before.

610 Hon. D J Bossino: Can he provide information to this House as to ...? How far advanced is the Minister? I know it leads to the same answer, but how far advanced is he in producing the Housing Allocation Scheme? Quite apart from it being a pending matter, the reason it arises is because again it features in the context of a specific complaint which the Ombudsman reviewed, as set out in the 2020 report, which actually he is unable to reach a conclusion on until the scheme is 615 finalised.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I can assure the hon. Member that it is very, very advanced.

Q215/2022

Information Technology and Logistics Department – Update re resolution of dispute

Clerk: Question 215/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can Government update the House on the discussions to resolve 620 the dispute at the Information Technology and Logistics Department?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares):
625 Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the dispute is now on hold and that HM Government of Gibraltar has entered into a consultation process with the GGCA on the matters pertaining to ITLD. Our first meeting is scheduled for early July 2022.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, at the time there was public information about this dispute, the 630 concerns that were expressed by the union were that there was a fear that the Government was under-resourcing ITLD and there was a fear that there was a dismantling of the Department and that the functions of the Department were being usurped and transferred to another area within the Government. Does the Minister recognise those complaints in the discussions he has had?
And what is the Government's attitude towards that?

635
Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I have told the hon. Member that we are meeting in early July to discuss all the issues with them and I am not in a position today, in this House, to put forward all the issues that they might bring up with the Government. The hon. Member must understand that if you go into negotiations, discussions and consultation ... I am not now going to spell out all the 640 issues that we have to discuss. After 22nd July when we meet, if it is not resolved it depends on how they want to take it, or, if it is resolved, all well and good, but I am not in a position now to say what the discussions are going to be.

Hon. K Azopardi: Can I just ask the hon. Member: when he says the dispute has been put on 645 hold pending this meeting, was it put on hold pending the meeting on the basis of a promise for a meeting, just on that basis; or were there any discussions in relation to the issues of resources and the specific complaints that were had at that stage, which then led to a promise of a further meeting?

650 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I genuinely think that it is not conducive to the interest of the taxpayer for us to conduct the post-mortem of each phase of industrial relations in respect of a dispute that is open between the Government and a union in order to satisfy hon.
Members' curiosity. Therefore, the Government position is that we have answered the question that hon. Members have put but this is an issue that we are negotiating with the GGCA and we do 655 not want to say anything that exacerbates the position because it would not be in the interest of the taxpayer or the Civil Service. Putting our view as to what it is that is happening and has happened might exacerbate matters. Putting the union's view might require us to put our view.
So, because this is a live process of negotiation, we do not think it is prudent for us to be saying anymore at this stage. By all means, when the issue is resolved we will have to explain to the public 660 and to the taxpayer how it has been resolved and what compromises have been reached, but 'How are you compromising in order to go to the next stage of the negotiation and the meeting?'
is a level of curiosity that the hon. Gentleman is evincing which does not go to the proper discharge of Government business or otherwise.

665 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, a final question on this. Let me just say that it is not to satisfy our curiosity. We do not come to this House to satisfy our curiosity. We could stay at home and watch Netflix and watch more interesting programmes and documentaries. What we are trying to do is probe issues that are of public interest and are matters of concern which have reached the 670 public domain. This concerns our constituents, members of the union and indeed lots of people who work in the public service and we are trying to probe it. Nonetheless, I accept and understand what the Hon. Chief Minister is saying about not wishing to get into the detail of that.

Can I just ask is the Hon. Minister leading on the Government side in the forthcoming meeting in July?

675 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman thinks it is more interesting to stay at home to watch Netflix than it is to come to this House to do the job which he has been elected to do, he should say that to the general public without shying away from the fact that he thinks it is boring to come here to do his job.

The fact is that we are in the process of negotiating something which is of interest to the 680 members of the union, which is of interest to the members of the political Government and which is of interest to members of all the public service and the public who receive that service. Of course we accept that. That is why we are negotiating to get the best deal for everyone in a way that works for everyone.

One thing is to probe, the other thing is to look at something which is as yet an open issue and 685 to try and pry it open, and that is what I am saying to the hon. Gentleman he is seeking to do.

Yes, Mr Speaker, the matters are going to be dealt with by the Minister for Industrial Relations, who will be leading that meeting with the support of all other Ministers. He will have my support, if he needs it, because I have had a background in this issue from when I was Minister for Industrial Relations; and the Minister for ITLD, the Hon. Albert Isola, has also been providing input and 690 feedback.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q216/2022
Knight's Court –
Contract re cleaning of communal areas

Clerk: Question 216/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

695 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, are the communal areas in Knight's Court included in any cleaning contract with the Government, and if so, with whom; or are they the responsibility of the Housing Ministry or anyone else, and if so, who?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.
700

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares):
Mr Speaker, Knight's Court is included in a contract on the same basis as other estates, with arrangements for commencement being finalised. The contract is between the Ministry of the Environment and Britannia Ltd.
705

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I am not sure I understand that. He said it is included but then he added the words 'with the arrangements to be finalised', so is the contract in place now or is he saying that it will be in place in the future? Is that what he is saying?

710 Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, if I may assist, there is a contract in place. There had been a difference in interpretation between Britannia, the Department of Environment and the Ministry for Housing as to whether it was included or not. This is now resolved, and therefore, if it has not started already it will commence imminently.

Q217/2022
Government housing –
Number empty and available for allocation

715 Clerk: Question 217/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how many dwelling houses has the Government identified as empty at 31st May 2022 and available for housing allocation?

720 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, there are currently three flats available.

Q218-19/2022
Government housing –
Number allocated in 2021 and up to end of May 2022

725 Clerk: Question 218/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how many dwelling houses have been allocated by the Housing Authority in the calendar year 2021, breaking these down by room composition?

730 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 219.

Clerk: Question 219/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

735 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how many dwelling houses have been allocated by the Housing Authority in the first five months of 2022 up to 31 May 2022 breaking these down by room composition?

740 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Industrial Relations, Employment, Housing and Sport.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the breakdown of flats allocated in 2021 by room composition is as follows: 1RKB, 13; 2RKB, 55; 3RKB, 64; 4RKB, 18; 5RKB, three; and 6RKB, none.

The breakdown of flats allocated up to 31st May 2022 by room composition is as follows: 1RKB, five; 2RKB, nine; 3RKB, 12; 4RKB, 12; 5RKB, none; and 6RKB, none.

745 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for those figures. Obviously, I need to add them up, but I can see from the numbers he has given in respect of 2021 and the first five months of 2022 that ... I suppose it averages out at around a few houses a month. In his experience as Housing Minister, is that the kind of pattern he sees?

750 Can I just ask him, given the answer he gave to the previous question, which is that there are three dwelling houses identified as empty, is that number the number of houses that are potentially now available for allocation, or is the allocation that has been done by the Department under these other questions coming from other sources?

755 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member poses a few issues which I have already explained to the Hon. Mr Bossino in the last Question Time and it was in relation to ... He said that it had been lower in 2021, and we went through all that about COVID and why COVID had then affected the allocation of houses – and I am not going to go into that again. That is why, probably, the numbers are slightly lower than usual. But I can also say to the hon. Member that it is not only because three houses are empty that allocations happen. One of the empty ones, for example, 760 might be allocated to someone who is already a Government tenant and moves on, and therefore the next house becomes empty. That is what we call a chain. I have already explained to this House exactly how these things work, where you might have five allocations with one empty flat because people move from A to B, from B to C, from C to A, and therefore these chains are the number that has been given to the hon. Member.

JUSTICE, EQUALITY AND PUBLIC STANDARDS AND REGULATIONS

Q256/2022 Ketamine – Reclassification

765 Clerk: Question 256/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state whether it is considering the reclassification of ketamine from a class C to a class B controlled substance?

770 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, following a recent arrest in relation to possession of, importation of and possession with intent to supply ketamine, the question of reclassification of ketamine from 775 class C to class B will be considered in consultation with the Drugs Advisory Council.

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, does the Minister know when the Drugs Advisory Council will next meet to consider this very point?

780 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, a meeting has been convened. However, because of the number of people who attend the Drugs Advisory Council, it may not be possible to have everyone in the room because of arrangements during the summer, so I would safely say within the next few months.

Q257/2022

Nitrous oxide –
Provision of testing equipment to RGP

Clerk: Question 257/2022. The Hon. E J Phillips.

785

Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, can the Government state whether the RGP have been provided with equipment that allows them to test for nitrous oxide in advance of the legislation being brought before this House criminalising the misuse of this substance?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the RGP is looking into the most appropriate way to test for nitrous oxide to the appropriate criminal evidential standard. Once proposals are put forward by the RGP the Government will consider them.

795

Q258/2022

Juvenile delinquency –
Plans to address

Clerk: Question 258/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what plans does the Government have to address juvenile delinquency?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Justice, Equality and Standards.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, as this Parliament is aware, I recently set up a Youth Justice Committee under the Ministry of Justice to look into this area of concern. I appointed the chief executive of the Care Agency to chair and the members include senior representatives from the Care Agency, the Ministry for Justice, the Royal Gibraltar Police, Probation Services, HMP Windmill Hill, the Gibraltar Health Authority and the Education Department.

The Committee members have worked closely together, and minutes of the meeting held and information submitted by the individual services have been used to compose a report which includes analysis and conclusions of the main issues that have arisen. I am assured I will be receiving it very shortly.

810

All the services are united to ensure that children are supported and empowered to make the most of their lives, enjoy and achieve and make a positive contribution to the community within Gibraltar, and agree that this requires all involved to tailor their services to the individual child's needs.

815

The following goals have been identified by the Committee: a reduction in first-time offenders, a reduction in reoffending, a reduction in the use of custody, and a reduction in first-time offending, and preventative work.

820

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can she inform the House when she expects to be able to make an announcement to the House as to the measures that she might bring to bear in order to deal with this issue?

825 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful to the Committee because I set up this Committee and they have been working on this alongside initially their commitments in COVID – because unfortunately we are small and a lot of people overlap in their responsibilities. I know that there is a draft report which they are working on, to submit to me. I know that this report is at an advanced stage. I am in the hands of the Committee and its chair. I would like to be in a position to make announcements in this respect after the summer.

830 Hon. E J Phillips: Mr Speaker, just one question on a matter of interest to me, as well as my learned and hon. Friend. Insofar as the question has been addressed to the learned Minister in relation to juvenile delinquency, as the Minister will know from the last Police Report that was laid on the table of the House at the last session, there was a direct link between public disorder 835 and drugs misuse and we saw significant increases over the last two years. Is this going to be central to this question about juvenile delinquency? We have seen, on the face of the paper that was laid before the House, serious increases in public disorder and drug misuse offences, and therefore those would appear, would they not, to be central to the strategy of the Government in tackling juvenile delinquency? Would she agree with that?

840 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, it is for this very purpose that when I set up this Committee there was a multi-agency approach to it. The main players that deal with the issues the hon. Gentleman has mentioned, mainly drugs and the correlation between that and crime, are represented by those who sit on the Committee by way of the Gibraltar Health Authority – 845 which will, of course, have input by its Director of Public Health – the Royal Gibraltar Police and by the Care Agency. Because there is an overlap and these things cannot be considered in a vacuum, all these professionals who are connected in the way that they work with young people have had an opportunity to express their voices, and this will all be contained in the report once I receive it.

850

Mr Speaker: Next question.

ENVIRONMENT, SUSTAINABILITY, CLIMATE CHANGE AND EDUCATION

Q242/2022

A-Level and equivalent examinations – Number of students by educational establishment

Clerk: Question 242/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

855 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education provide details on the total number of students who sat A-Level or equivalent examinations during the summer 2022 examination sessions, broken down by educational establishment?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Environment and Education.

860 Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the summer 2022 examination season is still ongoing. It is scheduled to be completed at the end of June – in fact, within the next few days – and we will be able to answer this question with total accuracy upon completion of the exam session. This said, we are able to project figures, subject to not knowing whether those listed actually turned up for the exam. There 865 can be some variations as a result. We envisage that 128 students from Bayside, 174 students from Westside and 32 students from the Gibraltar College will have sat A-Level or equivalent examinations once this session is over.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

870 I apologise. Perhaps in my wording, instead of putting down the words ‘who sat’ – the Minister is correct that there are some exams pending this week – I could have put down ‘who have been entered’. But yes, as and when information does vary in the future, I would be grateful, but I do not think it will vary by more than one or two at the most.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Q243/2022

A-Level and equivalent courses –
Academic entry requirements by educational establishment

875 Clerk: Question 243/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Education provide details, broken down by educational establishment, in respect of the minimum academic entry requirements required in order for a pupil to enrol in A-Level or equivalent courses commencing in September 2022?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Environment and Education.

885 Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the requirements to access A-Level or equivalent courses are the same across all three educational establishments. Students wishing to enrol in an A-Level or equivalent course will require a minimum of four GCSEs at grades 9 to 4. These students will be able to select two courses of study, as long as they meet the subject-specific requirements. Students who have achieved a minimum of five GCSEs at grades 9 to 4 would be able to select three courses of study, as long as they meet the subject-specific requirements.

890 Each course at this level of study has its own subject-specific entry requirements. I am handing over a schedule to the hon. Member which details the current subject-specific requirements for A-Level and equivalent courses for all our educational establishments.

895 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

In my personal reflection upon this, I am grateful that the Minister has provided two columns, one that says the minimum entry requirements, the benchmark, and then beside that he has the recommended, which would be the ideal situation. Is there a logic behind the thinking that although a student may have met the minimum, if there is a high number of applicants who have 900 the recommended ... because of class size or whatever, they would be unsuccessful despite having met the minimum? Does it follow that logic, or not?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, no young person who is able to undertake a course of study is going to be denied the possibility because of class sizes. If anything, it would be the other way 905 round. Somebody who perhaps has not quite met the recommended requirements but who has otherwise performed well or has done badly in an exam when normally they would have been expected to do better, would be allowed, provided they have the minimum requirement. Really, it works that way round rather than the other way round.

910 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Another minor point for clarification. The Minister explained that those having a minimum of four GCSEs could then take on two A-Levels and those who have five or above could take on three A-Levels. Are there any criteria set if someone ... the high fliers? There are occasional cases where a student wishes to take on as many as four A-Levels. Is that judged on a case by case basis by the 915 teachers, or is there a set policy by the Department in that respect?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the case can be made. There are exceptional students who would be able to cope with more, and obviously the case would be made. One has to be fair to the students and not expect too much of them and then they trip over themselves, but this is 920 something that would be discussed with the students and, as they are under 18, with their parents or carers.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you. I know in the past we have had situations where some students have returned to school in order to upgrade their GCSE results and so on, especially in respect of 925 the core subjects like English and mathematics, but to help complete a timetable they were allowed to undertake one A-Level – before we had lots of AS-Levels, for example, in a particular subject. Is that something that perhaps the schools still consider, so that the student is able to at least attain one A-Level whilst they are still undergoing full-time education?

930 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the philosophy of the Department of Education, and indeed of these three educational establishments, is to allow every possible avenue to improve and to allow a young person to develop.

What is given here in respect of minimum requirements is minimum requirements set by examination boards. If the Department and the schools can in any way help to advance the development and the learning of a young person, then clearly that would be considered, but we cannot prescribe everything here. No two young people are the same, but we are trying to achieve what is actually best for them.

935

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q244/2022
National Day –
Cultural events

940 Clerk: Question 244/2022. The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can Government confirm if it intends to organise any cultural events this year in connection with our traditional National Day celebrations, as in the past before COVID-19 restrictions?

945 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, yes, sir.

950 Hon. E J Reyes: I take it that the information will be made available to the public shortly?

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, we are talking about the usual traditional fancy dress, the variety show, the rally, the fun day, the jazz concert, the rock concert and the youth ... I believe that there has been a statement by the SDDG – coincidentally, because it works independently of the Government – so I think there may already be some information out there.

Q245/2022
Cleaning and restoration of historic walls –
Update re progress

Clerk: Question 245/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Please state what progress is being made in respect of the promised ongoing programme of cleaning and restoration of historical walls aside from the Northern Defences.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the estimates for 2022-23 provide – or will provide, hopefully – for the restoration of sites such as Southport Gates and the Tower of Homage, as well as the façade of the future St Mary’s Lower Primary School. Works on these will commence shortly. Restoration of the Convent façade also continues. Other developments also include Orange Bastion, North Gorge, the ex-Casino development, which although being renovated privately has Government involvement throughout in providing advice and setting conditions. We continue refurbishing many of our city plaques as well as restoring and repainting our old street signs. As in previous years, the project is ongoing.

The Urban Renewal Committee and the Town Planning Department continue to work hard in ensuring the restoration and enhancement of buildings and walls throughout the Old Town.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member will no doubt immediately identify that many of these questions arise from the manifesto commitments on which they won the last General Election.

He mentions various things like city plaques and street signs. The question is more specifically in relation to historic walls. I think he has mentioned some of them, but as far as that category is concerned it is much more extensive than what he has mentioned. Is there any plan? He mentioned something at the very tail-end of his answer but it was pretty woolly in terms of time commitment. The manifesto suggests that it was going to be something more extensive, unless I am reading it wrongly.

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the manifesto does in fact suggest that. Clearly, we have had two years of COVID and we have had the financial constraints which we will be discussing next week during the Budget session, so we are not able to restore as many walls as I would very much like to restore. That is the reality. But I think some of the critical ones, which are two of those I have mentioned ... Southport Gates, which has had scaffolding up for some time, is going to be tackled, and the Tower of Homage, which is suffering from the growth of woody vegetation on it, is going to be tackled, providing, of course, as I expect, that we get the Estimates through during the course of next week, because it is an allocation from the next Budget. But we will do everything we can to at least tackle those most critical ones within the constraints.

Hon. D J Bossino: That is reasonable, but there is an admission that it would have been more ambitious had those factors not materialised.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I think it is important to remind the hon. Gentleman of the things that we have said in this House already. We have said that, unfortunately, as a result of the pandemic, it is not possible for us to perform our manifesto commitments entered into at the last General Election. We have said that we will try to do as much as we can of those areas of work where we can find alternative funding or where funding can be made available, but the restraints at the moment ... we have already announced during the course of the last Budget debate ... already provided for that. So, to an extent he is asking a question that the Government has already addressed.

I fully accept that the hon. Gentleman is looking at the manifesto and asking us questions, but he must do so with that dose of reality that we all had to accept at the last Budget session and which we will have an opportunity to debate again next week.

Q246/2022
Gibraltar Museum of Naval and Military History –
State of play

Clerk: Question 246/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

1010

Hon. D J Bossino: What is the state of play in connection with the promised Gibraltar Museum of Naval and Military History?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

1015

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, before I answer the question, the comments of the Hon. the Chief Minister to the last question are relevant to this one too. The Government is looking at all options and discussing with relevant stakeholders, but clearly against that backdrop.

1020

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, I understand.

Mr Speaker, can I just ask one question which I think immediately arises, perhaps not from the reply but certainly from the manifesto? Is it the intention that the site of this museum is going to be the same one as announced then, the old fortress headquarters, and is that site available to the Government?

1025

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as I said, we are looking at all options. I think it is too early to give anything further than that.

1030

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): If it is helpful, Mr Speaker, I can give the House a little bit more information, because that is something that is dealt with by me.

Alternative Forces Headquarters, as it is known, has not yet been handed back to the Government. It is still in the control of the MoD. We are still finalising some aspects of the works necessary for that to come back to us, I think in months.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am very grateful to both Ministers for their replies. Whilst I understand that the negotiations, if I can put it in those terms, are still ... it is being negotiated and settled, it is a question of the mechanics of transfer, it is a question of when not how.

1040

Hon. Chief Minister: I think he is now asking a question ... did not need to give way. We negotiated the transfer of Alternative Forces Headquarters. That was an agreement that was conditional on the completion of certain works which related to the Lands Agreement that hon. Members had entered into when they were in government. That programme of works has substantially now ended. I understand that we are now literally at the end of that process. That was not just the very high-profile work that was being done down at Four Corners, which was the new residential accommodation which hon. Members, when they were in government, agreed they would build for the Ministry of Defence, it also involved band block and parking in other areas at Lathbury etc. All of that needs to be completed, snagged and finalised, and then AFHQ comes back. That, I think, is now done, or substantially done, subject to the final snagging and that the handover happens.

Hon. D J Bossino: Again, I am grateful for the very complete answer. Do I detect that once that happens, the site of this museum is not necessarily going to be there? Is that correct? I understand the original commitment and thinking was that that is where it was going to be placed.

1055 Hon. Chief Minister: That was an option and it remains an option. Truth be told, the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister, with his archaeological hat on, has discovered that AFHQ is built on an area which is a magnificent casement, which none of us are aware of, and there may be, therefore, other options for that area; or this may be the best option as a result of that, because a casement is also, in itself, a piece of our military heritage. So there are other factors to consider which have 1060 come to light after 2019 when we were permitted access to inspect the property, which we will need to consider with those who advise us on heritage matters.

Q247/2022

List of statutory schedules –
Progress re adding buildings, monuments and artefacts

Clerk: Question 247/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

1065 Hon. D J Bossino: Please state what progress has been made in connection with the Government's policy to add buildings, monuments and artefacts to the list of statutory schedules.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

1070 Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Heritage and Antiques Act 2018 already has, as we know, more than 200 listed sites located on land and sea that encompass many heritage-sensitive areas in Gibraltar. We will be embarking on the scheduling of private properties in the very near future as well, and discussions with landlords are commencing. In fact, they have already commenced.

1075 The Heritage and Antiquities Advisory Council keeps sites with potential for listing under regular review. Discussions with the MoD on the potential listing of MoD sites also continues.

Hon. D J Bossino: Is he able to identify which private buildings have been identified for addition?

1080 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: I would rather not, Mr Speaker, because we are talking to the landlords at the moment, but they are private properties – some of them are in use as dwellings – which have recently been restored very sensitively to heritage, and therefore we feel that these are the ones that could start this process.

1085 There are some private properties already listed, being the places of worship, and obviously St Andrew's Church is one that was discussed here at the last meeting, and as I said, the MoD has a lot of heritage sites under its custody and there are discussions in connection with those.

1090 Hon. D J Bossino: Also, if I can refer to the last session, when I asked about the future of the Social Security Department, I wonder whether – it is not a private dwelling, it belongs to the Government – consideration could be given – the answer was provided by the Hon. Father of the House – to adding that particular building, to give it the adequate statutory protection, into the schedule.

1095 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there was a reply given that heritage sensitivities would be borne in mind, but I cannot recall the ones that are currently being discussed by the Council for recommendation, so I cannot answer that in detail.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

1100 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, thank you.

If I recall correctly, when the Bill was presented to this House the Minister at the time explained that eventually, subsequently, because he wanted to make sure he got it right, there were some sites just off the coast, on the actual sea bed, that would be mentioned and included and so on. Does the Minister have information? Have we concluded that exercise yet, or is it something that is still ongoing?

1110 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, some sites were already included at that time. As I said, the Council, which meets with me regularly, every couple of months, has a whole list that it constantly reviews, but I have not got that information off the top of my head to exactly say which are under consideration.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1115 Like many Members in this House, as a lover of history and monuments and so on, would the Minister make a note of that so that in one of his regular meetings he can double-check that these items have been already fully integrated? Otherwise – it happens by human error – you leave something in a pending tray and we can realise too late.

Q248/2022
Lord Airey's Battery –
Government assistance re restoration

Clerk: Question 248/2022. The Hon. D J Bossino.

1120 Hon. D J Bossino: Did the Government provide any financial or other assistance in connection with the recently completed restoration of Lord Airey's Battery?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

1125 Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Ministry for Heritage paid for the scaffolding and the temporary toilet facilities, organised the transportation, contributed towards other peripheral costs and also provided heritage advice whenever required.

Q249/2022
Britannia Ltd –
Cleaning contract

Clerk: Question 249/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1130 Hon. K Azopardi: When is the cleaning contract with Britannia due to expire and have terms been negotiated for an extension of the contract; and, if so, has a new contract or an extension to the current contract been signed, and what are the main terms of the new arrangements?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

1135 Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Britannia contract is due to expire on 31st August 2023. The Department of the Environment is currently reviewing the contract and considering options in order to come to a decision, which is likely to include preparing a tender package to be released within the next six to nine months.

1140 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, is the Minister in a position to say whether the future contract, or the reviewed arrangements, would be to cover the same areas, or are they going to cover different areas? Are they discussing that? I suppose the contract has been in place for some time, so in the context of that, things would have come up as to whether there are new things that should be done or old things that were being done that perhaps were not necessary or should be done in a different way. Can he give us a feel for the kind of discussions that have been ongoing?

1145 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker. As one works with a contractor one looks at things that perhaps could be done differently, perhaps different areas, changes in frequency, and all that will be factored in so that the tender package provides something which is an improvement on what we have now. We always strive to do better and better.

1150 Hon. K Azopardi: And could I just ask are the discussions aimed at a negotiation of an extension to the current contract with Britannia, or is it that it is going to go out to tender and obviously Britannia can apply and the Government is open as to the options for the future?

1155 While I am on my feet, perhaps if I may just ask him as well, because it is all rolled up in that: because the arrangements expire at the end of summer next year, which is usually a complicated time to make handover arrangements, I assume the Government has in mind putting arrangements in place that will provide for a more seamless transition, if necessary.

1160 Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is early days to commit to any of those. We will ensure a seamless transition, but it is early days.

1165 Hon. K Azopardi: I am not sure he answered the question as to whether there is going to be a tender to everyone or a negotiation with this entity.

Hon. Prof. J E Cortes: I did, Mr Speaker. I said it is early days.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q250/2022
Music festival –
Details of any plans for 2022

1170 Clerk: Question 250/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, is Government planning to hold a music festival or musical event in 2022; if so, when, where, of what type and how much is it expected to cost?

1175 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment and Education.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there will not be a so-called Mega Concert this year. There may be smaller 1180 events organised privately, as there has been some limited interest expressed by private entities.

It is not expected that the Government will contribute to these.

Adjournment

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I move that the House should now adjourn to tomorrow at 3.30 in the afternoon.

1185 Mr Speaker: I now propose a question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Thursday, 23rd June at 3.30 p.m.

I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Thursday, 23rd June at 3.30 p.m. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Passed.

This House will now adjourn to Thursday, 23rd June at 3.30 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

CHIEF MINISTER

Q265/2022

Tax amnesty –

2016 six-month extension

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Thursday, 23rd June 2022. We continue with Answers to Questions.

Question 265/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

5

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how many individuals availed themselves of the six-month extension to the tax amnesty announced in the 2016 Budget and how much tax was collected?

10

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, a total of 13 individuals availed themselves of the six-month extension to the tax amnesty announced in the 2016 Budget and, as a result, a total of £516,843 was collected.

15

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q266/2022

Chief Minister's visit to Rome –

Cost to taxpayer and details of flights

Clerk: Question 266/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

20

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise the total cost to the taxpayer of the Chief Minister's papal visit, including Government employees, split between travel and accommodation, and could the Government also advise with which commercial airlines the flights were booked and class of travel?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

25

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as I have already made public, the invitation from His Holiness was extended to me, as Chief Minister of Gibraltar, my wife, my children and my private secretary. I bore the costs of the flights of all members of my family and of my and my family's accommodation in Rome.

30

The exact breakdown of costs of flights has not yet been finally invoiced. When the invoices are received, the information will be provided on the Government website in the usual way. I flew to Rome with Air Europa from Malaga via Madrid and returned with Iberia, also via Madrid and Malaga.

35

My private secretary flew via London with British Airways and returned with me with Iberia, via Madrid and Malaga. The cost of my private secretary's accommodation in Rome, which has been fully invoiced, was €641.36.

40

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Chief Minister's answer. Obviously, we would be grateful if the information were individually itemised as and when it is available to be uploaded to the Government website.

I do not believe I heard from the Chief Minister what class of travel he travelled in.

45

Chief Minister: Well, on Air Europa, which is a one-class airline, and on Iberia, where I travelled club class in return to Malaga because the time we had available made it impossible to obtain economy seats either for me, funded by the taxpayer, or for the rest of my family, funded by me.

Q267/2022

Ministers' and officials' club-class travel – Details re cost and destination

Clerk: Question 267/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

50

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a list of Government Ministers, including the Chief Minister, and officials who have flown club class in the period 1st October 2021 to 31st March 2022, giving details of cost and destination?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

55

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister, Ministers and officials travel with one-class airlines – from Gibraltar, this means travelling with easyJet, which the Chief Minister often takes – or economy in Europe, where possible.

60

Club-class travel is only taken when necessary – that is to say when economy flights are not available. These days, given the problems with airline frequency etc. and the late bookings which are often necessary in respect of ministerial travel, it is often inevitable that travel has to be club class if it is going to happen.

I now hand over a schedule with the information which is not publicly available on the Government website.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, with your indulgence, while we get the schedule, if I may ask a quick supplementary just to confirm that it is the Government's stated policy that travel within Europe should, in the first instance, always be economy.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think I am being asked to repeat the policy, because that is the policy. Unfortunately, as I have told the hon. Gentleman, very often it is not possible to get economy flights because all the flights are full these days, especially in Europe, and indeed we very often have to book at the last minute. We may be told on a Monday that we have to fly on a Tuesday – indeed, knowing the nature of the work that we do, hon. Members know that we might be told on a Tuesday that we have to fly on a Tuesday – and very often, these days, it is just impossible to obtain flights which are available in economy cabins at that time, whether it is travel from Gibraltar or travel from Malaga, which we also check in order to ensure that we get the best deal for the taxpayer, which is exactly what we want to ensure we achieve.

Hon. Members will know that you can be told that there are no seats on the plane and then you turn up and there are seats on the plane, so it is impossible to make a judgement about these things, sometimes, by looking at the panorama around you when you are flying. I have had to see colleagues fly on different aircraft to me because we have been told that there is no space on the aircraft, only to have a free seat next to me.

Mr Speaker, I hope that gives the hon. Gentleman the information he wanted.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I have now had time to digest the schedule. There are two pages to the schedule – the first page is Ministers and the second page is Government officials – but I do not see any costs associated with the Ministers, and since my question was very specific in respect of club-class travel, unless he is telling me that everything on the Government website in relation to Government officials is club class and they all flew club class in the period ...

And secondly, in respect of the second schedule, Government officials, am I to assume that these are all –?

Hon. Chief Minister: Ask me one question at a time, and then I will ...

Mr Speaker: That is fine. Ask the question.

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, I will sit down and I would be –

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I just think it is more helpful for me to be able to answer one question at a time.

The reason he does not have any costs here is because that is already public information. I said at the end of my first answer, 'I now hand over a schedule with the information which is not publicly available on the Government website.' The cost of all of these flights is already available. It is, therefore, publicly available information. It is not susceptible to a question in this House.

The dates when we travelled club class for the period he asked are the dates which are set out here.

The Government website does not provide the information in respect of officials, so in respect of officials we have given him all the information he asked for which was not publicly available, and that is the information set out in the schedule.

Hon. R M Clinton: Very good. Mr Speaker, I guess all I need to do, then, is go to the Government website, look for dates of travel and it will tell me that those were club-class travel, by definition.

Going to my second question, Mr Speaker, which is everybody on the second schedule, which is Government officials – this represents club-class travel, yes?

115 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not understand why the hon. Gentleman is asking me this set of supplementaries, because his question is specific. His question is about club-class travel, so the only information he is being given, because it is the only information he has asked for, is about club-class travel. I have told him that there are other instances where we fly which are not club class and I have told him that we try not to travel club class if there is an alternative available, but the question is very clear, and for that reason the answer can only relate to the question.

120

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q268-70/2022

Office rent and service charge costs – Breakdown re 2018-19; offices occupied by Ministers; private sector offices rented by Government and GDC

Clerk: Question 268/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

125 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker – Sorry, is something amusing?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Yes.

Hon. R M Clinton: What is it? Please share it with us.

130 Hon. Chief Minister: [Inaudible].

Hon. R M Clinton: Good for him.

Hon. Chief Minister: [Inaudible].

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a detailed breakdown of the office rent and service charge costs of £9,253,765 incurred in the 2018-19 Estimates Book by the Treasury Department?

140 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 269 and 270.

145 Clerk: Question 269/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a list of all private sector rented offices occupied by Ministers as at 31st March 2022, listing each Minister, date of first occupation and the associated annual cost of rental?

Clerk: Question 270/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

155 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide a list of all private sector property rentals by it and the Gibraltar Development Corporation as at 31st March 2022, giving date and length of lease, annual rental with associated department or agency using the premises, and purpose?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the details of the charges allocated to the 'Government Offices, Office Rent and Service Charges' subhead are precisely that. The financial year 2018-19 relates to the lifetime of the last Parliament, not this one.

The annual Budget debate that deals with figures which are set out in the Estimates Book is when they get the opportunity to get breakdowns and to ask detailed questions on the subject. The question the hon. Gentleman is now posing was one for the Committee Stage of the Third Reading of the Appropriation Bill for 2018-19.

The details of all rents etc. for this financial year, which he seeks in Questions 269 and 270, will of course be provided.

I now hand over a schedule with the information requested.

170 Hon. R M Clinton: Thank you for your patience, Mr Speaker, while I peruse the schedule.

If I may ask the Chief Minister, in relation to the answer to Question 269 ... I do not see the Minister for the Environment listed here. I believe – I may be wrong and I am happy to be corrected – that he has offices in Leanne’s House. Is that correct?

175 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is in the answer to Question 270. He will be able to see it there.

Hon. R M Clinton: I am grateful for that clarification. So, that, obviously, should be added to the answer to Question 269.

180 If I can turn, Mr Speaker, to his answer to Question 268, yes, I am asking for a historical breakdown, but I do not see why that should have been limited to questions at the Committee Stage. I am asking just for the factual breakdown of a number, which was published, in fact, as an actual number, for 2018-19. I do not see why that information cannot be made available by the Government.

185 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the question is are we going to have, in every Question Time, a debate about financial years gone past? The hon. Gentleman has asked, in effect, the same question about this year as he asked in respect of 2018-19 – a question about all our rents on 31st March 2022. The other thing he is asking us to do is go back, get out of storage all of the data in respect of 2018-19 and provide all of that breakdown – and check it, because when we bring something to this House it has to be absolutely correct.

I just think that it makes very little sense for us to be having that sort of debate at this time. If the hon. Gentleman wants it, with a bit more time I can assure him that he can have it in writing so that he can have it and I can make sure that it is correct, but otherwise, every Question Time runs the risk of becoming a Budget debate of any year gone past, because we are going to go back many financial years.

200 This is 2018-19, before the last election. It is not even an earlier Budget session of the lifetime of this Parliament. It is to go back to the previous Parliament. I really do not think that that is going to help elucidate matters any further; and we have to make sure that the information we give in this is correct, so we would have to go back and get that information and provide it. If the hon. Gentleman wants it, I will write to him and let him have it.

205 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, as you keep on reminding us, this is Question Time. I have asked a question; I am not here to engage in a debate. He may not know why I am asking the question, but I have good reason to ask the question and I would appreciate the answer. If not, in written form – I would accept that if you do not have the information available, but there is good reason as to why I have asked the question, and it is not to engage in a debate. I think I am entitled to an answer and I will gratefully accept a written answer, but I would, hopefully, get that answer sooner rather than later. In terms of timeframe, is he talking about the end of this week or is he talking about the end of this year?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if he really wants it, he can have it as soon as I can make sure that I have it available, but obviously, as he knows, we are preparing for a Budget debate for the financial year 2022-23, not for the Budget debate of 2018-19.

Hon. K Azopardi: On this issue, just to clarify, because the hon. Member has asked a question, we are not sparking or expecting that there should be a debate analogous to the Budget debate. The Budget debate is a debate on the principles of the Appropriation Bill. We are not going to debate the principles of anything. He has asked for a breakdown of a sum of money. It is a bit like asking for a breakdown of the Music Festival that happened three years ago – it is something that can be asked. Or is the Chief Minister saying that, as a matter of principle, he thinks the Government is not here to answer these questions? I think he started there, but I do not think he has ended there, because he has offered the information in written format as long as he can check it. If that is the situation, well then, fine, my hon. colleague has accepted that position. I just want to clarify that.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think I have been pretty clear. I have said I am prepared to give the information but it requires us to go back and it requires us to ensure that we check that information, and because this relates to a previous Parliament ... In fact, Mr Speaker, their position was that they would not answer questions about things that had happened in a previous Parliament, and we were told –

Hon. K Azopardi: I have never been in government.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, you have. Yes, you have been in Government. Mr Speaker, the Hon. Mr Azopardi has been in government. The Hon. Mr Azopardi has a track record in government. The Hon. Mr Azopardi has been Deputy Chief Minister of Gibraltar and he cannot pretend that people should forget his trajectory and track record when he was in government in Gibraltar. The party that they represent has been in government in Gibraltar, and we were told by that party, including Mr Feetham, who was Minister for Justice in the Government that told us, representing the Gibraltar Social Democrats, that they would not provide information on things that happened in the previous parliamentary session – that is to say before the last election.

We are ready to provide that information because we consider not just that it is information about our administration, although we have changed a Minister, we consider it information which belongs to the taxpayer, and therefore, if it is asked for we shall provide it, but we shall provide it in a way that is designed to ensure that we can vouch for its accuracy.

Going back to something requires us to obtain it, to have it checked, and this year's rents are the ones that we have given. That is easy: we can provide it, and we provide it in the time available. But if the hon. Gentleman wants to go back further and further before the election, before the pandemic, all of that, which requires us to dig through the sands of everything that has happened since, to be able to provide it ... We will provide it, if they want it, but it is going to take us a little bit more time, and we are going to do it despite the fact that it goes back before a general election.

The information that they ... the party they represent, the Government of which Mr Azopardi was a Member, the Government of which Mr Feetham was a Member did not provide it, but because ... Despite the accusations that we were the ones who were not transparent – we have been more transparent than they have ever been; they are, to transparency, what chocolates are to teapots – we will provide the information.

260 Mr Speaker: So, the information is going to be provided. There is no timescale attached to this because the Ministers are involved in preparations for the Budget session, so I think that needs to be taken into account.

Proceed to the next question, please.

Balaena Ltd –

Capability of performing obligation re dockyard lease

Clerk: Question 271/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton.

265 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government advise how it has been satisfied that Balaena Ltd, a company registered in England and Wales with number 12030661, can perform its duties as guarantor under the new dockyard lease, given that its unaudited accounts filed at Companies House UK for the year ended 31st June 2021 showed it had, at that date, negative net assets of £21,992?

270 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

275 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government has satisfied itself that Balaena Ltd has the financial capability to perform its obligations as guarantor under the new lease. The Government reached this conclusion prior to entry into the new lease by carrying out its own due diligence on the Balaena Group. This due diligence process extended to the group's ultimate beneficial owner, Mr Simon Gillett, and has involved obtaining information on this individual's wealth.

280 An independent due diligence process was separately carried out by the sellers and their advisers over a significant period of time, spanning several months, prior to agreeing to enter into the sale transaction with Balaena. A similar due diligence process was also carried out by the financiers lending to the Balaena Group, who have carried out their own credit assessments and advanced funds for the acquisition.

285 It needs to be understood that these assessments were made at a given moment in time. As we have seen, this is a volatile world and things can change very quickly.

290 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Chief Minister's answer, but how has he become satisfied that this entity can actually perform under the guarantee? Is he aware of whether there is a guarantee to this company from the group and if there is any call, or whether this entity has since been capitalised in such a way that it could meet any call? How can the Government be sure that this particular entity will be able to perform its duties under the guarantee?

295 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, many of these things are subjective. Hon. Members know that we were rightly critical of them at times when they entered into arrangements with companies that had issued share capital of £2 and yet they gave those companies considerable tender awards. How were they satisfied that those companies could perform the obligations required under the tender when the company was capitalised at £2? Because they made an assessment of the people standing behind the company and they determined that they would be able to comply with their obligations.

300 In the context of this transaction, where there were a number of things happening – there was a sale but also a new lease being issued because of differences of opinion between the seller and the Government as to whether the lease could be sold or whether a new lease should be issued, and that was compromised on the basis of the new lease being issued and entered into with the many advantages to the people who live in the area and to the Gibraltar taxpayer and economy generally – we took the view that, given what we knew, as I have indicated to the House, who the ultimate beneficial owner was and how he would be able, if necessary, to capitalise that company and to perform on its guarantee obligations, it was possible to go forward in this way.

What would happen in the event of the guarantee not being fulfilled? In other words, what happens in the eventuality that Mr Clinton is talking about, if the lessee does not comply with his obligations and if the guarantor does not step in to provide the sufficient payments to comply also with the obligations? The leases fall to the Crown.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q272/2022

Arson attack on HMC Seeker – Measures to prevent further incidents

Clerk: Question 272/2022. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what preventative measures, if any, are being taken to prevent another incident such as the one that took place on the evening of Wednesday, 18th May when HMC Seeker was the subject of an arson attack, so that the risk of reoccurrence is minimised?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, an investigation was opened as soon as the incident occurred, which included the assistance of the RGP scene of crime officers and the reviewing of CCTV footage. Inquiries have included engaging with members of the public in search of any information. Requests have also been sent to Spanish law enforcement in order to obtain any intelligence that might be used to identify and arrest the culprits. In addition, there have been increased operations and presence over the last four weeks in order to put pressure on the different crime groups that might be associated with this act. This is intended to demonstrate that attacks on law enforcement will not be tolerated.

Measures to prevent such a spontaneous assault from happening again are being explored. However, careful consideration is being given to such safeguards so that they do not hinder the Marine section's operations or affect their response times. What needs to be clear is that the community is not going to tolerate any actions or behaviours which compromise the safety of our great law enforcement agents. We fully support them, as I am sure the whole House will agree.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I associate myself – on behalf of my colleagues, no doubt, on this side of the House – with the final sentiments expressed by the Hon. the Chief Minister.

If he cannot answer this supplementary question, I accept that, and perhaps it can be discussed behind the Speaker's Chair, but what measures are being explored in order to prevent a reoccurrence of this incident?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that would be like telling the fox where the hole is in the wire, so that he can get in to cut off the heads of the chickens. I have never been known to be a turkey waiting for Christmas, and I am certainly not going to be doing that on behalf of measures which we will be putting in place to protect our law enforcement agents, so I would much rather have a conversation with the hon. Gentleman without the cameras rolling and the potential bad guys watching.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q273/2022
Food imports –
Percentage from non-EU countries

350 Clerk: Question 273/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, what percentage of food imports to Gibraltar come from non-EU countries?

355 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, this figure fluctuates every year. The UK's departure from the European Union has obviously moved the needle on this considerably, as foodstuffs from the UK, which were previously from the European Union, are now classed as non-EU.

360 As at 17th June 2022 the percentage of food imports to Gibraltar from non-EU countries, which obviously now includes the United Kingdom, is 38.49%. The majority of the foodstuffs come, nonetheless, via EU countries.

365 Hon. K Azopardi: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Does the Chief Minister ...? If I ask him this question, I am not sure if ... He may have the answer, but maybe, if he does not have it, he can write to me. He says it is 38.49%. Does he have a breakdown of the countries it comes from? And when he says that the majority comes through the EU, I assume by the majority he means either it comes via land or hits a European port first and then comes by sea. I am not sure what he means by that, but does he have a breakdown of land and sea arrivals?

370 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not have that breakdown, but it has to visit a European port if it is going to come by land and it is not EU, unless we were getting food from Russia or something.

375 Hon. K Azopardi: Will he give way? Perhaps I have explained it wrongly. What I meant was that it either comes via land ... Or did he mean, in terms of via the EU, that it might arrive by sea in Gibraltar but first arrives at a European port for some kind of processing? I am not sure how the importation is actually done.

380 Hon. Chief Minister: I do not have the breakdown, Mr Speaker, but it is done in various different ways. Food can come from third countries to the United Kingdom and from the United Kingdom, through the EU, to Gibraltar, or through the United Kingdom direct to Gibraltar – less so – or not through the United Kingdom but through another European port, either then still by sea or by land, to Gibraltar.

There are no direct links from Gibraltar to third countries operating at the moment, so there is no direct arrival of food from non-EU sources to Gibraltar from third countries. I will give him the example that we would all immediately think of: our fruit and veg from Morocco, when it comes,

390 comes from Algeciras because the commercial route from Morocco is to Algeciras and it has been for some considerable time, during the pandemic etc. I hope that is helpful.

Hon. K Azopardi: To clarify, it is helpful because the concern had been expressed to me, in terms of the future arrangements being negotiated, whether that would have an impact on arrival 395 of food imports from outside the EU, but I take it from what he says that ... In his original answer he said that the majority of the 38.49% arrives via the EU. In fact, he is saying it is not arriving directly into the Gibraltar ports at the moment at all. I think I have understood his answer correctly.

400 Hon. Chief Minister: That is right. It is not arriving directly from any third country, so there is not a line from New Zealand to Gibraltar that brings us New Zealand lamb.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q274/2022
Secretary posts –
Applications by administrative assistants

405 Clerk: Question 274/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, why is it not possible for administrative assistants to apply for job vacancies for secretary posts?

410 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as I understand it, this is not an issue that has changed at all since his time in office. When school secretary and/or personal secretary vacancies are advertised within the Civil Service, applications are invited from civil servants in the secretarial and administrative grades for appointment. I can therefore confirm that administrative assistants 415 are eligible to apply for personal secretary and school secretary posts within the Civil Service, provided they meet the essential requirements of the post.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I know it is longstanding and I accept that. It had been suggested to me, and it might be this, that there is a difference perhaps, that GDC employees who are parked 420 in different Departments are not able to do that, even though they are occupying those posts. Is the Chief Minister aware of that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, GDC employees are not members of the Civil Service – some of them are ring-fenced civil servants – and the position of the Civil Service unions has consistently 425 been that only civil servants can apply for Civil Service posts. The people who are ring-fenced civil servants can apply for some posts in the Civil Service but not others, but that is not what his question is about, so if I am required to give any further information other than what I can tell him from my own knowledge generally – if he wants me to look into the issue of the GDC in particular – that would require a different answer, probably, and it would require looking at different rules 430 and the interplay between those rules and the positions of unions which have been accepted by successive Governments.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q275/2022

Proposed EU-UK treaty on Gibraltar's future relationship with the EU – Number of articles

Clerk: Question 275/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

435

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government state whether the proposed treaty between the EU and the UK on a future relationship with the EU for Gibraltar will have approximately 300 articles?

440

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the number of articles in the proposed treaty between the European Union and the United Kingdom on the future relationship of Gibraltar with the European Union will be known only when the treaty has been drafted. To date, anyone who suggests they know how many articles such a potential treaty may have is merely speculating.

445

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, the reason for the question – and I caveat it by saying that when I read things in the Spanish press I take them with a pinch of salt and I hardly believe them, but sometimes you hear things first in the Spanish press and they trickle down and it has some modicum of truth. The Chief Minister may have seen a recent article, a couple of weeks ago, that asserted that the treaty would have around 300 articles and that 90% of them had been agreed and that there were some difficult ones. It is, of course, our duty to put that question. That had not been information that I had hitherto been given by the Members opposite and I wanted there to be some confirmation that there was not actually a draft of these 300 articles circulating around the negotiating teams and I wanted to enquire as to the state of the drafting exercise and whether the Chief Minister will confirm that that particular article that I have referred to is entire speculation.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the only thing I can say is Hamdulillah, Amen, Hallelujah – let's hope that there is a treaty, let's hope it has 400 articles, 200 articles ... They have drawn a pretty wide opportunity there to get it right. There are a hundred articles in it. As long as it is more than 299 and less than 401, the person who has said that to the Spanish press will be able to get it right. If you look at the number of chapters there might be, 300-odd articles is not a bad guess, but a lot depends on how the treaty is structured.

460

As far as I know, there is not yet any agreed treaty provision, let alone a whole treaty. There is not any agreed treaty provision. Even the first words – 'This Treaty shall be referred to as the Treaty between the United Kingdom and the European Union and shall be entered into this first day of September 2022' – do not exist.

465

There are different views on both negotiating teams on what the treaty would look like, there are different views on what treaty articles might look like if different options are agreed etc., but that has not happened yet. That agreement on those issues has not happened yet and therefore, given that this has been something which the hon. Gentleman, like I, has read in the Spanish press, it may be that the European Commission, in its preparation and work with the Spanish government on what they think the treaty looks like, has, in its top drawer, ready to 'descartarse' by the time that we say we agree on a particular issue, a draft which has 300 clauses in it. That may or may not be true; I am speculating.

470

I fear that the person who was being relied upon for that article was speculating and I do believe that we should have more respect for each other and for the information that we provide for each other. But if the hon. Gentleman ever reads anything like that and he wants to ask – and perhaps it is uncool to say, Mr Speaker, but we are in touch behind the Speaker's Chair and we have quite a good relationship in that sense – he should just text me and ask me whether the latest ‘chorada’ that he has read in the Spanish press has any truth to it, or not.

I will say for nothing, and I know that I will be making more enemies than I perhaps should, that the only thing I believe in the Spanish newspapers is the date, as long as it is the day that I am reading the newspaper, which my watch confirms and is the day that my iPad confirms. Other than that, the people of Gibraltar would do right to take a huge pinch of salt and garlic pepper with anything that they read in the Spanish press and know that something may have been placed in the Spanish press to create animosity between the Gibraltarians.

It is the easiest and first tactic of any negotiation to try to divide your opponents, and I would have thought that the people of Gibraltar, after having dealt with all of those Spanish newspapers in the time of Franco etc. would have learnt ... Perhaps the new online social media generation have not learnt, but they should.

Hon. K Azopardi: Yes, Mr Speaker, of course we are in touch, but – (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) It is not uncool, I think, to be in touch. I think that there are things we can do in a convivial way, but on a joking note, if I were in touch with the hon. Member every time I read an article about Gibraltar it would be all the time.

He needs to understand also that sometimes when we put questions it is not just because of that. Of course I can clarify the issue with the hon. Member, but because it is in the Spanish press, not only I have read it, other people in Gibraltar have read it, and sometimes it is important for people to get a clarification from the Government in public at this stage and in this forum, so that they understand what exactly is going on.

Can I just ask him, slightly related to this but on the basis of his answer as he has given it ...? I think the last time he updated the House was around a month ago. Can he take the opportunity, perhaps, to say where we are in terms of the negotiations, if he is able to do so? I appreciate he might not be able to do so, and he may not have moved on much more from where he was, but it would be helpful for everyone listening to know.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do appreciate that. I have been in Opposition for long enough to know that the question as public interest is also an important device of Question Time, so I have no difficulty with him doing so in those circumstances, but he will understand that the vehemence with which I have expressed my answer is exactly, therefore, what he wanted the public in Gibraltar to have, which is that clarity.

Mr Speaker, I will update the House on Tuesday during the course of my Budget address.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

DIGITAL, FINANCIAL SERVICES, HEALTH AUTHORITY AND PUBLIC UTILITIES

Q226/2022

Vasectomy service – GHA provision

Clerk: Question 226/2022. The Hon. Roy Clinton on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government state whether it provides a vasectomy service with the GHA; and, if not, why?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, it would seem as if the Hon. Mr Phillips is scared of coming to Parliament and asking questions on health. It is the second time. The last time it was the Hon. Leader of the Opposition and now it is Mr Clinton. He may have thought to take it in turns. Wherever he is, I wish him well and I look forward to seeing him back in due course.

Mr Speaker, yes, the GHA does provide a vasectomy service in line with their GHA sterilisation policy.

Q227-229/2022

NGOs and charities –

Operation in under-resourced areas of public provision; monitoring by Government to ensure best practice

Clerk: Question 227/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

525 Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government state whether it is aware that NGOs and charities are filling the gap created by under-resourced areas of public provision, namely dentistry and speech therapy?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

530

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 228 and 229.

Clerk: Question 228/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

535

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how it monitors compliance with best practice so that it can provide reassurance to the public that the voluntary service being provided by NGOs and charities is in line with what is a globally expected standard?

540

Clerk: Question 229/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government state what other areas which have traditionally been under the auspices of the GHA or other care/social services are now being partially picked up and supported by NGOs and charities?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the GHA and Care Agency currently do not commission NGOs or charities to provide any core healthcare service. Should an NGO or charity decide to commission a regulated service, the regulation of said service would be dealt with within the framework of the pertinent regulating body.

550

NGOs and charities provide invaluable support to people with a range of needs in the majority of health and care systems globally.

555

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, Mr Phillips is not here – he is unavoidably away, by the way – but as I understood the reason for him tabling questions on this, it is that recently there were some social media posts by an NGO inviting people who might need assistance in respect of child dentistry services and it seemed strange, in some ways, that that would need to be the case,

560 because if there were people who perhaps had means issues or needed practical assistance, why wouldn't the GHA, as a matter of course, be dealing with those issues? I am not sure if the hon.
Member has seen those posts and whether he can comment on them.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, no, I have not seen those posts, but what I will say is that the Care Agency, and indeed the GHA, work very closely with a number of NGOs. How they operate, 565 independent of the Care Agency or, indeed, the GHA is absolute. In other words, they provide us with invaluable support, which we accept, but in terms of providing core services, no, absolutely not. And so, if the hon. Member will let me have that commentary, we can evaluate to what extent it is or is not happening. I do not know, but I can certainly tell you that it is not our policy that we should be outsourcing, to NGOs or charities, core services.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, just by way of clarification, presumably he would consider dentistry and speech therapy core services within that answer.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I think to use the term as a yes or no would be wrong because there 575 are many parts of that service that may well be core, and others that may not be. I am not going to get into a discussion as to what is core in dentistry and what is not, for two reasons: (1) because I do not know what the answer would be, but I can well imagine; and (2) because I have not been provided with that information by the specialists themselves and therefore I would not hasten to form a judgement on my own without their advice.

580

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q230/2022

Private-practice pharmacists – Payment re work done for Government

Clerk: Question 230/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, just before I go on to the next question, I have found the advert 585 on social media and I will pass it to the Minister shortly.

Can the Government state how private-practice pharmacists are paid for the dispensing work they do for the Government?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

590

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola):
Mr Speaker, I have just seen an advert which, apparently, is in conjunction with the Dental Care Centre, which is a private sector provider, and that may well be the case, but again, if he will send it to me, we can always look at that later.

595 The community pharmacies are paid for the work they do under the GPMS scheme in the following ways: (1) the cost of the medicines is paid in accordance with the Gibraltar Drug Tariff price applicable for that product in the month that the medicine was supplied, i.e. the basic price;
(2) they are paid an additional 15% on the cost of the basic price; (3) they are paid a dispensing fee per item of £1.80; and (4) any prescription charges collected from the dispensing of non-600 exempt prescriptions, i.e. patient fees, is offset against the remuneration which is due from (1) to
(3) above.

Hon. K Azopardi: Have these arrangements been revised since they were entered into – at least, the historic arrangements that date back all the way back to the time before 2011?

605

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I certainly have not been involved in any discussions yet – we do intend to – but my understanding is that these are historical arrangements.

610

Hon. K Azopardi: But the Minister is saying, from his answer just now, that they intend to engage in discussions with pharmacies on this? And, if so, has he set out the ...? I am not expecting him to tell me what he wants to necessarily negotiate, because that is a matter for discussions, clearly, but what would be the motivations for doing so?

615

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member will be aware of certain changes we have already made to prescriptions. We are revisiting and reviewing the whole of that process, which will engage some discussions with pharmacies. As I have also referred to in previous answers, one of the intentions is to work closer with pharmacies to provide some sort of walk-in services from different places around Gibraltar. This will all be in the strategic review that is being conducted by the Director General and there will be more on that to come.

620

Hon. K Azopardi: Would it be intended, once arrangements have been concluded, for there to be an announcement? Obviously these are private arrangements between the Government and the pharmacies, but does the Government intend to then say publicly that it has concluded new arrangements with the pharmacies? If not, then what we will do from time to time is ask him about the progress on the review.

625

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the review will form part of the strategic review being carried out by the Director General, so I think at that time he will be aware that the review is published and then how that is implemented will have a whole series of milestones which will tell us how we are doing in terms of meeting that review. So I think it will be public knowledge as and when we are in a position to make that move.

630

Hon. K Azopardi: I may not have explained my question. I was asking specifically not about the publication of the strategic review but rather about the conclusion of the arrangement with the particular pharmacies in relation to the commercial arrangements. That is really what I was talking about, which is, I suppose, a small part of the implementation of the review.

635

Hon. A J Isola: A very small part, Mr Speaker, and I am very happy to give him my assurances that as and when it is done I will let him know so that he can ask a question, if he wishes to, in Parliament.

640

Q231-32/2022

EMIS –

How the system works; set-up and maintenance costs

Clerk: Question 231/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how the EMIS for pharmaceuticals works in detail?

645

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola):
Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 232.

Clerk: Question 232/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how much it cost the taxpayer to set up the EMIS programme in the first place, and how much is the annual maintenance cost?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, GHA clinicians use EMIS to generate a GPMS prescription for GHA service users accessing their services. The prescriptions generated are identified with a unique serial code and GHA user medical card number. These prescriptions are then presented for dispensing at the service user's community pharmacy of choice. The community pharmacy, using the EMIS dispensing module, enters the unique serial code and GHA number to dispense the items prescribed. At the same time that the said medication is issued on the EMIS dispensing module, the pharmacy will make a reimbursement claim to the GHA for the items dispensed.

The initial cost to set up the EMIS programme was £233,367.50, with an annual maintenance cost of £184,492.

Hon. K Azopardi: Just one supplementary, if I may: is the Government satisfied that the EMIS system is working well, or is it part of the review that they are conducting of the general arrangements? Arrangements will be contractual in nature, but are there reviews of some of the logistics of the dispensing of the prescriptions that are being looked at, and is this one of them?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I do not want to, in any way, inhibit or restrict the remit of the review. The review is of everything. We are reviewing all aspects of the services that the GHA and the Care Agency provide, including this aspect.

675

In terms of how the EMIS is operating, it does the job I have described. I believe we can do it better, and so we will be looking for ways in which we can do it better. The introduction of the selective services through online appointments is by plugging into the EMIS calendar, because obviously the person who sees the patient must have access to exactly what has been prescribed within the system. So, it does its job but I think we can make it work better and that is certainly one of the things we are looking to do.

Q233-34/2022

Philips –

Origins of long-term partnership with GoG; tender process re £17 million contract

Clerk: Question 233/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how the long-term partnership with Dutch multi-national corporation Philips came about?

685

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola):
Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 234.

Clerk: Question 234/2022. The Hon. R M Clinton on behalf of the Hon. E J Phillips.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, can the Government state whether the £17 million contract with Philips was subject to a Government tender process; and, if not, why not?

695

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the contract with Philips was successfully awarded following a Government tender process.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, Question 233 was about how the partnership came about. Was there a discussion leading to the tender? Were there previous discussions with Philips in relation to the things that were then eventually the subject matter of the tender, and they were the successful tenderer? Can he give us a bit of background as to the scope and the rationale and how these discussions originated? Was there an approach by Philips to GHA, or was it the other way round? If so, it would be helpful to receive some detail of that.

705

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the tender was issued in November 2021 by my predecessor. Two firms engaged in that tender process and discussions ensued with the two of them in respect of the breadth of service that could be offered, the price and over what period of time those services would be available. So it was a relationship that was developed as a result of the tender. I am not sure what else the hon. Member wishes me to ... The detail was put out in the tender as to what we were looking for and the kind of partnership we were seeking, and Philips was successful in the process.

Hon. K Azopardi: This originated from the GHA and not the other way round? It is not that the GHA were approached on a commercial basis to offer them services and they decided to take up the idea that this might be interesting, they then tendered and they were successful? It was the other way round, so the GHA originated the concept that it would be helpful to have a contract for these services, and then put out a tender and Philips was the successful tenderer. Is that right? It is a large contract of some value, so it would be helpful to have some more detail on it.

720

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member will recall there have been previous questions in Parliament as to imaging services and other services that the GHA required. The GHA had been discussing this for some considerable time before this tender was put out, with a number of different parties. The GHA then took the decision that the best way to get where we wanted to get to with a professional provider was just to put it out to tender, detailing the services and inviting firms to come forward, which is exactly what happened. I think the object of the exercise was to get specialisation in, and I am delighted that we have managed to contract with an international firm with the reputation and expertise that Philips has for the benefit of all users of the GHA.

Q235/2022

Register of property occupation – Policy decision re tenants of government housing

Clerk: Question 235/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that it has not changed the previously announced policy decision that tenants of government housing do not, themselves, need to take steps to register under the new Register of Property Occupation?

735

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

740 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola):
Mr Speaker, Government confirms that it has not changed the previously announced policy decision.

745 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, that is helpful but there appears to be quite a lot of confusion on the issue because we keep being approached by people talking about the process and so on, and some of them will say they have been queuing up and that kind of ... The message that the Minister gave when we debated the principles of the Bill – and I asked him for an assurance and he gave it at that time – appears not to be out there, or at least not out there with sufficient clarity, so perhaps the Government would be minded to consider issuing a notice or providing some 750 further information on this, so that the public are aware that they do not need to worry themselves about this.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I understand that, and I think there are other live issues, too ... which is that we will transpose the data that we have from the housing records into the Property 755 Registry, but at the same time as we are doing it we are wanting to check its accuracy and therefore the team are engaging with people to check and verify who exactly is occupying different units within the public housing stock. Some of them are relatively straightforward and we exempted the senior citizens in the homes from those because it is quite straightforward, and so it is a single-dwelling flat with one or two occupiers, there are no children involved; in public 760 housing, of course, there are.

The policy has not changed. I am happy to look at putting some notices out, which may give clarity to people that they do not need to worry about it, but the team is engaging in a checking and double-checking of the information we are putting into the Property Register to make sure that it is what we want from it, the source of truth. We want to ensure that the data within that 765 system is accurate, so we are taking some time to go through it, but nobody in public housing has to comply with the legislation at this stage in terms of providing that information; it is being done for them by us.

Hon. K Azopardi: So, to be clear, Mr Speaker – and I am grateful for that answer – when he 770 says that the Department is checking – which, of course, is understandable and it is okay to check this information; they should check it – that is a proactive decision of the Department? They are presumably reaching out to check this information but they are not requiring tenants of public housing to go down to be in the queue and so on? Tenants of government housing are not in danger of penalties for non-compliance, because this is something that, as a matter of policy, the 775 Principal Housing Officer will register, but then the government officials may be checking the information once the registration has taken place. That is how I understand the answer.

Hon. A J Isola: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is absolutely right, we are simply verifying information that we already hold, to ensure it is accurate. And there is no penalty or sanction. They are not 780 obliged to do it; we are doing it for them. Some already have. There are a fair number of people in public housing who have registered online, and obviously that is very helpful to us in the process of getting there quicker.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q236-39/2022

COVID-19 –

Boosters administered to residents and non-residents;
repeat positives and vaccination status

785 Clerk: Question 236/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, of the 39,854 COVID boosters administered to 9th June 2022, how many of those were first COVID boosters – that is a third dose of the COVID vaccine – broken down by residents and non-residents?

790

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 237, 238 and 239.

795

Clerk: Question 237/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, of the 39,854 COVID boosters administered to 9th June 2022, how many of those were second COVID boosters – that is a fourth dose of the COVID vaccine – broken down by residents and non-residents?

800

Clerk: Question 238/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, of the 18,806 confirmed COVID cases detected in Gibraltar to 9th June 2022, how many people have contracted COVID once and how many have contracted COVID-19 more than once – repeat positives – with a breakdown of how many people have contracted it once, twice or three or more times?

805

Clerk: Question 239/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

810

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, to the extent that of the 18,806 confirmed COVID cases detected in Gibraltar to 9th June 2022 there have been repeat positives – in other words, cases of people contracting COVID more than once – can Government provide a breakdown of these by vaccination status, namely how many of the repeat positives have been vaccinated or are/were unvaccinated against COVID-19 at the time of contracting COVID for a second time?

815

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, out of 39,854 booster doses administered up to 9th June 2022, 30,740 were third doses with 23,378 administered to residents and 7,362 administered to non-residents.

Similarly, 9,114 booster doses were fourth doses with 8,227 administered to residents and 887 administered to non-residents.

Of the 18,806 confirmed cases, a total of 16,728 persons have contracted COVID-19 once, 1,036 persons have contracted COVID-19 twice and two persons have contracted COVID-19 thrice. No one has contracted COVID-19 four times or more.

Out of 1,038 persons who were confirmed COVID-19 positive two or three times, 771 were vaccinated and 267 were unvaccinated at the time of testing positive.

830 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, I just give the hon. Member an opportunity to confirm also that the booster remains available for anyone who wants to take it up. Is that correct?

Hon. A J Isola: Yes, indeed, Mr Speaker. As I said at the last sitting of Parliament, for as long as stocks are supplied and are available we will continue to administer them.

Q240-41/2022
Mental health in under-18s –
Number of referrals; anti-depressant and anti-psychotic prescriptions

835 Clerk: Question 240/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how many persons under the age of 18 have been seen by or been referred to Mental Health Services or practitioners at St Bernard’s Hospital or Ocean Views or the Community Mental Health Services team in the calendar years 2016, 2017, 2018, 2019, 840 2020, 2021 and 2022 up to 31st May 2022, broken down by each calendar year and GHA facility mentioned?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

845 Minister for Digital, Financial Services, Health Authority and Public Utilities (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 241.

Clerk: Question 241/2022. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

850 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, how many persons under the age of 18 were prescribed medication for anti-depressants or anti-psychotic drugs by GHA personnel in each of the calendar years 2017, 2018, 2019, 2020, 2021 and 2022 up to 31st May 2022, broken down by each calendar year mentioned?

855 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, Digital and Financial Services.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I am now handing over a schedule with the information the hon. Gentlemen has requested. However, in connection to Question 56, I am informed that the service for children was established in 2019 and therefore there are no official statistics prior to that date. 860 The only way to retrieve this information would be from patient paper records, something which would be very difficult and challenging without knowing first-hand the individuals in question.

Moving forward, the Gibraltar National Mental Health Strategy will seek to improve mental health and care for the population of Gibraltar. This will include the strengthening of all the different institutions to implement positive change and progress on the four overarching 865 priorities, which are in alignment with the World Health Organization Global Mental Health Action Plan 2013-30, as mentioned in Press Release 574/2021.

Answer to Question 240/2022

Period	Number of Patients Referred
January 2019 to December 2019	110
January 2020 to December 2020	48
January 2021 to December 2021	113
January 2022 to May 2022	112

Answer to Question 241/2022

Years	Antidepressants	Antipsychotics
2018	2	0
2019	8	3
2020	13	8

870 Hon. K Azopardi: While I look at the schedule, may I just ask briefly ...? He said that in relation to one of the questions – he gave a number that is neither of those numbers, so I am not sure which one he meant – there was not information before 2019. He said Question 46, but I am not really sure which one he meant because these are Questions 240 and 241. Is he saying that he does not have information about the drugs, or is it the referrals? I see now, from the schedule, that he meant the referrals.

875 Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member looks closely at my question he will see that I wanted to have a breakdown of the referrals but also broken down by each calendar year and GHA facility mentioned. He will see that the schedule he has handed me does not provide that information, so may I ask him, if he does not have that with him, to write to me, because this would not be a full answer to the question that I asked?

880 Hon. A J Isola: Yes, Mr Speaker, I will be happy to do that. It is not in my supplementary information either, so I will be happy to provide that information to the hon. Member.

Hon. K Azopardi: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

885 Just looking at the schedule, we would have to do the totals but you can see that, in terms of referrals, in the year 2019 there are 110, in 2020 a smaller number, 48, then, in 2021, 113, and in 2022 so far, 112. Obviously, January to December 2020 was the COVID year, so I expect that must have had an impact, but looking at the other years and taking out the COVID year you are seeing annual referrals in 2019 and 2021 of over 100 under-18s to mental health facilities of a different type. We do not know whether it is St Bernard's, Ocean Views or the Community Mental Health team because the hon. Member will have to write to me with that answer, and it would be helpful to receive it, but you have seen also in the first five months of this year a number which is as high as the annual numbers for 2021 and 2019. Does he agree that it is of some concern to see these numbers? Will he endeavour to speak to his advisers, those in the Mental Health Services, as to whether this is the norm and as to the causes that perhaps ... and what action could be taken in relation to these matters?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, two points. The first point is that yes, I acknowledge the numbers in the first half of this year are higher than they normally are, but the second point is that I believe much of that may be down to the implementation of the Mental Health Strategy carried out by my predecessor, which has led to an awful lot more awareness of the kind of issues that may arise

900 and consequently referring people more than they were previously. The Mental Health Strategy 2021-26 is designed precisely to do that. If that had not happened – and obviously it is still an area that we need to keep looking at – then I would have been concerned if that number had grown out of its own volition, so to say. The fact that there is much more awareness and the fact that the clinical operation and leadership in the Mental Health Service has been refreshed and 905 strengthened are also contributing factors to the increase in numbers. I suspect in previous years had we been doing this, we would have had more referrals also.

So, yes it is an area for concern, yes it is an area that has already been looked at by the Mental Health team, and I have no doubt that their strategy will continue to bring forward cases that require some support and attention.

Adjournment

910 Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I move that the House should now adjourn to Tuesday at 10.30 in the morning, when the House will consider the Appropriation Bill.

915 Mr Speaker: I now propose a question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Tuesday, 28th June at 10.30 a.m.

I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Tuesday, 28th June at 10.30 a.m. Those in favour?

920 Members: Aye.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, are we going to lay on the table the Answers to Written Questions?

Hon. Chief Minister: We have not finished Questions.

925

Mr Speaker: We have not finished Questions yet.

Hon. K Azopardi: Sorry, for clarity – I may have misunderstood; there were some discussions with the Clerk about accepting certain questions in written form – we are not finishing Questions, 930 so there will be a suspension of Standing Orders for the purposes of the Budget. Is that what he meant?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have consulted the provision on Questions about any question which remains unanswered when the Assembly adjourns on the last day of a meeting.
935 That is not when we adjourn today, because the meeting continues until we have been through the whole of the Order Paper. My mind was drawn to my memory of this, and that is why I have not asked hon. Members to accept those questions, because we can come back to those questions after we have finished dealing with Bills. That is when we will have to see which Ministers are here or not here. Two of them are likely to be back and therefore able to deal with it, subject to other 940 commitments. One may or may not be back. As he knows, we have a Minister who is having a difficulty with a relative and he may or may not be here, but he is going to do his best to be here next week.

Mr Speaker: I am just going to go back to the procedure for the adjournment.

945 I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Tuesday, 28th June at 10.30 a.m. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Passed.

This House will now adjourn to Tuesday, 28th June at 10.30 a.m.

The House adjourned at 5.00 p.m.

Order of the Day

Appropriation Bill 2022 – First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on 31st March 2023. The Hon. the Chief Minister.

30

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on the 31st day of March 2023 be read a first time.

35

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on the 31st day of March 2022 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Appropriation Act 2022.

Appropriation Bill 2022 – Second Reading – Debate commenced

40

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the distinct honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

This is my 19th Budget address as a Member of this Parliament. It is my 11th Budget address as Chief Minister.

45

In moving this Second Reading, I have the honour to present the Estimates of the Government's revenue and expenditure for the year ending 31st March 2023 – that is to say next year. I will also present the outturn for the Government's revenue and expenditure for the year ended 31st March 2022, which was the 10th full financial year of a Socialist Liberal Government since we took office.

50

Given that it will lace much of what I will say, I should remind the House that this debate comes almost exactly six years after the decision of the British people in a referendum to leave the European Union. That makes obvious the reality that most of our time in government has been spent dealing with Brexit. Additionally, the challenges of the pandemic and the war in Ukraine now scar the economic performance of all nations, ours included. I will, of course, explain in greater detail, in different parts of this address, how each of these challenges affects us.

55

I consider that it is, therefore, incumbent on the Government, in the face of these mammoth challenges, to continue to act, in this Budget as we have in the past, in a manner that is both responsible and prudent. Additionally, in taking the steps we will need to take today, we must act with a view to protecting the overall economic integrity of the nation's finances in the short, medium and long term. We have an obligation to act to ensure that the spending required by the COVID pandemic is repaid as efficiently as possible and in a manner that provides as little drag for future generations of Gibraltarians as possible.

I have approached this exercise, with the Minister for Financial Stability, the Financial Secretary and the Treasury, in a spirit of prudence and responsibility, as we must each Budget. We have designed these estimates to protect the most vulnerable in our community. We have set out to ensure that our key public services can continue to be seamlessly provided. We have ensured that 65 each measure we have designed achieves the purpose of raising revenue, where possible, and avoiding any austerity or hardship in any instance.

As a result, many of the revenue-raising measures I will announce today, with a heavy heart, are going to be in place only for two years – that is to say 24 months. These will be measures that are designed to pay back what the whole House, with the express agreement of the Leader of the 70 Opposition and the Opposition spokesperson for public finances, agreed to take from the public's coffers in order to pay for the worst ravages of COVID.

What we all agreed should be paid out we all must now contribute to paying back. What we all took the benefit of in the extraordinary funding of our health and care services for this period we must all now contribute to paying back. What all sectors in our economy directly or indirectly took 75 the benefit of, we must all now contribute to putting back in. There are no free rides and Gibraltar has never had a free ride. The generations of Gibraltarians who built our nation had no free ride and our generation must recognise that the lives we lead are, in most instances, privileged and we must, therefore, all contribute to the recovery of our public finances.

But let us be crystal clear: this Budget will contain no austerity, because it contains no cuts of 80 jobs or services, but it will tap our people's personal prosperity in a way that will leave untouched the income of the worst off in our community, who will actually see their income grow as a result of the measures I am going to announce today. The most vulnerable and those on the lowest incomes, disability benefits and state pensions, as well as those on public sector occupational pensions, will see their incomes continue to grow. We will, in that way, protect the most 85 vulnerable. But if we are all genuinely committed to social justice, then we must see the most well-off pay a little more, if only for a few years, in a way that is designed to pay off the debts we have incurred to pay our way in the pandemic.

I emphasise that the spending we are talking about repaying is the spending we have all in this House agreed we should incur. This is not to pay for schools, new rental homes for the elderly or 90 affordable homes for young families, the refurbishment of housing estates, new primary care centres, sports facilities or other projects. Each of those projects is a worthy, important project for our community. None of these represent any lavish spending or any project which any Member of this House has spoken out against or suggested we should not proceed with. Nor is this to pay for the pay of public sector workers, which we have increased considerably. The spending we will 95 have to all contribute to repaying is the spending we all agreed to in this House and which relates directly to the disbursement of money by the Government to address the real hardship that the pandemic would otherwise have visited upon this community, because by spending what we spent we prevented what could have been mass unemployment and the mass closure of businesses. Indeed, we prevented many of the problems now affecting other economies where 100 the restart of some parts of their activity is impaired, not least the aviation industry.

So, Mr Speaker, in the context of the continually difficult historic moment in which we find ourselves, I must tell all hon. Members that this will no doubt be seen as a tough but necessary Budget – tough because, whilst the Government will assist and protect the most vulnerable, we will ask for more from those who can, but necessary because there comes a time in the affairs of 105 many when it cannot be all take, take, take.

We have been clear, always, that we believe that we must never be spending more than we collect. Annual expenditure must not exceed annual revenue, and because of the truly exceptional circumstances of the past two years – not for any other reason – annual expenditure presently does exceed annual revenue. That is what we have to correct or we will continue, for longer than 110 would be forgivable – and it is presently forgivable – to breach our own golden rule, as set out by Sir Joe Bossano in his first address as Chief Minister in a Budget debate after 1988.

Mr Speaker, it is worth that I should pause there to reflect for a moment, because last Thursday, 23rd June, was not just the unfortunate sixth anniversary of a very unhappy plebiscite – that is to say the anniversary of voting in the Brexit referendum; 23rd June was also the 50th anniversary of the 1972 General Election. That was the first General Election that saw Joseph John Bossano elected to the House of Assembly, this Parliament’s predecessor, with 4,383 votes. The Hon. the Father of the House, Sir Joe Bossano has, therefore, now been a Member of Parliament for more than 50 years, and on this side of the House we express our congratulations to him on this magnificent milestone and the huge benefits that his work as a parliamentarian has delivered to Gibraltar and Gibraltarians in the course of the half century that he has served our people.

Additionally, we would congratulate him for having persuaded so many of the nay-sayers on the opposite benches who now say they support his economic policies and his policies on international relations. No one, now, is against the accumulation of rainy-day funds, like the GSD used to be. Incidentally, those are now, once again, healthy, even at this time. No one, now, backs the Brussels process, like the GSD did when it was formed. No one, now, speaks out against the Future Job Strategy, like the GSD used to do – although I see Mr Phillips is not here to hear my response to his goading on that. Sir Joe Bossano has seen off all those arguments. The GSD are now converts to what they used to call Walter Mitty economics and unrealistic cherry-picking.

So, I am here to praise Bossano, not to bury him, but the fact is that many on the other side have made it their lives’ work to come to this place to bury Bossano, not to praise him, although in that sense they would be truer to the original Shakespeare. They have happily abandoned their original principles – no surprises there – and have adopted a salutary ‘if you cannot beat him, join him’ approach to Sir Joe, which we on this side of the House warmly welcome on the occasion of this auspicious anniversary. Those opposite, of course, have now found another target for their disaffections – and you are listening to him, Mr Speaker. I have absolutely no difficulty with that, and they should have the comfort that I have no intention of being here for 50 years!

But let us return to Sir Joe and his golden rule, one which Members opposite embrace and eschew, depending on whatever mood takes their fancy, but which we regard as sacrosanct. To observe the golden rule and to reap its benefits for our nation, it is immediately necessary that all of us who can take a step forward and contribute a little more, even if it is for a short period of time, must do so to get the whole community over the COVID hump.

Of course, we are also still dealing with the negotiations with the EU on a treaty on our future relationship. The reality is that the absence of that treaty has meant that there has been an unwelcome element of uncertainty in our economy. The other side of the coin of that reality is that we cannot accelerate the negotiation, if it would mean saying yes to matters which would be unacceptable, simply to hurry the process along. The GSLP Liberal parties which I represent have a very clear view of what is and is not acceptable to us in this context and what is and is not acceptable to the people of Gibraltar. So any voice which is raised to suggest that we are somehow to blame for the delay and not having a treaty cannot be a voice that is concerned to ensure that the said treaty, if it emerges, is safe and secure for Gibraltar, because we cannot rush a negotiation other than by accepting things we would not otherwise be prepared to accept, and we will not do that. I say that in anticipation of addresses from hon. Members in the House in this debate. It would be inherently contradictory to complain we have not gone fast enough and at the same time suggest we must ensure that Gibraltar’s sovereignty, jurisdiction and control must be properly and fully protected. Undoubtedly, however, leaving the European Union has created uncertainty, and that will have had economic consequences, of course. I will say more later in my address to update the House on the latest on the treaty negotiations, but these are, of course, matters which fall to be considered in a State of the Nation debate such as this debate on the Appropriation Bill.

Whilst these are tough times requiring tough but necessary measures, it is an honour to have been entrusted by our people to navigate Gibraltar through these storms. There may be many detractors of the Government and of mine outside of this House. So much criticism these days is vented on social media. It is the modern politician’s cross to bear that so many want to see the negative in everything and not appreciate the effort that is required to actually achieve things.

165 But that cross is like water off a duck's back given the honour that it is to hold the reins at this immensely difficult time, the pleasure that it is to see things progress and proceed, the deep satisfaction as we look back and see our achievements, all of them in the teeth of criticism, and the reward that we enjoy as we see a community evolving and a nation progressing socially and economically.

170 Of course we have suffered delays on key projects. Who has not at this time? In fact, I want to acknowledge receipt of a heartfelt petition from purchasers at Chatham Counterguard and Bob Peliza Mews relating to the delays inevitably occasioned to those two projects. I look forward to meeting the organisers of the petition so that we can discuss the reasons for the delays and the cost increases that are likely on those projects. But I refuse to believe that the Gibraltarians do 175 not really understand, deep down, the difficulties we have faced and the inevitable delays to projects that have arisen, whatever the more impetuous may choose to blithely post on social media. Our fellow Gibraltarians know and understand that we did not choose Brexit and the uncertainty it has created and the work it has required, we did not bring COVID upon ourselves and the economic and social difficulties it has created around the world, and we did not invade 180 Ukraine and the inflationary pressures that it has brought. These factors are external factors and their consequences have to be dealt with and managed, and I do not think that many or any Gibraltarian would have made different choices in the circumstances we have found ourselves in than those we made ourselves.

However critical some may be, if they had been in my chair they would have done the same 185 thing in nine or 10 out of 10 of the instances in which we have had to make choices. But when all is said and done, just as I told the House last year, in the end it will, of course, be my responsibility that we should get this right, and that is a responsibility that I am genuinely honoured to shoulder for our country at this time, because we – all of us on this side – and I will not cower in the face of these difficulties. We will not shake and dither or be rabbits frozen in headlights. We will continue 190 to act, we will continue to work, we will continue to trade through and out of these circumstances – and today marks an important moment in doing so, as we set out to prescribe the measures that we will all have to contribute to in order to do so.

Predictably, I expect some may want to argue that the state of Gibraltar's post-pandemic public finances, and consequently the measures we have to take, are somehow the fault of the GSLP 195 Liberal Government. That is probably the oldest political trick in the book, like blaming the Labour government in the United Kingdom for the debt in 2010 without accepting that the debt arose from the worldwide economic crash and the need to put cash in to stop a total collapse of the banks and the capitalist markets. It worked a treat for the Opposition then to use the argument as the excuse for the austerity that followed and that predictably hurt working people, whilst 200 exonerating the capitalists that had been saved by the socialist government's spending. I will not stand idly by as the same cruel trick is attempted in Gibraltar to pull the wool over the eyes of Gibraltarians. Naturally, we are the guys in charge and we are responsible for the public finances, but from that to being to blame for a deficit and higher debt is quite a stretch.

In this respect, I note the statement last year from the Opposition that the effect of the 205 pandemic was that whatever had happened before, and whether or not we had followed the Opposition's advice or not, we would have ended up in the same place. It has been suggested by some now that those remarks relate only to the deficit and not the debt. That is to say it is suggested that the Opposition accept that we would have ended up in a deficit situation, but not that the debt would have increased as it has as a result.

210 Sterile though I think such a debate is, I think it is important to highlight that the deficit is being plugged by borrowing. That is to say the debt is going up because we are plugging the deficit by borrowing. So, given that we will no doubt face this continued sterility in the approach we face in this debate, I provide the obvious answer to the argument we expect to hear in coming days, because anyone who thinks they can sustain the argument that the economic and public finance 215 issues that Gibraltar is facing today is the fault of the Government of Gibraltar is not being objective in their analysis. I can understand that those who are just perennially opposed to the Government might think that, but any fair-minded, objective, independent observer will appreciate that the point of arrival at the pandemic was a point of reducing direct government debt, surpluses and increased revenue over expenditure. That is why, despite the many attempts 220 to try to get that argument to stick, it has stuck only in the quarters that want it to stick.

What has driven us to deficit is the three-fold aspect of the deployment of public money to pay those forced out of work by the closure of businesses, the closing of our economy and other economies that deprived us of revenue at the same time, to a position from which recovery will take some time, and the additional myriad expenses of COVID. It's that simple. We have a deficit 225 because we spent money to keep food on people's tables and to keep our companies going. We spent money to fund the GHA and public sector to trade through COVID. We spent money to plug the revenue gap from our falling or disappearing revenue. That gap is still there, as Government revenue has not yet fully recovered.

We are not in this situation because we built a school, built a primary care centre or built new, affordable homes, and the measures we will take today, tough and painful though some may be, have a clear purpose and signify a clear direction out of these difficulties – to get back on track, to get back to growth and to get back to surpluses: balancing the books, which is what our right-thinking citizens want us to do.

Mr Speaker, before we get into the economic detail, it is also important to remind ourselves 235 that this debate has always been wider than just an economic debate or a debate just about the public finances. That is the right approach, as the economic well-being of a nation comes from the social and political well-being of a nation, so it equally falls to us to consider the wider vicissitudes of life in Gibraltar when we consider this Bill. In that respect, I think we are well placed to reflect positively on a decade of social investment, social progress and social reform which has landed 240 well and established itself deeply now.

We have refurbished old and tired estates and we will refurbish more of them as our public finances recover. We have added massive new green areas in the centre of our city. Commonwealth Park and Campion Park serve as everybody's back garden in Gibraltar. Just that shows commitment to improving our common environment and our people's quality of life.

We have built and are building new schools, so that by the time our programme is finished 245 every school in Gibraltar will have been built by the GSLP, including a new Jewish school. Additionally, we will have employed 172 more teachers in 10 years. That is where your money is going, not on lavish spending, as some allege. We have employed 170 more learning support assistants in 10 years. That is not lavish spending. That is investment in education.

We have employed 137 more nurses in the GHA in the last 10 years and we have employed 250 almost double the number more GPs in 10 years, although we still have to get right how to organise appointments with them. That is where your money is going.

In fact, the total complement in Head 16, Education, is up from 607 when we took over, to 255 1,123 now. The total complement of the GHA, which can be seen in Appendix G, has gone up from 869.5 when we took over, to 1,185. That is where your money is going. Austerity is about cutting people in such roles. We have done no such thing. We have invested in quality jobs with the best terms and conditions of employment, exceeding even those on which we used to match parity.

We have built brilliant new facilities for our elderly at Hillside and Bella Vista, as well as refurbishing Mount Alvernia and the Jewish Home and opening the John Mac Wing for the elderly.

We have provided two new primary care facilities for our people, one of them for children. In 260 fact, the Government believes that these are not yet operating as they should and they need to be reviewed, and we are in the process of doing so.

We have built and are building more affordable homes than we have ever seen built by any 265 administration in our history. Delays have arisen from the pandemic, of course – nothing we can do about that, although Members opposite will, no doubt, try to pin the delays on us; not surprising, as I fully expect them to try to pin the Black Death, the Plague and the Vietnam War on us during the course this debate if they think it will help them gain one or two more political points. But we continue doing.

270 We have built car parks that provide facilities for those of our people who wanted to buy car parking spaces.

We have provided a new facility for our broadcasting corporation so that they have the modern studios and equipment that they need.

275 We developed a 700-berth marina for small boats and will soon provide a hard, once we settle the outstanding aspects with the Yacht Club which come from the time in government of Members opposite.

We held great concerts, the cost of which we subsidised for whole families to enjoy when we could.

280 We built and established a University of Gibraltar as a centre of learning, which had long been an ambition of successive Governments that we have made a reality, as is the Gibraltar International Bank a reality that other Governments spoke of and we banked, literally.

285 We have built, and in one case just finished, the best sporting facilities our athletes have ever enjoyed. The delays have been impossible to manage for reasons already repeatedly explained in this House, but again I have no doubt that the delays will also be said by the Opposition to be our fault, just like the Cuban Missile Crisis and the Korean War. Nothing will be too remote in time or geography for the GSD not to say it was Picardo's fault, the Government's fault or the GSLP Liberals' fault.

290 All these things can be said very quickly – se dice muy pronto – but what a legacy in the past 10 years. Whilst many have spoken of these things and promised them, we have made them happen, and not without great effort, very late nights and a massive amount of work involving ministerial colleagues and great public servants. That is how we work.

295 That is not mismanagement by any definition. It is the legacy of a golden socialist liberal decade for Gibraltar, stopped in its tracks, like the whole world was, by a pandemic that took no prisoners around the world and has taken 104 of our most beloved people, so far. Indeed, the best way to demonstrate that the issues afflicting our economy today are not related to our actions, our alleged mismanagement or any spending which we may have undertaken which is lavish by any stretch of the collective imagination, is best set out by a quote from Members opposite. This is a direct quote:

Of course, no one on this side of the House is saying that if they had been prudent with the people's money over the last 10 years we could have avoided a £157 million deficit which is, of course, COVID-related. No one could have predicted the pandemic ...

300 That is correct, of course. It is the actual statement, a direct quote, from the Member for Devil's Gap North, Mr Feetham, speaking, as he told us, on behalf of the Opposition because the Leader of the Opposition had asked him to address these issues. That very realistic assessment, which accords with our own understanding, estops the Members opposite from now seeking to suggest the opposite with any credibility. The political estoppel created will, nonetheless, no doubt be ignored at the altar of political convenience, but that fleeting moment of lucid honesty which Mr Feetham brought to last year's debate will forever be recorded in the Hansard of this House and in the political history of this community. For that, I thank him.

310 In fact, what we delivered before that was a boost to Gibraltar as a society and for our nation, a massive step forward in a decade of hard work and hyperactive government, a generational step change that we have delivered for our people. Some say we have not done enough. I acknowledge we still have things to do and we have basic things that have gone awry in the pandemic that we have to fix. Some say we have done too much. You can never please everyone. Sometimes, it feels like we can never please anyone – certainly no one on the opposite benches, at least – but we have satisfied ourselves that we have done what we said we would, insofar as we reasonably could until the pandemic struck. We have not been idle one day since we were entrusted by the people

315 to govern our nation's affairs, we have not been complacent one moment since we took over in December 2011, and we have been humble always in the discharge of our functions and true to the principles of natural justice and the seven principles of public life set out by Lord Nolan and our draft Ministerial Code. I trust we will now be able to do the work of the Select Committee to finalise adoption of it formally, and to further tighten that, we will very soon be publishing a Bill 320 to provide additional protection to prevent any semblance of corruption in our society. Having blown hot and cold on it, and having insisted that we should not proceed with it, I hope all Members opposite will support the Bill when it is published in coming weeks.

Gibraltar is now also freer and more open than ever before. Freedom and equality is established in respect of the sexual orientations. It was a pleasure, therefore, to have attended this year's Pride event on Saturday, to represent all of Gibraltar there. When people ask why 325 should we have a Gay Pride event: for a simple reason, because the opposite is no longer true in Gibraltar. There is no gay shame. That is why we celebrate equality with Pride.

We are also making much better but as yet imperfect provision for the disabled in our community. We have started the work on the extension of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons With Disabilities. The process has already commenced and is being led by the Minister for 330 Equality, working within the Ministry of Equality and other Departments. This is a long process with various stages, some of which are not under our direct control. The extension has always been our ambition, as we have set out on a number of occasions in this House since we were in opposition. This is, of course, linked to the Disability Act which we passed in this Parliament and which is modelled on the Convention.

335 Mr Speaker, you will recall that there are two sections of that Act that have not yet commenced, and this was in order to give time to plan for premises to be accessible. In the 2019 Budget I announced an initiative to enable businesses to claim a tax deduction equal to the expenditure of works to improve their property up to a maximum of £15,000. This was to encourage businesses to facilitate access for people with disabilities in their existing premises.
340 That measure was made available for 36 months. Regrettably, the COVID pandemic got in the way of that initiative, as with so many other things, and as the very first Budget measure today I announce that I am pleased to reinstate this provision for another 24 months.

Every community is a work in progress, but it is churlish of our opponents not to congratulate us on the progress achieved so far. I will not dwell further on the subject of social progress and 345 inclusion and equality, but I will repeat my warning. Whilst I have breath in my body I will continue to ensure that we move only in one direction in this respect: forward. Gibraltar has no reverse gear on rights and progress. The progressive road to equality is a one-way road. Any attempt to reverse the laws to prevent discrimination will have ferocious opposition from the majority, because Gibraltar is a socially liberal European democracy and we have taken our place at the 350 table of nations with modern, progressive laws, very often opposed from the majority of those on the opposite benches. And how apposite that on the one-year anniversary of the Crimes Act, or abortion referendum, in Gibraltar, the United States Supreme Court should have ruled to undo 50 years of federal protection to women's reproductive rights. Whilst others move backwards, we move forward, only forward.

355 Speaking of matters European, I will now update the House on the progress of the EU negotiations. At this time last year, we had not even seen the publication of the mandate of the European Commission for this negotiation. When we saw the EU mandate, we all agreed that it presented many unacceptable aspects which the Government and people of Gibraltar would never be able to agree. Now we have engaged directly with the European Commission on nine 360 rounds of negotiation. Technical discussions are ongoing today. We have made huge progress in understanding each other's positions. I think it is fair to say that there are areas where we have found agreement. It is also fair to say that there are areas where, whether we agree in principle or not, we are not yet able to agree the mechanics of how to give effect to our agreement. Yes, this is taking longer than any of us wished or expected, but it is a negotiation that is on foot and 365 which we have to get right. This really is a process where the adage 'more haste, less speed' is going to be what gets us to the right conclusion.

At the moment, the talks are processing through a deeply technical stage where some of the detail of the parts of the Schengen aquis and the relevant parts of the aquis on movement of goods are being considered. We have to ensure that these have been fully and properly analysed between the parties in order to ensure beyond peradventure that if we do reach agreement, or when we find that agreement, we find no nasty surprises and we have addressed all of those issues in the course of the negotiation.

The technical teams for the Government of Gibraltar are being led today by Michael Llamas QC, the Attorney General, who is immersed in highly complex work. The Deputy Chief Minister and I are equally involved in all policy aspects which the technical work throws up.

The meetings have been innumerable and the meetings to come will likely be innumerable, yet it is worth remembering that this is not a process that we are embarked upon by choice. We have not decided that we wish to recast our relationship with the European Union because we woke up one morning and decided to do so. It may sound trite to say it, but it is important to remember we are embarked on this process because we must, as a result of the Brexit referendum, work to fashion the recasting of our relationship with the EU into the best possible form, and if the best form we can negotiate is not safe and secure, then so be it. But we must pursue this course and I am confident that we will reach agreement and that the agreement will recast our relationship with Europe going forward.

It is also presenting us with an opportunity to recast our relationship with Spain and leave behind the confrontations of the past. Whether that opportunity is taken is more for them than for us, but our hand has been stretched out in friendship for generations and under successive governments. Too often it has been cheaper for successive governments of Spain to play to historic prejudices than to move forward to dialogue and co-operation. We may be seeing a change, and every Gibraltarian will want to welcome that if it takes root and is not lost to the rise of far-right extremism in Spanish politics. But the opportunity may be there, and that is why we remain committed to seeking to resolve the nature of our future relationship with the EU through a UK-EU treaty which is safe and secure on all our fundamental concerns and which is, essentially, with the EU, which has no sovereignty claim on Gibraltar. We do believe we can deliver such a treaty in a manner which creates that mythical shared prosperity of which we all talk and which must, perforce, lead to enhanced prosperity in Gibraltar, which is where prosperity spreads from. I remain deeply optimistic that such a safe and secure treaty is possible and now increasingly probable. The latest technical negotiations are very tough and very tricky and they are dealing with difficult areas of policy. They require deep maturity in understanding the European rules as they are between member states and how they would apply to us in the context of non-membership of the EU or of Schengen, but of adherence through international treaty and the application of public international law.

But what I would, therefore, warn against is the idea, put out by some siren voices, that we could have done this quicker in some way or that we are failing by not bringing it in quicker. It is worth every member of the community remembering that in Greek mythology the sirens were dangerous creatures who lured sailors, with their enchanting music and singing voices, to shipwreck on the rocky coast of their island. In the past, some such sirens have said we should have done like Northern Ireland. Of course, when we pointed out the differences, those who made that argument scoffed. In fact, now, those who argued we should be like Northern Ireland will have seen that there would have been little merit in that. They have come full circle and are now arguing, like us, that the Gibraltar negotiation is very different to the Northern Ireland negotiation. The same sirens have even called for a deal in which Gibraltar's external relations become the responsibility of the President of the European Commission. That is not something we would consider would be safe and secure.

I do appreciate that they have come round to our position, although they do not say so. It is also true that they urge us to do things quicker, but also urge us not to concede anything fundamental – not that we would or that we might need them to remind us. But of course the only way to go faster is to concede things we are not prepared to concede. We are never going to compromise our British sovereignty, jurisdiction or control, so anyone who thinks we have gone 420 soft on the fundamentals, or who thinks they will be able to argue that in order to somehow lure our supporters away with siren calls to the rocks ... is in for a shock because we will not compromise on the fundamentals and neither are we being asked to do so. But we have been right to be cautious and to be careful in our negotiation. There is too much at stake for Gibraltar, and for those around us, to get things wrong. If we are put under pressure in the process of 425 negotiation, we have to ignore that pressure in order to negotiate successfully, however much the pressure may produce negative effects in the interim.

I acknowledge the difficulties being experienced by blue and other colour ID card holders, but in assessing our actions and reactions to things that may be happening, our opponents, our supporters and the general public need to think about what the alternatives are to the steps we 430 are taking – and any such thinking must be deep thinking. That is to say people should not blithely think that it would be proper to react in this complex and important negotiation as one does in a brawl. This negotiation is no brawl. It is as much a game of chess as it is of poker, where we all have to win and none of us can lose. Not easy, but nothing worth doing in politics ever is easy. And neither will this Budget be easy, or the numbers that I will now report to the House arising 435 from the social background that I have described.

Mr Speaker, the last time I delivered a full Budget address – last year – was July 2021. Over the last few years, in economic terms, the entire world has changed, but as I highlighted last year and every year, my focus has to remain on this small part of the world that we call home. This is our paradise and we must preserve it as much as possible.

440 First, we were hit by the unexpected departure of the United Kingdom from the European Union. The exchange rate ructions and the uncertainty created by that vote, and the subsequent negotiations on our departure, caused huge turbulence to a previously settled economic environment – and to think that Brexit seemed so seismic at the time that we called those politically instigated problems ‘turbulent’ and ‘challenging’. Little did we know what earthquake 445 was to come next, because next it was the impact of COVID. The continuing economic effect of that pandemic is the subject of much of my address. Then came its after-effects, as the world started opening up. We all saw the tensions between supply and demand played out in news reports daily. These tensions translated immediately to increased prices and worldwide pressures on labour forces, as these had been displaced during the lockdowns. This has resulted in further 450 shortages, such as delays on deliveries of motor vehicles, parts – you name it – and daily pressures such as those we can all relate to, such as long queues at security checks at airports etc. Additionally, all of this turbulence has unfortunately been severely compounded by the war in Ukraine, which really has thrown global markets into crisis. The importance of self-sufficiency in energy and other factors has been brought to the fore as we see larger countries in Europe grapple
455 with their conscience in the face of possible sanctions and what is truly deliverable, despite the tough rhetoric, given their dependence on fuel from Russia. This is the main factor moving inflation as high as it is, the effects of which I will analyse later in my address. These are all salutary lessons for us in Gibraltar as we continue to carefully calibrate the arrangements we might be able to negotiate as part of our own agreement arising from Brexit.

460 In this context it is perhaps useful for me to update the recent history of GDP growth to provide a sense of how Gibraltar has performed in the face of all these external factors. I really need to emphasise here that all of these factors – be they COVID, shortages, price inflation, Brexit and now the effects of the war in Ukraine – are external forces which we, as a small nation, are at the mercy of. We are buffeted by these forces but we have no way to arrest them or manage these 465 international issues. We can only ensure the integrity of HMS Gibraltar and work to make sure she is a watertight ship that will withstand any storm. It really is quite remarkable how a small place like Gibraltar has found its own way of adapting and dealing with them. As with everything, this is a continuing journey, not a destination, so it is important to reflect on the journey so far to ensure also the comfort and longevity of the traveller as we continue to navigate the course.

470 Pressures from relocations of public officers to the COVID helpline and related duties have meant stresses in Government departments such as the Statistics Office. The Government Statistic Office has, nonetheless, provided their Budget brief, which forecasts GDP and revises historic forecast in light of actual information. I will walk the House through some of these figures, pausing only to thank the Chief Statistician and her team for the work that they do in delivering these 475 annual metrics for our economy.

Mr Speaker, you may recall that last year I provided a preliminary estimate for the figures for 2019-20. The preliminary estimate I quoted last year, based on the information provided by the Government Statistic Office, was for a GDP of £2.57 billion. I am delighted to confirm that the final estimate for 2019, the final year before the pandemic, which really started at the end of March 480 2019, has not varied materially from that preliminary estimate. There has been a small positive increase in the final estimate of around £2.1 million, which will not move the needle on the rounded figure of £2.57 billion. I explained last year that this represented an increase, now of £112 million, namely 4.6%, as adjusted, over the figure for 2018-19. I explained that this growth was below the average growth rate during my Government's term in office and has arisen from 485 relocations in the gaming sector caused by Brexit. And here, once again, is that first external factor impacting on the economy.

I now turn to the preliminary estimate for 2020-21. Last year, I provided a forecast for that figure of £2.44 billion. The preliminary estimate is slightly below that, at £2.41 billion, a reduction of some £25 million, one that is, again, not material in the context of those figures. As I explained 490 last year, this reduction should not come as a surprise to anyone, given the lockdowns and the other factors affecting this economy. It is consistent with the direction of travel of the growth charted in other mature economies. Once again, factors which were not a direct result of anything we have any control over.

Mr Speaker, I therefore believe the Gibraltar economy has performed remarkably well. The 495 lockdown and restrictions on non-essential travel as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic had a significant negative effect on Gibraltar's economy in 2020-21, which is estimated to have contracted by 5.9% in nominal terms to £2.42 billion and decreased by 7.2% in real terms. To correct the forecast I gave last year and bring this up to date, the preliminary GDP forecast for 2019-20 is £2.41 billion – that is a reduction of £152 million, or that decline of 5.9% over the 500 2019-20 final estimate. Income from employment and gross trading profits of companies are estimated to have dropped by 5.2% and 7.6% respectively over the year, due to the effect of the pandemic. This confirms my statement last year that we have reverted to GDP levels of 2018-19, more or less, pre COVID.

Rolling things forward to the last financial year – that is to say 2021-22 – we opened up the 505 economy in the faltering way that we were best able to achieve and against continuing restrictions elsewhere, not least in our principal markets of the UK and Spain. Our reopening involved a series of different measures, but I am sure that everyone is now delighted to see Main Street beginning to fill up with tourists visiting on land-based tours or cruise ships. This has always been an important part of our economic activity. We have been blessed that we took the right decisions 510 in semi-mothballing these functions and the associated staff by keeping full employment, albeit not fully functional. The result is that we have been able to ramp up our airport, cruise liner terminal and coach park without the disruptions that many other places have experienced. As lockdowns and travel restrictions ended during 2021, the result is that our forecast GDP for 2021-22 is £2.59 million, surpassing the pre-pandemic GDP level.

515 The good news is that this GDP bounce-back reflects that economic activity is coming back and shows that our economy is strong. It is our public finances that will now need to be nurtured back to health. The GDP bounce-back represents an increase of £173 million or 7.2% in nominal terms over the final estimate for 2020-21. This is a solid performance for a year where the economy opened up as early as possible, perhaps in jumps and starts but as early as we could. Real growth, 520 however, decreased marginally by 0.4% as inflation grew at a faster rate, rising by 7.6% over the year to April 2022.

The gross trading profits of companies grew by 10.5% over the year and income from employment increased more slowly by 3.6% as the number of employee jobs rose by 3% over the year, but real average annual earnings fell by 4.6% compared with 2020. Although there was significant growth in 2021, the total number of employee jobs remained just below pre-pandemic levels, with a small shortfall of 200, or 0.7%, compared with October 2019. The numbers show we went from 30,603 jobs at the peak in 2019 to 30,403 jobs in October 2021, growing from a figure of all employee jobs of 29,516 in October 2020 when we were at peak pandemic. Hopefully, we can also see that the growth in jobs is coming in the private sector, where, in the period from October 2020 to October 2021, the growth in private sector jobs was 851, or 3.7%, up to 23,638, and only a growth of 47 in the public sector.

In the financial services sector, we have seen jobs reduced only by 25 out of 4,027 in the past year, up 29% over a quarter and almost a third from when we took over in 2011. In that respect, the FATF decision is one which will impact this sector, but we do not believe it will impact jobs. We respect the FATF decision and will be working to resolve the matters identified. We do not believe that Gibraltar deserves to be anything other than white listed and we will work with industry and law enforcement, as well as with FATF itself, to ensure our view is shared by them in time for the next review date.

Employment generally has remained stable and Gibraltar continues to benefit from admirably low unemployment levels, even during such difficult times. We also continue to see record low unemployment. In 2021, whilst the pandemic critically affected unemployment throughout the globe, the yearly average for Gibraltarians registered unemployed was 27. The comparable figure for 2011 was 442. That represents a drop of 415 unemployed from the time when we took over; a staggering 94% reduction in unemployment since our election in 2011, something of which we are rightly proud. That is not mismanagement, Mr Speaker, far from it.

In 2022 we have continued to maintain low unemployment levels with first-quarter average for 2022 of registered unemployment at 41. The comparable figure for the first quarter of 2012, when we took over from them, was 522. There is a drop of 481 there, a 92% reduction in unemployment since the first quarter of 2012. The House will be pleased to note that as at May 2022, unemployment stands at 35. The fact is that we all agree that daily life has hardly been normal throughout the year, given other places opened up in differing ways with different requirements and the other challenges we have faced.

If we take the average year-on-year economic growth between 2014 and 2018 – the five years pre pandemic – this averages out to 10.7%, despite the lower than average increase in 2018-19 for the reasons I explained, which were associated with Brexit and the losses within the gaming sector of one company, to our economy.

Taking these figures absolutely, the forecast figure now is £21 million higher than in the final estimate of the 2019-20 GDP figure. That year was only marginally affected by COVID, so what I would surmise is that we are back on track, having lost two years of economic growth. This, in my view, would be consistent with what the man in the street may feel, that somehow about two years of all of our lives have been lost to the pandemic.

Mr Speaker, interestingly, the ratio of personal taxation to GDP has been consistently coming down in Gibraltar. The ratio was 13.5% when we took over, with a GDP of £1.082 billion and £146 million in total collected in Social Insurance at £24.1 million and personal tax at £122.5 million. Today the ratio, after 10 years of Socialist Liberal Government, is 5% lower – over one third lower – at 8.7%, with a total of £225.6 million collected in Social Insurance at £45.6 million and personal tax at £180 million.

The GDP to tax ratio in the United Kingdom in March 2022 is 32.7%. That is 73.4% higher than in Gibraltar. The GDP to tax ratio in Spain at the end of 2021 is 36.6%. That is 76% higher than in Gibraltar. These figures show that the remarkable increases in government revenue in our time in office have not been driven by taxation, as we have relied on external arrivals and our external market to raise revenues. That is the market in which the pandemic caused havoc: arrivals from outside. It is returning, albeit more slowly than we would all have wished.

575 I will now seek to explain how the GDP impacts on the rest of the Government finances. I will also seek to explain the steps I feel we must take to somehow bridge the gap and bring the state of Government finances back on track, after ensuring this extended period afflicted by external forces. Given all the usual caveats, I will also, this year, not have to do the GDP per capita calculation for Gibraltar, as the figures would be the same as for the year 2019-20.

580 As I mentioned in last year's speech, the Estimates Book format took on a much more complex nature to be able to track COVID-related expenditure separately from other annually recurring expenditure. This year, the Estimates Book has necessarily had to conform to that format, but now I will now try to distil at a high level the contents of those close to 300 pages which set out in great detail how Government finances have matched up to expectation and where I think we are heading over the next 12 months.

585 To add transparency and to provide the most complete accountability to our people, we have taken the previously unprecedented step of publishing the Estimates Book online as I rose to start this debate. It will make this exercise easier for the public to follow as they listen to the deliberations of this House. The link to the Draft Estimates Book – which is this one – which was confidential until I have got up to speak this morning, is on the Government Press Office page, on 590 our Twitter feed and on our Facebook page. I have shared the links on my Facebook page also. I would therefore refer all those watching or listening, who want to follow the economic parts of this debate, to please look at the Estimates Book as we go through the next sections. Additionally, earlier Estimates Books will all soon be made available online, also to enable all citizens to track the economic evolution of our community over the past 50 years.

595 To make my references easier to follow – and at the risk of sounding like Disney's Tinkerbell, but without the assistance of a ringtone – I will refer to relevant page numbers of the Book during the speech, so that those following can find the relevant information. In doing so, I would sound a cautionary warning. If COVID and lockdown had an impact on the economy and created uncertainty, inflation and world events continue to cause pressures and uncertainties that make 600 charting the next 12 months as fraught as it was to predict them some 12 months ago. Never has the word 'estimate' been more apposite than in the title page of this Book.

Mr Speaker, let me turn first to the year that has just closed. The background and context to financial year 2021-22 was that whilst we lifted restrictions fairly quickly, many countries, including the United Kingdom and Spain, continued with restrictions for longer than we expected 605 when we compiled the Estimates Book during the first few months of 2021. These restrictions were not in the form of a complete lockdown, but they nonetheless discouraged international travel generally – although we received visitors from the UK – and impacted on visitors, all of which has an impact for many of Government's revenue sources.

610 At a high level we were projecting a loss for 2021-22 of £50.72 million. As I already have made public on first becoming aware of the figure, the forecast outturn deficit for the year was slightly higher than that, at £55.291 million, by some £4.6 million, and people can see that on page 2 of the Estimates Book. Although the figures in the Book are kept confidential until the start of this debate, it would not have been fair for me not to have shared that figure with the public as soon as we became aware of it in the Ministry of Finance and the Treasury. That is our commitment to 615 being fully accountable to our people.

Let me see if I can break this down into more relevant analysis, for those listening to understand. The good news in all of that is that our true third party revenue came in at £650 million, some £16 million above our projected revenue of £634 million. This shows the Government revenue stream by and large held up, despite the after-effects of the prolonged 620 restrictions, and people can see that on page 5, which is a blue page.

Personal tax and corporate tax came in some £22 million overall in excess of our projections. That is on page 6.

625 Import duties, on the other hand, came in at a disappointing £111 million, when our conservative estimate, also on page 6, was for £150 million. This can be explained given the lack of tourists and the measures we issued to make local shopping more attractive. When we have been used to collecting close to £170 million in duty, a hit of around £60 million, or around 10% of our COVID income, is very noticeable indeed and the reason the COVID Response Fund had to step in to make up the difference, but I will say more about that shortly.

630 Stamp Duty, which you can also see on page 6, Mr Speaker, came in at £14.9 million, almost double the predicted estimate of £8.5 million, signifying the continued strength and resilience of the property market.

Aviation revenue was actually down, and to an extent this was in part compensated for by higher fees earned on our Upper Rock tourist sites.

635 The GHA Group Practice Medical Scheme revenue came in some £10 million ahead of our estimate of £56 million, and that is on page 9. This is directly in line with the result of the increases in Social Insurance which were announced after the publication of the Estimates Book and therefore had not been factored into the Estimates.

The revenue from increasing the electricity tariff was also reflected, as this came in some £2.75 million higher than we expected.

640 Remarkably, the Port produced revenue almost in line with expectation, some £650,000 down only on the Estimate, despite the reduction in cruise line activity, which can be seen on page 10.

645 With minor exceptions, income is therefore broadly in line with our estimate, and that can be seen on pages 6-10, which I have just taken the House through. The positive takeaway from this analysis is that where we introduced measures that were not projected at the time of preparation of the Estimates Book, such as increases in Social Insurance or electricity, they actually gave rise to increases in that particular head of revenue. These were not offset by other losses within that same revenue head, as might have been expected, for example, had a spate of redundancies followed the release from restrictions.

650 Mr Speaker, on the expenditure side I believe we managed reasonably well, also. We projected for Consolidated Fund charges of £103.4 million and the forecast outturn figure came in at £105.7 million. That is on page 13. Most of this difference is made up of £300,000 of additional legal aid paid, circa £800,000 of Social Insurance contributions arising from the increase and an additional repayment of tax of £800,000, and that can be seen from page 16 of the detailed Estimates Book for the recurrent fund charges.

655 Similarly, we projected £551 million of departmental expenditure and the forecast outturn came in at £569 million, which is a difference of £18 million or some 3%, and that is visible in the summary on page 14 of the Book, which is a summary of all the heads of expenditure. The main cause of this is not unexpected, with a £20 million overspend between the GHA, the ERS and the Care Agency, all areas of expenditure which have had a significant and unpredictable overspend as they grapple to return to business as usual and emerge from COVID.

660 The Department of Education came in over budget at £61.4 million when compared with £58.8 million estimated. The main reason for this overspend has been the large issue with temporary cover which has been addressed recently by the formalisation of posts that needed to be filled, which results in the increase in posts from 869 to 1,123, or a whopping 30% increase in posts. This is not increased expenditure, though, as we are simply regularising posts that were previously funded through the 'Temporary Assistance' heads of charge. It is on pages 13-61 that people can see the detail of that spending in respect of education. That is not increased expenditure, as I said, though.

670 The GEA is another authority that has come in at higher than expected costs – £67.9 million, as compared with an estimate of £55 million. That can be seen on page 14. The reason for this overspend is the inability to do away with the temporary generators within the timeline we had hoped for as commissioning continues on the new plant, coupled with the inflationary impact on fuel costs. The good news on the former, though, is that we are working to take these offline and save costs. On the latter, however, the recent increase in fuel prices will no doubt impact on the 675 year ahead well beyond what was possible to project earlier this year when the Estimates Book was prepared. In that respect, because the GEA is an Authority, hon. Members will need to go to page 248 to see the detail of the payments I have just referred to. I will say more about the GEA later, Mr Speaker. For now I will say that we expect an overspend in this head by the end of the year, given the unprecedented and unexpected increases in the cost of fuel.

680 Again, by and large, all other Departments fell within the boundaries of their estimates, with the usual swings and roundabouts between Departments as one Department's overspend was compensated for by another Department's savings. That is best seen in those summary pages, the summary of Consolidated Fund expenditure, which are pages 13 and 14 of the Book.

685 Finally, turning to other expenditure within the COVID Fund, this is perhaps the area of expenditure that was most prone to errors in projecting, given the huge uncertainties at the time of preparation of the Estimates last year. It was not just a question of determining how long COVID would persist but also the implications of elements such as how other countries were to react, what tests were required and what attitude would be taken for employees of key facilities, such as the Hospital, that had daily testing of all staff with all the associated impact on cost. What we 690 saw here was expenditure far in excess of the amounts we projected.

Our estimate last year was for a COVID Response Fund expenditure of £67.5 million, whereas the forecast outturn turned out slightly in excess of double this amount at £135.1 million. The detail is on page 292, which is near the back of the Book where we have Appendix S, 'The COVID Response Fund'. It is worth doing an analysis of this because the main reasons for that overspend 695 can be broken down – and those who are trying to follow the Book need to be on page 292 whilst I do this analysis.

There was a large underestimation of how actual revenue would hold up when compared with the average revenue collected by Government for each of the seven key heads of revenue, compared with the equivalent revenue for the same heads for the two years pre pandemic. By 700 and large, our estimates were broadly in line with expectation save for, first, the head of Rates, which is easily explained, as we provided an exemption of rates for a quarter beyond what we had originally projected; and, most importantly, import duties, which, for the reasons explained – when there were no tourists coming to Gibraltar the visitor numbers were low, and import duties are driven by the arrivals in Gibraltar, who buy things in Gibraltar – came in at £45.7 million below
705 the adjustment we expected we would need to make. In addition, our COVID costs for the GHA and other public undertakings came in at £22.8 million, which was £15.8 million, or three times more than what was originally projected.

Mr Speaker, as you know, the COVID Response Fund is entirely funded by Government borrowing – deficit plugged by borrowing. The effect of this additional £68 million of expenditure 710 was that the Government needed to borrow further. Whilst we have expected borrowing to increase for this year by £50 million, it has actually been required to increase by £100 million, and that can be seen on page 11 of the Estimates Book, which sets out how the borrowing comes in at the bottom, the public debt.

I trust this explains the position and also serves to interconnect the different items and threads 715 in the Estimates Book for all Members and for everyone in the community who may be listening to or watching this debate.

Over the last few months there has been an attempt to suggest a division between comments made by the Father of the House in an interview on GBC, where he projected a loss of in excess of £90 million, and some of the statements I have made. The Hon. the Father of the House was 720 guiding his projections for the overall loss based on the level of borrowing, without classifying the distinction between business-as-usual losses of £55.3 million and the additional over-expenditure incurred within the COVID Response Fund. I trust the explanation I have provided seeks to reconcile any perceived differences, as in fact there were, and are, none. Indeed, I would strongly recommend a thorough read and analysis of the Estimates Book, which provides all relevant 725 information in this respect.

Mr Speaker, I will now seek to set out where I think public finances are heading over the next 12 months. As I have said previously, there continue to be very strong external headwinds that make projecting this extremely difficult, but we must, of course, try to produce as accurate an estimate as is possible with the information available. In many ways, these headwinds are different to the effects of COVID, which created uncertainty in economic activity through lockdown and lack of tourists and visitors. The headwinds caused by the impact from the war in Ukraine, the global turmoil and realignment and the impact on availability and prices have resulted in all governments reversing years of low interest to introduce repeated increases in interest rates that many of the young in our community will find unprecedented. They impact on costs and we simply cannot avoid such as the cost of fuel to power our community or to desalinate our water supply or to fill the truck that delivers produce to our supermarkets.

Where all this will eventually settle and what it means is difficult to project. All I can say is that day by day the prognosis is for increasing costs. Our projection of these possible increases back in March 2022 seems modest now, as we have seen the rapid rate of change and increases in inflation. They impact on all of us in similar ways, devaluing the pound in our pocket and making us feel grateful that there is availability of the product we may seek to acquire. This highlights some of the challenges in delivering a programme of work when it is not just price one is grappling with, but availability and impacted timelines.

Once again, Mr Speaker, I remind the House of my earlier comments that these issues are not of our making. The only difference on the effect of this is that most of us do not have to seek to project where we are heading in a way that is so challenging that it was most likely wrong from the moment the ink dried on this Estimates Book. These external forces are affecting all countries in different ways; we are no different. Nonetheless, this is what we think will happen over the next 12 months in terms of public finances.

Mr Speaker, if those who want to follow the debate in the Book go back to page 1, we are estimating revenue for the year 2022-23 of around £637 million. That is some £12 million below the forecast outturn for the year 2021-22. The reason for this is as follows, and if people now go to page 6 they can see the breakdown. We have kept corporate and personal tax more or less in line with the estimate for the year that has closed and we have not increased these figures in line with the forecast outturn, as we expect corporate tax returns coming in this year might be somewhat impacted by the effects of the lockdown. Remember, those corporate tax returns are sometimes 18 months in arrears. It must be noted that corporate tax returns and assessments trail about a year and a half behind general activity.

We have significantly reduced our estimate for Import Duty, from the £150 million we estimated last year to £120 million. We are hopeful, now that visitors and tourists are on the up, that the forecast outturn for this year will be higher than this, but we think we should remain prudent and conservative in our predictions. I would comment that, from the information I presently have, that has been wise because, so far, we are on target for the lower estimate of revenue ... than we would have been for the higher.

In terms of expenditure, we are projecting Consolidated Fund charges at £99.4 million and departmental expenditure at £552.8 million – and that also is on page 1. The reasons for this are as follows. The Consolidated Fund charges factor in increases in our cost of borrowing, assuming an average base rate during this financial year of 1.5%. It is possible that the average may well exceed this given recent announcements by the Bank of England that a more forceful approach may be taken to future rises to curb inflation. This recent change only serves to reinforce my comment on the possible accuracy of the assumptions we have made. The effect of increased borrowing costs is somewhat mitigated by channelling some of the excess cost through the Sinking Fund. Nonetheless, given the overall impact on liquidity, it is important to highlight this.

On departmental expenditure, this figure of £552.8 million is, of course, ambitious. It is £16.5 million down on the forecast outturn for the year just closed, and this occurred during a period where inflationary increases were quite confined. That said, if we are going to seek to rebalance our books as soon as possible and return to the fiscal discipline of meeting expenditure from revenue, we must be controlled, and ambitious in that control.

780 A quick review of the information on the Estimates Summary page – going back to page 1 – shows that we are expecting COVID Response Fund expenditure to tail off this year, hopefully finally. The budget for the fund is £40.12 million. The vast majority of expenditure relates to making contributions to foregone revenue; once again, the majority of this being to cover shortage in import duties.

785 We have not budgeted for any departmental COVID-related expenditure, with the exception of the £120,000 for Elderly Residential Services. The reality on this approach is already proving a challenge, as there are invoices that are being received during the early months of this year that will inevitably relate to the COVID Response Fund for goods and services relating to last year. Nonetheless, this prudent and controlled approach seeks to bring to an end expenditure under the COVID Response Fund, with controlling officers knowing they cannot incur any further 790 spending under the excuse that it is for COVID.

Given the GHA was the Authority with the highest COVID-related expenditure, we have explained that were a resurgence to occur, we expect the cost of the necessary preparations and tests to be between £8 million and £10 million. That is actually provided for specifically on page 227. If such expenditure were necessary – should there be, for example, a resurgence of 795 COVID-related cases – it will be available as money that can be tapped into, but it should not be incurred otherwise. In this way, any such expenditure is instantly highlighted and we can seek to understand why it has been incurred. It will not disappear with the run and flow of all of the rest of the recurrent expenditure.

The effect of all of the above results in a projected deficit for the current year of £45.3 million and an overall additional net borrowing of £50 million. If we come in or around these figures, it 800 will mean we are back on track and have reset spending within acceptable levels without resorting to cuts in services or austerity.

Additionally, we will finalise, this year, our strategy for the repayment of the COVID debt, which will be long-term, war bond style debt. Our current discussions with HM Treasury sees us repaying 805 the bulk of the outstanding over 25 to 26 years, with the benefit of the sovereign guarantee from the United Kingdom extending over that period for that ring-fenced, crystallised debt. We will be able to set that into legal-agreement stone only once the full extent of our COVID drawdown is, itself, crystallised.

Mr Speaker, I turn now to the relevant areas of ministerial responsibility on which I lead. I am 810 going to start with the Central Arrears Unit (CAU). It is clear that the local economy is still adversely affected by the cumulative impact of the pandemic. The CAU has, therefore, been asked to continue to take a more conservative and prudent approach towards debtors, as many are still just surviving in the current economic climate. Although businesses are now up and running and the tourist industry is now starting to recover, our economy is still recuperating from the 815 aftermath of the pandemic. But whilst we do not want to push anyone over the edge at this time, it is also true that it would be unfair to take steps to increase revenue from everyone who pays and allow those who do not want to pay to continue not paying. Leniency in chasing government debt is therefore being shown only in respect of those who genuinely cannot pay.

The CAU, in fact, focuses mainly on the arrears recovery for the Commissioner of Income Tax, 820 who is the principal Receiver of Revenue. They focus on compliance with arrears agreements and the recovery of arrears on a daily basis using different methodologies, and also actively ensure that current payments are received in a timely manner. This is hugely important in delivering social justice also, as it is totally socially unjust for most to pay their dues and for some not to bother paying.

825 Although the CAU managed to control and reduce the debts for individual tax, PAYE and Social Insurance, unfortunately the corporate tax debt increased by £2.67 million from last year as a result of the economic difficulties being experienced by some businesses. Without the CAU, that increase in debt would undoubtedly have been even greater. £1.8 million of this increase can be

830 attributed to tax penalties that need to be recovered or written off, as the case may be. These arise from a number of non-chargeable and, on occasions, single-purpose companies that are not trading but remain 'active' at Companies House and are therefore required to file annual returns.
Mr Speaker, as you know, the Registrar has the discretion to strike off the register the name of any company in respect of which no annual return has been filed for the previous three years.
Should he do so, the prospect of recovering these accrued penalties becomes remote and they 835 then need to be written off.

Mr Speaker, as you can imagine, the increase in corporate tax debts is largely to be expected given the very difficult trading conditions arising from the lockdown and the wider COVID restrictions. The CAU continues to retain payments due to companies and businesses from HM Government and retained a total of £2.5 million during this year for both current payments 840 and arrears recovery. This is an incredibly effective tool, whereby tax and other debts due to Government are settled by offsetting payments due by the Government for goods and services provided by the companies or businesses.

The raising of objections for new business licences and/or extension of licences with regard to directors or companies continues to be a very effective tool that has seen the recovery of almost 845 half a million pounds – £456,000 – during this last financial year. The CAU has also successfully recovered over £108,000 with regard to arrears for PAYE, electricity and gambling licence fees as a direct result of dividends received from liquidations. They have also raised objections to Companies House with regard to re-domiciled companies and liquidations reducing corporate tax by nearly £379,000.

850 In addition, the CAU undertakes full arrears checks for the Environment Department before the granting even of beach tent licences, as individuals are required to settle all outstanding debts before the use of the seasonal beach tent is approved. It is important to use every lever at the disposal of the Government to recover debts due to Government and I am sure that the whole House will agree with this strategy, as we cannot allow some to simply ignore their liabilities whilst 855 the majority dutifully pay. Remember, this is about those who will not pay, not those who cannot pay. In fact, we have seen a measure of agreement in the House in this respect in the past.
Additionally, we do protect those who genuinely cannot pay, as opposed to those who simply will not or do not want to pay. Furthermore, the CAU carry out full arrears checks for LPS on the assigning of units, and effectively recovered over £120,000 in respect of taxes and Social Insurance 860 prior to the assignment of just one unit by using this strategy.

However, the CAU's most important role during these two challenging years has been to maintain and control the overall arrears of revenue in the midst of a pandemic, where companies and individuals have been struggling to survive from one day to another. As hon. Members will understand, as years go by it becomes more challenging to recover historical debts, especially 865 since the main bulk of arrears had already been addressed by the CAU during their first four operational years under our time in office.

The CAU works closely with all Government departments, agencies and authorities to actively pursue and guide them with their debt recovery and assist them with the preparation of write-offs for historical bad debts. During the last year, the CAU undertook thorough exercises to 870 identify those bad debts where there was no prospect of recovery, as individuals and sole directors had passed away, left Gibraltar and were deemed uncontactable, or companies had been struck off the register or liquidated. This exercise was presented to the Financial Secretary, who approved write-offs amounting to over £4.85 million, of which £2.8 million pertained to taxes and Social Insurance and £0.7 million pertained to general rates and sundry rents. The balance of 875 £1.35 million related to house rents, airport landing and departure taxes, hostel fees, import duties, services performed by public officers, port arrival and departure taxes and port operators and harbour craft licences. The benefit of this exercise results in not just reducing the debt but also thoroughly cleansing both the Tax Office and LPS databases.

Even though the pandemic has, unfortunately, cast long shadows on our economy, it is evident 880 that the CAU has been creative in their approach and has effectively and successfully managed to reduce the overall arrears of revenue by over £2.3 million in a pandemic period. Finally, let there be no doubt in anyone's mind that the CAU will continue to work diligently to restore fairness to our system of chasing debt and defaulters.

885 Mr Speaker, I now want to deal with the Civil Status and Registration Office and Customs. In order to do so, but not delay the consideration by the House of the economic issues which concern us today, I will lay on the table an extract containing the relevant part of my address today which deals with the hugely important work of both these departments. In that way, the House will now have before it all relevant information about the running and progress of those departments, as well as the important statistical information which may be helpful to Members. I am going to 890 distribute that to all hon. Members now, so that they all have it. I will then be able to continue with the parts of my speech which relate directly to the budgetary matters that the House is concerned with primarily today and at paragraph 609 of my prepared text.

Mr Speaker, it is only fitting that I now turn to taxation, given that the collection of corporate and personal income tax consistently accounts for approximately between 40% and 50% of 895 recurring Government revenue. As is now customary, I comment on this very vital part of our economy, highlighting developments and important areas in this field that are relevant to our community.

The total amount of tax collected in the 2021-22 financial year is £324.6 million, representing £202.5 million in personal taxes and £122.1 million in corporate taxes. Those who are following 900 the Book can see those numbers on page 6. That is £22.5 million more in personal income tax and £2.1 million more in corporate tax than in the previous financial year 2020-21. Despite this immediate net increase in revenue, the general expectation is that trends will start to decline as the eventual effect of the COVID pandemic is realised in the years to come.

It is now more important than ever that we continue to exercise prudent financial 905 management, ensuring that we successfully drive through these challenging times. That is the focus of this Government. We are fully committed to ensuring a speedy return to the prosperity Gibraltar has always enjoyed, to the life every Gibraltarian deserves and to continuing to make Gibraltar the wonderful place it is. This is the path that we have embarked upon. It is by no means an easy path, but I am confident that this Government has the necessary expertise and maturity 910 to navigate these challenges which, together with the public service, achieve the desired and deserving outcome for all. Our prudent financial management is evident in the way that we have forecast future tax receipts. Our financial estimate for the 2022-23 financial year is projecting a receipt of £307.6 million, ensuring that any potential impact from external factors such as Brexit or the lasting effect of the COVID-19 pandemic is suitably hedged against.

915 Mr Speaker, I have in past Budget sessions highlighted the enormous investment made by my Government in addressing the historic backlog of tax refunds owed to the public. In the extended financial year 2019-21 an unprecedented investment amounting to £26 million was allocated to tax refunds, ensuring that as many taxpayers as possible were repaid moneys due to them. Notwithstanding the careful and responsible approach that we have adopted regarding public 920 spending, we have continued to allocate significant funds towards tax refunds, with an amount of £18.8 million allocated in the financial year 2021-22. Despite the difficulties we are experiencing, it is right to give money back to taxpayers that is due to taxpayers as soon as possible. It is also a measure that puts money back in people's pockets at a difficult time. That is not just the right thing to do, it is in line with the recommendations of the OECD on helpful measures to the public, 925 helping them to cope with the pandemic.

I am advised by the Commissioner of Income Tax that whilst the COVID-19 pandemic impacted anticipated progress in their refunds programme, the Income Tax Office is now continuing to update its refund position successfully. Presently, over half of the assessment refunds for 930 2019-20 and over one third of those for 2020-21 have now been completed. Completion in relation to these years will continue, and refunds will continue to be released in line with the funding of £10 million made available this financial year.

I know that some criticism may have been levied against the Income Tax Office by some who have experienced delays in receiving refunds. I am also aware that some have had to wait longer than we would have liked in order to receive refunds. Unfortunately, cash counters had to be closed due to the COVID-19 pandemic and, as a result, the payment of tax refunds is now carried out via direct bank transfer. I believe that most people are content to receive their tax refunds in this manner; it is more streamlined, there is no requirement to physically queue up at a counter and no delay due to clearing of cheques. It also allows for a shorter processing time and for HM Treasury to effect payment sooner. It is important to understand the extraordinary number of applications received by the Income Tax Office, however. Most people in Gibraltar had not supplied these details and therefore this continues to be a tremendous task, but one we are committed to, in order to ensure that taxpayers receive their refunds directly and quickly. This investment in information and data will pay dividends in the future and will help to smooth out the efficiency of future refund payments by the Income Tax Office. The team at the Income Tax Office is working hard to give each citizen what they are owed; they do not want to keep it.

The Government continues also with its commitment to Tax Transparency and Prevention of Base Erosion and Profit Shifting (BEPS). As a Member of the OECD's Inclusive Framework, Gibraltar has engaged in these initiatives, including the implementation of Pillars 1 and 2 relating to the taxation of the digital economy, the allocation of taxing rights and the harmonisation of a minimum global tax rate – probably the most drastic change to modern taxation in recent times. The Commissioner of Income Tax, in his capacity as Competent Authority for Gibraltar, has continued to ensure that Gibraltar meets all international obligations under its various international exchange mechanisms in respect of both the automatic exchange of information and that exchanged on request, including both the International Tax Agreement with Spain and the Double Taxation Agreement with the UK. Gibraltar also continues to undergo numerous assessments as part of its membership with the Inclusive Framework on BEPS across various of its actions.

Returning to a national focus, the Income Tax Office continues with its digital transformation in conjunction with HM Government's Digital Services team. Last year saw the rollout of a preliminary tax e-service. I was sorry to see that the adoption of this service was not as expected, with most taxpayers continuing to opt to file their returns either by email or even in paper form. We have listened to criticisms and complaints about the system. We have listened to what citizens want and need and we have worked hard to deliver what they deserve – a system for which you can easily register, one which is not cumbersome and is set out in a familiar format, one which is not time-consuming and which is dynamically responsive to requirements. As a result, both components of the tax return that need to be completed online are now much simpler.

Finally, I would like to express my sincerest thanks to all the team at the Income Tax Office for all their hard work, dedication and commitment. In doing so, I turn now to the measures that the Government will implement in order to redress the imbalance in our public finances and secure our nation's future.

Mr Speaker, last year I announced an incentive intended to promote investment in marketing by awarding businesses that invest in marketing an additional deduction amounting to 50% of their marketing costs. When we discussed this incentive internally, before the announcement, it was always intended to refer to marketing of Gibraltar as a destination and jurisdiction to visit or in which to set up business, and not a deduction for all marketing expenses generally. The idea of the incentive was that as we emerged from the pandemic we wanted to encourage travellers to visit Gibraltar and businesses to consider relocating here, particularly now the case has been made and proved for remote working. This was a way of adding to the Government's own efforts and promotion of Gibraltar by allowing and incentivising businesses to join us in these efforts. We recognise that businesses sometimes have a different and, at times, perhaps more effective way of delivering these objectives. That was the intention; however, it was not how it came across from the speech, or the legislation that followed.

985 This incentive was intended for a period of two years. Following this announcement, we have realised that this incentive is uncapped and capable of being overused by certain sectors of the economy, as presently drafted. With this in mind, I am terminating this incentive with immediate effect. To date, very little use has been made of this incentive, in large part because those businesses that might have used it heavily to market to their customers are considerably delayed on their filings, something which, in itself, needs to be corrected and I will deal with this shortly. It should also be noted that some businesses within these sectors have brought the possibility of excessive charges to our attention and told us they will not be making use of this enhanced deduction. In order to treat everyone fairly, the incentive will, therefore, apply for its first and only year as set out in the legislation, but only in the way it was originally intended – that is to say the marketing must be of Gibraltar as a destination and jurisdiction, with the aim of attracting conventions, events, visitors and tourists or new businesses to set up here. Generic marketing to customers of one’s own product is not what we had in mind and will not be allowed. The Income Tax Office will set out guidance to define ‘marketing’ in the context of the legislation. An amendment to the legislation will shortly be passed to address these issues.

1000 Mr Speaker, there has been much discussion and debate in other parliaments of the introduction of a windfall tax. I must admit I find the principle of retrospective taxation challenging. However, I also recognise that these are difficult times which call for difficult measures. Many key and long-held principles have been set aside as countries chase ways of balancing their books. Indeed, as every day passes it seems some announcement is made whereby the entire rule book is being rewritten on public finances beyond our shores.

1005 It will come as no surprise that we are looking at our corporate tax take and how this is being split between the various pillars and sectors of this economy. What we have found is that certain sectors pay their way in a balanced manner, whereas others are not meeting their end of the bargain. They are using all the creative tricks that are available to them and, in some cases, pushing the extent of limits that were not expected to be pushed and which they should know better than to push. I will not point these sectors out, as it would be unfair, but rather I will tell them how I suggest we address this without resorting to a windfall tax, which punishes everyone across the board. We are going to open an amnesty period between now and 31st December 2022. All companies that have filed accounts during the COVID period – that is to say the last two financial years – and should have filed accounts up to December 2022 will be invited to voluntarily review their returns. If they consider they have under-declared or pushed deductions in a way that might be considered over-creative, they will be allowed to resubmit these returns and pay the corresponding taxation without penalty, interest or further question. At the same time, we are conducting a review of those companies that we consider are being over-creative and under-declaring. Listeners should note that in doing this we have reached out to our contacts at HM Treasury to secure a secondment who will assist us with this process. After the end of the amnesty window, on 1st January 2023 – still within this financial year – the Commissioner of Income Tax will then issue estimated assessments on those companies where we believe there has been an under-declaration for the years in question. The tax in this case will be a multiple, to be determined, of the taxation they would otherwise have paid. There will also be penalties and interest charges.

1025 In Gibraltar we have generally taken a friendly and open view to operators in respect of their corporate tax, always seeking to incentivise and prioritise business and make the jurisdiction attractive and fair. In this regard, our officials are approachable and tend to take a balanced view when applying our tax legislation. I do not intend that to change, but ask operators to reciprocate and treat the jurisdiction correctly and fairly, too. The last two years have been exceedingly tough. We believe that as a Government we have enabled business to continue to thrive despite the unprecedented challenges. It is therefore a little too much when there is a feeling that that generosity of spirit is being somewhat taken for granted and abused. The world is changing. Going forward, international businesses that set up here and do not pay tax here will be paying the correct amount of tax elsewhere anyway, so these operators are depriving this jurisdiction of tax 1035 for no net benefit. We must, therefore, instil in them correct tax behaviour at this early stage.

Their under-declaring here needs to stop and we intend to tackle it in the next 12 months, going back through earlier financial years. We will need to enact legislation to deal with this, and this will follow after this session.

1040 Mr Speaker, over 30 years ago the Government entered into a series of agreements to privatise the production of water, the maintenance and operation of our water network and waste-water network. As part of a joint-venture arrangement with the Lyonnaise Group, a number of contracts were entered into between the joint-venture entity, Lyonnaise des Eaux (Gibraltar) Ltd, and the Government of Gibraltar whereby HMGoG contributed our network and desalination plant. This 1045 model was similar to the model adopted in the creation of GibNynex in the telecommunications space. Lyonnaise Group, as shareholder of joint-venture entity Lyonnaise des Eaux (Gibraltar) Ltd, brought in their expertise. In this way, the joint venture we now know as Aquagib Ltd was established. The operation and maintenance contracts were originally for a period of 30 years, with the possibility of extending it further for 10 years. Those contracts expired on 30th June 2021, and given the other pressures facing Government at the time it was agreed to extend it for a short 1050 period such that discussions could take place between the Government and NWG Commercial Solutions Ltd, known as Northumbrian Water, the successor to the Lyonnaise Group. The nature of the agreement was that if the contract were not renewed, the respective assets held in Aquagib would be returned to Government.

Clearly it is not practical to unwind Aquagib, given the implications of that approach. The 1055 Government has, therefore, agreed to take Aquagib back into public ownership. Thirty years ago it was right to find a partner to push our water production forward and benefit from external expertise; today, it is right that we should renationalise our water supply and buy in expertise when and where we need it. But the benefit of our water production company can now return to the taxpayer entirely. We will, therefore, purchase the shares in Aquagib for the proportionate 1060 net asset value of these, based around the latest financial statement and calculations, subject to any adjustments that may be required. By transferring the shares, as opposed to allowing the contracts to reach their natural conclusion, it is possible to avoid numerous problems, such as having to set up a new entity with all the implications for novation of agreements, customers, creditors, banks and, most importantly, the employees of the company. The approach of acquiring 1065 the shares in the way proposed means nothing changes. The accounts are being audited and completed and it is, therefore, not possible to provide the exact cost of the acquisition at this stage. These will be subject to negotiation, of course, before finalising the purchase price.
Although discussions and documentation are advanced, the agreement has, as yet, to be finalised between the parties. I am pleased to say that the Government would expect to finalise this 1070 transaction within the next six months, such that ownership will return fully to the Gibraltar Government and our control in the course of this financial year.

Mr Speaker, as all hon. Members will know, the GSD, when in government, entered into a structured finance agreement to purchase and fund the set-up costs of St Bernard's Hospital. We, on this side of the House, have been vocal critics of that agreement. Indeed, the former leader of 1075 the GSD, Mr Feetham, has been consistently critical of this arrangement entered into by the Government of the former, former leader of the GSD and the current leader of the GSD, Mr Azopardi. To put it in perspective, an arrangement entered into by the GSD in 2003 for a total value of £54 million will, by the end of this year, have cost the taxpayer a total sum of £91.3 million, leaving an additional amount of around £17.8 million – that is to say going well into over 1080 £100 million of costs for £54 million. The total amount is £109.1 million, assuming we paid it off now. It would be even more if we continued the GSD arrangements.

That agreement offered a break clause given interest-free swaps maturities, so long as certain filings are completed by 11th July 2022. These filings would allow the Government to act as agent in the sale of the hospital building. The arrangement provides for a reduction of around £825,000 1085 by way of rebate if this approach is taken. I can confirm that the Government is in discussions with Royal Bank of Scotland International to take advantage of this ability to terminate that sale and 1090 leaseback agreement and, instead of brokering a sale with a third party, confirm we, the Government, will be purchasing the hospital ourselves. This will substitute the present sale and leaseback arrangement with a short-term financing that vests title of the hospital away from NatWest Bank, back to the Government or the GHA. Remember that, at the moment, the structure is that NatWest owns the hospital, Mr Speaker.

1095 Whilst terms have not yet been finalised, to put this in perspective, we are currently paying a rent to the bank of almost £5 million per annum as a result of the arrangements entered into by Members opposite. That is best seen on page 226 of the Estimates Book, which sets out the detail. The new arrangement we propose would allow us to repay fully the hospital loan over 10 years for an annual payment, instead, of £1.9 million. That would represent a saving of an additional £3.1 million per year – £3.1 million per year less than the arrangements they entered into – that can be spent on healthcare by taking advantage of this opportunity. There are, of course, numerous alternatives for that final repayment which we are considering. If we decide to repay this facility more promptly, an alternative would be to increase repayments to say £3 million per annum in rent – again, less than the £5 million that they lumbered us with – which again frees up £2 million for further healthcare and will allow us to repay the loan in under seven years. These interest figures have been projected, of course, with the current rates of interest in mind. Whilst we expect interest rates to rise, we do, nonetheless, feel we can structure a deal which will be more beneficial to the taxpayer and those patients who use the GHA than the current deal done by the GSD, which we have been locked into and which Mr Feetham and we have been rightly critical of for so long.

1100 Mr Speaker, in order to ensure that we do social justice, one of the things that this Budget must also do is insulate the most vulnerable from the effects of rampant inflation and the increased cost of living. So who are the most vulnerable and how will they be protected by this Budget? First of all, we must agree that vulnerability, for the purposes of this discussion, is economic vulnerability. Secondly, the key factors in economic vulnerability are earnings and dependence on state benefits and payments. In this respect, we will be ensuring that those on the Minimum Wage, those on disability benefit and the recipients of the state or old age pension will all enjoy the benefit of increases in line with inflation to the payments that they will receive. I will take each of those in turn to announce the relevant increases that this Budget will provide for as follows.

1105 The Minimum Wage will increase, in line with our estimate of inflation, at the rate of 8%. The Minimum Wage will therefore increase by 60 pence, to £8.10 per hour. The Government considers that this is the best way to ensure that the minimum sum of money that people earn in our economy keeps pace directly with the cost of living in our economy. Based on a 37.5-hour week, the Minimum Wage will go up from £14,681.25 to £15,855.75, an increase of £1,174.50. Based on a 39-hour week, the Minimum Wage will go up from £15,268.50 to £16,489.98, an increase of £1,221.48. Those worst off in work will, therefore, enjoy the benefit of salary increases in the region of £1,200.

1120 It will not just be the Minimum Wage that will go up by inflation. The state pension and disability benefit will also go up by inflation, which, as I said, we expect to be in the region of 8%. It is right that the old age pension and disability benefit should go up by the rate of inflation, in order to ensure that those who depend on those amounts are not affected adversely by the increase in the cost of living.

1130 There will also be an increase for occupational pensions from the Government, which will increase by 2% in line with the provisions of section 6(2) and (2A) of the Pensions (Increase) Act. Those pensions have been increasing by 2% each year for the last 20 years, even in the years when inflation has been lower than 2%. They will also rise by that rate this year.

1135 Our public sector salaries have grown in Gibraltar, even when in successive years they have not grown in the United Kingdom. Where, once, parity was an aspiration for our community, in the past 12 years we have exceeded parity in many areas. In most areas, public sector salaries in Gibraltar are now in the region of 40% above parity with equivalent grades in the UK. That is not true of all areas, however. We will not tolerate, even in these difficult moments, that any public

1140 servant should fall below parity with a UK equivalent officer, because we remain committed to parity with the UK public sector. We are, therefore, prepared to borrow more, if necessary, to fund public sector pay rises for any grades that might fall below UK parity analogues. In addition, and in any event, we will resume the annual pay rises for the public sector as our revenue recovers or the overall cost of the public sector payroll comes down as a result of efficiency measures taking effect. Our public sector deserves nothing less and we restate our commitment to it and to the 1145 complement of the Civil Service at the time of our election in December 2011.

In terms of the services provided by the public service, as from 1st July all fees charged by any Government Department and payable to Government, including licence fees and forms, will increase in line with inflation, rounded off to the nearest half point and to the nearest 50 pence.

1150 Mr Speaker, over the years we have noticed a number of issues with the operation of the Category 2 regime and we will seek to correct these as we now progress the development of that hugely successful regime. A point that is concerning us is that the scheme works well when individuals join and stay in Gibraltar. One of the things that we have noticed, however, is that as individuals decide to leave they sometimes fail to adequately settle their final tax position prior to departure. This means that their final period in Gibraltar can, in some instances, go untaxed. This 1155 arises when the authorities seek to raise the amount but the individual is no longer in Gibraltar, and it is very difficult to locate them, let alone get them to settle the amount of taxation due or enforce an order in that respect. I said a little about that when I was talking about the Central Arrears Unit not being able to reach some people who had not paid their taxes and who had left Gibraltar. In order to resolve this concern, we are going to require existing Category 2 individuals, 1160 as from this year, to pay the year's tax in advance. This will be effective for the tax year commencing on 1st July 2022 and the amount will be based on the maximum amount of tax payable under this regime. This should be settled by 30th November this year, which is the date by when they are obliged to file their return together with their annual balancing payment of taxation for the year just passed, as is normal. This payment in advance will be returned to them 1165 if or when they finally decide to leave, and any overpayments will be credited or rebated as appropriate. In this way, the final amount due on the year of departure can be settled correctly and we do not end up having to chase individuals outside Gibraltar, with varying degrees of success. This rule will also apply to new applicants, who will be asked to pay a year up front on confirmation of the status.

1170 We believe that all individuals were cared for very well during the COVID pandemic in Gibraltar and it is, therefore, necessary for us to look to all our taxpayers, amongst others, for ways to recover the amounts spent. Category 2 individuals are perhaps the wealthiest in our community.
In this regard, we propose to increase the bandings such that the maximum assessable income increases to £118,000, up from £105,000. This results in an additional amount of tax of £5,000 1175 being payable at the maximum income level. The minimum amount of taxation will also increase by £5,000, from £32,000 to £37,000. This, we believe, is a small increase to balance the benefit of the safety and relative freedom of living in Gibraltar which has been granted them during the most difficult times of this pandemic, as it has to all of us.

1180 We have also noticed another trend recently, whereby certain individuals have given up their Category 2 status and others are coming to Gibraltar without any such status and nonetheless residing here. This follows advice from certain quarters to assist such individuals to remain resident of Gibraltar, with all the benefits that that accrues, but pay not tax or make any other direct contribution to the Government's coffers. The reason for this is that we do not tax many forms of income, and therefore some individuals have chosen to make Gibraltar their home 1185 without necessarily paying their way. I am sure that all Members of the House will agree that this is neither fair nor equitable. To deal with this, we propose to introduce a tax whereby any non-Gibraltar national who claims residency in Gibraltar or is resident in Gibraltar, is not in possession of a CAT2 or HEPSS certificate and is not in true third party employment – that is to say somebody who is here but is not making any contribution – will be taxed on their full savings income, 1190 including pension income, interest income, dividend income and income from other passive sources. This approach is clearly intended as a penalty. We will use the register of occupation as a means to assist us to identify these individuals and grant the Commissioner of Income Tax powers to address this issue. There will also be a simple way to address this, and that is for such individuals to rationalise their status by enabling them to apply for their CAT2 status retrospectively, so long as they meet the eligibility criteria and pay any outstanding amount of tax. That means that they will be able to attain the protection afforded to them and those sources of taxation by CAT2 status. In order to address the unfairness of them not having paid over what may possibly be a number of years, they will need to pay the taxation at the maximum rate with no adjustment for lower rates of income for the years when they have not done so.

Mr Speaker, similar to the position of CAT2 individuals, when seeking to square our public finances we have looked at other relative unfairness in our tax system. One that has existed but has remained unaddressed is the way the personal tax rate, introduced by Members opposite when they were in Government, dips for income in excess of £500,000 – half a million pounds – under the gross income based system (GIBS). At present, under the GIBS system the average tax rate for income up to £500,000 works out at 25%. The rates become, in our view, socially unjust when you get beyond that point. This is not something that we have alighted upon before, given that there are very few of us on those levels of income. Beyond that, the rate drops to 18%, and beyond £700,000 of income the income is taxed at 5%. This means that the higher the overall income, the lower the overall average rate of taxation. That GSD measure is not progressive and it is not socially just. For illustrative purposes, someone declaring £1 million of income pays tax at 17.6%, whereas someone with an income of £30,000 pays an effective rate of 18.3%. That cannot be right. This creates an anomaly whereby business owners and others are able to delay or defer payments such as dividends, or even consultancy fees, to a point whereby they are able to distribute accumulations in one go and avail themselves of a lower marginal rate of taxation. In order to address this anomaly, the rate beyond £105,000 of income will, from now on, be a flat rate of tax and, subject to what I am going to say in a few moments about tax rates generally, it will be 25%. This is a fair approach whereby everyone will pay tax at the same rate, save those at the very lowest levels of income – that is to say less than £25,000 – who pay at an average rate of just under 17% and those on very low incomes, below the tax threshold, who pay zero.

1205

1220

Mr Speaker, like every country in the world, we are going through tough times that have impacted on our public finances and our levels of necessary borrowing. This borrowing has not been on anything other than the public spending on COVID and the maintenance of our public sector salaries – nothing lavish, nothing extravagant, whatever some may now say to try to spare their blushes in having agreed our COVID spending. It is, nonetheless, incumbent on me and this Government to seek to find a way to lead this community out of the deficit period, with the certainty that we can address the debt that has built up during the COVID period and its aftermath. In order to do so, I therefore propose a number of temporary measures. This measure is for two years only, and tax rates will restore after those two years for these taxation measures that follow.

1225

For the next two years only, all tax rates in all bands under the allowance based system and the gross income based system will increase by two pence in the pound for those two years. That is a two-year 2% increase in taxation. That is to say under these new bandings an individual paying tax under GIBS on income above £25,000 will be taxed at an average rate of 27%, not 25%, and below that level the average rate will be just shy of 19%, not the aforementioned 17%. As I said, the measure will apply only for two years, 24 months.

1235

As we did last year, the Government has decided not to levy tax on pensions. We gave careful consideration to the option but, on balance, we have determined it is possible to avoid doing so. I do believe this measure was largely to be expected in this community and will catch few right-thinking members of the community by surprise.

1240

The additional income recovered by this measure will allow us to fill in the revenue shortfall in the coming two years and make repayments of the amounts borrowed easier for the taxpayer. It will also assist us to crystallise our COVID-related borrowing in a structured way over a longer period and allow us to repay this in a managed way. We have all lost two years of our lives to 1245 COVID. The Government has been paying out for two years, but we have lost two years of revenue whilst paying out more than ever and more than we received, so now, for the next two years, we must get whole again. We must use the next 24 months to strengthen our public finances. We may likely get a UK-EU treaty, but it may only last four years, so we will have to be strong, at the latest, in four years. So this is a Budget measure we impose not out of desire but out of necessity, to get our public finances back on their feet in two years. That does not change that we want tax 1250 to remain as low as possible. That is why we are fixing this measure for a short and defined period, so that people will have the certainty of how long they will pay this extra amount. Given the GDP to tax ratios we see in other countries and increases being seen in direct and indirect taxation in other economies, this is a modest measure which will be much less painful than it will be useful in the rebuilding of our public finances post COVID.

1255 Mr Speaker, taxation is the lifeblood of any modern government and is vital to the continued prosperity and growth of any economy. In order to ensure that taxes are duly paid, it is vital to enforce tax compliance. 'Compliance' is not an ugly word. It simply means that each of us should contribute what is owed in a fair and timely manner, so that this can be invested for the benefit of all. It is, therefore, imperative that tax systems have robust and practical tax compliance measures. Unfortunately, the current sanctions we have in place in Gibraltar are outdated and, in 1260 some cases, simply not fit for purpose. Tax penalties should penalise those who flagrantly flaunt their obligations, whilst simultaneously acting as a deterrent to others from doing the same. In seeking to improve this, I have already asked the Commissioner of Income Tax to carry out a review of existing penalty regimes and seek alternatives that implement stricter but fairer sanctions, ones that are commensurate with the size of the defaulter as well as the level and 1265 frequency of the default itself. These revised sanctions will be introduced shortly and will seek to create a noticeable improvement in general tax compliance and behaviour.

Mr Speaker, presently the Income Tax Office receives numerous applications for certificates and other information requests, ranging from ordinarily resident and sub-contractor certificates to payment transaction printouts, as well as copies of previous filings and associated 1270 documentation. Whilst the team at the Tax Office are proficient in expediting these service requests to the best of their ability, the large volume of requests at particularly critical times of the fiscal year impose a notable administrative burden and corresponding cost on the department, which, up until now, has been absorbed as part of continuing operations. Certificates confirming 'ordinarily resident' are sought to satisfy requirements from offshore financial institutions as part 1275 of the due diligence and self-certification process governed by obligations imposed by regulations for the exchange of financial account information between jurisdictions or to provide additional evidence of tax residency in Gibraltar in response to a tax residency challenge or enquiry from a foreign jurisdiction. Sub-contractor certificates are sought by those seeking to avoid the imposition of a 25% withholding tax being applied on payments received from their main 1280 contractor, in accordance with the Income Tax (Construction Sub-Contractors) Regulations 1994.
In order to alleviate the administrative burden referred to above, with effect from 1st September 2022 the Income Tax Office will impose administrative fees for the provision of these services. A tariff sheet will be made publicly available by the Income Tax Office.

1285 Following the change in corporate tax rate from 10% to 12.5% on 1st August 2021, the Income Tax Office has received representations from industry practitioners that the legislation is not sufficiently prescriptive in providing a basis for how the transitional year containing the change in tax rate is to be computed. Although we believe this was clear, in order to accommodate industry requests an amendment to the Rates of Tax Rules 1989 is being published. In addition to this, the Income Tax Office is also issuing explanatory notes supplementing this legislative amendment.

1290 Section 30 of the Income Tax Act 2010 provides for a threshold of assessable income above which corporate tax returns must be accompanied by audited accounts. This threshold presently stands at £1.25 million. In order to assist our audit practitioners, and particularly those smaller firms, this threshold is being increased from £1.25 million to £1.5 million. We understand this increase will expand the net of companies in scope of this audit exemption, with approximately 1295 85% of companies filing chargeable returns with the Income Tax Office now benefitting from the exemption. This increased threshold will apply to accounting periods ending on or after 1st July 2022. We will be introducing a regulation-making power in section 30 of the Income Tax Act 2010 which will allow us to make the necessary changes to this threshold expeditiously and responsively without the need to seek the amendment of primary legislation in Parliament in the future. I 1300 nevertheless urge practitioners and company directors themselves to ensure that the quality of accounting records and accounts is maintained and that the increase in this threshold we have announced today is not used as an excuse to disclose improper or incorrect returns to the Income Tax Office. Should we find that the quality of non-audited accounts is lacking, we will reverse this measure.

1305 Mr Speaker, by and large, most companies in Gibraltar somehow benefited from the approach we took during COVID. If the company was operational with a large workforce, they received support for their staff and reduced elements of rates and other charges. If they are passive holding companies, their service providers, directors and secretaries were put in a position where they were able to operate and keep those companies compliant with the rules. If is, therefore, right 1310 and fair that as we seek to balance the Government's finances we should also ask every company to make a small contribution, just as we are seeking, for a time limited basis, from personal tax payers. As with individuals, we are seeking a COVID recovery charge for a period of two years only. We propose that every company pay a COVID recovery charge of £25 per week over the next two years. This charge will be levied as part of the company annual return collected by Companies House as from 1st August, to allow Companies House the time to set their systems up to deal with this. Companies House will then pass this COVID recovery charge straight on to Government with 1315 no deduction whatsoever.

I turn now to import duties, Mr Speaker. In July 2020, in the first throes of the pandemic, we announced a series of measures designed to provide financial support to our businesses as they 1320 returned to work during that difficult period, and secondly to stimulate and accelerate economic activity. These measures included an Import Duty waiver which was introduced for all commercial imports, other than for certain commodities such as excise goods. In addition to this, we later introduced a 10% flat rate of Import Duty to be levied on all personal imports over £25 in value, with this measure again not applying to key commodities. Both of these measures will be revoked 1325 with effect from zero hours on 29th June. Private importations will now be charged at the Import Duty rates in place prior to the introduction of these measures in 2020, subject to the £25 de minimis rule remaining. The waiver on commercial importations ceases to be in effect also at zero hours on 29th June – tomorrow. This means that duty will be charged as per the Integrated Tariff Regulations 2017. The relevant Gazette will be published during the course of today.

1330 Mr Speaker, you may recall that HMGOG introduced a change to the tariff for petroleum products at the roadside petrol pump, for motor vehicles only. This measure was aimed at helping our petrol stations locally, as an equivalent measure had been introduced in Spain. This does not apply to fuel for vessels or other pleasure craft. This measure was there to partly address the ever-increasing price of fuel suffered at the petrol pump by the motorist and haulier. The equivalent 1335 measure has recently been extended in Spain. In order to ensure that our citizens do not feel the economic need to drive to Spain to fill up, I propose to extend the original measure here, too, from its expiry date of 30th June 2022 to 30th September 2022. We will keep fuel prices under review for the next quarter and make such announcements as may be necessary in coming months about this measure. Absent a further announcement, fuel duty will revert to its original non-1340 discounted rate on 1st October 2022.

Any individual taxpayer who installs a mechanism for the electric charging of a vehicle in their home, or private parking space or garage owned by them, will be able to continue to deduct the first £2,000 of costs approved by the Commissioner of Income Tax against their tax liabilities.

1345 In tandem with measures to encourage the uptake of electric alternatives, we will be actively disincentivising the purchase of conventionally fuelled vehicles. Mopeds fully fuelled by diesel or petrol will become prohibited imports as of 1st July 2023. These vehicles are polluting, they cause a noise nuisance and contribute to overall levels of traffic.

1350 Nearly 50% of currently active registered vehicles in Gibraltar are more than 10 years old. The market sees approximately five or six hundred imports of used vehicles every year that do not meet the latest emissions standards. In order to prevent the market from continuing to be filled with older, more polluting vehicles, used passenger cars – other than classic cars – light commercial vehicles and buses over five years old will become prohibited imports from 1st January 2023.

1355 Tourism is one of the main areas of our economy where we expect to see growth. We are excited to see it slowly but surely returning to pre-pandemic levels. The influx of visitors, however, places increased demands on our infrastructure and on our tourist products, such as our beaches and the Nature Reserve. As such, Government will be introducing a Sustainable Tourism Tax, similar to that already payable in many destinations. Research has shown that well-designed tourism taxes can be both practical and meaningful tools in the sustainable management of a destination's resources. As from 1st August this year, hotel and Airbnb visitors will, therefore, pay £3 per person per night for a stay in Gibraltar. All revenue from this hotel levy will be paid into the Climate Action Fund and will be invested into relevant projects such as promoting sustainable mobility and protecting and preserving our biodiversity. It will be the responsibility of each hotelier or property owner to pass that cost on, monthly, to the Department of the Environment
1360 as the receiver of revenue. Additionally, as from 1st April next year, cruise ship passengers will pay £1 per passenger environmental levy, based on the number of passengers on the vessel calling. This sum will be paid to the Port Authority.

We have seen the recent inflationary increases apply across the board. Nonetheless, the item that will be most noticeable to individuals will be the increase in the cost of fuel at the petrol pump, despite the deduction of duty we have granted and now extended to seek to mitigate the impact. These increases are really quite significant by any measure and are being felt across the globe, even in the US, which is an oil producer. This is, in fact, the principal driver of inflation across the world. You know the situation is severe when even citizens of the United States are complaining of the cost of filling up a tank of petrol. Mr Speaker, as you know, we have opted to produce the electricity that powers our homes and businesses through the use of natural gas. The cost of gas is linked to the price of oil and this has also increased with inflation. Not only that, but to keep self-sufficient we desalinate our water supply and this process is powered by electricity, which is ultimately powered by natural gas.

We have recorded increases in IRP here in Gibraltar, between July last year, the time of our Budget announcement, and April this year, of 5.8%. I have no doubt – based on recent CPI increases announced for May, in the UK, of over 9% – that by the time the end of the year comes, our own IRP will be closer to that figure. We consider that increases are likely to be in the order of 8%. As I have already said, we will apply that figure to the Minimum Wage, state pension and disability benefit. In light of this, we really need to pass on some of the cost of the increases we are suffering on the cost of producing electricity – which I referred to earlier when I pointed out the increases that we could see in the cost in the book – which, in turn, is also used to produce water. As a result, we propose to increase electricity and water charges, but contain that increase to 8% also. We are not applying the full increase in the cost of fuel to the consumer, far from it; we are greatly amortising the increase to ensure it is less harsh than the reality of the market in which we are operating. We are going to provide more support, in doing so, than any other government is providing anywhere else in Europe, and we are doing this from a historic position of giving full amortisation in a much, much more generous manner than is the case in the UK or in Spain, or in any other economy.
1380
1390

Gibraltar electricity prices are very significantly cheaper than the UK and Spain, our two most relevant comparators. Compared against the prices paid by consumers in the UK, Gibraltar's average annual household electricity bill is approximately 30% lower. Spain has an average annual household electricity bill that is almost 40% more expensive than our own. Gibraltar's average household consumption is 4,038 kWh, which is quite high. This consumption is notably higher than the average consumption in the UK, where it is 2,900kWh, and Spain, where it is 3,240kWh. The reason for this is likely two-fold. The first is that heating of households and, in some instances, cooking in the UK and Spain is generally delivered via other means, normally gas heaters and boilers, and those are billed separately but have also seen costs increase significantly, and they have not been incorporated in the price differentials that I have just provided, so, in fact, it is higher. Additionally, the higher cost also makes people more conscious of consumption of electricity, something we all used to be in earlier times, I recall. But notwithstanding our higher household consumption, our electricity bills are still lower. If we calculated the annual household bills according to annual consumption by flexing volumes to equate things like for like, our bills would be approximately 50% lower than in the UK and Spain, and that is even with the discounts we have seen announced in Spain and the financial support being provided to some in the UK. Take away the discounts which have recently been announced in Spain and the UK and the difference will be more than 50%. Indeed, that is why discounts and financial support for some are necessary in those jurisdictions.

Consumers in Gibraltar have not needed price caps or electricity tax cuts, as we have seen in Spain and the UK. Indeed, electricity charges have been stagnant in Gibraltar since 1984 until 2010 under the GSD, who started to put them up. Our consumers are not exposed to regular price fluctuations based on fuel prices, as most, if not all, European consumers are. Here, the unit price has remained constant for the past 12 months and before then it had been constant for 11 years. I think people cannot have missed that in Spain and in the United Kingdom, in the news bulletins that most people will be seeing, there have been constant references this year to how the price of electricity has changed almost on a weekly basis as the price of fuel has changed. That has not been the case in Gibraltar, where the price is fixed for a year. And the 8% tariff increase that we are announcing today will be fixed for at least the next 12 months and represents an increase to the average monthly bill of £4.37, or £1.09 a week. Thankfully, for most people in our economy that will be an imperceptible amount – dos crónicas, some might say, Mr Speaker. This is approximately just over one third of the total increase suffered by our neighbours over the last three months alone, where they have seen an increase of €162.01 in quarter 1 of 2022. To put all of this in context, the price we are paying for diesel to run the temporary generators whilst we snag out the new power station has increased from £467.31 per metric tonne on the supply date of April 2021 to £1,022 per metric tonne on the supply date of May 2022 – in other words, an increase of 120% of cost to the taxpayer in diesel alone. For LNG this has increased from £9.24 per MMBTu (metric million British thermal unit) on a supply date of May 2021 to £15.79 per MMBTu in May 2022, or an increase of some 71% in the period of one year alone.

The increase in water and electricity which I have announced will apply as from the August 2022 bills. Again, that will allow the GEA and Aquagib to deal with billing issues and will be accompanied by a weekly levy of £1 against each Aquagib and GEA meter to support infrastructure maintenance costs as we prepare to make greater investments in the distribution and management network of our basic utilities. Going forward, and building upon this continuing subsidy against the fuel price, hereafter electricity and water tariffs will increase annually on 1st April by the cost of living percentage, rounded down to the closest whole number. That will be a considerable, continuing discount against the fluctuation of the cost of fuel, whilst being a more manageable subsidy for future generations to sustain.

In the event that there are people who find themselves in genuine difficulty and for whom this increase might be meaningful, the Government will introduce a means-tested utilities credit which will provide relief for genuine cases of hardship arising from these increases. No one will have their water or their electricity cut off if they genuinely cannot afford to pay. I will discuss the detail of this with relevant unions and representative organisations, including Action on Poverty, to ensure that we are able to protect the most vulnerable and that no one falls between the cracks.

Mr Speaker, raising the cost of utilities, even if it is by just over £1 a week, will obviously be unpopular. Most will not even feel this increase, but it will be unpopular with everyone. I just want 1450 to say this about that. I think that sitting in my chair at No. 6 Convent Place, having my responsibilities and seeing what I see from the bridge of HMS Gibraltar, everyone in this House and every Gibraltarian and resident of Gibraltar would do the same thing. These are the right steps to steady the ship, by spreading the load amongst all who have taken the benefit of the measures we are now paying back, whilst protecting the most vulnerable, because this is the right thing to 1455 do, even though it may not be the most popular thing to do.

I want to recognise the representations from employer and business representative organisations seeking no increases in respect of the costs of utilities. It is their job to make the case for their members and I recognise that too, but if any of the member of the Chamber or the Federation were in my chair, if our captains of industry were doing my job, they would be making 1460 the same decisions, too. Yes, they might also take the knife to the public sector and to public sector terms and conditions – something that I will never do, because I believe in and I defend the Gibraltar public sector and the role it plays in keeping the community working, as it did in sterling fashion during the COVID pandemic. And our unions might think that they might borrow more to pay out more, until they saw that in the medium and long term that would mean fewer jobs, less 1465 quality employment and more years without surpluses and pay rises, as well as even higher inflation. On reflection, union leaders and business leaders would reach the same conclusions I am setting out to the nation today – I am absolutely sure of that. They, too, would do what I am doing now because I am doing these things to make Gibraltar strong for my children, I am doing this to make Gibraltar strong for their children, I am doing this to make Gibraltar stronger for all 1470 our children and our children’s children, not because we choose to do so but because we need to do so; actions taken out of necessity not ideological choice or desire.

When we are done, Gibraltar will be stronger than it has ever been before. Gibraltar will need to be stronger going forward with a future outside the EU, although hopefully with a treaty relationship with it; with all commentators predicting a recession for next year; with a war in 1475 Eastern Europe that shows no signs of abating and with its attendant worldwide consequences. I may be an optimist, I may believe Gibraltar has a bright future – although this year will present high inflation and rising interest rate charges outside our control also – but I know that our strong and bright future comes only as a result of robust, tough measures now. When the going gets tough, the tough get going – but always protecting the vulnerable, taking a little more from those 1480 who can, because, as Sir Joe has also repeatedly taught us, the road to self-determination is paved by self-sufficiency, and, in the end, we are the ones elected to manage problems and to fix problems, not to exacerbate them. That is why we have to do what is right to treat the patient and not fail to do so.

Mr Speaker, it is incumbent on me now to thank the whole of the public service for the 1485 magnificent work they do for Gibraltar. I say that genuinely and knowing that they are often the butt of criticism, but the Gibraltar we know and love cannot operate without our public sector’s continued commitment. In particular, I thank the officers of the Departments that I have reported on and who work directly under my ministerial responsibility.

Mr Speaker, I take a moment to thank you and your staff, in particular the Clerk and the ushers, 1490 for all of the support given to all Members of the House, myself in particular.

I single out, of course, for specific mention those who work daily with me at No. 6 Convent Place, assisting me in the discharge of my obligations in the post of Chief Minister. They are a very special bunch of people who are like knives through the butter of the daily challenges we face. My success, such as it may be, is down to them. The failures of my Office are entirely my own.

1495 Of course, in this debate so much of the preparatory work is done by the team from the Financial Secretary’s Office, the Finance Ministry and the Treasury. I thank all those who have helped us to prepare the Estimates Book. I single out Bethany, Ernest and Susie, who, together with the Financial Secretary himself, spend most of the late winter and early spring in a permanent wrestling match with figures and spreadsheets to produce the Estimates. These Estimates are, 1500 therefore, as much my work as the work of the Financial Secretary, Albert Mena, whom I recognise in the House today, Mr Speaker. I genuinely believe he has been an essential part of how we have 1505 successfully negotiated the very challenging past 28 months since that dreadful first moment of March 2020. I cannot be fulsome enough in my gratitude, on behalf of the people of Gibraltar, for his work alongside me in the Finance Ministry in the dark days of the dawning of the pandemic. History will judge his contribution as essential for the economic survival of this community.

1510 Mr Speaker, this is not a giveaway Budget, because there is nothing to give away, but neither is this an austerity Budget, which would be a Budget of cuts and wholesale tax increases that affect everyone in our economy in the same way. No. We will target support for those most in need. We will use this Budget to deliver measures that will ensure that those worst off in our economy will not suffer in this period. No one in our economy will be left without enough money to buy the goods they need in their home.

1515 Our opponents, Mr Speaker, should not treat our people like children, pretending they do not understand the severity of the worldwide economic downturn, the complexity of the situation and the reality of the arguments about our public finances, because, contrary to suggestions, there is no pay freeze in Gibraltar as we continue to invest in the areas which require and are worthy of our investment, not least our people, who will continue to progress through spine points etc.

1520 The fact is that our people gave me this job this past decade not because it was easy but because it was hard, and we are taking these measures today not because they are easy but because they are right. That is why this will not be a Budget for those who have more than enough to have even more, because today we must rebuild our public finances, not plunder them.

1525 The fact is that if we had not had the COVID pandemic to deal with, we would today probably be announcing a £100 million surplus. If that were the case, we would not be announcing a tax rise. We have raised salaries and allowances for the past 10 years, so people know our instinct is not to tax more. We are not taking these steps to court unpopularity; we are doing so because we have to, and we will do so only for a limited time.

1530 The pandemic has affected many things, of course, not just our finances, and as a result, the Government accepts that there are issues affecting services to citizens that we have to resolve. Is everyone happy? No. Do we need to do more in some areas? Yes. But let us be clear that where we are failing to act, there is a good and problematic reason, not negligence, laziness or dereliction. And there is, of course, the effect of the pandemic and the effect of the Brexit negotiation. Both those are slowly resolving themselves and we expect to be able to do more to resolve outstanding issues in coming months.

1535 I know that this Budget will be difficult for people to hear. The tough part of this job is not being able to do everything that people would like you to do, but we are already borrowing quite a large amount of money. Borrowing more for recurrent expenditure would not make sense and would further breach our golden rule. We have to get back to observing the golden rule as soon as possible.

1540 So, yes, some of these things are difficult, they are certainly – probably – going to be unpopular, but these are the responsible and prudent measures we have to take. They are measures that will help us in the long term, and I am not going to deviate from the long-term good just for some short-term popularity gain. That is not what people elected me to do, it is not what people entrusted me to do; indeed, it is not why people trust us on this side of the House, because we are on the side of parents, pupils, pensioners and patients in improving public services, and of course we are also on the side of our public servants. We have shown that by prioritising them for 10 years, but the efficient delivery of the public services themselves to those who need them is also the priority for my Government.

1550 So, to every young person, to every older person, to every pensioner, to every vulnerable person I say we on your side. Your ambitions are our ambitions. Your concerns are our concerns. Your aspirations are our aspirations. As we remove the low rate of tax for those earning over half a million pounds, we are building also a new model of Gibraltar based on equality, fairness and opportunity which is not based on class, wealth or who you know; a nation of fairness for the many, not the privilege of the few, concerned about those who use services as much as we care for those who provide services.

1555 We are the people's Government, delivering the people's priorities in the people's toughest Budget yet, but seeking to do the people's bidding as we do so. This is a Budget to ensure that we strengthen our common treasure chest again, a Budget to protect us in the long term with very little pain in the short term, with no giveaways but no austerity either, with none of the benefits we enjoy and value in Gibraltar being negatively affected.

1560 Mr Speaker, we respect our people. We believe in the Gibraltarian, in Gibraltar and in the Gibraltarian spirit. We trust our people. We trust them to understand the logic and reasons behind this Budget, this people's Budget, a fair Budget and a renaissance Budget to lead to a rebirth of our public finances, to leave COVID behind, to make Brexit history and to propel our nation forward.

1565 This really is a Budget in which I am telling our people to ask not what more they can take from our country, I am telling our people to accept that now it is time for our country to take a little bit more from each of us. These increases are preparing us to be in a position to give public sector pay rises again in the future, setting direction to resolve the economic issues we face today, to repay the debt, to get back to surplus, to protect our way of life and to insulate our prosperity for future generations.

1570 I am raising taxes and I am raising utilities. These things may be unpopular but they are the right thing to do in these circumstances, in this time and in this moment, to turn the corner and to get back to growth, and every Gibraltarian and resident of Gibraltar who cares about Gibraltar and our people will want nothing less. That is why, even though it contains tough measures, even though it contains measures to increase taxation in small way for a short period, even though it
1575 may feel like hard medicine, it is the right appropriation for this nation at this time and I therefore unhesitatingly commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Before I sit down, Mr Speaker, and given the length of my address, I would propose that the House should now recess before we return to hear other speeches at three o'clock this afternoon.

1580 Mr Speaker: The House will now recess to three o'clock this afternoon.

The House recessed at 1.03 p.m.

Appropriation Bill 2022 – Second Reading – Debate continued

Clerk: We continue with the Second Reading of the Appropriation Act.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, thank you.

This morning we listened intently to the Chief Minister, as we would. It had been trailed, already, as a tough Budget by drip-feeding into the public domain and we listened intently, and towards the end ... The temerity of calling this the people's Budget. The people will be tired of the antics and wish the Chief Minister would practise what he preaches.

This was the ultimate act, especially towards the end – 'we are on your side' – while he stared right into the people's eyes and slipped his hand into their pockets. It is all too much. Some, or all, of these new revenue-raising measures would not need to happen if the Government had been disciplined last year, if they had been disciplined from the beginning. This is a case, simply put, of passing the bill on to the people for their failures, of Mr Picardo asking the people to bail him out of his mistakes, and then, with drama, trying to convince them that it is not his fault.

When anyone looks at this Budget and, importantly, last year's public spending, there are some big themes that emerge: on trust, because the Chief Minister cannot be trusted on the economy, public finances or the recovery – there is no real plan, other than a very late and insufficient one, no direction, no willingness to address issues and no clue; a reality check, because scratch the surface of his Budget and today's picture is far worse than presented – when you look forward to next year, it might be even worse than that, and that is down to the possibly unrealistic projections the Government is making in certain key areas; and failure, because all this is down to Government failures – a failure to control expenditure, a failure to control waste and a failure of discipline, which goes all the way to the top because there is a clear line of responsibility and the buck stops with Mr Picardo, who has political responsibility for the bottom line, no ifs, no buts. I am going to deal with all these points in some detail, but first some observations on the macro-economic picture as well as some state of the nation issues that affect public finances and the economy.

We are still without a post-Brexit deal, six years after the referendum. We have been warning about lost opportunities for some time. Not only have there been lost opportunities, there now appear to be missed boats. When, with great fanfare, the flimsy eight-page non-binding New Year's Eve Agreement was presented as some form of Neville Chamberlain-type triumph, we warned about its vagueness, the potential concessions it may lead us to, and the fact that we had missed the boat by not landing a deal at the same time as the UK had bagged for itself a 1,000-page binding legal treaty. We were told we were wrong and that the negotiations for a new treaty would be over in six months, but here we are, 18 months on, without a deal, without even the draft of one and with problems surfacing and affecting some of our citizens. That is inevitably compounded by the Northern Irish reality, despite any assertions that the negotiating streams are separate. Of course, they are theoretically separate and I hope they remain so in practice, but it does not take much to understand that these are also human processes and the potential of our process being stymied by the mounting sense of European frustration with the UK over Northern Ireland is a distinct possibility.

I make clear that we want a safe and beneficial deal, but this uncertainty is not good for Gibraltar and some of our people are now facing the impact of delay as blue card holders endure an erratic and sometimes hindered passage across the border. These are also realities on the ground. The Chief Minister may urge us not to mention this a lot or too loudly, lest we all suffer the same fate, but that is a drab, self-serving invitation tendered by a contributor to, if not the architect of the misfortune, (Interjection) because we have been saying since 2018, when Spain bagged lasting freedom of movement rights for its frontier workers, that Gibraltar lost an opportunity to bag enduring rights for our people – again a reality – not because workers should not have these rights but because we should have got these at the same time in exchange and when we gave other things away.

Mr Picardo often says it was not the right time to talk about these things. I get it – he got it wrong and he does not like to admit it, but that is the reality. Instead of landing permanent rights for our citizens, we gave away MoUs that were inroads into our economic and social affairs, gave frontier workers permanent rights for not much in return, and accepted a permanent Tax Treaty that classed some Gibraltarians and some of our companies as Spanish tax resident, even when they lived here and did not do business in Spain. It discouraged inward investment by hitting at the core quality of life factors that attract investors to Gibraltar.

That was the balance sheet before the New Year's Eve Agreement and when the boat to a new relationship with the EU was badly missed again. Now, here we are, six years after the Brexit referendum, without a permanent deal and without knowing what the future has in store. We are now alone in this quest, as the UK has its deal, and we have the certainty that if we do not get a deal, Spain will still have obtained permanent rights for its citizens and permanent tax concessions to its state. Facts, not spin, and so far a black mark as to the Government's negotiating skills.

He said, this morning, he could not go quicker because he was protecting our rights and our sovereignty, but he gave away rights in the MoUs and fiscal sovereignty in the Tax Treaty, so if this is him taking his time to protect us, then I say no thanks. Is he suggesting, by placing us in a position where we are the only ones without a deal, that this is somehow beneficial to us? That would be the last straw in his salesman's pitch. I suppose we are to thank him for not having landed a deal and for keeping us in this state of uncertainty. I, for one – and I am sure I am not alone – cannot see the logic of those statements.

None of that is to indicate we do not want an agreement. I repeat: we want a safe and beneficial agreement, and the sooner the better, clearly. Of course, whether it is safe and beneficial will need to be judged when the specific text of the draft treaty is published. Again, we think that publication should be before any treaty is entered into, and not just before its ratification. It should be before the treaty parties – the UK and the EU – enter into it. After all, this is a treaty of some importance and it will affect our lives and our people. Why shouldn't it be published in draft, so we can look at it before it is entered into, so that a debate can be had, so that there can be proper scrutiny, so that the people most affected can express a view, and perhaps for that view not just to be expressed informally in the media but in a referendum where our people decide whether to freely choose to accept the permanent relationship with the EU which is then on offer?

I am clear that I want a deal that achieves freedom of movement – mobility – for our people, and safeguards our economic future. We need to be politically and economically sustainable, and a good deal would enhance those prospects, if it can be achieved. Uncertainty damages our economy and the prospect of inward investment. It is less likely that people making investment choices will opt for a territory whose economic relationship with the EU is unclear over one that 90 does not have these big challenges and uncertainties on the horizon – again, a fact. So, despite my criticisms of the negotiations so far, which I make in all honesty and clarity and have always made, I reiterate our desire for a deal that works and is good for Gibraltar.

Whatever happens, we are at a crossroads because the present situation cannot continue much longer – at least, we would not expect it to. Either there is a deal that emerges and that is acceptable, or there is not. We cannot turn the clock back and we are not in the EU. Unless a future UK government were to take the presently unforeseeable course of applying to join the EU, the best we can do is negotiate an acceptable arrangement for ourselves with Europe, because we are European and that is where our future lies as an inevitable geographic reality that nowhere else in the UK has. So we do hope for a safe and beneficial agreement and one that emerges soon this year, because the present Brexit uncertainty affects our economy and is present against a backdrop of global and local economic pressure. Some of that has been caused by the COVID pandemic but other factors have not, and it is important to distinguish between these.

The COVID pandemic left economic chaos in its wake which will take time to recover from, but it also needs to be seen in context. Not every country was the same and not every country will face the same issues. Some had longer lockdowns than others, some are still suffering from these, some were more affected by the economic pressure, and in some countries the toll of human suffering was much larger than in Gibraltar, so it is important to understand the effect of COVID and not let it mask other, more historic issues we had when entering the pandemic.

Clearly, by the time we entered the pandemic we were already straddled in a historic ratcheting of direct and indirect gross debt of around £1.3 billion, this despite the Government having promised to halve the level of gross debt that existed in 2011, then £480 million. Instead, it tripled it. That is a fact and a stunning breach of promise and one that affects our recovery and our ability to manoeuvre. Again, this may be an unwelcome reminder for Mr Picardo, but it is true and a fact. As I said last year, while the £500 million guarantee of the UK was welcome because it lowered the cost of borrowing, it did not provide absolution of past mistakes and nor did COVID paper over the financial state in which we arrived when the COVID crisis happened. If there is further borrowing, it should be to kick-start the economy and not to plug the running costs of an unrestrained and undisciplined Government.

I know he does not like my reminders of his debt promises of 2011, but in 2012, in his first Budget speech as Chief Minister, Mr Picardo said:

in Opposition, we raised issues about the creeping growth of our nation's gross debt and why we have a clear commitment to deal with gross debt and net debt levels, as we set out in our manifesto ...

That is why, Mr Speaker, our manifesto specifically provided, in clear and unambiguous terms, our approach to the reduction of national debt. Our manifesto provides on page 27 that in respect of gross debt:

'Our commitment is that Gibraltar's public debt will be brought down by half of its current level, whatever the current level is after the election, so that by the time of the next election in 2015 there will have been a 50% reduction. Gibraltar's gross debt is presently stated to be at £480,000,000.00 ...'

In 2015 he was still carrying on the pretence of lowering gross debt in his Budget speech, but as the addiction to debt and hunger for clinging on to power grew, the Government parked hundreds of millions of pounds in off-book transactions to pretend the gross debt is smaller than it is. There is now almost £1 billion in off-book, indirect gross debt and the total gross indirect and direct public debt is over £1.7 billion.

That historic debt hangs over our ability to do things. It deprives us of leeway in this severe financial crisis and lessens the opportunities for us to navigate through these challenges quickly. All that is a fact, and it is a fact born out of the financial ill-discipline over the last decade when he has been in charge. Where we are now is because of him and his policies. He has had the opportunity to tackle issues but dismissed those opportunities and, instead, taken the easier road of borrow and spend with everyone's money – your money. Anyone can do that. It takes guts to be disciplined, bold to ensure you say no. Instead, every time a lender has knocked on his door, all he has been able to say is yes without regard to the precarious position it would put Gibraltar in, and that is why we already were weak when we entered the COVID period.

135 The most direct and extreme effects of COVID subsided before the beginning of the last financial year and obviously have improved further since then. The last lockdown did not occur during the last financial year; it happened almost 17 months ago. The vaccination programme which was successfully rolled out, to the credit of the Health Authority and its staff, started 18 months ago. It is clear from the COVID Fund numbers that some income streams have 140 recovered well. I mean, in particular, Income Tax and, to a large extent, company tax. The Import Duty issues may suggest factors that are systemic or structural and not about COVID, and they bear further examination in the future.

During the period up to 31st March 2021 the COVID Fund contribution was £227 million, this last financial year it was £135 million and the forecast for next year is £40 million, but as you will 145 see when I analyse the COVID Fund spend for this year, we have some doubt about how or why this Fund was used this year to channel some payments, and questions as to whether it will or should be used in the future. Ultimately this fund was about costs directly attributable to COVID and not other costs.

There are also surrounding economic circumstances affecting citizens. There is talk of a US
150 recession, which of course would trickle down to the whole globe, and high inflation during 2023. In the UK, inflation rates are already high at 9%, and here the index of retail prices has reached levels not seen in years with a 7.6% increase this last financial year, compared with 1.4% for the year up to April 2021, and 0.6% in the year up to April 2020. This is a reality faced by people whenever they go to buy food in the supermarkets. Life has become more expensive when there 155 is less money for wage rises. Everyone is tightening their belt and understands this on the ground, and so it is important for Government to lead by example. The facts, however, show that the Government is not. In fact, far from leading, it is making the situation far worse and their mistakes have contributed to the necessity for the more financially painful measures today.

This is the backdrop which takes us to the more detailed analysis of why Mr Picardo cannot be 160 trusted on the economy and on public finances, because there are seven economic sins: because there is no discipline; because there is no plan – there is bad management – and he just hopes one will magically emerge; because the worse-off, the vulnerable and the most affected in this community have been left behind despite some of the measures today; because he is not making the public sector more efficient – he has a duty to do so and to make it more responsive to people, 165 and he is failing; because there is a duty to reduce waste and better monitor the spend and use of the people's money; because there has been an unwillingness to make hard choices; and because the policies are often incoherent and contradictory.

Let's look at those features that come through, in detail. Last year the Government predicted a deficit of £50 million, or £1 million per week. In other words, they predicted that the public 170 sector would cost £1 million per week more than it would generate in revenue. Let me make that clear: that is like losing over £142,000 per day, £6,000 an hour. And of course that calculation was based on the fact that they were going to borrow £50 million to prop up public finances. It was, by all accounts, the worst public finances crisis ever. Sir Joe Bossano candidly described it that way: the worst he had seen in all his 50 years in Parliament. But let's be clear, what happened 175 next and over the last financial year has been absolutely staggering.

Instead of being extra prudent and careful in the worst time ever for our public finances, instead of being the watchdog of the people's money, instead of being the financial shepherd he pretended to be this morning, in this crisis the Chief Minister allowed further overspends, and not just a few pounds here and there. Instead of making sure he kept to his own Budget in the worst 180 crisis of our history, the Chief Minister has presided over some massive overspends and could not even keep to the limits he promised this House and the people last year.

In the estimate for 2021-22 the Government promised it would spend, and it was authorised to spend, £768 million. In fact, the actual expenditure this last year was £859 million. In other 185 words, this was a figure of around £91 million above the estimated Budget. They spent an additional £91 million which they had not expected to spend, which they had promised not to 190 spend in the worst year ever. Not just £90,000: £90 million. We appreciate some of that is represented by additional contributions to loss of revenue, but a big chunk of that is departmental overspend. In fact, the basic departmental overspend in net terms alone, compared with what it should have been, is around £35 million of that figure. Not £35,000: £35 million. To compound 195 things, they had to resort to borrowing more. They borrowed an extra £50 million, bringing the borrowing for the last year alone to £100 million, and a large part of that borrowing was just used to pay for running costs.

To put it in the simplest terms, if you were a person who had started the year with zero in the bank account and you had then added all your income and taken out all your expenditure, you 195 would have been down 12% – in reality, £103 million, given the figures that were presented last year ... this year. Any person running a home or a business will understand that. You are earning less than you spend. If that is the case, you need to tighten your belt. You cannot buy luxuries; you have to live within your means. You cannot go on holidays or buy expensive things; you have to wait till you have more money, till your income rises, and cut out unnecessary spending. You 200 do not buy cake if all you can afford is bread. You do not go on that Caribbean cruise. Everyone understands that. But instead of tightening its belt, the Government is still spending more than it receives and, worse still, more than it promised to spend in the worst financial year ever. This is a recipe for disaster. The public finances are out of control. In the year of the biggest deficit, Mr Picardo failed to have the discipline of sticking to his own Budget and had to borrow more.
205 That is sheer irresponsibility with the people's money. How can he have got it so wrong, £103 million down for the year, and the Government that he is responsible for not sticking to their own departmental budgets by £35 million?

There is sometimes departmental overspend, but the difference is that this was the year of the biggest deficit ever, which required the biggest discipline ever for us to get out. It is very different 210 to overspend in a year of surplus than in a year of the biggest financial crisis ever. And when you drill down further, there are serious warnings for the future. The Health Authority budget, for example, for last year was supposed to be £140 million, of which £134 million was supposed to be regular expenditure and £5.5 million was supposed to then come via the COVID Fund as COVID-related expenditure. In fact, the GHA spent a whopping £170 million last year, with £20 million, 215 instead of £5.5 million, coming through the COVID Fund. And it is not necessarily because people are getting an amazing, unsurpassed Health Service. There are many excellent health professionals, but they are frustrated and morale is low. For the user, the children's dental service is appalling, the telephone appointments system at the Primary Care Centre has been a shambles, the administration services are slow and grinding, and in Mental Health the complaints of lack of 220 support and continuity of care are legion. If we are not getting a Rolls Royce service for the money, should we not at least expect the Government to keep to the budget that they have been voted and to ask for more money only if they are intending to provide better services?

So, GHA overspent by £30 million – over 20%, not just a few thousand – and as I mentioned, when you look at that in detail you see that instead of a projected injection of £5.5 million from 225 the COVID Fund the GHA received £20 million last year from that source. But how were some of those COVID Fund expenses ...? If we take a step back, in the year of the two lockdowns, with the massive disruption which that entailed, with the massive extra recruitment that had to be engaged, with the massive purchase of PPE and other equipment that had to be made, with the massive commitment to the Nightingale facility that had to be planned and delivered, in those 230 two years that ended in March 2021 and spanned all the COVID expense from the beginning of 2020 – in practice, a period of 15 months of intense spending from March 2020 – the GHA needed £19 million from the COVID Fund, £19 million of extra money to pay for the costs of COVID.

So how can it be that last year, after the lockdowns – we did not have a lockdown last year – after the vaccination programme and after the worst effects of COVID, the GHA needed more 235 money, £20 million, than in the worst COVID time? And if it did, why was it not foreseeable last year when the Budget was presented? Why did they not know? How did they project £5.5 million would be needed and then ended up needing £20 million? Why were these payments necessary? And why was this a surprise and unforeseen? Above all, how was this COVID related, given that the sum received last year was higher than when the COVID pandemic was in full force? And even 240 if all this was COVID and unforeseen, how were other aspects of the GHA overspend generated and why was there such obvious inability to maintain the Budget?

I will give you a few examples. They had forecast they would spend £2.5 million in relief cover last year. They ended up spending £11 million – it is not even close – of which £4.3 million was a sum attributed via the COVID Fund, so why was there a need for the other overspend of nearly 245 £5 million? How can you go from £2.5 million to £11 million? How can you get it so wrong?

Medical departments were supposed to spend £3.5 million last year, and they spent £18.5 million. It is not even close. Of that £18.5 million a sum of £13.1 million was funded from the COVID Fund – £18.5 million instead of £3.5 million. How can you get it so wrong? They presented that Budget. These are figures from their Budget of last year. They must have had that 250 information. Officials provide information, and then they present the Budget. Massively off.

Recruitment expenses cost £2 million instead of the promised £900,000, more than 100% more. Security services cost £270,000 more than budgeted. Computer and office equipment were £700,000 above budget. There are other examples. And if they got it wrong this year by such a 255 margin, what comfort do we have that the figures this year are realistic or will be kept to?

This year, for example, if we do the same exercise, they are projecting to spend £1 million in relief cover – that is down £10 million on last year; £750,000 in recruitment expenses, down from £2 million last year; £9 million in GPMS prescriptions, down from £12 million last year; £5.7 million on medical departments, down from £18 million last year; £10 million on sponsored patients, down from £14.75 million last year; and £1.5 million on disposal of clinical waste, down from 260 £2.4 million last year. In overall terms, the GHA forecasts it will spend £128 million this year. That is £42 million less than last year and £12 million less than last year's estimate, which they did not keep to anyway. Are these figures realistic? Will they keep to the Budget this time, and will they do so in a way that the public service is not impaired? That is what the user expects. After all, the health and care services – meaning the total of GHA, ERS and the Care Agency – cost the taxpayer 265 over £210 million last year alone.

The GHA is not the only Department; I am using it as an example. Other departmental budgets are smaller but the principles are the same. The Environment Department was £500,000 above budget. The collection and disposal of refuse was £750,000 above budget. There are other examples scattered around the Budget of departments, agencies and statutory authorities 270 overspending by margins which are well above slight increases.

This inability to keep to the Budget hampers our overall ability – Gibraltar's ability – to emerge from this financial crisis, and there is a political responsibility for all this which lies at the feet of the Chief Minister, who presented last year's Budget as a real attempt to start our process of recovery. In that, he has singularly failed. In fact, our position this year is worse than last year. We 275 had to borrow £50 million more than envisaged, just to keep afloat. The Government spent £90 million more than it promised. Government Departments for which Ministers are responsible and accountable overspent by £35 million.

Our direct and indirect borrowing is now at approximately £1.75 billion. Of that sum, hundreds of millions of pounds were parked in an opaque way without there being full clarity of how those 280 moneys have been spent – and, indeed, if they have been spent. We still do not know how much of those moneys borrowed remain.

This year the Chief Minister promises to spend £723 million – in other words, £45 million less than the promise he made last year of £768 million, which he did not keep to anyway. Last year's promise was breached because they spent £859 million. So, to put it into context, this year he is 285 promising to spend £136 million less than the Government actually spent last year. Really? After all that failure? Who believes that? It is like someone who ran a kilometre two minutes slower than expected now saying that he will run it three minutes faster than his personal best time. He is a person without credibility in the field of economic promises. These promises having been breached so often and this failure of financial discipline being so profound, he will forgive us for no longer believing he can navigate us through the storm. He has borrowed to the hilt, with even six of our housing estates mortgaged, with tenants locked into regular rent increases because of the terms of those facilities.

People face hikes in inflation. Everything costs more. Their wages stretch to less. The Government is not providing a better service but is asking people for more for a worse service and giving the people less. Prescription charges go up, and by stealth the legal notice contains a provision that there will be inflationary prescription charge increases every year. This is a Government that issues a press release whenever it feels any sense of good news story which it can capitalise on, and yet did not tell us of the expected annual prescription fee charges – an attempt to bury bad news and to hide behind the GHA.

The financial stress is being felt by the ordinary citizen and the small business owner, who has now been left to survive out there while the Government asks everyone to tighten their belt but does not do the same itself and overspends massively in the year of biggest financial crisis. Little surprise, then, that we have no faith in Mr Picardo's economic management skills. He is the captain without a plan and without a clue, all spin and smoke and mirrors. Is that why he went to visit His Holiness the Pope in the Vatican? Things must be really bad if he had to go all that way to ask for financial forgiveness and to confess his economic sins. Or, as he walked those hallowed corridors and smelt the powerful incense, was it a bid for divine inspiration that would illuminate his financial path, or a request for an economic miracle, because that's what he needs now?

Mr Speaker, people are increasingly seeing that the promises are just that: empty words that are said but not kept, like the pretty pictures in their successive manifestos, like the hundreds of letters he writes to associations and individual voters at election time hoping to persuade them to trust one more time – just one more time, one more for the road. He is addicted to debt and to economic failure. Just one more for the road does not cut it anymore with an electorate that can see through the smoke and mirrors of his spending and his promises.

He spends the people's money like there is no tomorrow – maybe because there is no tomorrow for him – and the signs of recklessness and lack of realism are also there in other ways. They say they will borrow another £50 million next year, but of course we know they did not keep to that promise last year. They are now perilously running out of leeway in the guarantee facility they negotiated – and we heard what he said this morning about that. For next year's Budget and to maintain the pretence of prudence they have shaved off projected expenditure from high-spending Departments, but without any real sense of whether these promises will be kept – because, as I have illustrated clearly, they were not last year at all.

Part of the reason they are projecting to spend £723 million next year is because this year they are only providing a notional £1 million contribution from the Consolidated Fund to the Improvement and Development Fund (IDF), from which, as people know, the infrastructure projects of the Government are paid. The spending in the IDF seems clearly dependent on the receipt of the Eastside premium of £90 million, but what happens if it is not received? How are the extra projects going to be funded? After all, they are expecting to spend an extra £30 million this year through the IDF.

For example, via that fund it is clear that they intend to spend £2.75 million on computerisation of the Government, having already spent a massive £14.5 million in 2019-21. Over and above that, they intend to spend £3.75 million on so-called digital transformation, having spent £3.4 million last year. But of course that is a misnomer, if you ever needed one, because the citizen knows that e-government is still a shambles and there is not much to show for that – and yet the millions being spent just keep on piling up.

Remarkably, the Island Games facilities are still not complete. They intend to spend another £2.3 million on those facilities this year to complete the facilities of the Games that took place three years ago. If there is a monument to this Government's tendency for smoke and mirrors, it is those facilities – which they are still trying to finish – that were promised to sportsmen and 340 sportswomen as a generational legacy to enhance sports facilities and training capabilities, only to be ripped up, in part, when the Games were over; because the façade shown at the Games was just that, a façade, and for these still not to be complete even now forcing sports people to go elsewhere to do their training. This morning, he called them the best sporting facilities our athletes enjoy. In fact, they are the best sporting facilities that our athletes do not enjoy.

345 But no worries, Mr Speaker, because No. 6 Convent Place expects to spend 50% more in its entertainment budget this year. While Rome burns, the emperor will play the fiddle and be entertained. To put it in sharper context, the Government is cutting the GHA's sponsored patient budget by £4.75 million this year, or over 30%, but intends to spend 50% more by way of the Chief Minister's entertainment budget than last year. The priorities are all wrong. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)
 350 The Hon. Chief Minister says it is to invite me to National Day. Well, that glib little remark will not obscure the reality. If you pull that picture together, you see a large public sector budget out of control with a Government preaching a tightening of the belt to others but unable to carry it out themselves. Far from a tightening of the belt, the figures show a greater loosening by the Government.

355 If only they at least stuck to their Budget, that would be but a first step. There would then be a need to weed out inefficiencies, monitor public contracts in a better way and cut out waste and abuse. But that seems a lost cause with a Government that has not got a clue or a real desire or commitment to rein in expenditure, prioritise properly and become more efficient and deliver a better service to people. Above all, there is no leadership to make that happen, and that must be 360 a conscious decision. Instead, everywhere you look there are contradictions and incoherence.

Beyond this, there remain real concerns that the people have still not been properly told how hundreds of millions of pounds borrowed in their name have been used, or if they have been used, and what we have seen over the last 12 months indicates a willingness to ignore tendering processes that the Government itself had triggered. These practices affect governance and 365 finances. So it was a few months ago that TNG, an entity that did not even exist when the expressions of interest process closed for the Bayside/St Anne's plots, were suddenly announced as having been awarded that multi-million luxury plot, despite not even having participated in the expressions of interest process. Instead of re-advertising the process, the Government awarded the sites to them. That was compounded by the downright misrepresentations of the Government 370 press releases at the time, which clearly suggested that TNG had presented the 'highest offer' – to quote from their press release – clearly implying that they had been bidders in that process when they had not.

Once we made clear and put in the public domain that our own verifications suggested that the entity did not even exist when the process had closed, the Government backtracked, 375 inevitably, at that stage, and, to try to deflect matters, suggested the Opposition had an agenda for some nameless developers; a complete nonsense, of course, but demonstrative of how, if there were 'locked-up cats' here – to coin the pejorative Spanish saying used by the Chief Minister on Twitter at the time – they were on that side of the House. But the reality is that the cats did not stay locked up much longer, because days after the Bayside announcement the same entity
 380 was also awarded the whole of the very valuable £2.5 billion Eastside development. Again, this entity had not participated in the Eastside expressions of interest process because, we know, it did not exist at the time. Again, the Government misrepresented the position by saying TNG were, to quote, 'the highest bidder', when clearly they were not bidders at all at the time the process closed. Again, much more recently the Government has accepted that TNG did not submit an 385 expression of interest by the closing date in this Parliament. The 13 other bidders on the Eastside plot and the other bidders of the Bayside/St Anne's plot may feel, rightly, hard done by that sequence of events.

Of course, at the same time that those behind TNG were seeking to persuade the Government that they should consider their aspirations for those plots, when they had not even filed bids by 390 the closing dates, it was a complete coincidence that those behind TNG via Trusted Novus Bank gave the Government a £3.75 million donation to bail it out of the spiralling high cost of the Midtown Park. In a rather quirky intervention at the Budget last year the Chief Minister described the donation in this way:

I am very pleased to be able to announce that the new park at Midtown is being funded entirely by a very generous donation from Trusted Novus Bank.

He went on:

What an out of the ordinary manner to support the community with an out of the ordinary donation for an out of the ordinary park area in the very centre of our city.

395 He used the words 'out of the ordinary' in front of descriptive words several times for emphasis and clearly deliberately. Given that the bank that shares the same ultimate owners of TNG market themselves as the 'Out of the Ordinary Bank', using that as their effective strapline – 'Out of the Ordinary' – and that the park eventually acquired the livery and emblem of the bank, one can be 400 forgiven for being left thinking that these are the new depths that we have got to with this Government.

This is a cash-strapped Government that is not only selling the family silver and looking for benefactors for its financial mistakes but is, apparently, prepared to rent out the Chief Minister for short, 30-second commercials where you are assured that he will use your corporate slogan a few times. If he was in Saatchi & Saatchi they would be proud, but to watch that performance was 405 farcical and demeaning to his office, especially given the events that then unfolded, a few months later, when it became obvious what the donation was for.

Mr Speaker, last year the Chief Minister increased Social Insurance, which was a burden on small businesses trying to survive as they emerged from the COVID lockdowns. He did so by a significant margin. He also increased electricity charges: 20% for commercial electricity and 16% 410 for home consumers. When he did so, he compared electricity charge increases in the past. This year, there have been further hikes of 8% in electricity and water charges. Of course, it is different to increase charges when wages are going up and in a buoyant economy with low inflation, where charges and increases may still leave you better off, in net terms, after you take account of wage rises; but when wage rises are difficult or low and inflation is high, all these charges and new 415 indirect taxes leave the poorer worse off. So where is the real evidence that ordinary working families are being insulated from his economic mismanagement? That is not a sentiment felt simply by the Opposition. The Equality Rights Group, who have campaigned fearlessly on social issues for decades, chastised the Government recently, and rightly, for precisely running deeply contradictory financial policies seeking a tightening of the collective belt but being unprepared to 420 do so itself. All this leaves people behind.

We share the view that in a year of high inflation and such economic pressure the Government should be cautious about putting further pressure on workers or small business. There are people already living on a knife-edge. There is a need to protect the worse off, the more vulnerable and those on the business economic knife-edge who are striving hard to put food on the table for their 425 families and employing people who, in turn, need those businesses to survive. This is especially so given the rising inflation of over 7%. Everything is more expensive. People have less money in their pockets.

The problem with this year's measures is that it is a bag of contradictions, like everything they do. This year, and unusually, certain figures have been drip-fed into the public domain ahead of 430 this Budget debate. Additionally, they have briefed the press about how this is going to be his toughest Budget. But what he has omitted to say is why. The why is because of a decade of borrowing without restraint; a decade of spending without discipline; a decade of not controlling public sector contracts; a decade of not controlling waste and abuse; a decade where systematically our money – your money – has been misspent by him and where he has singularly 435 failed to provide a strong financial legacy to future generations. We have been taken, as a community, to the financial cliff-edge. That is why it is so appalling for the Government to overspend in its own Budget in this year, because this then creates pressure on the innocent. Workers and small businesses and the ordinary citizen will feel a sense of genuine outrage that the reason they face new taxes or charges or higher fees is because in the worst financial year ever the Government of Mr Picardo has not kept to its own Budget. Why should people pay for his mistakes? What moneys are the measures they have announced this morning going to generate, other than to plug the holes of his overspend, which I have explained already he did last year?

Some sectors of the business sector will rightly suffer a genuine sense of dejection. There is nothing in the Budget to help businesses through the current turmoil. Beyond the continuation of BEAT for part of the last financial year, the big chunk of the COVID Fund was used to fund loss in revenue, although some went to expenditure of some Departments, as we have seen.

The Social Insurance price hikes last year were penal. They hit business and eroded wages so that there were employees actually worse off, even after receiving a wage rise. That is how profound the Social Insurance hikes last year were. He will remember that the Chamber condemned those increases because they were done without consultation and highlighted, to quote from their press release at the time, 'the precarious state of the Government's finances in the wake of not only the COVID pandemic but also years of rampant recurrent and capital expenditure'. We agree. Those increases were against a backdrop of much lower inflation, and even then there were concerns on jobs, wages and business viability. The Social Insurance increases last year were from 20% to 107% at one brutal stroke. Voluntary contributions were increased by 142%. This meant around £1,100 to those taxpayers.

As I said last year, COVID left certain sectors of the economy very damaged – particularly those reliant on the tourism industry, which is only now starting to come back, albeit not in the large pre-pandemic volumes – but many of those businesses remain on a precipice and there is no real sign of Government assistance or sympathy. For example, when the Omicron variant spread quickly and the Government openly discouraged people from going out, this had a real effect on bookings and business. The public comments of the Government were unsympathetic, as the Catering Association had itself noted in its public remarks at the time. Rather than give the small business sector breathing space, the Government jumped from funding BEAT payments to levying higher Social Insurance or electricity charges – plainly inconsistent policies. And now, this year, further pressure has been piled on workers, ordinary families and small business.

So, let me be absolutely clear on the specific budgetary measures announced today. Of course we welcome that state pension and disability benefits should be increased by inflation and the measures designed to assist the most vulnerable through this crisis – for example, the means-tested utilities credit. We agree with the measures announced in respect of adjusting Income Tax rates at the highest end on incomes over £500,000 a year and the reform of rules on Category 2 individuals. We also agree with measures that would address any corporate under-declaring.

Some of the other specific measures seem short-sighted and counterproductive to the economy. For example, of concern would be the passenger tax applied to the cruise liner market. In a notoriously competitive market, that could remove any edge our market has and mean that cruises do not dock at Gibraltar. This would be a massive mistake. It would harm the industry and jobs. That measure and our concerns will be addressed more specifically by my colleague Damon Bossino in his reply.

So, too, the imposition of a so-called COVID recovery charge, by which companies have to pay, in effect, £1,250 per year. That will raise lots of eyebrows in the business and financial services sector. It was not clear – and he has the chance, on reply, to say – but did he mean all companies or all trading companies? If the former, it will, in effect, strike a crushing blow to company and trust managers and potentially destabilise the big sectors of the financial services industry and, with it, endanger many jobs in the industry. If he meant the latter – trading companies – then this, too, is harsh on small businesses trying to make ends meet. Margins of survival are thin and all he is doing is making it so much harder for business and for these ...

On the Minimum Wage, we understand and share the concern that we must do more for our lower paid. When this is put alongside other charges, however, and without any rebalancing relief for small business, the Government may find that the effect of increasing these burdens is that small businesses on thin margins will not survive. That will mean the loss of jobs and the irony that by seeking to increase wages the Government has caused workers to lose their jobs, in some sectors.

The Chief Minister has increased Income Tax by 2% and electricity and water charges by 8%. The fact that electricity and water prices may be higher in Spain is of little comfort to ordinary working families who may be on the edge. Food prices here are higher than in Spain, and there are people who are even facing difficulty going across the border, so they cannot just pop over to buy food in Spain. So, if we are going to do the comparison, let's do the comparison in the round. He may be dismissive about the effect of these charges, but they have to be seen in context, and as a cumulative effect they take a toll on the ordinary working family. Last year, electricity and water went up 16%, so in cumulative terms it means they have raised these 24% in the space of merely 12 months. That will mean hundreds of pounds more per year for consumers, on top of the hundreds of pounds they have already been paying because of last year's increases. Combined with that and the inflation and the Income Tax, it will erode wages even further. It will mean that the vast majority of people will be worse off after this Budget and will have less money in their pockets, and they will ask why.

This is not the people's Budget, Mr Speaker. It was the last straw for him to call it that. This is not the people's Budget. It is to hold the people up by the side of the road like a 15th- or 16th-century highwayman. This is not the renaissance Budget. I know how fond the Chief Minister is of straplines, in the hope that tomorrow the headline will be 'The Renaissance Budget', but the Renaissance was a break with the past, a great leap into modernity. The only relevance to his Renaissance reference is that there were plenty of highwaymen robbing the people in Renaissance times as well. And this is all this is. This is the highwayman's Budget: stand and deliver! These are his inabilities to control expenditure, which he is now seeking to sell to people as everyone chipping in to save the country. He has the gall to sell to people – after his failures, the over-expenditure last year – that this is the people's Budget, a Budget for them, to save the people, to save their souls, when this is only to cover his tracks and save his political future after his expenditure and overspending last year, to plug that hole.

How do the words even slip out of his mouth when he has raised taxes and made most people worse off, after overspending last year and making our position worse than it was last year, in the year when all financial records were broken? How can he even keep a straight face after raiding everyone's pockets, when all he is doing is taking more from the people? How can he treat the people with such financial disdain? Why does he not own up to the indiscipline, the overspending, the vanity projects, and say this is necessary because of that? Why doesn't he say that? Why doesn't he come and say, 'Look, we overspent, we apologise, we made mistakes, but we have to do this?' That is not what he says. It is a different message and he is trying to sell to people that it is the people's Budget, some kind of common-man approach. It sticks in many people's throats, Mr Speaker.

I repeat, as I said last year, that we need a new way and one that ditches this catalogue of failures and contradictions. We need efficiencies, control of waste, control of abuse and corruption, transparency so there is real visibility of the economy and actual debt, real prudence, targeted business assistance to deliver restart, borrowing only to invest and to create economic activity, a programme of reduction and management of borrowing, a reform of public services to deliver a better and more modern service to people which gives the taxpayer more value for money and embraces the 21st century.

Mr Speaker, this Budget does not give a true picture of public finances and is unrealistic. We cannot support it because to do so would give the signal that we support the approach of someone with no clue and no plan, that we support someone who has made our public finances even worse in the worst year of our democratic history. We are not going to do that and we are not going to 540 equivocate. As I said last year, this is not about us being seen to vote for public service salaries or not. This is about the Chief Minister and not our hardworking public servants, who grow as frustrated and tired of his lack of leadership, inconsistencies and failures as the rest of the electorate.

545 The basic point here is this: we think that our ability to emerge from the effects of the COVID pandemic have been made worse by years of economic mismanagement. The Government say that is not true. They say the deficit has nothing to do with them, and nor does our financial weakness. But putting that debate as to where we were before COVID and our relative financial strength or weakness, as it was, to one side, what is clear is that they had the opportunity last 550 year to show discipline and leadership. That required, at the very least, that they keep to their Budget. By failing to do so, they have demonstrated beyond doubt everything that they have been accused of.

Mr Speaker, this is the State of the Nation debate, and after the damning indictment people will hear from the Members on these benches about his economic record and the lack of leadership, it would be wrong and perverse to send the signal that we are aiding and abetting his 555 attempts by voting for his lack of controls and unwillingness to grapple with the hard choices necessary to steady our economy and to leave a legacy of sustainability. That would require leadership and vision. In the ambition he has to remain in power, he is sacrificing the public interest for the sake of their narrow electoral interest. That is why a change in approach is so badly needed, so we move away from his addiction to debt, his recklessness and his lack of direction, so 560 that we can recover a better path of economic sustainability, tackle the big challenges for our community and deliver a long-term strategy for a solvent future.

Where is, for example, the big roadmap to first recognise and then deal with the issues of major public sector reform that exist? It is obvious that systems and working practices need to change to achieve a responsive, modernised and effective public service. That requires investment 565 combined with change, not just a continuation of antiquated practices, a perpetuation of the unchecked and also untargeted, un-strategic use of money. This is as bad as throwing taxpayers' money down a deep well, in some cases. The taxpayer deserves better. The people deserve better.

All this, Mr Speaker, is putting huge pressure on working families or small business because there is little financial leeway to help them out at a time of crisis – because the Government led 570 by the Chief Minister has spent all the people's money and there is no money left. Borrowing from banks to pay wages and costs, which he is now having to do, is a fool's economics – and that because of historic debt and a fundamental inability to control expenditure in this time of deep crisis and make efficiencies. Everyone knows reform is necessary, and it takes courage and leadership to deal with those issues but to deal with them consistently and show and lead by your 575 example of having kept to the Budget of last year, which they failed to do. Mr Picardo is not the man for that job because he is far too fond of just being in that job. The people have given up hoping for financial realism, prudence or a willingness to conduct radical economic reforms from him or his Government. (Banging on desks)

580 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, it has been a difficult six years. I think even the hon. Member opposite would realise that. As you know, Gibraltar has, in that time, had 585 to endure a dual crisis, the consequence of a lethal combination of our departure from the European Union and a global public health pandemic. The former stretches back now to the referendum of June 2016. The origins of the latter can be traced to December 2019. Those two events have dominated our politics and shaped our lives. They have also taken up valuable hours, days, weeks, months and years of Government time. And not least, the pandemic in particular has impacted negatively on the economy and on Government finances. All this is reflected in the 590 Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure before us today. In all my time in this House I have never witnessed an external event which has impacted on our finances in this way – and I have been here for 23 years now. It would be grossly unfair to belittle or ignore this fact, as the hon. Members are prone to do, and to pretend it simply has not happened. This is, as I said, my 23rd Budget debate; the pandemic, as the House will recall, caused us to skip one a couple of years ago.

595 The COVID Response Fund has set out, in a clear and transparent manner, exactly what the financial consequences of the pandemic have been. Clearly, the human cost will always be more important than the numbers – the 6.3 million people who have lost their lives so far, over one hundred of our own citizens – but the public health crisis has catapulted the planet into an economic crisis. That cannot be denied. Businesses have closed, many have contracted; jobs have 600 been lost; revenue has fallen; expenditure has increased; and debt has mounted everywhere. Government finances all over the globe have taken a hit, and Gibraltar is no exception. The latest published figures show that the overall impact of the pandemic, here, is over £360 million. All this represents a real and direct blow to our finances.

The House will recall the detailed preparations that were made in 2020 and 2021 to meet the 605 challenge posed by the pandemic. This included the purchase of medical equipment, the stockpiling of medical supplies, the creation of a field hospital from scratch, the extensive testing regime which made Gibraltar a world leader in the field, the Contact Tracing Bureau. And in addition to all this, the taxpayer supported the salaries of private sector workers during two lockdowns and, in certain cases, beyond. Indeed, businesses were also assisted with their costs in 610 other ways. The bill has run to hundreds of millions of pounds. That is money the Government has spent and money the Government has not received – all this with the agreement of the Opposition. True, we hoped to have seen the back of the pandemic by now, but the truth is, as variants of concern continue to emerge, we can never know for certain. The vaccination programme remains our main defence going forward, and in this area, too, Gibraltar has led the 615 world with the invaluable support and assistance of the United Kingdom. Therefore, the impact of the diversion of resources, funding, staff, time and energy to fight the pandemic since 2020 should not be underestimated or belittled; neither should the combined consequences of the £360 million in expenses and lost revenue.

But COVID-19 is, sadly, not the only external factor to have hit Gibraltar. The effects of our 620 departure from the European Union have been with us for even longer. Indeed, Brexit has dominated many Government workstreams since the 2016 referendum. That makes it six of our 10 years in office. It also means the entirety of this electoral term so far. It is inevitable that six years of Brexit and three years of COVID will have consequences for what any Government can do. The time spent on Brexit matters by Ministers and officials has had and will have a knock-on 625 effect. That same attention will, sadly, have been denied to other areas. The speed with which decisions are taken has been impacted. The time available to meet people has been, sadly, squeezed.

We cannot underestimate the all-consuming and cross-cutting nature of our EU departure. Practically every Department or Ministry has been affected in some way. It is true that the Chief 630 Minister and I have certainly devoted more time to this than other Members of the Government, but that does not mean to say that the others have not been involved also. On the contrary, they have: firstly, in the wider discussions and the policy decisions that have needed to be taken; secondly, because of the direct impact of our EU departure in their own areas of responsibility; and now, thirdly, in the assessment and discussions of the proposed future relationship with the 635 European Union. I cannot stress enough, therefore, the cross-departmental nature of this work. It is also relevant to emphasise that there are different Brexit workstreams: the first for work in the context of an agreement; the second for work in the context of no agreement, with the exploration of possible alternatives or contingencies; and the third in relation to future long-term economic planning. The entirety of the Government has been involved in these processes over all 640 these years.

As my hon. Friend the Chief Minister has said, the Government continues to work towards a treaty to govern the future relationship of Gibraltar with the European Union. The House knows that our main interest lies in a mobility agreement which facilitates the movement of persons.

645 That principle was reflected in the New Year's Eve Agreement of 31st December 2020. It is relevant to note that this objective is diametrically opposed to the deal that the UK negotiated for itself under the Trade and Co-operation Agreement. The UK wanted barriers, controls and check points, whereas we were looking for the opposite. But for us, our objective remains – that is to remove the existing EU Schengen controls from the land border with Spain and transfer those controls to 650 Gibraltar Port and Airport. The effect of this would be the seamless movement of persons by land between Gibraltar and the European Union through Spain.

It is obvious that the movement of goods can impact on the movement of persons. Under the terms of a common travel area, a person on foot or in a vehicle would not be subject to immigration controls. However, they could still be stopped and asked to show the contents of their bag or their suitcase, or indeed to open the boot of their vehicle. The decision of the 655 Government to pursue an agreement on the movement of goods must be seen in this context.
The House will understand why. The history of the border crossing experience enjoyed by our people since the Frontier opened is well known to us all, and no controls means no queues. So the work goes on.

The Government remains fully committed to arrive at a positive conclusion, but we also need 660 to be alive to the alternative – that is to say the possibility of a no negotiated outcome (NNO).
This, to put it mildly, is not an attractive proposition, nor is it where we wish to land politically, but we do recognise that until there is a deal no agreement remains a possibility, and the Government has a duty to prepare, as far as possible, for that eventuality. In some areas, Gibraltar can and will look to alternative mechanisms and procedures. We will look to non-EU international 665 legal frameworks, Council of Europe and United Nations Conventions. International Agreements, too, may cushion the full impact of our departure from the European Union. However, it must be understood that there are some areas where it will simply be impossible to provide any mitigation.
That means that the full impact of our position outside the European Union will come to bear.

This House will be aware of the booklet on NNO which was issued by the Government in 670 February. This was entitled Guidance to Citizens – No UK-EU Treaty on the future relationship of Gibraltar. It was an important piece of public information strategy on NNO. The booklet was published online and distributed to thousands of households all over Gibraltar. It made the point that since the UK or Gibraltar would never sacrifice fundamentals or put Gibraltar's future in jeopardy, we must also be ready to walk away. The 40-page guidance covered areas like the 675 movement of persons, the movement of goods, healthcare, driving licences, social security, students and mobile roaming. It also pointed to advice which had been issued previously. This information is now all on the Government website.

I should add that the booklet did not pretend to be exhaustive, so in order to further assist the public, the email address brexite@gibraltar.gov.gi was provided in order to handle any further 680 queries. That email address was set up in October 2020 and a total of 170 emails have been received. These were all replied to in substance or the sender was referred to the correct Department for a substantive reply. The queries mainly related to passports, residency, health cover, customs requirements, road haulage, driving licences, pets and the registration of medical devices. Those questions and questions about other areas were answered in line with the 685 guidelines included in technical notices or based on the advice provided by different Government Departments. Over 50 technical notices and two information booklets have been published to date.

Mr Speaker, United Kingdom experts have supported every aspect of the negotiations. The necessary resources and expertise have been made available to Gibraltar at every stage. This has 690 been a cross-Whitehall effort. In that same way, we have also worked together on every step of our planning for an NNO. There has been, and continues to be, very positive and productive engagement between the two governments. The formal structure between the Gibraltar and UK governments remains the NNO Board. This is co-chaired by me and by the UK Minister for Europe.
When in that role, Wendy Morton MP participated in a Board meeting here in Gibraltar, her 695 successor, Chris Heaton Harris Mr President, did so virtually, and I very much look forward to working with James Cleverly MP on the NNO Board going forward.

I want to place on record the thanks of the Government, on behalf of the people of Gibraltar, for the unwavering support that we continue to receive from the United Kingdom. The contribution from UK Ministers and officials from every department and in every area has been 700 second to none. I must single out for particular praise the support of officials from the FCDO. This has extended to the co-funding of NNO projects here in Gibraltar. The first of these was for the purchase of waste equipment. The shredder, wrapper and baler was put to good use at the beginning of the year when there was a delay in the processing of permits for the export of waste to Spain under a new system. This increased the resilience of Gibraltar by allowing us to shred, 705 wrap, compact and store a greater volume of waste.

The UK also co-funded the food ferry operation from Algeciras. The House will recall that the end of the transition period saw a change to the way in which goods of animal origin made their way from the UK to Gibraltar. That ferry operation is now entirely funded by those who choose to make use of it.

710 A third area where the UK has assisted financially is with works to the container terminal at the Port. Those works have involved repairs to the wharf, resurfacing and repaving the area as well as improvements to its electrical infrastructure. The outcome is that the number of electrical connection points for refrigerated containers will increase from just a handful to over 50. That project will be complete in the next few weeks. The Government cannot stress enough the 715 importance of this facility in an NNO context.

The UK has also assisted Gibraltar with financing a contingency to hold a number of hotel beds for key workers in the event of problems at the border when the transition period came to an end.

Mr Speaker, the governments of the UK and Gibraltar are now working together on a plan to extend the pedestrian entry facility at the land border with Spain. A planning application has now 720 been filed with the DPC. The objective is the expansion of the building in order to accommodate the installation of a number of e-gates on our side of the Frontier. These are already in place on the Spanish side. In the event of NNO, the automated technology would assist with the flow of persons into Gibraltar. The UK and Gibraltar governments had agreed to co-fund this programme as well. Indeed, as I speak, a team of officials from Gibraltar are in London to meet with the UK 725 Border Force precisely about the e-gate project. Hon. Members should bear in mind that even if there is a treaty, this contingency will be available to Gibraltar at any point in the future. It will arise at the four-year treaty review point, for example; it could follow the election of a more aggressive government next door; and it would also work when there is a need to reinstate controls with and within Schengen. This happened, for example, following the terror attacks in 730 France and again during the migrant crisis from the east.

I want to take this opportunity to thank the many officials of the Government of Gibraltar, too, who have also been active participants in this process, in particular the Civil Contingencies Co-ordinator, Ivor Lopez, the Director of Gibraltar House in Brussels, Daniel D'Amato, the CEO of the Ministry of the Environment, Dr Liesl Mesilio, and my Principal Secretary, Ernest Francis. They 735 have brought the many strands of this work together in an effective, organised and highly efficient manner. However, despite all this work, I must repeat the following. In certain areas there are simply no contingencies available, there is no mitigation and no plan can be formulated. In those areas, the default position of NNO will simply reflect what it means to be outside the European Union.

740 The details of NNO planning were set out in private to Members opposite and to others. The Leader of the Opposition and the Brexit Select Committee were each briefed separately. A similar presentation was delivered on a confidential basis to the Chamber of Commerce, the Gibraltar Federation of Small Businesses, the Gibraltar Betting and Gaming Association, the Finance Centre Council and the media. Gibraltar is, therefore, as prepared as we can be. It is impossible to have 745 done more.

The House will know that the full impact of a hard Brexit has been mitigated, so far, by a series of contingency measures unilaterally extended by Spain. Those unilateral measures were first enacted by them on 28th December 2020, a few days before the transition period came to an end. The last extension, under Spain's Decreto Real, came on 28th December 2021, so persons with a 750 right of access to public healthcare in Gibraltar were allowed to continue to access public healthcare in Spain on terms equivalent to those which existed before we left the European Union. That measure was reciprocal and applies only between Gibraltar and Spain. This comes to an end this month, on 30th June, unless it is extended further. The equivalent provisions with regard to 755 other bridging measures applied at the time, in relation to the exchange of driving licences and education. Gibraltar has ensured reciprocal treatment, where relevant.

The single most important area has been the border. Gibraltar's departure from the European Union at the end of January 2020 meant that the legal status of our land border with Spain changed overnight. It ceased to be an internal EU border and switched from being an external 760 border of the Schengen Area to an external border of the European Union as well.

Our departure also transformed our personal status. British citizens, including Gibraltarians, ceased to be EU nationals and became, instead, what the EU terms Third Country Nationals. Therefore, when crossing a Schengen border the rules that apply to us are no longer the same. Nonetheless, Spain maintained the position at the border from January 2020 until October 2021.
765 However, at that point the United Kingdom introduced new immigration rules for EU nationals. Spain did the same for UK nationals at the border. This led to the stamping of their passports on entry to and exit from the Schengen Area.

In April 2022 there was another new departure. UK nationals, including those who hold blue civilian registration cards, started to be stopped and questioned by Spanish border guards; some 770 were turned back. Although there is provision for questioning in the Schengen Border Code, the Government has made it clear that this state of affairs is not satisfactory. We have raised the matter both with the United Kingdom and with Spain, and we will continue to do so. Having said that, the Government is conscious that the default legal position at the Frontier is the Schengen Border Code. The full application of that Code would mean that everyone, including Gibraltarians, 775 would be subject to the more stringent controls. No agreement would extend that same chaos to all. It is important to note that the proposed treaty, therefore, would unblock these mobility issues for all residents of Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to report on our office in Brussels. The expanded office is in its seventh year of operation. It has been a constant source of support throughout the tumultuous journey of 780 our withdrawal from the EU and it continues to provide vital assistance to the Government as we conduct negotiations for a treaty to govern our future relationship.

The office has provided much more than simple technical support. Its footprint in Brussels, in the heart of the European Union, has also gone a long way to promote our interests and our reputation. The Government has always maintained that this physical presence in Brussels has 785 provided a value to Gibraltar that goes far beyond its size. Our representation in Brussels has continued to engage on a regular basis with the EU institutions and with other stakeholders there. This includes officials from the European Parliament, from the European Commission and from different member states. This contact takes place both online and in bilateral meetings in person. Indeed, the Government hopes to be in a position to resume familiarisation visits to Gibraltar by 790 relevant EU stakeholders. The value of this was evidenced by the European Commission technical visit to the Airport and the border, which took place in January. They left with a better understanding of the situation on the ground and with a willingness to explore practical solutions. The best way to understand Gibraltar is to see it.

Efforts continue to be made by Gibraltar House to remain centre stage of the British presence 795 in Brussels. The office continues to have a central co-ordinating role in the activities of the network of UK interests there. This organisation has been newly rebranded and is now called UK Stakeholders Brussels (UKSB). It brings together governments, industry associations and educational representatives from the wider British family of nations which are based there. This has become a forum in which to share perspectives and devise strategies to collectively promote British interests within the EU. Gibraltar maintains close contact with the offices of the devolved administrations – Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. We also work very well with the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man and with other UK Overseas Territories like Bermuda, all of whom maintain their own representation despite Brexit.

Gibraltar remains a vital British interest in Brussels. This is evidenced by the excellent working relationship the office and the Government maintains at all levels with the UK Mission to the EU, known as UKMIS. Indeed, the lead negotiator for the UK in our treaty negotiations is the UK Ambassador to the EU himself, Lindsay Appleby, a close friend of Gibraltar who understands better than most every nuance and every detail of our position. This, in itself, underlines the importance that the UK government attaches to these negotiations.

In the last year, the Brussels office has been instrumental in facilitating my participation in the European Committee of the Regions' UK Contact Group. The Group was formed in 2020. It brings together local and regional political representation from the UK and EU member states. The majority of meetings I have participated in have been virtual. However, the most recent meeting of the Contact Group took place in the Welsh Senedd, in Cardiff. I took the opportunity to attend that meeting in person. It was a useful occasion to engage with officials from the EU institutions as well as with politicians from different regions. The meeting was attended by the Chair of the UK-EU Parliamentary Partnership Assembly, Ms Nathalie Loiseau MEP, and the First Secretary of the Delegation of the EU to the UK, Mr Jan Tatum-Krauss, among others. I also used the visit to meet bilaterally with the First Minister of Wales, the Rt Hon. Mark Drakeford MS. It was very useful to be able to exchange notes with the First Minister on Brexit and on other matters. The next meeting is pencilled in for Brussels in September. It is important to be part of the efforts at continued UK-EU co-operation. This is key to ensure that Gibraltar's unique situation in the post-Brexit landscape is understood by the relevant actors both in the EU and indeed in the UK itself.

With regard to the actual treaty negotiations, the office in Brussels has been a bedrock of support. It has been involved at every stage of the preparation and conduct of these negotiations. Indeed, the Director of Gibraltar House, Daniel D'Amato, has participated in every negotiating round, in person, alongside the Attorney General, Michael Llamas. We anticipate that the office will also be vital in ensuring that any agreement, if reached, is effectively communicated in Brussels.

It is relevant to recall that, as with any other international treaty, a Gibraltar treaty will have to be ratified by MEPs in the European Parliament. It will also require ratification by the EU member states in the European Council before it can enter into effect. The UK and Gibraltar governments and Parliaments will have to do the same. Our point of view during any ratification process will be put forward by Gibraltar House.

The role of the office will be vital if a treaty is concluded, but it will be equally important if there is no agreement. In the case of a deal, this will mean another wholesale transformation in our relationship with the European Union. The office will need to cater for the increased workstreams which such agreements usually generate. There would, for example, be technical work and reporting requirements through working groups and joint committees established by the agreement itself. In addition to this, there would also be a need for day-to-day working relationships with the Commission to ensure that the anticipated treaty is implemented correctly and efficiently. On the other hand, if an agreement is not reached, the office will continue with our lobbying and promotion work. Therefore, Gibraltar House in Brussels stands ready to continue to serve Gibraltar's interests, whatever the future may bring. I take this opportunity to thank the Director of Gibraltar House in Brussels, Daniel D'Amato, and the team there.

Mr Speaker, I move on, now, to Gibraltar House in London. COVID restrictions gradually eased in London over 2021. Gibraltar House took the first opportunity under UK rules to have a full staff return to the building on 12th April, thereby ending working from home. It was a priority to get back to normal operations as soon as possible. This reopening of the office was in the context of 850 a London where many shops and businesses were still closed. Indeed, there was a very gradual return to in-person work on the part of many institutions and organisations. Whitehall itself was a prime example of this. By late May 2021, officials and Ministers from Gibraltar were once again travelling and making use of the office in the Strand for meetings and as a base for work.

855 Commercial entities began using Gibraltar House two months later. In this period, it was also possible for the team at Gibraltar House to finally meet more parliamentarians and officials in person. However, both Houses of Parliament took a cautious approach. It was only some months later that meetings were allowed on the actual parliamentary estate. Nonetheless, lobbying and engagement in London continued both online and in person, where possible. Indeed, online meetings of the All-Party Gibraltar Group had one important advantage. This was simply that MPs 860 working from home were more easily and readily available. It also meant that the Chief Minister and I were able to brief MPs remotely from Gibraltar. We did so on several occasions.

The House will recall that last September the traditional National Day celebrations were once again on pause due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Instead, Gibraltar House in London hosted 10 MPs and peers to a lunch, to mark Gibraltar Day on 10th September 2021. Before lunch, guests 865 gathered at Gibraltar House for a viewing of the National Day rally, which included an address from Sir Bob Neill, the Chairman of the Group, all virtually.

Mr Speaker, the Government expects to have a presence at all main UK party conferences this year. In 2021, both the Conservative and Labour parties returned to in-person conferences.
Gibraltar hosted a stand and a reception at both of these. The Prime Minister, Boris Johnson, 870 addressed the 400-strong Gibraltar reception in Manchester. Then Shadow Europe Minister Catherine West did the same at the reception in Brighton, at which some 300 delegates were present. The Liberal Democrats chose to meet virtually, instead. This included a fringe meeting with speakers from the devolved regions and from Gibraltar.

In late October, Gibraltar House supported my colleague the Minister for the Environment, 875 Prof. John Cortes, who led a delegation to COP26 in Glasgow. The office in London also coordinated our participation at the Joint Ministerial Council between the UK government and its Overseas Territories, which was hosted at Whitehall in November.

In January 2022, Gibraltar House London organised a visit to Gibraltar by Sir Bob Neill MP. He was briefed by the Chief Minister and I on the state of the negotiations with the EU. Sir Bob also 880 attended a number of meetings and delivered an address to students at the University of Gibraltar. Two months later, in March 2022, Stephen Doughty MP, Shadow Europe Minister, and Stephen Morgan MP, Shadow Schools Minister, also visited Gibraltar. They too were updated on a number of issues, including the continued negotiations on the proposed UK-EU treaty.

March also saw the first in-person meeting of the All-Party Parliamentary Group. I would like, 885 at this point, to pay tribute to Lord David Chidgey. He was both a close personal friend and a good friend of Gibraltar. In his early days, David represented the Liberal Democrats on the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House of Commons. He took a strong and determined stand at the time against the attempt to share the sovereignty of Gibraltar between the UK and Spain. Sadly, he passed away after having contracted COVID-19 in February of this year. I am sure that the whole 890 House will join me in expressing our deepest condolences to his wife, April, and to their family.

Members will recall that in March the Royal Gibraltar Regiment was presented with new colours by HRH the Earl of Wessex at Windsor Castle. The Government hosted eight MPs and peers, as well as the UK representatives of the other Overseas Territories, to the parade and a reception to mark the occasion.

895 Finally, Gibraltar House has, of course, been subject to the same restrictions and controls on spending as other areas of Government. The Gibraltar Representative to the UK has reported back to me that there will be an inevitable impact on the office of the level of inflation there. This will cut across different areas. The cost of electricity, for example, projected from existing usage, is expected to rise by 86%. The telephone bill is expected to increase by 14%. Generally, a 9% rise 900 for most items and services is anticipated. However, the expiry of some long-standing contracts at Gibraltar House has nonetheless allowed the opportunity to explore alternative providers for some services. This may help to mitigate some of those projected costs. Hon. Members will have seen that both Gibraltar House in London and Gibraltar House in Brussels have come within the Estimates approved by this Parliament last year.

905 In the last financial year, Gibraltar's engagement and links with the Commonwealth continued to be an important part of the activity of Gibraltar House. There was plenty of direct contact with Commonwealth institutions and High Commissions, as well as general diplomatic contact with other countries. Gibraltar was invited to and represented at a number of royal and Commonwealth events. The Gibraltar Representative, Dominique Searle, attended regular 910 sessions of the advisory group of the Commonwealth Enterprise and Investment Council. He also participated in meetings of the Commonwealth Foundation, as well as FCDO meetings on the Commonwealth Games.

Along with the other UK Overseas Territories, Gibraltar was represented at key events in the United Kingdom. These included Remembrance Day, the Commonwealth Day service and the 915 memorial for Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh. On Commonwealth Day, Lyndsay Hoyle invited all the Overseas Territory representatives to the raising of the Commonwealth flag at the Houses of Parliament in Westminster. Gibraltar was there, too, along with Commonwealth High Commissioners, at a number of events in London to mark Her Majesty the Queen's Platinum Jubilee. This included the Trooping of the Colour ceremony, the service of thanksgiving at St Paul's 920 Cathedral and the Platinum Jubilee pageant.

Now that restrictions have eased, a number of Commonwealth High Commissioners have expressed an interest in visiting Gibraltar. We hope to be able to make arrangements for this to happen soon.

Part of my role as the Minister with responsibility for relations with the Commonwealth is to 925 bring together the different strands of Commonwealth activity. The Estimates before the House reflect the continued support of the Government for different organisations and institutions of the Commonwealth. These comprise the Commonwealth Enterprise and Investment Council, the Commonwealth Foundation and the Commonwealth Local Government Forum. Separately, the House will see reflected in the Estimates the estimated expenditure in relation to the 930 Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, which this year meets in plenary session, in person, in Canada.

I want to take this opportunity to thank my hon. and learned Friend the Minister for Justice for her sterling work during her term as chair of the regional Commonwealth Women Parliamentarians.

935 This year, Gibraltar was represented at some of the events taking place in the margins of the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Kigali, the capital of Rwanda. There was a business forum, a women's forum, a citizen's forum and a youth forum. These meetings were a case of third time lucky for Kigali. On the previous two occasions, in 2020 and 2021, everything was postponed as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic. The Commonwealth Youth Association 940 selected Chris Cardona and Adriana Lopez to represent them and Gibraltar in the youth forum. Sadly, Chris was unable to attend for health reasons but was replaced, just in time, by Aaron Santos. My friend and colleague the Minister for Tourism and Business delivered an address to the business forum. He was joined there by the Country Director of the Commonwealth Enterprise and Investment Council, Jared Peralta.

945 This year, the Commonwealth Games will take place in Birmingham. The opening ceremony on 28th July will once again see the Gibraltar flag flying proudly with those of over 70 countries and territories that make up the wider Commonwealth family. I know that the House will join me in wishing all the very best to Team Gibraltar.

950 Mr Speaker, I move on, now, to our work in Washington and in New York. This is an area of Government in-person work which has suffered as a result of the pandemic. Given the restrictions on travel to the United States at different points, coupled with the risk of enforced quarantine or isolation, the Government has exercised some caution in this respect, although some of that work did move virtually. In this context, it was very helpful that Gibraltar's representative in the United 955 States, David Liston, lives and works in New York. He was only too pleased to deliver our annual address to the Committee of 24 in June 2021, and later to the Fourth Committee, in October. The Government is very grateful to him for this.

960 The work in New York has often gone beyond the set speeches to the United Nations. There is a significant amount of activity behind the scenes. This year, the Chief Minister and I were able to continue where we had left off. The House knows that there was also a private meeting with the Chair of the Committee of 24, the Ambassador of Grenada, to the United Nations. In addition to this, my friend and colleague Sir Joe Bossano participated in the annual regional seminar in St Lucia.

965 There has been no work in Washington in person over the last financial year. This was brought to an abrupt halt by the pandemic, so my last visit to the US Congress was in May 2019 and the last visit by a group of US Congressmen to Gibraltar was in July of that same year. I have, however, met virtually with Congressman Ron Kind, who is a Democrat. The Congressman is now the lead sponsor on the annual resolution which is tabled in support of Gibraltar. This followed the retirement of Congressman George Holding, who was himself a great friend of Gibraltar. Indeed, the House unanimously approved the award to Congressman Holding of the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour in 2017. Congressman Kind has himself been a supporter of the Gibraltar resolution since 2014. The House will recall that we started with only five sponsors. There are currently 25 other co-sponsors, in addition to Representative Kind.

975 However, Gibraltar has continued its interaction with the United States of America in different ways. The Gibraltar branch of the American Chamber of Commerce (AMCHAM) continues to develop commercial ties. Under their auspices, a sister cities agreement was concluded with Raleigh in North Carolina, the capital of George Holding's former congressional state. I know that there are plans for a trade exchange in the pipeline. I was also very pleased to receive the Commercial Attaché to the US Embassy in London, here in Gibraltar, in March.

980 This year marks the 80th anniversary of Operation Torch. This was the Allied offensive against the Nazis in North Africa. It was planned and executed from Gibraltar under Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, who became the 34th President of the United States after the War. Indeed, Gen. Eisenhower then became the first non-British person to command Gibraltar for over 200 years. There are plans to celebrate our links with the United States through a permanent memorial to Operation Torch in the vicinity of the American War Memorial in Line Wall Road. The concept is that that will mark the start of the Walk the Wall project.

985 Mr Speaker, I move on, now, to civil aviation. The Airport has managed to continue to grow its traffic, albeit now concentrated on British Airways and easyJet flights. The 2022 scheduled programme of summer flights is not far short of the pre-COVID levels of 2019. I have to congratulate my hon. Friend and colleague the Minister for Tourism for this. It has been a difficult operating environment for the airline industry all over the world. The number of non-scheduled flights visiting the Airport also set new records in 2021. The figures for the first quarter of 2022 show a significant increase in numbers, even over that same period last year. While domestic routes between Gibraltar and the UK continue to develop, Brexit limitations mean there are no scheduled flights from Gibraltar to EU airports. In the event that a UK-EU treaty regarding Gibraltar is concluded, and if that treaty covers aviation, it will set the legal basis for flights to and from the EU.

995 Work on aviation legislation continues. Over the past 12 months, a law improving the enforcement of the control of drones has come into effect. This is important as it allows a number of agencies, in addition to the RGP, to impose penalty notices on those persons using a drone without the correct authorisation.

1000 The Government has recently published a Bill to cater for the policing of Winston Churchill Avenue between the police posts at the Airport. This has come about as a result of an incident last year which occurred as the function of Winston Churchill Avenue changed from a road to a runway. The consequence of the incident was that an aircraft was forced to break off its approach to land.

Gibraltar has followed the western world in imposing restrictions on Russia after the illegal invasion of Ukraine. In common with the United Kingdom and the European Union, Gibraltar issued instructions to the Airport and the wider aviation community that we would not permit aircraft owned, chartered or operated by persons connected with Russia at Gibraltar Airport.

1010 Post-COVID, the Director of Civil Aviation (DCA) has reintroduced the ongoing audit programme. This is necessary in order to demonstrate continued compliance with stringent international civil aviation requirements. The audits, which are undertaken by UK CAA inspectors, have provided the DCA with confidence that standards have not dropped despite the impact of COVID on operations. In compliance with international aviation requirements, the DCA has 1015 informed the Civil Airport that it will face a cyber-compliance audit before the end of this year.

Drone activity has reduced slightly in 2022. Nonetheless, there remain a significant number of local commercial and recreational operators registered with the DCA. In addition, there is an increasing number of requests from persons visiting Gibraltar with their drones. The majority of drone flights continue to be undertaken within the authorisation system run by the DCA. However, 1020 there continues to be evidence on social media of flight activity being undertaken by unregistered operators. Given the very small size of drones and their limited endurance, it is exceedingly difficult for the law enforcement authorities to counter this unlawful activity. For this reason, the DCA, in conjunction with the MoD, law enforcement agencies and a local software company, will be trialling an electronic surveillance system designed to detect drones in flight. Once a drone 1025 datalink is activated, the system should be able to pinpoint the location of the drone, but more importantly the location of the operator. If the trials are successful, consideration will be given to seeking funding for a permanent solution to protect not only the Airport but also local wildlife and persons in the urban environment.

On another matter, after a short competitive tender process, the DCA has renewed the contract of Redline Assured Security Ltd to provide unannounced covert and overt testing of security at the Airport. I want to take this opportunity to thank the Director of Civil Aviation, Chris Purkiss, for all this.

Mr Speaker, I now want to update the House on the workings of the Freedom of Information Act. The House will recall that when the Command Paper on Freedom of Information was published, there were no representations received from anyone within the period allowed. The Freedom of Information Act was commenced in June 2021. In that time there have been a total of nine requests made. Four of those requests came through the online portal. All of these were in respect of the Human Resources Department. Two of those requests were subject access requests, which do not carry a fee and are dealt with directly by the Department. The applicants 1040 were informed to contact Human Resources directly. A further five requests were received by email. Request 1 was for information from the Gibraltar Health Authority, which is not currently in the schedule. Request 2 was for information from the Gibraltar National Archives, for which a Freedom of Information request was not necessary; the applicant was advised to contact the archives directly. Requests 3, 4 and 5 were from persons who were not resident in Gibraltar and therefore did not meet the criteria. The Government looks forward to the annual report from the Information Commissioner, after which it will consider the next steps.

Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar National Archives continues to do a sterling job in promoting our history. This is due in large measure to the energy, enthusiasm and commitment of the Archivist, Anthony Pitaluga, with the assistance of his dedicated staff. Much of this promotion is carried out online through their website, which has become a portal for the world. In the financial year 2021-22 there were 22,434 hits on the website from 135 different countries. There were also 2,427 registered visitors who consulted analogue and digital material directly at the premises. In addition to this, there were 59 enquiries received by email and one by post from a total of 30 different countries.
1050

On 1st January 2016, the Archives implemented the issuing of history cards for registered users. This allows them to log the number of enquiries received per member and to build up a profile of the interests of each one of them. There are now 1,254 registered members of the Archives, of whom 143 are new users who joined in the financial year to 31st March 2022.

1060 In April 2021, the Archivist attended, via Zoom, online digital preservation workshops run by Preservica UK. In August, he also took part in the Zoom conference of the Archives and Records Association of the United Kingdom and Ireland after the in-person event was cancelled.

1065 In November and December 2021, the Gibraltar National Archives organised an exhibition which marked 100 years of the establishment of the City Council in 1921. Another exhibition was organised on 25th April 2022, outside that financial year, to mark the 40th anniversary of the Falklands conflict. These exhibitions were both expertly curated by Anthony Pitaluga to the high standard that he has us accustomed to. Hon. Members will be aware that an exhibition to mark the Platinum Jubilee of Her Majesty the Queen opened at the Gustavo Bacarisas Gallery in Casemates earlier this month. It will run until 22nd July. I must specifically thank the Archivist, the staff and their helpers for this commendable achievement.

1070 The Government remains fully committed to the development of the Gibraltar National Archives. Hon. Members will recall that Duke of Kent House has now been earmarked as the building that will be home to the public face of the Archives. There is a nominal entry for this in the Improvement and Development Fund Head 102 Projects, Subhead 4 Other Projects (zzu). The House will also note that the I&DF also provides for funding to be made available for the 1075 installation of a specialist fire suppression system at the Gibraltar National Archives. This is shown under Head 102 Projects, Subhead 4 Other Projects (zzc).

1080 Mr Speaker, work at the Northern Defences continues to progress well. The Government remains committed to continue the transformation of the site into a new heritage, tourist and community park. In March this year, outline planning permission was received for a strategic master plan. This will gradually see that vision come to reality. An application for full planning permission for an access staircase from Casemates Square was also supported by the Development and Planning Commission. It was gratifying to witness such overwhelming support from every member of the Commission, both for the work done so far and for the holistic proposals presented to them for the future.

1085 In addition to the clearing and restoration work, the area has also witnessed major improvements to our infrastructure. This year, I wish to particularly praise the work carried out by Aquagib. They have co-ordinated that work tirelessly with representatives of my office. Providing and upgrading infrastructure is an essential component of a thriving community. However, those responsible for delivering such a service are rarely acknowledged or praised for the work they 1090 carry out. We too often take for granted the presence of our Wi-Fi signal, the provision of electricity or the supply of water.

1095 Last year, the Western Water Mains Relief Project, designed to supply the needs of the Eastside reclamation site, progressed smoothly and quietly along the western slopes and tunnels at the Northern Defences. This infrastructure project was born out of the need to provide redundancy in water supply due to the ageing infrastructure on the west side. It was also designed to cope with increased demand due to the rapid expansion rate of construction and demographics in the building sector. The logistical challenge of supplying these relatively remote sites has been overcome through close co-operation between AquaGib and the project director, Carl Viagas. The combination of knowledge about the Northern Defences coupled with a dedicated management 1100 team has enabled the identification of a route away from congested sites. The outcome has reduced costs and avoided considerable inconvenience to the public. The extent of the works, once completed, will involve the laying of some 1,650 m of twin pipes, 1.6 km. This will make this project one of the most significant of its kind in the last decade.

1105 I have to congratulate the team at AquaGib for the sensitive way in which this infrastructure has been dealt with. For instance, hundreds of metres of pipes have been laid and then buried in tunnels, and a viewing platform below the Tower of Homage now conceals a previously exposed network of pipes. The speed and nature of this intervention will hopefully be adopted in sensitive sites elsewhere in Gibraltar in the future.

1110 The pandemic wreaked havoc with our lives. The challenge of isolation and of adapting to this was a strain on many of us. However, our people have always been resourceful. The Government responded to this new stressful environment by adapting our programme of works at the Northern Defences. The work was redirected to infrastructure, as I have just explained, but we also isolated those works to allow for the rest of the site to remain partially open for leisure activities. The public was able to make use of this new park within the Nature Reserve. There is 1115 still, obviously, plenty more to be done, though the benefits were immediately obvious. Families have been able to enjoy a stroll or a picnic in what is one of Gibraltar's most picturesque landscapes. I have been extremely pleased to see members of our community practising yoga there or attending some of the popular tours on offer, but perhaps the best use of the site has been for educational purposes. Several schools have visited the area, which now features as part 1120 of our local history curriculum. Walking through fortifications which date back to the late 18th century and witnessing the impact damage of cannon-shot upon our historic walls often has a greater effect on a student than the most relevant book or classroom presentation will ever be able to accomplish.

The most notable use of the site for educational purposes came last year. I reported to the 1125 House then on the use that the Gibraltar College made of the area. The House may recall that the College chose this site as a destination as part of its Business and Travel module. In the past they had opted for locations outside Gibraltar. Organising events such as rock climbing and abseiling, the College tapped into a resource that until now was only available elsewhere. Building on such an event, the College will be announcing its new educational programme starting this September, 1130 and I am very grateful to my colleague the Minister for Education, Prof. John Cortes, for this. The concept is to use the Northern Defences as a wall-less classroom. This is a revolutionary vision which the Government is very keen to support. The use of this site and access by specialists will allow students to play an active role as part of an educational enrichment programme. This programme will consist of modules such as event organising, health and safety, local history, rock 1135 climbing and conservation, and will be part of the education provided.

The investment at the Northern Defences will therefore go beyond the physical elements of the site. It is also an investment in our younger generation. The Northern Defences will become a key area that will provide the opportunity for us to create a qualified team of youngsters who may well end up running this or other similar sites in the future. This will be a unique experience for 1140 our learners to redefine learning in real-life local projects. It will connect students to the real world with a vision of enhancing creativity and purpose in a range of vocational fields. So, works will continue this financial year. They will see interpretation signs and access stairs as well as lighting and improvements to the designated activity areas at Queen's Lines. The House is aware that the Government has received a number of expressions of interest for the commercial running of 1145 activities on the site. However, no firm decision has yet been taken and multiple options are being studied.

The Government warmly welcomed the fact that the Earl of Wessex, Prince Edward, chose to visit the Northern Defences earlier this month. He did so, together with His Excellency the Governor and I, under the expert direction of the project director, Carl Viagas. My impression is 1150 that His Royal Highness was very interested in everything that he saw and valued the restoration and rehabilitation of this historic site. I wish to thank Carl Viagas, whose energy and enthusiasm have been a driving force behind this project.

I now move on to update the House on progress at the Mount. Two planning applications for the Mount and its associated grounds received planning approval in March this year. The first was 1155 a master plan, which provided a holistic approach and strategy to the site and its grounds. The second was a detailed application for the refurbishment of the Porter's Lodge and the hall, which are to be used as a registry office and an events venue respectively. The two applications received overwhelming support from the Development and Planning Commission and works are expected to commence after the summer.

1160 The policy approach here has been similar to that adopted at the Northern Defences. The Mount is a large, complex and historically significant site. Hon. Members will recall that the Government embarked on a clearing-out exercise two years ago. The grounds have now been 1165 cleared of undergrowth and many paths and steps have been exposed as a result. This work has respected the wildlife and has been carried out in consultation with GONHS, the Heritage Trust and the Environmental Safety Group. The removal of vegetation has allowed us to identify an original set of steps which connect from the Mount's main service road all the way up to Engineer Road. This will become a new direct walking or hiking route to the Upper Rock Nature Reserve, away from our busy roads.

This first exercise has allowed for the true scale and nature of the project to be appreciated.
1170 Even though the task may seem overwhelming, the team has eagerly accepted the challenge and defined the type and sequence of works which now need to be carried out. This will be based on the phased approach that was presented and approved at the Development and Planning Commission. Whilst clearing-out works will continue, works to the Porter's Lodge will commence as phase 1. The refurbishment of this charming building, the events hall and associated gardens 1175 will be an initial step towards the renaissance of the Mount. This will provide the perfect venue both to register and host weddings. Running parallel to the refurbishment of the Porter's Lodge will be works to the slopes behind the main residence. These beautiful spaces and magnificent views of the bay will be used for outdoor educational experiences.

This part of the project is being funded directed by the Parasol Foundation, for which the 1180 Government is extremely grateful. Their generous donation of £1 million towards this vision is what makes us special as a community. Their contribution will see the creation of a children's play area, paths, nature areas, tree-hopping activities and an adventure park which seeks inspiration from the property's history. Future phases will see the creation of paddle tennis courts. The centrepiece will be the sensitive restoration of the main building, which is our ultimate goal. The 1185 recommissioning of disused water tanks and the use of sustainable technology could make this project a truly remarkable one to be enjoyed by our people and by visitors.

Mr Speaker, planning permission for the refurbishment of Parliament House and a change of use for the ground floor was received on 22nd March. It therefore gives me great pleasure to 1190 announce today that the installation of the lift at Parliament House is finally scheduled to commence during this financial year. The preliminary funding for this can be found at Head 102 Projects, Subhead 4 (zzv). This is the outcome of the work of several years on a number of different options. In the end, following the availability of the premises on the ground floor, it will now be possible to provide an internal lift. The proposed solution will address the concerns of those 1195 persons with reduced mobility who want to access the Parliament Chamber, but it will do so in a manner which respects and is sensitive to our proud heritage, too. This new planning application, as with the previous two, received overwhelming support at the Development and Planning Commission. Hon. Members will recall the wider proposal which I presented to them privately last year and of which they have copies. The next phase, in the future, will see the creation of meeting rooms, enhanced security and offices for Members and staff. The roof will also be refurbished and 1200 will allow for a series of uses, whether ceremonial or simply as an external space for staff and Members. Once again, the appreciation of the Government must go to the Parasol Foundation.
Their generosity has not been limited to the Mount and to its grounds, it will also go towards the external refurbishment of this handsome but currently tired building.

In order to satisfy the requirements for an internal lift and much-needed extra office space, 1205 the ground floor cafeterias have been lost. However, we do acknowledge that these provided an element of vibrancy to this part of town. In order to minimise this loss, the Government has awarded a tender for the use of the kiosk as a coffee-serving facility with a limited number of tables and chairs. Such a proposal has already received planning permission. We look forward to providing a modern Parliament which allows the public to enjoy that special morning coffee 1210 downstairs in its forecourt.

1215 This building is not just bricks and mortar; it is and has been the bedrock of our democracy. It has witnessed our evolution and our development as a people. It is, therefore, only fitting that there be some investment and restoration. The first phase will focus on the external refurbishment and the internal lift. This is expected to commence after the summer. The rest of the restoration will have to wait and will be carried out in phases over slower time as this House approves the funding.

1220 Mr Speaker, the last expression of interest for Road to the Lines closed on 7th March. The Government has since engaged in detailed discussions with the most attractive proposal from the highest bidder. The discussions have involved a number of Government Departments, agencies and utilities who have put in a considerable amount of time and effort to push matters forward. The result is that the Government is on the verge of concluding an agreement that will completely transform the Upper Town. I will give the House a flavour of the submission on the table.

1225 This proposal will see considerable private sector investment which will run into millions of pounds. Hon. Members will know that the site has been neglected and dilapidated for decades. Road to the Lines is a quaint area consisting of narrow streets and steps visible from Casemates Square. Nestled below our castle, it is the backdrop to many of the events held in our most popular public space. Yet it has been the victim of neglect and sadly witnessed the loss of its residents. Many old housing properties lie empty and abandoned beyond economical repair. Different factors have contributed to this, including anti-social behaviour, the lack of accessibility, and poor infrastructure. These issues are not easy to resolve. The Government has regarded this as a challenge, a challenge that we have a duty to meet if we wish to drive a meaningful urban regeneration programme that is truly meaningful. In dealing with such projects, we have to understand and accept the causes of this kind of urban decline. Refurbishing individual properties without addressing the core issues, while certainly very useful in certain areas, is only an important first step. The current situation requires a fully co-ordinated, multi-disciplinary approach if we are to succeed in bringing life back into this quarter of town. In order to do so, we aim to address those main core issues head on.

1240 Road to the Lines is adjacent to the Northern Defences, an area once colourfully described as 'the jungle'. Anti-social behaviour plagued Road to the Lines for decades. No urban renewal attempt would ever have a chance of succeeding if the Northern Defences had remained ignored. We are now on the road to tackling this matter. The Northern Defences is slowly becoming a family-friendly area, even before it has been officially opened. It will become our most prized jewel as a recreational space, once works have been completed, and it will provide the perfect outdoor walking and picnic area for residents and visitors.

1245 There are two other remaining costly issues. The first is failing infrastructure and the second difficulty of access. The negotiations that the Government is conducting aim for improvements to infrastructure to be provided at no cost to the taxpayer within the site. That is the objective. It is painful to see cables and pipes fixed on to historic walls and facades, and collapsed drains in different places. All this needs to be tackled. A significant cash premium has been offered for the land. The details will be announced when the agreement has been signed. In addition to this, private investment estimated at over £2 million will be made in infrastructure for the area. This will see the provision and re-routing of essential services. It will also involve the introduction of high-speed telecommunications. New drainage will be provided. The proposed development will involve the use of sustainable technologies. The creation of a revitalised public square, landscaping, stone paving, cafés, public artwork, up-lighting of historic walls and green walls are also proposed as part of this scheme. This will be directly in line with our manifesto, where we pledged to create a child-friendly city by upgrading properties and public spaces.

1260 The above improvements will be pointless if we do not address the issue of access. This will affect not only residents and visitors but also the developer himself, who will need to transfer tonnes of material to and from the site. It is a logistical challenge that very few have been willing to accept and an impossibility for individual property owners. Once completed, and as part of the scheme, the intention is to provide lift access to Road to the Lines. This will not only serve 1265 residents but will also become a vital connection to the Northern Defences. I am very grateful to my friends and colleagues, Minister for Urban Renewal Prof. John Cortes and Minister for Housing Steven Linares, for their invaluable and continued support. The Housing Department has been instrumental in decanting residents over many years. A small number of tenants who remain are being offered alternative accommodation so that they are not inconvenienced during these intensive and intrusive works.

1270 Having said all that, I must stress that this proposal is still under negotiation. The House may, nonetheless, be interested to know that the redevelopment is aimed at attracting a diverse market and that the properties are intended to be rented and not sold. This was an important consideration for the Government. The objective is to create a vibrant new quarter in Gibraltar.
There will be, needless to say, a full public consultation exercise with all interested parties when the plans are presented to the Development and Planning Commission, hopefully later this year.
1275 The outcome will deliver an improvement not only in the constructed fabric of the area but, in so doing, to its social environment. This project will deliver an exceptional residential product, but it will also attract visitors to appreciate the history of the area as well as its unique environment.
The combination of the Northern Defences with Road to the Lines will provide a springboard from which to push forward with a new high-quality visitor offering. I must, once more, thank Carl 1280 Viagas, who has advised the Government on the merits of the different proposals received, as well as Kevin de los Santos, the senior director at Land Property Services Ltd, for his advice.

The House is already aware that the different expressions of interest for the Victualling Yard and the former GBC premises have yet to progress. The Government is, however, in discussion with preferred bidders in respect of the vaults at Ragged Staff and, separately, the relocation of 1285 the College of Further Education to the Cross of Sacrifice site. We also continue in discussion with preferred bidders for the Rooke site and for the old air terminal site following two separate invitations to expressions of interest. I want to thank the staff at the Lands Office in Convent Place and the management and staff of Land Property Services Ltd for their assistance and their professional advice.

1290 Mr Speaker, the last six years, since the Brexit referendum, have been difficult years for Gibraltar, not least because of the consequences of the global pandemic, which was thrown into the mix for good measure. The combined effect of these two events has been that the Government has had less time to deal with other matters. This is not an excuse, it is a reason. It is the plain truth and the hard reality we have lived over the last few years. Were there things we 1295 could have done that we have not been able to do? Yes, there were. Were there also things we could have done differently? Yes, there were. But the financial and time constraints imposed upon us have meant that we had to do what needed to be done. The people put us in office in 2011, in 2015 and in 2019 for a reason, precisely to take those difficult decisions, to tackle and overcome whatever challenges fate may throw in our path, and we are fully confident in the knowledge that 1300 nobody else in the same circumstances, faced with the same challenges, would have done any better.

So, for now, we are where we are. Gibraltar is not an economic island. We are not insulated and protected from what happens in the wider world outside. Whether it is Brexit or COVID or the new monkey pox virus, or even the war in Ukraine, everything, however distant it may seem, will 1305 have an impact here, and when we look at the Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure before the House that is precisely what they reflect: the localised impact of international crises on our own unique situation.

I close by thanking my personal staff at No. 6 Convent Place. I thank you, Mr Speaker, and the staff of the Parliament for their assistance and support throughout the year.

1310 Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, with great thanks to the Deputy Chief Minister, with whom I work so closely, I wonder whether now might be a good opportunity to take 15 minutes before we return?

1315 Mr Speaker: The House will now recess for 15 minutes and return at twenty to six.

The House recessed at 5.25 p.m. and resumed at 5.44 p.m.

Appropriation Bill 2022 –
Second Reading –
Debate continued

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Prof. John Cortes.

Minister for the Environment, Sustainability, Climate Change and Education (Hon. Prof. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, last year I started my Budget speech with the words ‘The world is in crisis.’ Little did we suspect then how the crisis would worsen and on so many fronts: COVID still with us, the cost-of-living conundrum, war in Europe. And yet, the crisis that the Earth’s climate continues to experience, and which some media and some decision makers seem to want to forget, is still, by far, the worst. Much reference will be made during this Budget debate to the economy and the tightness of our budgets – I will do so, too – but these issues will pale into insignificance as the world heats up by 2°, or more. Parts of the tropics will become uninhabitable by our species, there will be massive migration to the temperate regions with all the social, political and economic crises that will bring, with us on the front line of rising temperatures and desertification, severe storms and immigration. So we have to be careful, globally, that we do not allow short-term concerns to cloud our vision and we must guard against thinking that the danger to the planet will simply wait for us to get our act together.

1330 Many of the decisions being taken now by some countries to step back on low-carbon measures and reverse other environmental progress, to try to stave off those other crises, are short sighted and opportunistic, and the world will regret them sooner than they think. However, as we have seen this morning, despite all else, this Government is standing firm on its commitments. I also have to express disappointment that, due to the necessary investment in a robust COVID response, we have had to pull back on some of our plans, manifesto and otherwise, and will not be able to deliver all those wonderful – and, to my mind, necessary – things we planned, but we have to carry on, and carry on we will.

1335 Mr Speaker, 2021 saw the publication of the Climate Change Strategy, a plan which was due to have been published just before we entered the first COVID lockdown. Despite the delays, this document is an important step in the development of Gibraltar’s climate policy and further work on its implementation is already being undertaken across Government.

1340 We have formed a cross-governmental group, soon to be formally established in statute as the Net Zero Delivery Body, which will be responsible for establishing yearly programmes of work to ensure the targets set out in the Climate Change Act are reached. I am tremendously pleased that this body will be chaired by my hon. Friend the Deputy Chief Minister and includes the Minister for Transport and myself, as well as senior officials from across Government Departments, agencies and authorities. It will be supported by a Secretariat which will sit within the Department of the Environment and Climate Change. We have also appointed the independent Climate Change Committee, made up of individuals with expertise across various areas of climate policy who are already providing independent and impartial advice to the Government as we progress on the journey to net zero. The setting up of the Climate Action Fund will be significant as it will release resources for climate action and, as the Chief Minister has announced this morning, we are taking practical steps to populate this fund. Our first climate change and vulnerability risk assessment consultation has been carried out in collaboration with UK consultants Ricardo Energy and Environment and has helped to build a more complete picture of Gibraltar’s potential climate hazards and impacts, identifying strengths and weaknesses, as well as solutions and areas for action.

1360 I was fortunate to attend the COP26 conference in Glasgow as part of the official UK delegation. I participated in a number of events at which I was able to highlight the important work being done in Gibraltar. I was also able to make our pledge at the Environment and Education event, in which we committed to ensuring that learning about the climate emergency becomes a fundamental principle of education policy, and to providing teachers with the training, support and resources they require in order to deliver this. We have already begun work on this in collaboration with the Department of Education and the University of Gibraltar.

1365 I would like to take a moment to commend the many private sector companies that are working on their environmental sustainability agendas. We have noticed a significant increase in their engagement with Environment from in-house training and awareness to setting their own net-zero targets within their own company goals. We are increasingly seeing how the business community is stepping up to the climate challenge. It makes economic sense, too. The most recent one to highlight is NatWest, who launched their new Green Mortgage product right here in Gibraltar just a couple of weeks ago.

1370 Mr Speaker, we live as though we have emerged from the scourge of COVID, although really we know that we have not. Public Health worked its guts out throughout the last year – more than the last few years. It is easy to forget that just three months ago we had a Contact Tracing Bureau working seven days a week, as well as a drive-in test centre and, recently, a dedicated lab at the University. I thank all those who worked directly in Public Health in COVID response; indeed, we had an award ceremony for them recently in recognition of this. It is important that we learn the lessons that the pandemic has taught us about the importance of all the functions of Public Health, not just in the monitoring of communicable diseases, but also in disease prevention, lifestyle improvement and health advice. I am working with the new Director of Public Health, Dr Helen Carter, in developing an assessment of Public Health strategic needs in order to ensure that in the future the Public Health team and function are well able to work for the good of the community and for its good health.

1385 Mr Speaker, leading on from my Budget speech last year, I am delighted to confirm that our programme to develop culture and its appreciation, both in Gibraltar and abroad, remains at the heart of my agenda, as is evident with the daily cultural activity and the increased cultural services that are provided by my team whilst sticking within our budget. My commitment to develop our arts at an international level is also a priority, and art programmes, residencies and exchanges have already been put in place for this forthcoming year by Gibraltar Cultural Services, working, as ever, on behalf of the Ministry of Culture as our executive and operational arm. We are achieving this, despite a tighter budget, thanks to hard work, sponsorship from philanthropists and the private sector, and through the support of volunteers. And so our cultural service is thriving in events, development, cultural facilities and premises, cultural education, promoting our art galleries, our public library and more, together with all the stakeholders. It is imperative that we continue to produce these programmes, as we need to make sure we invest in the cultural leaders of the future, who will promote Gibraltar outside our shores. What gives a community more celebrity status than a world-class actor, singer, musician, author or artist? That is just one reason why we must invest in culture. We have to develop and promote our own. Events with international artists are welcome and important for recreation and enjoyment, and inspire us, but it is much more important, significant and less expensive to promote the development of the arts within our community.

1395 Despite all the doom and gloom, life goes on and I will do all I can to ensure that we continue to live it to the full, enjoying all that this blessed community in which we have the privilege to reside has to offer. That is what culture does. To this end, there have, this past year, been myriad events organised, including the third Cultural Awards; an extraordinary and successful Literature Week, mainly dedicated to local authors but which saw the participation of renowned international authors Lord Jeffrey Archer and Christopher Lloyd. The Christmas Fair attractions

1410 returned at John Mackintosh Square. February 2022 saw the return of the ever-popular GibTalks.
The 2022 Youth Arts Jamboree, as part of our cultural development initiatives, was carried out with projects in poetry and creative writing and musical composition workshops delivered by our musician Gabriel Moreno. Live drawing sessions for young people were organised by the Fine Arts Association and workshops were provided in collaboration with the Gibraltar Youth Service. The programme also included the Gibraltar International Dance Festival, the Festival for Young Musicians, the Drama Festival, the Young Art Competitive Exhibition and the ever-popular World Book Day celebrations. The street art mural walk was a new addition which proved popular this year, with fun and educational tours of the Mario Finlayson National Art Gallery, and City Hall and the GEMA Gallery also part of the programme. The Young Shakespeare Company returned to the Rock in May after a two-year gap. We supported three Gibraltarian artists to take part in the Rock Retreat Residency in May 2022. This international initiative, spearheaded by artist and illustrator Eleanor Dobbs, was aimed at aspiring writers and artists, with the focus on creating work for children and young adults. There was a programme of events in celebration of the Platinum Jubilee of Her Majesty the Queen, including the return of the popular local food festival, for this year renamed 'Jubilita' and the completion of a John Lennon Street art mural at Landport tunnel.
Our video archive, culturetv.gi, continues to provide local entertainment to our community.

1425 In our continued efforts to promote the art galleries and local art and artists, school groups continue to visit as part of tours to the City Hall through the Mayor's Office, the Heritage Trust and other collaborators. A rededication of the National Art Gallery will be held in September to coincide with the 150th anniversary of the birth of Gustavo Bacarisas. We have also opened one of the vaults at GEMA to local artists and groups, with several successful exhibitions and other events taking place in this cultural heritage space over the last year.

We continue to support the Ministry for Sport in its summer and mid-term sports and leisure programmes, providing cultural initiatives.

1435 I am delighted to confirm that 2022 will see many events returning to our social and cultural calendar. These include the Gibraltar Fair, National Day celebrations at Casemates Square, the Christmas Festival of Lights and the Three Kings Cavalcade among others. We also had the usual annual programme of events and festivals, this including the Autumn and Spring Festival programme, New Year's celebrations online, art competitions, literary events and other events throughout last year. GCS has absorbed other cultural programmes, events and administrative duties that used to be co-ordinated by the Ministry. This includes the running of the Mayor's Office and organising events on behalf of the Ministry. This avoids duplication and allows experts to support the many groups and associations and better co-ordinate and develop cultural activities.

1440 The Cultural Organisations Register has been updated, keeping in line with child protection policy as directed by the Child Protection Committee and policies, ensuring that new cultural entity applications are properly vetted. In the last year we have ensured that most of the groups and individuals required have completed the safeguarding children courses. We will shortly be launching a Register of the Arts, which will contain data of individuals working within the cultural world in Gibraltar. The Safety Advisory Group continues to bring together key agencies, to ensure the safety of all events in our community. SAG provides support, guidance and advice to all event organisers whilst ensuring that they maintain a high standard of safety when considering or planning a specific event. I am currently engaged in a review of legislation appertaining to entertainment and entertainment licences, as the current regime is confusing to users and members of the public. The aim is to provide a new, more efficient process which will both encourage musical and other entertainment and at the same time protect the well-being of residents close to venues.

1450 Last year, on behalf of Government, GCS acquired 41 new artworks for the Government's art collection. This included purchases at auction and from private collections. Some special purchases that form part of Gibraltar's cultural heritage are a Gustavo Bacarisas portrait of his brother Horacio Bacarisas, a collection of nine works by Mario Finlayson and a work called The Kiss by Christian Hook.

The John Mackintosh Hall Library social media platform continues to generate and oversee content promoting related initiatives, storytelling sessions, school visits and literature. The Government has invested nearly £10,000 in the last year in the purchase of new books and the introduction of Borrowbox, a popular platform for the loaning of e-books and audiobooks. Storytelling sessions for young children at the John Mackintosh Hall Library continue, thanks to a group of volunteers who deliver these sessions. After tracking the use of the library by the public, we have introduced new opening hours, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., Monday to Friday. The reference room continues to be a popular resource for young professionals and students studying during term times in the afternoons. There is a great deal of collaboration, including exchange of books, with the Garrison Library and the Parasol Library of the University, as the three libraries work together to provide a better, more streamlined service overall, better providing for their own specific niches. The Mackintosh Hall Library makes it a point to have an extensive collection of books written by Gibraltarian authors, or books written on themes and subjects related to Gibraltar, to include military, history, social history, wildlife, flora and so on. This complete collection has been reviewed and catalogued to allow for ease of use.

The refurbishment and maintenance of all our current cultural facilities plays an important role in allowing us to support all cultural entities, groups and individuals, increasing their potential and striving towards the best possible standard of artistic practice. We continue with the refurbishment and maintenance programme for all our facilities to ensure we extend public participation in the arts. The Central Hall has been fully and extensively refurbished, restoring much of its heritage value, and fitted with a new stained-glass window. The Ince's Hall Theatre has had its air-conditioning upgraded, sewer system repaired and a lift installed. The John Mackintosh Hall has had its galleries upgraded, new equipment purchased, a hearing loop installed in a new area and general improvements made to a building that is now feeling its age. Works have also been carried out to the Gustavo Bacarisas Gallery and our historic City Hall, which I very happily share with His Worship the Mayor. These works have allowed us to display some of the original façades and ceilings which had been hidden for decades, while at the same time dealing with issues of water ingress and the like. We have also contributed towards lighting equipment for the Alameda Open-Air Theatre and a gallery hanging system at the secondary schools, which will allow them to exhibit works of art by students or visiting artists.

We must not forget the board and staff of the Retreat Centre, which has, over the past few years, been vital in our COVID response and is now looking after families seeking refuge from the war in Ukraine.

The Premises Unit continues, on behalf of the Ministry, to oversee cultural premises and estates. Works have been carried out in many of the estates, including the Retrenchment Block, Recreational Rooms, Wellington Front, Jumpers Bastion, Town Range and others. Many do not realise quite the extent of the work carried out by GCS on behalf of the very small team at the Ministry of Culture. Barely a day goes by without one, two or often more articles or stories in the media related to their vast amount of work, and much more goes unreported. I thank each and every one of them and was very proud to see their CEO, Seamus Byrne, receive a Governor's Award in recognition of his work and that of his team, especially during the pandemic, when they kept hard at work in keeping us entertained and ensuring that our rich and diverse cultural community continued to thrive.

In the coming year, the Budget will, of course, be tighter, and I am disappointed that I will not be able to fulfil all our plans, but we will not be stopped by this, and here I must once again acknowledge businesses, organisations and others who are making contributions to our culture through sponsorship or other means. Already planned for this year is a new international gourmet food festival that will provide a new and exciting event for Gibraltar. In September, as an addition to National Week celebrations, we will be holding a cultural event in London. This day will see a gathering of Gibraltarians who are placing our country on the map, working in the arts and the cultural scene in the UK. We will also, at the same time, be holding an art exhibition by Gibraltarian artists at the Bermondsey Project Space, organised jointly with the Lloyds Art Group in London.

1515 The JM Memorial Foundation, together with GCS, are overseeing the second part of a cultural exchange with Tangiers, with artists, musicians and performers from both cities taking part. These are superb opportunities to export our art and culture abroad. Much of this will be achieved through sponsorship, and once again I thank all those contributing.

1520 I cannot end my section on culture without paying tribute to our writers. Gibraltarian literature is an evolving reality. It is growing faster than ever and gaining ever more recognition on the international scene. Our poetry and short story competitions aim to support and encourage writers new and old, and this year will see new ways of encouraging and consolidating recognition of our literature, and not just through Literature Week.

1525 The Gibraltar Academy of Music and Performing Arts continues to develop and contribute to culture in Gibraltar, as do the many dance academies and schools, drama groups and musicians and their collectives, and we have the organisations such as the Fine Arts Association and Kitchen Studios in respect of the visual arts. Between them, hundreds of young and not so young are active in culture – thousands, if their families and friends are added. It is a huge lobby that deserves the support of this House, which brings me to what is, to me, the most exciting and most important project for Gibraltarian culture that we have seen for generations: the Gibraltar National Theatre and Cultural Hub at the John Mackintosh Hall. The way that culture has excelled in Gibraltar in recent decades, with internationally acclaimed artists and performers at the world’s best stages, the way that culture has captured the imagination of our young, makes it evident that they deserve a bigger and better performance space and a much bigger audience. Sadly, for the moment, and due to the COVID response, the Government will, itself, not be able to proceed with the project, but a group of supporters of the arts have formed the Gibraltar National Theatre Foundation, independent of Government, and with the support and participation of the John Mackintosh Educational Trust are working hard and successfully to make this a reality. Only last week, that great supporter of Gibraltar, Ruth Parasol, announced that the Parasol Foundation would contribute £1.5 million towards one of the four main elements of the project, the Gallery of Art. Kishin Alwani OBE of the Alwani Foundation has also contributed, and the very proactive Musicians’ Association of Gibraltar is actively fundraising for the project, too. The project will comprise a 1,000-seat theatre, a smaller 230-seat studio theatre, the Parasol Art Gallery and an expanded lending library, as well as the meeting rooms, cafeteria and other facilities that we have got used to at our beloved Mack Hall. It will be a revolution in culture and will be a centre for other activities as well, such as conferences, West End style productions, e-sports and even the much more mundane general election count and results. Most importantly, it will give our community the opportunity to perform in a real theatre such as we have not had in Gibraltar before. I want to thank His Excellency the Governor for his leadership in his work as patron of the Foundation, and the councillors and trustees of the John Mackintosh Educational Trust for their vision in being part of this landmark project. I wish it every success and look forward to opening night.

1550 Mr Speaker, if the year 2020 was the year when everything changed, 2021 and 2022 have been the years when humanity has been trying to understand what on earth is happening. I am not convinced that we have learnt the lessons that we should have learnt, and I fear that there are those in positions of influence elsewhere, as I said earlier, who are trying to use COVID and our reaction to it as a cover for their own agendas. Indeed, I referred earlier to some of the pressure elsewhere to reverse environmental progress. This, fortunately, is not happening in Gibraltar.

1560 The Department of Environment continues to be active in marine surveillance. In keeping with our policy of dynamic alignment with EU environmental directives, officers from the Department of the Environment continue to collect data on a wide range of marine descriptors. New monitoring programmes are also being developed, particularly in relation to micro-plastics, underwater noise and cetacean surveys using drones, to help better assess the state of the marine environment in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters. Further work into marine invasive species, such as the brown alga that is affecting our shores, will also be carried out, starting in July, as part of a UK Darwin Plus funded project aimed at enhancing, monitoring and prevention of invasive non-native species across UK Overseas Territories. Collaborative work being done by the

1565 Department of the Environment and the University of Gibraltar's Marine Science Masters Programme will feed into our Marine Spatial Plan, which I intend to publish as a consultation document later this year. Once again, the exceptional marine awareness and education work of the Nautilus Project has to be recognised in this context, along with the yearly marine clean-up 1570 efforts co-ordinated by the Environmental Safety Group and monitoring of seabird migration by GONHS. I thank the NGOs for their tremendous contribution overall.

Mr Speaker, as most of us are aware and the Deputy Chief Minister referred to earlier, this year was a difficult one in terms of waste management. Changes to the export process, as a result of the end of the Brexit transition period, caused transitional administrative delays that meant Gibraltar was unable to export its municipal waste for a number of weeks. I would like to thank 1575 my team at the Department of the Environment, as well as those at the Environmental Agency and Technical Services, who worked tirelessly for many weeks to ensure that we were able to continue to collect and store our waste while they worked to resolve issues with their UK and Spanish counterparts. They averted a crisis and the system is now working smoothly again. At a different scale, we will be increasing provision of bin space for refuse and recycling in Town with 1580 a view to improving the state of these areas, and we are working with businesses, the Chamber, the GFSB and the BID and with tenant bodies and others to improve the cleanliness of our urban areas.

The issue of sewage treatment is one which should finally see resolution this year. I have clearly stated the reasons outside our control for the delays, but I do understand that, justified as they 1585 are, there will be criticism. I can confirm that the legal process of closing the former sewage treatment plant tender is now under way, a process which became necessary as a result of Modern Water going into liquidation. Government is engaged in providing technical information to a number of potential bidders and the competitive process for finding a new operator is about to begin.

On air quality, the monitoring network recently experienced data losses due to ageing instrumentation. This was due to inability of the UK providers to service the equipment during COVID and the consequent backlog in their work. I am pleased to say that this is now virtually resolved. New analysers will replace the existing ones, which have been operational for more than 17 years. Within this replacement programme Gibraltar will now report reference standard 1595 measurements for PM10 and PM2.5 at both Rosia Road and Bleak House. This represents an increase in PM monitoring, providing data on both fine and coarse fractions of particulate matter at both roadside and background locations for the first time. The new instruments are also capable of near real-time data provision, which will enhance the public information service provided via the Gibraltar air quality website. The monitor at Witham's Road will be moved to Devil's Tower 1600 Road and two additional air quality mesh pods have been procured, which will supplement the three existing pods in providing indicative monitoring data at near real time. The North Mole power station is now also reporting emissions online. Nitrogen-dioxide concentrations remained consistent with the previous year. Annual means of 27 $\mu\text{g m}^{-3}$ at Rosia Road, 18 $\mu\text{g m}^{-3}$ at Bleak House and 20 $\mu\text{g m}^{-3}$ at Witham's Road were all well below the European limit value of 40 $\mu\text{g m}^{-3}$.
1605 All other pollutants also met European directive limit values.

We finally achieved World Health Organization standards for particulates when new WHO guidelines were published in 2021 with more stringent targets. These will be exceeded in the next few years, as they will be across the world, and we have to continue to work hard to achieve them.
Continued effort elsewhere towards net-zero carbon emissions will have co-benefits for air quality 1610 also, particularly if these include measures on road traffic abatement and green shipping, including the safeguards included in the new agreement with the future operators of GibDock.
We will also be seeing more progress on solar power, as both private initiatives and Government projects progress.

The electrification of the vehicle fleet is an important part of the Climate Change Strategy and the move to better air quality. We are already seeing an increase in the number of EVs being 1615 purchased and there is strong pressure from the industry, which is moving in this direction

globally. We are responding to this with an increase in the number of publicly available charging points. In December, the charge points on floor 6 in Midtown car park were replaced by Plug-N-Go, a Gibraltar-based company who own and operate the hardware and location under agreement with the Government. Next, the old charge points in the park and ride in Devil's Tower Road will be replaced and operational under the same platform, and both of these locations are future-proofed to match the growth of EV adoption in Gibraltar. In July, they will be adding charging points at Europa Point. They are also liaising with the Taxi Association and Government to start adding further charge points for taxi use, which in turn will assist the rollout of taxis to meet the EV-only taxi purchase requirement from January 2024. The usage of all these points will be monitored to ensure that we can continue to provide new locations to meet increasing demand. Other EV initiatives are also on the way.

Mr Speaker, the Environmental Agency continues to advise me in many areas and continues to operate a 24-hour on-call service, which saw environmental health officers engage in 229 callouts in 2021, and to date for 2022 there have been a total of 110 callouts.

The Department continues to work very closely with colleagues across Government under the direction of the Deputy Chief Minister on all issues related to Brexit, such as contingency planning on food imports, and exports of waste in the event of a no-deal scenario.

The Agency also continues to make a significant contribution to the Government's anti-dog fouling campaign. In 2021, 156 DNA samples were collected, with 16 fixed penalty notices issued to offenders. Thus far in 2022 they have collected 78 samples, with 12 FPNs being issued. Officers from the Agency and the Department also carry out patrols, during which they check that dogs being walked on the public highway are duly licensed and registered. During 2021, the Agency carried out 32 patrols and checked 95 dogs for registration. So far this year, the Agency has carried out 22 patrols, checked 66 dogs and issued 12 fines.

The Agency is also the competent authority for Control of Major Accident Hazards (COMAH). This year, the Agency will host the HSE inspector visit to carry out a mechanical integrity inspection as part of the bi-annual inspection regime of the North Mole power station.

The Environmental Agency continues to monitor the quality of our bathing waters, where standards have been improving over the past few years. Five of our bathing waters are now classed as excellent, with Western Beach improving and continuing to be classified as good rather than sufficient, which was the case in previous years. In the harbour we have, so far, not seen the problems of bacteria in the water that we had some years back. There are challenges in relation to turbidity from the Coaling Island site, and we are working hard to resolve these.

This year, the spring storms caused a great deal of damage throughout our beaches, considerably more than in previous years. This will become more regular, of course, as a result of climate change. Our beaches were ready for the summer, thanks to the great efforts of the pertinent sections of the Department of the Environment and Technical Services. After this year's storms, Camp Bay saw the removal of close to 250 tonnes of rocks and debris that had been washed ashore. Flotsam and detritus in large amounts had to be removed from Eastern Beach and Sandy Bay, while the entire car park and sections of the access road at Western Beach had to be cleared of accumulated seaweed. Most of this was carried out in record time, within a week, in time to have the beach available to the public for the Easter break.

Further to this, the storms caused structural damage to areas of flooring, railings, balustrades, concrete tables and bin pods at Camp Bay. Extensive remedial works involved structural works to affected areas of flooring, repairs to the boat-store garage doors, the replacing of damaged sections of railings and balustrades and the replacing of no fewer than 25 concrete tables. At Little Bay, the storms left a huge accumulation of rocks on the shoreline, requiring heavy machinery to re-profile the whole area and make it safe. Catalan Bay and Eastern and Western Beaches had their concrete walkways lifted by the wave action and shifted, leaving them in complete disarray and unsafe. These have been removed and re-laid once the beaches have been re-profiled. At Eastern Beach in particular, the re-profiling operation has been more laborious than ever before, with heavy plant involved in shifting hundreds of tonnes of accumulated excess sand from the 1670 southern half of the beach to the northern end, where the beach had been practically eradicated by the storms. This exposed the wall foundations and the fenced perimeter of the Airport tunnel.

Emergency works also had to be carried out to partially remove an old airfield storm drain that had been left exposed by the continuous loss of beach sand and posing a serious safety hazard.
General yearly preparatory works at our beaches have, obviously, also been carried out.
Improvements in the Lifeguard Service have been noticeable, thanks to a great deal of training 1675 and improved supervision.

The Cemetery Authority is undertaking a number of major initiatives aimed at improving the management and use of the cemetery. Cremation has grown over recent years and is now the preferred choice of three-quarters of the population. A columbarium for the interment of ashes is therefore considered a necessity for our community, and one will be provided.

1680 I remain committed to planting trees and creating green, open spaces for the public. There have been 185 trees planted since autumn 2020, and in fact the challenge has been finding suitable new areas for new tree planting. Having said that, further new trees were planted at Red Sands Road, and of course in the now completed Campion Park. New green areas have been created at Europa Point and, with the added removal of alien invasive species, habitat for native 1685 plants has increased. We will continue to do our best to provide better green spaces that improve our urban environment and increase the quality of life of our residents.

The Gibraltar Botanic Gardens continue to develop and excel in their objectives. Current scientific projects include research on the cactus flora of the Caribbean and invasive species in other UK Overseas Territories. The Alameda's collection in its nursery of plants from throughout 1690 the world, with an ever-growing emphasis on water-wise succulent plants, increasingly attracts enthusiasts and experts from other parts of the world eager to see and study this well-documented and curated collection. The Gardens are indeed considered a centre of excellence for research on such plants, and Gardens staff continue to make discoveries and describe new species. These exciting scientific discoveries are in lockstep with the annual improvements that 1695 are made to the Gardens' aesthetics – as regular users keep remarking, the Alameda looks better with each passing year – even better than when I was in charge! Not least, this is due to the very hard and enthusiastic work of the grounds staff. What is more, some of these same plants that form the backbone of its research efforts are being used to develop planting beds afresh, and these will soon be accompanied by new interpretation, as part of the Botanic Gardens' mission to 1700 educate. Pride of place in the Gardens' education activities goes to its extremely popular children's education programme. Work on a bespoke education area will come to completion in the autumn of 2022, thanks entirely to the contribution of a number of very generous donors. Finally, the Gibraltar Botanic Gardens continue to propagate Gibraltar's special plants for conservation purposes. This year, the stock of the Gibraltar Campion originating from the Alameda Gardens has 1705 been planted in the Nature Reserve as part of a long-term plan that began in the 1990s, when the species, then thought extinct, was rediscovered and rescued from certain extinction when it was propagated at the Alameda. The Gibraltar Campion, which is virtually extinct in the wild, can only recover via a conservation programme such as this.

Mr Speaker, visitor numbers to the Upper Rock component of the Nature Reserve are once 1710 again on the rise following the hard times witnessed during the peak of the pandemic. In keeping with our commitment to increase revenue, the entrance fee for non-residents to the Upper Rock was increased earlier this year following a process of discussion with stakeholders. This was a reasonable step to take given the recent investment carried out in the Upper Rock. The Skywalk, Windsor Bridge and the Tovey Cottage Interpretation Centre, to name but some examples, are all 1715 helping attract and improve the visitor experience for locals and tourists alike. In parallel, work on the day-to-day management of the Nature Reserve continues in earnest and new measures are programmed to take place this year, such as the creation of open areas to favour biodiversity, improved picnic areas, and signage. I opened a new Marine Interpretation Centre at Europa Point just over a week ago, and plans are also in place for a new raptor reintroduction programme, as 1720 well as other exciting initiatives.

1725 The yellow-legged gull is perhaps the most recognisable species of bird in Gibraltar. It is an opportunistic species that does exceptionally well around humans. Unfortunately, this also means that it causes problems for us. The population of gulls in Gibraltar needs to be controlled because they have an ecological impact on habitats and other species, can be a public health problem and, most importantly, they constitute a risk for aircraft. I highlighted last year that the long-term trend of yellow-legged gulls in Gibraltar is one of decline. Further to this, the excellent work done by the Avian Control Unit ensures that these gulls will never again be as abundant as they were during the 1990s and early 2000s. Moreover, parent gulls are aggressive when they are nesting and can be a nuisance when nesting on or around people's homes in the urban environment. Again, the Avian Control Unit provides an excellent service removing this nuisance for people. I know of no other place in the world with such a service.

1730 The GONHS Bird of Prey Unit continues its excellent work in rescue, rehabilitation, release and tracking of injured and exhausted birds of prey. They do excellent conservation work and are also very involved in education on migrating birds and their preservation. Their wider conservation work includes the breeding and release of Barbary partridges in conjunction with the Department of the Environment. The fruits that this incredibly successful programme have borne are plain to see: Barbary partridges are more common in Gibraltar than at any other time in recent memory and members of the public frequently have very close encounters with them in the Nature Reserve. This surely serves as a model for conservation programmes in Gibraltar and beyond.

1740 This year, as the tourists returned, the Macaque Management Team has been having to deal with problems of old, with heavy concentrations of tourists resulting in negative changes in behaviour of the macaques. In order to help deal with this, we now have a full-time wildlife warden to help with issues of interaction between tour operators, tourists and macaques. Incursions of monkeys into urban areas remains controlled, albeit slightly higher since tourism started to increase and resulted in increased disturbance of the macaques. This is not due to population growth, as macaque numbers remain static thanks to extensive contraception carried out by the Gibraltar Veterinary Clinic. Blood testing of the macaques this year has shown that they do not carry any zoonotic diseases that can be transmitted to humans. However, this is always a possibility, as macaques can catch human diseases and then pass them back, so that the now legal provision to not touch the macaques remains as relevant as ever.

1750 Mr Speaker, I will now turn to heritage matters. The last year brought with it financial constraints, and the coming year will again see reduced funds available. Despite this, the Ministry for Heritage, together with all other heritage stakeholders, has continued and will continue to work diligently to protect and enhance our heritage.

1755 The Heritage and Antiquities Advisory Council continues to advise me on all matters relating to heritage and is proving to be an invaluable asset. Last year, a subcommittee of the Council was established in order to produce a heritage vision for Gibraltar. The draft vision is now almost complete and will be presented shortly. Parliamentary reports on the Council's activities will also be laid, soon, in this place. Heritage-sensitive private properties will soon be listed in the schedules.

1760 After 50 years of neglect, the 9.2-inch gun barrel, carriage and pedestal that was once at Levant Battery has been removed from the Metalrok Eco Park in Flint Road and transported to a holding and restoration area at Brewery Crusher for future display at Europa Point. The Ministry for Heritage also completed the restoration and transfer of the last two 25-pounder QF field guns in Gibraltar from the Gibraltar Regiment, which is now on display at the 100-Ton Gun visitor facility. While on this theme, the Ministry for Heritage, the Gibraltar Heritage Trust and Alabare – a UK-based charity – have been involved in the restoration of Lord Airey's Battery, an iconic asset located at the top of the Rock.

1770 I am also pleased to announce that the Ministry for Heritage website, which we launched last year, has proved very useful and successful due to the large amount of information available. Heritage enthusiasts and professionals locally and from heritage institutions abroad request information regularly. An entire new section, with guidance notes aimed at applicants who need 1775 to provide information with any planning applications and its implications for cultural heritage, has been added. The key message to all potential applicants is to seek advice at the earliest opportunity, as safeguarding our cultural heritage does not mean preventing development or sustainable change. It means managing that change in order to retain and protect significant heritage places, sites or objects which are important to our community.

1780 The Ministry for Heritage, in collaboration with the Upper Rock Team, have placed 11 new interpretation panels at the City Under Siege exhibition, which contains new content and design that will enhance the visitor experience. I would like to remind Members of the House that in another collaborative effort between the Ministry for Heritage, the Gibraltar National Museum, Technical Services and GJBS, we have started restoring the Convent façade. Works are progressing rapidly under the guidance of the Gibraltar National Museum Conservator. I am also happy to report that the restoration of Southport Gates, the Tower of Homage and the façade of the future
1785 St Mary's Lower Primary School will also commence in the foreseeable future. Phase I of the restoration of the Town Range bakery ovens has now been completed.

Another unseen but fundamental part of the work undertaken by the Ministry for Heritage is its archaeological supervision through watching briefs. All developments are regularly supervised by the Government Archaeologist. These include Orange Bastion, North Gorge and the former 1790 Casino development among many others. The former TOC-H site immediately adjacent to Southport Gates will also be supervised in this way. It is, therefore, important to note that expert advice on all heritage-sensitive matters relating to developments through the planning system continues, as well as educational outreach via schools and youth organisations. The close working relationship the Ministry for Heritage has with other heritage stakeholders such as the National 1795 Museum, the Heritage Trust and the Garrison Library, as well as with other departments such as Town Planning and Technical Services, ensures that heritage-sensitive work is undertaken to the highest standards.

The close working relationship specifically with the Gibraltar Heritage Trust continues and is, indeed, going from strength to strength. The mutual support that now exists between the Trust 1800 and the Ministry on day-to-day work allows projects to continue unimpeded. Rolling projects such as the tampion project, the Artillery Park, and other ad hoc repair and renewal projects are a few examples. The Witham's Cemetery was formally presented just a few weeks ago and proves the Trust's commitment to practical conservation, and the Fortress of Gibraltar Group continues to give support in the form of historical knowledge and resources for works related to Gibraltar's 1805 fortifications.

In the Gibraltar Garrison Library we have seen that the determination of the small library team has shone throughout. Not only did they keep their day to day going, through the establishment of online services, during lockdown, but have continued to do so, engaging with international 1810 research enquiries, those from Gibraltar and, indeed, direct footfall enquiries, which are increasing. The Garrison Library has continued to build capacity over this last year and I feel sure that part of this is due to the fact that they have a dynamic social media presence now reaching almost 11,000 people. By way of offering an example of how this has worked out, the Garrison Library team has been approached by CILIP, the library and information association in the UK, to present a virtual tour of the Library, which is the among the most popular offered by that 1815 organisation. (A Member: Hear, hear.) The reinvigorated board of the Library, which I have the honour to chair, has most certainly ensured that the Garrison Library more and more becomes an integral part of our community.

Mr Speaker, I am delighted to report that the activities at the Gibraltar National Museum are now back to normal. In fact, this May, we were all able to enjoy the Museum's open day, the first 1820 since 2019.

The Calpe Conference programme continues its natural process of recovery. This conference will be, once again, a truly international one. This one is going to be particularly significant for me personally, as it commemorates the work of one of the most inspirational characters of my own formative years. Reginald Moreau at Oxford University was the leading light in the study of bird 1825 migration between Europe and Africa and he wrote a seminal book on the subject 50 years ago.

So, Calpe is bringing together some of the world's leading specialists to discuss progress in this field in the last 50 years. It is highly appropriate that this should happen in Gibraltar, where Europe meets Africa, and I have to say that my inaugural speech at the event is something I am particularly 1830 looking forward to, as I will make reference to the importance of the work of Gibraltar-based naturalists and scientists in the study of bird migration.

The work at Gorham's Cave also continues to return to normality. This year we will have two visiting teams, from Leiden University in the Netherlands and Liverpool John Moores University in the UK. Excavations have commenced and will continue until mid-August. One of the main targets will be the exciting new chamber that was revealed in Vanguard Cave last year, a space that had 1835 been sealed for over 40,000 years.

I am pleased to report that last month I officially launched a new gallery dedicated to the Pillars of Hercules, a wonderful display of our heritage from the classical period and a testament to the richness of the material that we have from that period.

1840 Mr Speaker, I move, now, to education. Our children have emerged from the depths of the pandemic affected but resilient and their teachers advise me that educationally they have, by and large, made up for lost time, but clearly there will be residual effects. The isolating effect of the lockdowns has had an impact on children's socialisation, in particular. This, together with the trauma experienced by families, has had and continues to have long-lasting repercussions in the lives of the children and young people in our community. Although children and young people are 1845 remarkably resilient, school staff have been extra mindful of all learners' needs as we continue to emerge from the grasp of the pandemic, and all in our schools have been working hard to restore normality in teaching and learning – whatever normality is.

One of the most important areas under my responsibility is, of course, that of special educational needs and disabilities. I am pleased to say that one notable project that we have been 1850 able to complete is the new home for St Martin's School. After the delays caused by the difficulties the construction industry faced during COVID, the start of this academic year saw St Martin's pupils and staff move into their new school building. This fantastic purpose-built school has enabled us to offer a wider range of learning experiences for our pupils. In addition to a larger and more bespoke learning environment, the new school building has a greater range of therapeutic 1855 opportunities to support our pupils' skill development, including rebound therapy and hydrotherapy. All staff at St Martin's have recently received training on manual handling. A number of GHA therapists and key St Martin's School staff were also trained in hydrotherapy. This provision will be up and running in the school very shortly, following extensive planning with other agencies including the GHA and GSLA. Hydrotherapy utilises the properties of warm water to 1860 provide an effective mode of treatment and exercise for people with physical and sensory disabilities. The children who use this facility will benefit from the many significant, evidence-based benefits of this type of therapy.

The trend we have noticed over the past few years, of an increase in the number of pupils with special educational needs, is continuing. In fact, the number of pupils in St Martin's School and in 1865 our learning support facilities (LSF) has increased significantly in comparison with previous years.
This current academic year, we had a greater number of pupils starting in our Early Birds nursery than we had ever seen previously, and this coming September we will have a higher number of pupils moving from Early Birds into reception at St Martin's School than we have ever had. We will, of course, be ready to meet their needs. The outreach programme from St Martin's School 1870 into our LSFs continues across all sectors. We also have a small number of pupils who are on an in-reach programme from our LSFs into St Martin's School. All these pupils benefit from opportunities to further develop on their learning journey. By the end of this year, all schools will have received dyslexia training following the Made By Dyslexia pledge signed by the Chief Minister in September 2019. Moreover, electronic dyslexia screening for all our current year 3 pupils will 1875 have been completed. Our commitment to a larger complement of special needs learning support assistants (SNLSA) will help our schools to support pupils with additional needs. Both SNLSAs and teaching staff continue to show great levels of care, dedication and commitment to ensure the provision we offer our pupils is of the highest possible level.

1880 The Department of Education continues to focus on pupil well-being, a hugely important and core area of a child's educational journey. There is recognition of the importance of early intervention to prevent the escalation of mental health concerns and help build happy, healthy young people ready to learn, who can achieve their potential in all areas of their lives, not just the academic. The Department works closely with numerous other agencies, NGOs and charities to enhance this vital area. The School Counselling Service continues to support our learners with their emotional well-being. The team constitutes four people giving one-to-one support to learners in all sectors, primary through to secondary, including the College. The team also plays an important role in liaising with and supporting parents of their clients. Likewise, they advise the teachers, giving them tools to better support the children and young people in their care. Counsellors have also played an important role in staff training, including bereavement training.

1890 Our manifesto commitment to increase the complement of counsellors and, indeed, educational psychologists, has been set back but remains a commitment which, as has been said in answers to questions here, we intend to fulfil during the lifetime of this Parliament. Schools have been proactive in continuing to develop children and young people's emotional well-being. They have engaged in a large number of initiatives which aim to develop a child's emotional well-being – resilience through sport, buddy benches and friendship corners, and well-being days, to name just a few. Continued professional development has also focused on training to develop skills and knowledge to continue enhancing children and young people's emotional well-being.

1895

There continues to be a growing number of children in our education system who have been impacted by trauma, children who have a high number of adverse childhood experiences. Some of these children are in residential care, some are still living at home, and others spend time in and out of prison. The school environment can be a challenging place for these children, causing high levels of anxiety in the pupils themselves, staff and other pupils as well. Education has endeavoured to address this in a number of ways. The TLC continues to provide additional support for our most vulnerable who are unable to engage in mainstream education. It also provides a base for a bereavement group and a youth group for children with additional needs. One-to-one support for young people in the prison system identifies pupils to help them re-engage with mainstream schooling. Approximately 400 members of staff across disciplines will have received safeguarding training this academic year alone. Over 1,100 members of staff have received training since September 2018. Education continues to work closely with the Care Agency, the RGP and the GHA to engage processes to support vulnerable pupils and families, as well as collaborative work to devise strategy and work towards improvement of services for our most vulnerable pupils. Numerous school-based projects initiated by teachers, and those involving NGOs, charities and outside agencies, have aimed to support our most vulnerable, to increase their focus, address self-esteem, motivation and emotional regulation.

1900

1910

Educators need to be the best versions of themselves in order to support learners and work to their best ability, at times in very stressful circumstances, both personal and professional. School-led initiatives have taken place, sometimes with the engagement of NGOs. Education staff in schools and the advisory team continue to liaise with the Government Well-being Team to support staff well-being, so that they are able to deliver the best education possible to our children and young people.

1915

1920

In keeping with my commitment at COP26, schools continue to promote sustainable practices in school and work towards encompassing all priority climate change objectives within the curriculum. They continue to employ educational initiatives in schools, to develop understanding and awareness around climate change. ClimACT Schools Gibraltar, an Education staff action group, works to promote and share good practice across all schools. We are confident that our children and young people will act as change agents within their own families and communities, encouraging more mindful choices which help reduce the impact of climate change.

1925

1930 Mr Speaker, scholarship numbers in the 2021-22 academic year were 804 mandatory undergraduate scholarships, 176 postgraduate scholarships and 85 discretionary scholarships. We currently have 1,065 students in higher education despite the challenges that the pandemic has 1935 thrown at our economy – something to make the community proud. We will, this year, continue to provide for all the mandatory scholarships, which will likely mean we will have more students in higher education than ever. We will need to continue to be selective in those under 18 and others going through the discretionary route. This is, of course, no reflection on the students, and I ask young people and families to be patient, to look at alternative sources of funds and constructive ways of using the time available should they not be successful.

On learning with digital technologies, all our upper and lower primary schools have now embarked on our digital teaching and learning initiative. The rollout to secondary schools which began prior to the disruption caused by COVID has now also been completed. We are targeting 1940 the next academic year to bring the Gibraltar College into the initiative while continuing to support our colleagues at St Martin's. This financial year we have rolled out an additional 700 devices in support of this initiative. Each primary school now has access to a cart of iPads in each year group, vastly increasing the usage of these devices to support learning and teaching in our schools.

The September 2021 Year 10 cohort was significant. It was the first one ever in Gibraltar to 1945 benefit from the equalisation of the Key Stage 4 curriculum. This was so overdue, and I am very pleased that all our young people will now have equal opportunities at this stage. Our first mixed-gender cohort in Bayside and Westside were both offered the same range of courses for their GCSE/Level 2 journey, and our Year 10 learners commenced on the courses of their choice in September of this academic year. September 2021 also saw the first cohort of learners 1950 undertaking a Level 3 BTEC in Music Performance. This course is being offered by the Gibraltar College, in partnership with GAMPA, and is a model that we will be following in order to be able to offer more vocational courses.

Our teaching and learning initiative continues to develop digital skills in young learners, and some of the learning that is being demonstrated by our young learners is breathtaking. Other 1955 developments in this area will be announced soon. The Deputy Chief Minister has already mentioned one, which in fact cuts across two of my areas of responsibility, heritage and education: the Northern Defences and the Mount, two remarkable sites from a historical and environmental point of view, but tantalising in their potential to engage our younger generations.
As the Deputy Chief Minister has said, from September we are aiming to create a whole new 1960 educational programme which unleashes the creativity and ability of our students. The Department, together with the College School of Business, have been developing this concept during the last year.

This academic year, the Government significantly increased the complement of teachers by 97 new members of staff and the complement of SNLSAs by 122, recognising the importance of 1965 investing in the education of our children and young people. The commitment to the increase in staffing has been made further to recent developments in our educational system, such as the opening of morning nursery placements, the provision of LSFs in two additional schools, the introduction of new vocational pathways and the equalisation of curriculum opportunities in both secondary schools further to the realignment of the key stages, not to mention co-education from 1970 Year 7, something which we now take so much for granted. The impact of these systemic developments, together with larger pupil cohorts and the growth in the number of pupils overall and in those with additional needs, were carefully considered and directly informed the commitment to increasing the teacher and SNLSA staffing complements.

The Department of Education, including its senior staff in all schools, together with colleagues 1975 in other Departments, agencies and authorities, have worked hard over the course of this academic year to establish a more robust and meaningful CPD programme for teachers. In addition to a wide range of individual, school-specific INSET foci which have taken place throughout the course of the year, the Department gathered together en masse on 29th April for an Education-wide INSET day which saw over 750 staff from all Gibraltar Government Education

1980 establishments gathered at the Bayside-Westside complex for the first full interschool INSET training day ever organised. The Department has a very large team of staff and I value the 1985 professional contributions of all of the roles within each school. It was a fantastic day which will have planted many seeds to be developed further in the future and which benefited tremendously from the wealth of knowledge, experience, insight and enthusiasm of all Education staff members, and will be built on in the next academic year.

The Department of Education has reviewed and revised the catchment areas for Government schools, with a view to ensuring that these are as geographically appropriate as possible. This exercise has also been conducted to ensure that pupil distributions across schools provide the 1990 best possible pupil-staff ratios. A powerful and versatile geographic information system, developed and managed by the Department of Environment, has been used to inform this process for all nursery enrolments for September this year, and, moving forward, will allow the Department to manage catchment areas in a more dynamic manner ahead of each new academic year. Although the changes this year are not too extensive, the amendments made will have 1995 lasting significant impact. The move to more geographically appropriate catchment areas will help to further define and distinguish each school's community in a manner that makes more sense physically. This will help the children and young people from a social perspective as well as facilitate closer links between each school's location and the catchment area. The changes will, hopefully, also help make school drop-offs easier and encourage families to walk to school. This 2000 further supports the Government's move towards a more child-friendly city and reducing the use of motor vehicles. Gibraltar has changed a great deal in the last decade and centres of population are changing. We have been considering these changes for some years now, but the trauma that we suffered through the pandemic delayed the process. The new catchment areas better reflect the current situation and should also have benefits for our environmental agenda.

We continue to develop the Education website and online services via education.gov.gi. The 2005 Department has now fully digitised and streamlined the pupil enrolment and scholarship processes in order to better serve the public. The website also includes information on accessing the educational psychologists and other support mechanisms offered by the Department.

We are currently overseeing the construction of three new schools, with the bespoke buildings for St Mary's, Governor's Meadow and Bishop Fitzgerald all due to be completed in time for 2010 opening in September 2023. Plans are proceeding also towards a new Gibraltar College and Hebrew Primary School, with improvements planned for those schools which will stay at their current sites, namely both St Joseph's schools and St Paul's, where we have recently opened a new wing and forest zone. We are close to having achieved something that no one could have imagined, the virtually complete renewal of almost the whole of our education real estate.

2015 There are many other plans aimed at diversifying and widening the opportunities available to our young and ensuring that education helps make them fulfil their dreams, take their place in the community here or in the wider world, and so I look forward to taking on more and more challenges and working with all in Education to continue to progress on things that have needed fixing for a long time, but more importantly to achieve new and better ways of helping our young 2020 people to be better than us.

And so to the University of Gibraltar. There is quite a lot to say this year, precisely because this creation of this Government is doing so incredibly well. To date, the University has enrolled over 500 students during the academic year ending 31st July 2022 into a combination of academic programmes, professional and continuing education courses, training certificates and language 2025 courses. The University's portfolio of academic programmes continues to grow. This past year saw the University offering undergraduate degrees in business, nursing and maritime science, complemented by a range of access courses and postgraduate degrees in research in education, business and marine science. Students enrolled on these core academic programmes have increased from 30 in the year 2018-19 and 134 in 2020-21 to 189 in 2021-22. The latter are from 2030 28 nationalities. There is now a diverse student community residing at the Europa Suites accommodation. Graduates of the University are also increasing, with 21 graduating in December 2020, 38 in 2021 and an anticipated 78, including three local PhD students, graduating in December this year.

2035 Following extensive consultation with industry and completion of a rigorous UK validation process during this past year, the University will offer a further two new degrees from September 2022: a BSc (Hons) in Computing and Entrepreneurship, which is carried out through a collaborative arrangement with the Gibraltar Digital Skills Academy, itself doing excellent work; and a Masters in Education developed in consultation with the Department of Education. During the upcoming academic year, the University will be working with industry to develop a number of 2040 other new academic programmes, including an MSc in Advanced Health Practice, an MSc in Contemporary Healthcare, one in Environmental Science and Climate Change, a BSc Adult Nursing International Top-up and an MSc in Psychology.

In addition to its academic programmes, the University has provided a range of professional continuing education and short courses. In March 2022 the Professional Development 2045 department launched its Remote Gambling online course which replaced the Responsible Gambling online course. This was in response to industry feedback and relevant updates in the industry. In May this year, a Professional Diploma of Competence in Financial Services was launched. The first of its kind, this cross-sector qualification, which was developed in direct consultation with the Regulator and each industry sector, will serve as an industry standard.

2050 During the past year, the University Maritime Academy launched its first two technical courses, including one for Customs and another for Police, Environment and Customs. In May this year, the Academy, in spite of a post-COVID critical global shortage of maritime cadet sea placements, was able to source sea time placements for all the University's maritime cadets.

The Centre of Excellence in Responsible Gaming, a multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary 2055 research institute that aims to study the etiological factors of addictive disorders and contribute to their effective prevention and treatment, was officially opened in March by my hon. Friend Albert Isola and myself. In addition to publishing almost 40 academic research papers this past year, the Centre has also assisted with the redesign of the University Responsible Gaming course.

In November 2021, the University underwent an international quality review by the UK Quality 2060 Assurance Agency (QAA) and was subsequently found to have met all 10 higher education quality standards. As a result, the University was awarded global accreditation by the QAA. Achieving this milestone only six years after its creation through the work of the then Minister for Education, the Hon. Gilbert Licudi, is a testament to the sheer hard work and commitment shown by the entire University team, as well as the ongoing support of the University Board of Governors and the 2065 Academic Board and the Government.

The current University strategic plan ends on 31st July this year with the accompanying final progress report anticipated to be published shortly thereafter. Development of a new strategic plan for the academic years ending 2023-26 is under way.

In spite of extremely challenging targets and the constraints posed by the ability of 2070 international students to travel, the September 2021 recruitment campaign was successful, with tuition fee income increasing from £488,682 in the year ended 31st July 2019 to £1.3 million in the year ended July 2021. Moreover, tuition income is estimated to reach £1.8 million by July this year. This growth reflects the University's ability to recruit increasing numbers of local, regional and international students attracted by its quality student experience. As a result of increasing 2075 student numbers, the University continues to work towards a much greater degree of self-financing, with the proportion of income, excluding donations, provided by the Government subvention steadily decreasing from 86% in 2017 to a forecast 36% by the end of July this year. This positive progress towards much greater self-financing is expected to continue, with the current Government annual subvention again being significantly reduced by £250,000 to 2080 £1 million, representing a reduction of 20% compared with the previous year. The University has to be congratulated for its increasing financial stability.

The University is now also operating from its North Wing, the old St Christopher's School.

2085 In December last year, the University held the formal ceremony to celebrate the installation of the Chancellor, Sir Lindsay Hoyle, and the Vice-Chancellor, Prof. Catherine Bachleda, together with two ceremonies to celebrate graduates from the BBA, MBA, PGCE and MSc marine.

2090 With regard to my legislative agenda, I have on the Order Paper, to proceed later this year, a Bill for an Act to create the Gibraltar National Park and another to prohibit the fur trade. Work is proceeding so as to be able to commence the Medicinal Cannabis Act, as well as on subsidiary legislation to the Climate Change Act including the setting up of the Climate Action Fund and the Near Zero Delivery Body. The updated Education Act and the new Cultural Act and a revised Entertainment Act are in the final stages of stakeholder consultation. Improvements to the Heritage and Antiquities Act are being worked on and the Environmental Agency is advising me on the updating of the Food Hygiene Regulations, as well as the introduction of allergens legislation. An Environmental Governance Act, a revised Garrison Library Act and a number of Acts 2095 which subdivide and modernise the archaic and voluminous Public Health Act, including one on waste, are also in preparation.

As I conclude, Mr Speaker, I want to congratulate Mr Kishin Alwani, an outstanding contributor to the arts, for his OBE in the Queen's Birthday Honours, and also Lewis Stagnetto of the Nautilus Project for the award of the British Empire Medal in this year's New Year's Honours list for his 2100 environmental work, as well as Paulette Finlayson-Napoli for the Gibraltar Ward, and also, as mentioned earlier, Seamus Byrne for the Governor's Award, the latter two for their work in culture. I want to mention the retirement of Dr Terence Ocana as head teacher of St Joseph's Upper Primary School after many years' service to education; of Paul Origo – whom I have worked with very closely from well before I became a Minister – as Town Planner; as well as of Jessica 2105 Alecia, who retired this year after many years' service to successive Environment Ministers as PA; and Sue Davies of the World Heritage Office, who has been instrumental in the work related to our World Heritage Site.

Finally, Mr Speaker, as ever, I wish to express my thanks to my personal staff and, of course, to my heads of departments and CEOs and their staff for their hard work at all hours and every 2110 day, and for their continued support; to all the schools, who make me feel so welcome on all my visits; to all the staff in my Departments and the agencies and contractors that work to them, as well as to the GEA, LPS, GSLA and Technical Services, the many departments I work with day to day; to NASUWT, UNITE and GGCA for their constructive work; to all the NGOs, associations, schools and academies, environmental, cultural, educational, who are so committed to what they
2115 believe in, often working as volunteers, for being committed, honest and reasonable in pursuing their aims; to all those many citizens appointed to voluntary boards, working groups and committees for which I am responsible; and to those in other Departments with whom I have regular contact – such as the staff at No. 6, including the Offices of the Chief Minister, the Deputy Chief Minister, the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary, the Chief Technical Officer and Civil Contingencies, and at the Gibraltar Law Offices – for always being there when I need them. Thanks
2120 also to you, Mr Speaker, and your staff, and to the Chief Minister, Deputy Chief Minister and colleagues. And finally, to His Excellency the Governor, Sir David Steel, for the genuine interest he shows in the work of the different parts of my Ministry and for his constant encouragement.

2125 Mr Speaker, we live in a blessed community. We have so much to enjoy, so much to be grateful for. Let us never forget that, and continue to live proud of our homeland and able to withstand any difficulties that may come our way. In doing all of this, I, too, commend the Bill to the House.
(Banging on desks)

2130 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Steven Linares.

Minister for Housing, Employment, Youth and Sport (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, this is my 22nd Budget speech and my 10th as a Government Minister. I will start by giving a synopsis of what has been achieved over the last year and explain some of the things we intend to do this coming year in relation to my areas of responsibility, these being industrial relations, housing, employment, youth and sport.

I would first like to address developments in what is my newest ministerial responsibility, that of industrial relations. On 4th April this year, following a reshuffle of ministerial duties, my hon. Friend the Chief Minister transferred to me the responsibility for industrial relations. I was humbled by that decision. We all know how critical smooth industrial relations are to the functioning of the public sector. We also know how central such co-operation with the unions remains to the values of this Government that I am so proud to represent. As such, I am grateful and privileged to discharge this new role on behalf of HM Government of Gibraltar.

My own background should serve me well. I refer to my experience in tackling industrial relations matters from a union perspective as a former president of the Teachers' Association and of the Gibraltar Trades Council. The latter comprised the three local unions at the time. To this end I have already expressed to the trade unions my desire to work in partnership with them to tackle issues that concern the public sector. At times we will totally agree, and on other occasions less so. However, all our conversations will be held in an air of cordiality and fairness. The goal will be better terms and conditions within the budgetary resources available. The well-being of our workforce will be uppermost in my mind.

Although I have just assumed responsibility for this role, hon. Members may have seen that a number of issues have already been dealt with. In relation to the Customs dispute, my office has been involved in addressing concerns that the GGCA and Unite the Union have had in relation to the incorporation of the Marine section into existing rotation agreements. I am happy to say that the GGCA, who have negotiating rights for this department, agreed to the proposals developed by the acting Collector of Customs. This happened in close collaboration with my Industrial Relations officials and with me. It led to the lifting of industrial action within HM Customs and the resumption of wearing their uniform when performing their relevant duties. It is an example of the way in which my office will conduct business. We will support the respective heads of department where grievances or issues of concern are raised, and empower them to deliver solutions through negotiated outcomes with the unions. In this vein, my office is currently tackling issues raised in other departments. The working methodology is based on the agenda priority set by the respective trade unions. The approach is a sensible one based on collaboration and co-operation. New issues are raised as other issues are resolved. This means that the system is not overwhelmed, as this can cause issues to stagnate, which is not in the interests of any of the parties concerned.

The Government is conscious that on an industrial relations related legislative front a number of matters need resolution. This includes the implementation of the Trade Union Recognition Act and amendments on matters pertaining to zero-hour contracts. Both these matters are at an advanced stage and further developments will materialise soon. I will provide public updates accordingly.

On policy, I am currently tackling two initiatives within this portfolio. The first is the introduction and implementation of a comprehensive set of health and safety policies to be implemented throughout the public sector. This has already happened. Through this policy, a baseline of health and safety practice and regulation will be established within all Government Departments, agencies, owned companies and authorities. The policy will complement existing Health and Safety practice within specialist areas and provide a foundation in those that do not have specific guidelines. All this means that there is now a minimum set of health and safety standards, no matter the Department or the circumstances.

The second policy initiative that I would like to draw attention to is the implementation of a Public Service Code that will replace Government General Orders. Hon. Members will know that Government General Orders have underpinned public sector practices for many decades. Although over the years multiple circulars have been issued that updated elements within those rules, Government General Orders have remained largely unchanged. It is, therefore, necessary that those elements of Government General Orders that work remain, and those that do not are changed. Modern employment issues that were not a concern at the time when Government General Orders were written have now been taken on board. I know that significant progress has already materialised on this front and I have instructed those tasked with developing the Public Service Code to work towards implementation within this calendar year. To this end, I have convened a working group consisting of the Human Resources Department, the Industrial Relations Department and the Department of Employment to tackle the outstanding elements of this document. The unions will be fully consulted on its content once the substantive body of the document is available. It is the view of the Government that a smooth transition to a more modern and effective Public Service Code will be advantageous to the public sector itself and welcomed by the Gibraltarian community as a whole.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all those individuals within the trade union movement whom I have had the pleasure to work with in this short period of time. Union officials have clearly been made aware that my office is open to all of them with a view to resolving matters in partnership, in a positive, quick and efficient manner. Needless to say, I look forward to continuing to develop this exciting portfolio in the months ahead.

Mr Speaker, I will now move on to housing. Only last week, the Housing Department moved to new premises at the ICC. The Department is next to the Housing Works Agency, thus facilitating even more the work that they do together. The new premises are now more accessible to the public, right in the centre of town. Their previous premises have now been taken over by the DSS. The Housing Department staff have actively assisted their DSS colleagues during this difficult period. I would like to take this opportunity to thank the staff and management of the Housing Department for the positive manner in which they have co-operated with the DSS. They have stepped up to the mark and gone out of their way to assist.

The Housing Department has adapted quickly to new working practices in order to continue to provide its services to both applicants and tenants. This has happened despite the fact that staff had been deployed to the Contact Tracing Bureau during the pandemic. As from 1st April, the deployed staff have returned and they are quickly and efficiently dealing with the backlog that the deployment created; not only that, but dealing also with the physical move mentioned above. It needs to be said that the Housing Department staff did not stop offering services to clients during the COVID-19 pandemic. In addition to this, they have actively assisted Public Health and the Government in all matters relevant to housing and beyond.

The Housing Department counters are now open to the general public via an appointment system. This will assist cash payers who, despite continued efforts, are reluctant to pay electronically, by standing order, by telephone banking or otherwise, or those who simply do not have a bank account, thus ensuring house rent revenues do not fall into arrears. The Housing Department has been working closely with the digitalisation team in order to have all application forms available online on the e-government platform. This will offer the facility to complete, attach and submit documents electronically to the Housing Department, thereby avoiding foot traffic at our counter.

The Housing Department comprises four main sections. The Accounts section deals exclusively with the receipt of rental payments. The Housing Department has numerous methods available for rental payments, which can be carried out without attending in person. These are deduction at source from wages/salaries or occupational pensions, standing order from the client's bank account, online via the e-gov portal, or telephone payments. The Accounts section strives for customers to subscribe to these methods. The Department is working closely with the Treasury Department and with private banks in order to be able to accept payments via direct debit. This would expand even further the payment options for the collection of rent. The Accounts section has worked very closely with the DSS in order to assess rent relief more efficiently. An MoU has been signed in order to facilitate the process. The Department's vote book is also managed by the Accounts section.

The second section is Enforcement and Compliance. On 1st July last year the Housing Department introduced this section. It is tasked with litigation processes, anti-social behaviour, the in-house complaints procedure, claims, Ombudsman queries and the recovery of arrears – an unenviable task, Mr Speaker. Systems are in place that alert the Department to any tenant who commences to default in their rent payments. This process enables them to contact the tenant quicker than ever before and engage with them before any debt begins to build up and become a burden. The Department continues to assist tenants to arrange a repayment plan or adjust an existing repayment plan. The objective remains to meet the needs of the tenant as well as the needs of the Department. Since 1st April 2021 to date – the date being 18th May – there have been a total of 465 appointments, from which 150 arrears agreements have been concluded to the value of some £680,000. Those meetings have proved very useful as they allow our staff to identify tenants who have genuine hardship and are unable to pay their rent. All situations are looked at on a case-by-case basis. Careful consideration is given to those who may have social and/or medical issues that prevent them from paying their rent. This helps the Department differentiate between those who genuinely cannot pay and those who simply do not want to.

Mr Speaker, the continuation of the concerted effort to have rent payments deducted at source continues to be the Department's top priority. As I have stated in this House before, it is this Government's policy that all civil and public servants who are Housing Department tenants have their rent payments deducted from their salaries or wages automatically, thus ensuring that none of them default or fall behind in payments. Despite all the initiatives that this section has rolled out, and as they continue to engage with all those in arrears, there are, regrettably, still tenants who can pay but do not want to. These tenants have no social or economic hardship which would qualify them for rent relief, and yet they continue to default. There is no other option for this category of tenant than to commence legal action to recover the debt. The Department, together with the Central Arrears Unit, has engaged lawyers to commence litigation in such cases. As can be seen, the Housing Department has taken a very proactive approach, which is designed to ensure, as much as possible, that none of its tenants fall behind in their rent payments. As at 30th April 2022, the total arrears figure stands at nearly £4.4 million. More than £½ million has been written off as unrecoverable due to circumstances such as death.

Since the creation of this section on 1st April 2021, it has logged a total of 109 complaints in relation to anti-social behaviour. I have, in the past, outlined the procedure that the Department follows in such cases. This procedure is being implemented and all agencies continue to work to minimise the unacceptable behaviour of a few that causes misery to their neighbours. To this end we will continue to engage at joint agency meetings with the RGP, Social Services, the Care Agency, tenants' associations and even schools, if need be.

Mr Speaker, the Allocation Unit is the third section of the Housing Department. A total of 158 allocations have been made since 1st April 2021 to date, the date being 25th May when this data was collected. The Housing Department is working closely with the ERS, GHA and others in order to recover the properties of those tenants who have passed away, been admitted to the ERS, are long-stay patients in hospital or have chosen to move to private accommodation. These flats are immediately identified for applicants on the waiting list. A total of 412 applications have been received by the Housing Department since 1st April 2021. A review of all tenancies is under way so that all records are updated into our system in order to provide a more efficient service.

As announced by Government, all citizens, under the Register of Occupation Act 2021, have to register their occupation of property in Gibraltar. A lot of work has been undertaken by our IT provider and staff in order to be able to validate records of those persons who reside in a Government tenancy.

The Housing Allocation Committee continues to meet on a monthly basis. They provide valuable advice to the Housing Authority. I would like to thank them for the unremunerated and invaluable work that they do.

The fourth and final section of the Department is Senior Management. The Senior Management section undertakes financial assessment computations and assists the Minister, together with the Ministry for Housing itself. They undertake secretarial duties for established committees under the Housing Act and liaise with the RGP, HM Customs and other enforcement agencies on delicate matters, which include anti-social behaviour. The section provides secretarial duties to the Housing Allocation Committee. They also co-ordinate with other Departments such as the GHA, ERS and the Care Agency in order to reallocate flats to those on the waiting list.

This section also leads on the issue of legal cases. A total of 27 cases have been referred for legal action since 1st April 2021. A breakdown of the 27 cases is as follows: 24 cases have been commenced for repossession under section 8 of the Housing Act, two cases have been for unauthorised occupation under section 14 of the Housing Act, and one case for decanting.

It is important to understand that, apart from all the work that the different sections do, the Housing Department also works closely with many other Government Departments. This has led to more efficient working practices. All entities, for example, have a designated contact person, and this minimises the time taken to undertake tasks. The senior management of the Department also work closely and attend multi-agency forums with the Department of Equality, the DSS, CSRO, the RGP, Social Services, the GHA, the Prison Service, the ETB, the Drugs Rehabilitation Service, the Gibraltar Fire and Rescue Service, the Central Arrears Unit and Car Parks Ltd. This shows the high degree of commitment that the Department enjoys towards working with others.

One other important aspect to the work that the senior housing officials and the Housing Works Agency officials do is meeting with the tenants' association representatives. Those meetings are used to identify issues relevant to individual estates, many of which are then expedited as a result of the contact with the tenants. The Housing Department encourages tenants residing on housing estates to organise themselves into a representative committee. The ultimate aim is to benefit and enhance the living environment of the estate in collaboration with Housing Department officials. In those estates that already have a tenants' association, I urge tenants to approach their association if they believe that any action needs to be taken there, or if they have any suggestion that would improve the lives of residents on the estate. The general feedback that I have received from the tenants' associations is generally very positive. By working together, we have been able to enhance the service provided. The Housing Department and the Housing Works Agency staff will continue to support the tenants' associations on the day-to-day issues that may occur.

Mr Speaker, I am also happy to report that the review that we have embarked on of the Housing Act will be concluded by the end of the year. This includes a reassessment of the Housing Allocation Scheme, the tenancy agreements and a review of all housing policies. All are at an advanced stage. This is a comprehensive review which will give clarity to all. It will set out how things will be done. The outcome will also better inform tenants as to what the Housing Department expects from them and what they can expect from us. The Principal Housing Officer has been able to establish a very good working relationship with Action for Housing and, with my ministerial blessing, meets them on a monthly basis.

I move on now to the Housing Works Agency. This agency has moved into premises in the ICC and released its temporary premises in the old Rooke area. The Housing Works Agency has dealt with a total of 9,444 works orders which have been paid during the last financial year. Despite this, the Housing Works Agency has processed and managed, during this year, in excess of 15,000 works orders. The difference between one figure and the other is in relation to works that are contracted by other official service providers such as the GEA, the Environmental Agency and the Department of the Environment, which do not have a direct cost implication for the Housing Works Agency itself. The Housing Works Agency also manages all capital works to Government housing stock.

Mr Speaker, I will now move to my responsibilities for employment, where, indeed, as I am sure all hon. Members will agree, we have not been idle. Despite the many challenges and obstacles encountered throughout these last few years, the Department of Employment has ensured that there has been no detriment to the provision of their services and they continue to deliver as effectively and efficiently as ever. Given the unavoidable impact of the pandemic on employment within Gibraltar, it has still remained largely stable. I am pleased to inform the House that despite the adverse situations faced in recent years, we continue to see record low unemployment. In 2021, when the pandemic critically hit employment throughout the globe, the yearly average for Gibraltarians registered unemployed was 27, which is, as we all heard from the Chief Minister, a staggering 94% reduction in unemployment since 2011. In 2022, we have continued to maintain low unemployment levels. In the first quarter of 2022, the average of registered unemployed stood at 41, a 92% reduction in unemployment since the first quarter of 2012. Hon. Members should not forget that when the GSD were in government their view was that 300 unemployed was the norm and an acceptable number, and we inherited unemployment of 522 that year. It is, therefore, obvious that this Government's systems work and continue to work.

The highly successful mechanism that we have in place has taken many individuals out of unemployment and given them worthwhile, meaningful jobs. This has allowed and delivered a stable equilibrium in respect of the number of persons being unemployed and employed year-round. This employment stability has been achieved by creating long-term close working relationships with our employers and with the business community via employment outreach programmes and education. The objective behind these programmes is to fully comprehend and cater for the needs of the business community, as well as understanding and empathising with the specific individual needs of those persons seeking gainful employment, whether they are unemployed or in pursuit of progression and career development. In relation to understanding and empathising with the specific individual needs, the Employment Department provides guidance on interview skills and competences. It works very closely with individuals in order to train and provide support as a means of increasing the quality of their curriculum vitae, interview outcome and the possibility of their success at any given job application. This specific service has proved to be extremely beneficial, resulting in many successful individuals achieving gainful employment.

It is also important to note that the success of the Government's BEAT measures have resulted in a reduction in the number of redundancies. This has assisted in keeping the level of unemployment very low. Additionally, by way of continued support to Gibraltar's business community as it slowly begins to recover and emerge from the financial drawbacks of the pandemic, the fees payable to the Department of Employment continue to be waived.

Mr Speaker, the reform of the Employment Tribunal in recent years has delivered an effective, modern tribunal system. The rules have been enhanced further with the introduction of a lead chairperson, who will be appointed shortly and will also be carrying out the functions of the President of Chairpersons, as well as the appointment of additional chairpersons who wish to preside on an ad hoc basis. As recognition of the hard work and dedication in administering justice in employment disputes in accordance with Gibraltar's employment laws, payments made to chairpersons per judgment delivered will also be increased. The fee to be paid per judgment will be decided by the Director of Employment on a case-by-case basis, taking into consideration the urgency, intricacies and complexities of the Employment Tribunal proceedings. It is important to note that the Employment Tribunal Rules have also been amended to introduce a robust complaints procedure as a means of ensuring adequate investigations and resolution of complaints against mediators and chairpersons. This reform will also ensure that all cases are heard in a timely and judicious manner.

The Labour Inspectorate is tasked with the regulation and enforcement of our employment laws. The Labour Inspectorate's strategy and programme of inspections across the various industries, which had been delayed during the pandemic, now continues to operate conscientiously and effectively. This demonstrates our continued commitment to the eradication of illegal labour by ensuring that businesses are compliant with the Employment Regulations. The inspectors work hard in the field to ensure that all employers comply with employment legislation and that, amongst other matters, vacancies are registered with the Employment Service. The Department of Employment works closely with all sectors of the business community to ensure that a level playing field is maintained. The Labour Inspectorate remains, as always, available to provide information and guidance to both employers and employees on all employment-related matters.

This Government is committed to ensuring the well-being and protection of staff. We continue to work, together with the Health and Safety Advisory Council, to develop and review safe systems and safety procedures. It is our unrelenting commitment to protect the rights of workers' terms and conditions of employment. The Health and Safety Inspectorate continues to remain available to anyone who requires best practice guidance and advice in respect of health and safety issues at work. Gibraltar is pleased not to have seen a fatality at work for over 11 years now. Additionally, we have effectively introduced the health and safety policy, which I mentioned before, in all Government Departments, agencies and authorities. Heads of Departments and senior staff have already been asked to familiarise themselves with the policy, and the relevant arrangements are being conducted by the Human Resources Department to ensure all training requirements are identified and fulfilled.

The Employment Department has not rested and has, undoubtedly, stepped up to the demands and challenges placed on it. They will continue to work tirelessly towards the demands of the Brexit negotiations and related contingency preparations, specifically in the area of employment and workers' rights. This is inclusive of the continuous assistance we provide to the Ministry for Digital and Financial Services as they continue to develop digitalised interactive Government e-services for corporate and service users, as well as providing the high-quality employment-related support our community deserves. Finally, as this House knows, our commitment has always been, and will continue to be, to ever increase employment opportunities in Gibraltar, and at this we have been successful.

Mr Speaker, I move on, now, to the Youth Service. The Gibraltar Youth Service continues to open its doors and has further created and developed programmes that have reached more of our young people. It is pleasing to see how many youngsters turn up to participate in all sorts of activities which are educational and also fun at the same time. Membership across the youth clubs has grown, with an increase in attendance since they reopened after the lockdown. COVID-19 travel restrictions had an obvious impact. However, after the lifting of restrictions, the Youth Service has been working with other agencies towards creating new safe travel policies for young people to enjoy new experiences abroad.

The Mingle Project, which is now in its third year, continues to support young people from the ages of 18 to 30. It develops skills for people who have mild learning needs to be able to increase their friendship with others and build a support network. This is done by participating in activities such as cooking, baking and karaoke. Through targeted activities and workshops they are able to develop their independence, confidence and further their life skills.

The Youth Café is an open club environment for young people from the age of 15 onwards to relax and enjoy a safe space. The Youth Café opens twice a week, every Wednesday and Friday. They have engaged members in a variety of creative activities and recently, in a cooking competition, they have been able to practise their skills and develop their confidence.

The environment and climate change are at the heart of the work that the Youth Service does with young people. To this end they participate in Clean up the World, they support the Nautilus Project presentations and attend the Alameda Wildlife Conservation Park, amongst other activities. Getting involved with charity work is yet another aspect of the work that the Youth Service encourages. The group Rock Thrifters' upcycling fashion project looked at opportunities to showcase clothes from the Clubhouse charity shop. The Dolphin Youth Club has been focusing its efforts on a 'giving back' project to the community, learning about families and vulnerable people in our community. They have welcomed various charities to talk about the work that they do in the community. This Youth Club is now planning a community fundraiser to support charities. The Laguna Youth Club has been involved in team-building and offsite activities. This includes board paddling in Sandy Bay as well as Army outdoor activities. The Plater Youth Club has focused on projects that have centred on its immediate environment. This has developed their understanding of green spaces, which led to the creation of their own urban garden where they built their own patio furniture. The Plater Youth Club also focused on giving its members learning opportunities and the ability to experience outdoor activities in Spain.

Apart from organising, preparing and delivering all the said programmes, the Youth Service is involved in other areas. It organises and delivers Understanding Youth Work training courses to potential volunteers, as well as first-aid refresher courses. It participates in many multi-agency forums, such as the Child Protection Committee. The Voice of Young People continue to meet with me and report on issues that affect their lives. Those discussions have included employment and mental health issues.

This year, the Youth Service has embarked on a new pilot project that specialises in providing engagement with young people under 25 who are currently in prison and at risk of reoffending on their release. The Youth Service will provide these young people with an opportunity to talk to full-time youth workers, who will offer an objective, positive role model and can provide them with a non-judgemental ear and offer support and guidance with their transition back into the community. I intend to follow this project closely, since I think it will go a long way in breaking the cycle of reoffending.

The Youth Service, as always, will continue to work with both comprehensives and the College to see how they assist in giving additional support with pupil's self-esteem, confidence building, communication skills and social development programmes. Working in groups, they try to identify issues which pupils are experiencing within the school environment. This includes exploring ways in which pupils can address and manage their anger, morals and emotions with a view to developing coping strategies.

Many people sometimes tend to undervalue the important work that the Youth Services does throughout the year. I would like to thank them for this work and for the positive impact they have had on so many of our youngsters.

I will now continue with my last but definitely not the least area of responsibility as Minister for Sport and Leisure. The House knows that in a sporting context, league seasons tend to overlap between financial years. The 2020-21 season for most sports was challenging, to say the least. Most competitions were disrupted at one point or another as a result of COVID-19. These were only completed, with very strict restrictions, when stringent protocols became the norm. It is because of this that I will take the opportunity to thank all the registered sports associations and their armies of volunteers who ploughed through these obstacles to keep their sports alive during that time.

Thankfully, the 2021-22 season that has recently come to its conclusion was held under near-normal conditions. Leagues and development programmes had to deal with few or no disruptions whatsoever. Unfortunately, the same cannot be said for international competitions away from Gibraltar. More critical COVID-19 scenarios in other countries resulted in many competitions being postponed or cancelled. Many associations also adopted an understandably cautious approach and decided not to travel. Those who have done so have received financial support under the Gibraltar Sports Advisory Council process.

Many sports development projects, including coach training and mentoring, were also supported. A total of £142,592.38 was allocated to international competition and sports development. This year, a marked increase in participation at international events is expected and Government will try to support this as best it can. Competing in these events is not only important as it provides exposure to a higher level of competition, but it also means that Gibraltar continues to stand on its own two feet as a full member or as an affiliate of 23 international governing bodies of sport.

Gibraltar's reputation as a top-class host has not been affected by the pandemic. Whilst many countries cancelled competitions, our response to COVID-19 meant that we were able to resume hosting such events sooner, rather than later. To this end, the first post-pandemic Europe Netball event was held locally during October 2021. The success of the competition opened the door for others to follow suit, and this signalled a return to hosting. We continue to be the standard bearer for such initiatives.

Other events were also held locally. Whilst spectator numbers might have been low, it was felt that continuity was the key to maintain the momentum that had been created in terms of event-led tourism prior to the lockdowns. The main events this year have included chess, bowling, darts, pool, snooker, squash, cricket and netball. This financial year we are looking at cutting down on those events that have taken a toll on our finances. We are streamlining events so that our budget can stretch further and yet retain the same positive impact on events-led tourism. It is important to note at this point that these events equate to a total of just over 3,000 bed nights, meaning that there is a significant amount of economic activity that is generated as a result.

We have finally managed to host all these events with a marked reduction in disruption to our local sporting community. This would not have been possible without the investment made in new sports infrastructure over recent years. It is a pity that the Leader of the Opposition is not listening to this part when he said that the legacy of the three – (Interjection) No, there are hon. Members here who are not here, but I am directing it at him because he mentioned it before. The hon. Member, from a sedentary position, is saying that there are other Members missing; I am just saying that he is not here, and it is a pity that he is not here to listen because of the comments that he made. I must say that these new sporting facilities ... And he was completely wrong – and the Hon. Mr Reyes knows this as well – in saying that no sports are being played on these facilities. Many sports have been using these facilities. This would not have been possible without the investment made in new facilities infrastructure over recent years.

The use of the new facilities includes the sports halls at both secondary schools, which has not been mentioned either. It has meant that when either the Tercentenary Sports Hall or the Europa Sports Hall were used, all users were decanted to other facilities with minimal disruption to their programmes. In terms of the new facilities, the Europa Sports Park is in full use with the area a daily hive of activity. It has, for the first time, formed part of the community use scheme with badminton, rhythmic gymnastics and futsal, amongst others, benefitting from use of the hall. The Squash Association has had its first full season up at the new squash facility, with darts players from both the junior and senior categories competing in the aptly named George Federico Darts Hall. The indoor cricket nets have seen a resurgence of junior players with the facility serving as a springboard for Gibraltar cricket's first senior league in over four years. The Gibraltar Premier League, in its 20-overs format, comes on the back of the highly successful European Cricket Network T10 event held at Europa. Livestreaming figures peaked at 1.5 million during the week of the event, with a repeat event on a larger scale already planned for next season. The Gibraltar Rugby Football Union have also continued use of Europa with their local league and junior development programmes. They also host the now annual Royal Engineers visit, as well as several other tour groups. In the next few weeks we will have the management of this world-class venue complete. The Government envisages it will become a place where entities from abroad come to our shores to train and play with the ensuing benefit to our economy.

The Lathbury Sports Complex should be completed – I admit it has taken a long time – very early this summer. All the logistical issues with subcontractors have now been solved. Completion of the minor items that remain will allow many other members of Gibraltar's sporting fraternity to make use of these amazing facilities. Whilst the swimming pool is currently in its testing and commissioning phase, our swimmers have been able to continue training in the GSLA swimming pool complex. However, members of the Athletics Association have had their training and competitive seasons affected by what is now an old track at the Victoria Stadium. That track is now subject to extended periods of non-availability, as UEFA requirements when hosting matches mean that the Gibraltar Football Association have to render it out of bounds for longer periods. With all this in mind, I would like to go on record and thank the Gibraltar Amateur Athletics Association and all its members for their patience and understanding. They have conducted themselves admirably and have understood the issues to a very large degree. I share their frustration, but their attitude could have been very different and for that I am extremely grateful.

In relation to the Victoria Stadium, last February saw the complete handover of the area that was originally covered by a development licence over to the Gibraltar Football Association. The area that includes the main pitch, pitch 2, the running track and the Victoria sports hall now falls completely under the responsibility and management of the GFA, with GSLA staff no longer operationally involved. This move, which was inevitable in terms of moving forward, was not immune to delays incurred by COVID-19 and other matters but has provided both parties with the clarity that was required for a while now. The GSLA staff will move to manage the Lathbury Sports Complex as soon as this is completed. In fact, work has already started to make this transition as smooth as possible. However, until the national stadium is constructed, both the GFA and GSLA will continue to work together at various levels. I fully appreciate that the ambiguity caused by what was originally a short-term agreement has not been easy to manage on the ground, but I am very pleased to report that both parties have worked through the issues. I thank the GFA for their role, but I will take the liberty of placing on record my thanks also to the staff of the GSLA who have been receptive to all the changes that have come and are coming their way and approached these with a view to offering the best service possible.

On the subject of facilities, I remind the House that parks and playgrounds also fall under the remit of the GSLA. In the last financial year, we have been able to carry out a couple of major refurbishments. In addition to those, snagging issues were finally overcome at the new Laguna estate playground and this has been available to the general public for a while now. The crucial part of keeping these parks and playgrounds safe and in good running order is having a robust maintenance programme. In the last financial year, we spent a total of £116,487.84 on this. However, we have realised that the previous arrangements were found not to be adequate, with this leading to a review of the service. I am glad to report that, moving forward, the GSLA has engaged the services of GJBS, who now has a team fully dedicated to the maintenance and upkeep of the playgrounds. The increased monitoring of these amenities should result in savings in the long term. The improvements are already evident to see. These should become more noticeable as the months progress and as members of the public pack away their beach umbrellas and return to use these facilities.

The summer months used to be some of the quieter periods from a GSLA viewpoint. However, given that competitive sport has become a year-round reality, there is now no respite. The inclusion of the GSLA bathing pavilion and the Europa pool as amenities available to the general public has added to this. Last summer was extremely successful and the first since restrictions on gatherings had been lifted. The bathing pavilion and Europa pool returned to their pre-COVID-19 usage levels. The extensive use of both meant that maintenance was ramped up, but I am glad to report that there were no major issues. The overall cost of maintenance was as follows: the GSLA bathing pavilion £116,986.51, and the Europa pool £147,435.95. These figures account for chemicals, cleaning – including the services of divers – and other minor maintenance matters that are required before, during and after the summer season. Whilst the summer season lasts approximately 14 weeks, it is imperative to maintain these facilities all year round.

Mr Speaker, we cannot look back at any summer considering sport and leisure and not refer to the GSLA's Summer Sports and Stay and Play programmes. Whilst the Stay and Play programme was organised during the summer of 2020, the Summer Sports programme took an enforced hiatus. Thankfully, summer 2021 saw it return with a highly successful and well-attended eight weeks of activities. Absence makes the heart fonder and it was particularly warming to see our sports facilities buzzing every morning, ending with the now traditional water day, which is a fantastic end to the programme. Four hundred and thirty seven children, ranging from the ages of five to 13, registered and participated during the summer months. The importance of this cannot be underestimated, as unfortunately children are becoming increasingly sedentary and lured away from physical activity by electronic devices. The Summer Sports programme provides continuity of sorts whilst our registered sports associations and their volunteers take a well-deserved break.

Summer 2021 also saw an increase in the number of children registered and attending the Stay and Play programme. The programme, which deals with children with learning disabilities, catered for 35 children. The programme was, once again, a major success, offering an extremely varied range of sports and leisure activities at different venues around Gibraltar. This coming summer numbers are, once again, up with 43 registering already. All preparations have been done in order for this programme to commence on 11th and 13th July. Today, the leaders will be commencing their induction courses and I am happy to say that, this summer, the schemes will run for longer than ever, both ending on 25th and 26th August. As we all know, the value of having an induction course is that it will cover a whole range of items such as the delivery of generic and sport-specific sessions, leadership training and first aid, amongst others.

One very important aspect which has been introduced since we came into government is that of protecting our children. It is for this reason that all employees are required to undertake safeguarding training. They are also RGP vetted initially during the recruitment stage. This is in keeping with the requirements which are now imposed on any coach who is responsible for, or delivers sessions to children or young adults in any facilities managed directly or controlled by the GSLA. Since attendance at safeguarding workshops and adherence to relevant child protection protocols were changed from guidelines to registration criteria under the GSAC process, a total of 707 coaches have now undergone such training. Two hundred and thirty one of these became qualified during the last financial year. The numbers would have been much higher had the enforcement of COVID-19 restrictions not hindered the delivery of the sessions. However, the time was used profitably by the GSLA team, who have now developed protocols to not only be able to deal with the constant flow of new coaches but also address those requiring refreshers. Whilst updates are required bi-annually, an online refresher course will now be available so that face-to-face workshops are only required every four years. This will streamline the process for the volunteers involved and make it less onerous on staff, who will be able to deal with a greater number of new volunteers.

Mr Speaker, safeguarding has taken on a new level of importance in recent years, and rightly so. During the last financial year, the GSLA became a signatory to the Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangements (MAPPA) process. This allows the GSLA to have access to confidential information, if and when required, in order to safeguard individuals who are using facilities under their management. Staff awareness training has been delivered given the importance of the role that each individual member of staff plays in ensuring that users are provided with a safe environment. GSLA facilities are, I dare say, the most utilised public facilities after our schools and health services, so it is imperative that all possible steps are taken to ensure the safety of all concerned, including staff.

Mr Speaker, I now move on to my part as Minister for Leisure and I will talk about the King's Bastion Leisure Centre. The King's Bastion Leisure Centre gradually got back on track after the lockdown with its doors opening for the new Rock Boulder Park on 1st July 2021. This replaced the ice-skating rink, which was very expensive to manage because of the high electricity costs and which had to be discontinued as the coolant gas to run it was no longer being produced. This facility boasts top specifications and will, no doubt, attract many more users to the Centre – that is the Rock Boulder Park. The cost of converting the ice rink to the boulder park was recovered from the savings on electricity, which meant that the Government did not have to provide any funds for this project. Other innovations included the purchase of 10 new training machines for the fitness gym to replace some of the old equipment which became worn out, and the addition of three of the latest game machines for the amusement arcade. LMS also invested in the purchase of the Santa's Sleigh Ride experience and a wall-mounted trio of singing reindeer, which were the star attraction at Santa's Grotto during the month of December. The ride will continue to be used as a jungle adventure throughout the year and as a Halloween special in October. Revenue since the start of 2022 is now on par with what it was in the first quarter of 2020, prior to the pandemic. It is expected that with the creation of new income streams from the Boulder Park and the Cannonball Store, which opened in July 2020, plus the other attractions, the total revenue for the year will most likely be the highest to date since the centre opened. This will greatly assist in reducing the ongoing cost of running the facilities. The plans for the year ahead include the expansion of the Cannonball Store to cater for increased demands, including the sale of comics, and the purchase of at least six arcade machines aimed at toddlers and small children.

The King's Bastion Leisure Centre is always exploring ways of generating revenue and they are currently looking at some more new games and rides that will give children many enjoyable experiences. I must congratulate the management of the King's Bastion Leisure Centre for having great vision in not only finding ways of making the centre attractive to our young people but also for looking all the time at ways of making the Centre economically viable. The House should not forget the disaster area that the King's Bastion Leisure Centre was in 2011 and the economic black hole it represented. Just as a reminder, the King's Bastion Leisure Centre used to cost £2.6 million in expenditure whilst only bringing in approximately £50,000 in revenue. Now, the cost has been reduced to £1.4 million and it is reaching new heights of approximately £600,000 in revenue during COVID, but before that it was averaging £800,000.

Mr Speaker, in conclusion I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the staff who work under the different portfolios which I am responsible for. I would like to thank you and your staff here in Parliament for the help and assistance given to fulfil my parliamentary obligations.

I could not end my Budget speech without specifically mentioning my staff at the Ministry. Without them, I could not run the sometimes complex and difficult portfolios that I lead on and those that I have been honoured to hold in the past. They are the ones who guide me daily in all that I do and are also there whatever time of day. I am forever grateful, so a wholehearted thank you goes to them all.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, the coming months of July and August will see, as every year, a change in daily routines for most families in Gibraltar. These two summer months are a longish period of time when children are not in schools, and therefore families make different plans, each catering for their own individual circumstances.

The Budget this year caters for a substantial expenditure of almost £63 million in respect of education-related expenses. This is made up of over £39 million in respect of payroll expenditure alone, and the remainder comes under the heading of other charges. The expenses on the payroll subheads estimated for 2022-23 actually have a predicted small saving when compared with the forecast outturn for 2021-22. The good news that as from September the number of teachers employed on a substantive basis will increase is welcome indeed, but subsequently the provision for temporary cover, from where supply teachers are normally paid, has been proportionally reduced.

Despite these justified adjusted estimated expenditures for 2022-23, I cannot understand how the Education Department estimates that only £1,000 will be required for maternity/paternity leave. We have a relatively high number of young teachers who are still within the child bearing ages, so I wonder what realistically the actual expenditure will be once the financial year 2022-23 is over. Likewise, temporary cover is also reduced to £1,000 despite the logical reality that the more teachers you have employed the higher the expenses for temporary cover will probably be, because these teachers need to stay home when contracting seasonal influenza or similar illnesses. Because of their close contact in classrooms with pupils, mostly in enclosed areas, it would be highly irresponsible for teachers to attend their respective workplaces if and when they unfortunately contract some virus or another.

There is a subhead provision in the Estimates, Head 16, subhead 2(34) which provides £8,000 for compulsory professional supervision. I believe the Minister for Education has not expanded upon this provision and I would therefore be grateful for an explanation in respect of what compulsory professional supervision is. Likewise, the provision of £78,000 catered for in subhead 2(35) under 'Cyclical Maintenance – Primary Schools' seems, to me, to be a new item of expenditure and any light shone upon this would also be appreciated.

There is a huge increase of almost £400,000 in respect of facilities management, and I suppose this will be geared towards expenses in connection with improvement works within our school buildings. Again, further information would also be welcome, but improvements and repairs of facilities are mainly carried out during the eight weeks or so that schools are closed for pupils during the summer holiday break. I have heard from teachers that there is a certain discontent in respect of provisions and facilities made in some of our new schools. There is a difference between what contracted architects design, influenced by what they feel would look nice and pleasing to the eye in the new schools, and the reality of what teachers would really like as the most practical things for them in the delivery of their day-to-day lessons. I therefore urge that new-builds and improvement works in schools are planned and executed in close consultation with classroom teachers, who, after all, are the professionals entrusted with providing the best education possible for our pupils.

Details provided through the Estimates Book show an increase in the teacher complement from 370 to 471, therefore I make it 101 more teachers to be employed on a substantive basis. The Minister, in his speech, referred to an extra 97 teachers, so although it is a small discrepancy of only four teachers, perhaps these figures need to be checked out, in case we can actually employ four extra.

Welcome as the increase in teachers is, we are left now with the problem of around 90 to 100 teachers who, in the past, have been employed on supply contracts and are now left, technically, unemployed. These unfortunate – and I am told there are 94 – supply teachers have had employment opportunities in the past, for up to six years in some cases, but now they face an insecure future in respect of their employment opportunities and teaching careers. Concerns have been expressed by these teachers that there does not seem to be a clear criterion of how those lucky enough to now enjoy substantive contracts have been selected. Teachers who were unsuccessful in the recent selection process are disappointed at the lack of feedback as to why they did not get the teaching job they applied for. May I respectfully and strongly recommend that feedback is always offered to those who are unsuccessful in their applications, so that, in turn, they may improve their employment prospects and become better professionals?

During the second and third weeks in August we traditionally suffer a few days of nervousness and anxiety. This is because this is the time of year when our students officially receive their long-awaited A-Level and GCSE results. We all know from past experiences that examination results will have a great influence a youngster's future. I sincerely hope that this year's public examination results will see repetitions of past successes for all candidates. I equally hope that students will be wise in choosing their career paths for the future.

The Department of Education is strongly urged to develop a well-structured careers advice programme within our secondary schools system. As a teacher, I cannot recommend enough the value of pursuing higher education studies, possibly leading towards a degree, in an area where our students have the academic ability to achieve this. However, a strong influencing factor as to what subject areas should be followed at university should be encouraged by what our community's future professional skills requirements will be. There are already some professions which are well oversubscribed, whilst on the other hand there seems to be a continued need to import professional labour in other areas. Would it not be great if all Ministries provided the Education Authority with feedback as to their vision of Gibraltar's future professional skills needs? If this were to happen, then our students, who are Gibraltar's future workforce, would certainly be the winners.

Although we rightly invest heavily in scholarships, to the tune of some £17 million for this coming year, we owe a strong commitment to our pupils who are not necessarily of higher education calibre. There are provisions to invest £130,000 towards vocational courses – but, I ask, what qualifications do these vocational courses actually offer? Is there any provision for vocational courses for those who are post compulsory school age who may be better suited to pursue this path?

A deep study should be undertaken in respect of courses offered and qualifications to be obtained through our training centres. There is a lot of construction taking place in Gibraltar, but is the labour market in this area employing from the local workforce? With an ever-increasing number of homes in Gibraltar, both within the public and private sectors, do we have adequately qualified craftsmen to ensure the best possible maintenance service is available for these homes from our local workforce? The Government's housing stock needs to be adequately maintained to ensure tenants enjoy homes of an acceptable standard. However, Government has an ever-decreasing workforce in respect of home maintenance teams at the Housing Works Agency. What, then, is the future for housing maintenance? The expenditure head at Appendix D, Housing Works Agency, subhead 26 actually has a decrease when compared with the 2021-22 estimate and forecast outturn. I have to ask: how can this be so, if our housing buildings are getting older and therefore might require higher maintenance? Would it not be a more efficient service if our own Housing Works Agency had an adequate team of suitably trained craftsmen to undertake maintenance tasks of our housing stock? Would this not be a sensible way to provide stable employment for our youngsters who have not undertaken degree courses but have attained qualified craftsman status at NVQ Level 2 and some even at Level 3, each of them specialising in different disciplines?

What I am saying is that in the same way we rejoice about the successes of our university students, are we not equally bound to invest in and subsequently eventually rejoice about the successes which are achievable by those who choose not to go to university? We must not forget the ultimate aim of providing education for our future generations. It is our duty to ensure all pupils always achieve their maximum potential. The school leaving age in the United Kingdom, upon which we also base our educational models, is set at 16, but it is set at age 16 if students embark upon an apprenticeship or training type of employment until at least attaining the age of 18. I believe it is high time we reviewed our own local school leaving age. For a pupil to leave schooling in Gibraltar at age 15 and not embark or have opportunities to embark upon an approved training programme is certainly not an investment in respect of the future employability prospects of that youngster. We are now in the third decade of the 21st century and decisive action is, therefore, long overdue.

Whilst desiring only all the very best in respect of whatever educational reforms may be introduced over the next few years, I cannot stress enough that the views of the professionals in this field must be heard and acted upon. There is no better formula for success than to cultivate a sense of ownership amongst all professionals tasked with the education of our children. Furthermore, the GSD believes that schoolteachers are a priority that is both needed and from which society will receive huge benefits. The job that they do benefits everyone. Teachers are not a group who are prone to industrial action or making a fuss. However, they are an essential and key contributory factor towards the success of our future adults and their aspirations in the adult world. To all those teachers who go the extra mile, I thank you on behalf of parents for assisting and, thus, enabling our youngsters to attain even greater successes than past generations have done.

Touching upon sports-related matters, Mr Speaker, the new facilities at Lathbury Barracks and Europa which were constructed in connection with the 2019 Island Games should have been completed three years ago now. Besides the need to meet the Games' requirements themselves, they are meant to enable Gibraltarian sports participants to continue to produce as best results as possible with an increase of facilities which develops their wide-ranging sporting talents and abilities. We have heard in this House a range of excuses as to why our new facilities are still not fully completed. The latest update in respect of the delays is that their completion is now imminent. Well, I sincerely hope so because it is embarrassing to be without facilities for so long despite this project being hailed as a sporting showcase of facilities. It is totally unacceptable that whilst the President of the Gibraltar Amateur Athletics Association holds the prestigious office of President of the Athletics Association of Small States, he cannot go to meetings and boast about Gibraltar having any suitable venues across any of the wide range of track and/or field events in this traditional sport. This sporting example in respect of athletics is but only one, because it applies, unfortunately, to many other sports. The lack of approved sporting facilities has resulted in many associations not being able to take full advantage of recruiting new youngsters into their sports. It would have been an opportune moment for many local associations to welcome new participants – who were, at the time of the Island Games, enthusiastic to participate in certain sports thanks to the successes they witnessed from local athletes.

In the past we have quite often obtained results in numerous sporting disciplines which make our neighbours and sporting opponents in official competitions envious of our rather good and consistent performances. I sincerely hope that the new sports facilities, when eventually completed, will meet local requirements not only for today's needs but for generations to come. I am sure I speak for the whole House as we offer our collective best wishes to all forthcoming participants who, through their committed efforts, will hopefully, yet again, make Gibraltar proud of our sporting achievements in the season which is about to commence and those who, in just a few weeks' time, will be able to represent us at the forthcoming Commonwealth Games. May the best of Gibraltarian luck accompany all our representatives and may they, through their sporting efforts, prove their best results in the challenges that lie ahead.

Mr Speaker, once again, this year I wish to reaffirm my personal conviction that, through the collective celebration of social events, participating Gibraltarians contribute to reinforcing our identity, culture and history as a people and a community. Both the performing and fine arts fraternities have always proved themselves to be very proactive within their own specialised areas, and I take this opportunity to congratulate all the groups and individuals who have done Gibraltar extremely proud through their international participations and, in many cases, gaining awards. It is always a personal and collective pleasure to be able to say how proud we are of the international achievements of our fellow Gibraltarians.

This year's Estimates show a token provision of £1,000 under the Improvement and Development Fund expenditure set aside under Head 102 Other Projects, subhead 4 I (India) entitled 'Theatre'. Through public announcements a new project will be embarked upon which will see an enlarged theatre created within the John Mackintosh Hall complex. This theatre will be built with funds provided for by public subscriptions, and therefore it does not say much for Government's personal commitment to see through their original plans pertaining to theatrical facilities which they pledged were going to be provided and with the old Queen's Cinema site having been publicly announced as the preferred location. The new theatre will replace the existing John Mackintosh Hall facility, which currently has a little over 200-250 seating capacity and which is always in great demand for use by local schools and dance groups for their productions. It now leaves the question of where traditional users of the existing hall will be able to stage their shows during the works period. With the programmed refurbishment of the John Mackintosh Hall facilities we are actually not providing much-needed additional facilities; it boils down to an exchange of a small facility for a much larger one, which will not necessarily cater for our ever-increasing demands for theatre use. The new, larger theatre might be good news for some but it has also resulted in sad news for others, like local educational schools and dance groups for whom the size and seating capacity was just right. I wish the traditional users of the hereto existing Mackintosh Hall the best of luck in finding alternative venues which cater for their specific needs whilst we go through the transition period.

Government has, indeed, been very lucky in securing an extremely generous donation of £1.5 million towards making the new Mackintosh Hall theatre a reality. Given the ever-increasing cost of living, which seems to surpass any increase in income for the average working person, I feel that finding the additional funds for a new theatre from public contributions will be tough to achieve. I sincerely hope that our economy is handled prudently by this Government during the remaining tenure of their mandate, so that in the not-too-distant future the new theatre will actually see the light of day. Our local performers, entertainers and audiences are entitled to ask for a theatre which is fit for purpose and available throughout the year without them having to exclusively raise the funds themselves.

Mr Speaker, I was first elected into this House in 2007, thus I have now tried to serve our electorate for 15 years. This House will soon enter into the final year of its mandate and, given that we live in a free and democratic country, nobody knows for sure what the future holds. Therefore, before I sit down, I must take this opportunity to once again thank you and all your staff at Parliament for the patient and professional manner in which you have all, both collectively and individually, dealt with us Members. I know that you personally have always strived to lead by example when dealing with Members on both sides of the House. I would like to assure you that you can give yourself full credit for the guidance and advice you have, so far, offered to our current Clerk at the table. I had the privilege of forming part of the Gibraltar Parliament delegation that attended the Regional Commonwealth Parliamentary Association meeting hosted by the Isle of Man in March this year, and I am certain the other Gibraltar delegates will also attest that our Parliament's Clerk proved to be equally as efficient as you personally proved yourself to be many years ago when I headed the Gibraltar delegation at the CPA regional meeting, also held in the Isle of Man. With these words, Mr Speaker, I wish you and all your members of staff at Parliament an enjoyable forthcoming summer recess. (Banging on desks)

Adjournment

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on that convivial note – and, in respect of the comments relating to the Clerk and yourself, I am sure with the support of the whole House – I invite that we now adjourn to tomorrow at 10 a.m.

2135 Mr Speaker: I now propose a question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Wednesday, 29th June at 10 a.m.

I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Wednesday, 29th June at 10 a.m. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Passed.

This House will now adjourn to Wednesday, 29th June at 10 a.m.

The House adjourned at 7.40 p.m.

Appropriation Bill 2022 – Second Reading – Debate continued

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament – Wednesday, 29th June 2022.
We continue with the Appropriation Bill 2022.

5 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Albert Isola.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I would like to start by making a point of clarification in respect of one of the matters the Chief Minister detailed yesterday in respect of the COVID recovery charge. We have had representations overnight from the industry and we have agreed to engage with them on how we can address the COVID recovery charge in a way that does not harm their businesses. As Members of Parliament will know, this is a sector that supported us during COVID, took no money from us during COVID and worked with us during COVID to deliver business as usual, and for that we have expressed our thanks and appreciation over the past years. In the circumstances, what we are considering is limiting the charge to those companies that are actively trading in Gibraltar, but we will have the discussion with them. Members opposite should be aware that we will have those engagements with them to ensure that we are able to preserve what is an important part of our financial services sector and one that I look forward to engaging with, as we always have done, in talking through all the issues with them. They have always been supportive, not just in respect of the COVID period but in respect of all the directives that we had to implement whilst in the European Union. They have always been very responsive and helpful, and I look forward to continuing, with the Chief Minister, those discussions in the coming days.

Mr Speaker, anybody listening to the intervention from Members opposite would believe that Brexit and COVID were two things that we had made up and that, in fact, they had had no impact on our economy and the numbers should be looked at in the cold light of day as if those events had never happened. These are not excuses, these are unprecedented events that have impacted the entire planet, and so for Members to come to this Parliament and tell us, ‘Your spending in the GHA last year was over budget’ ... Oh, my God! If there was one year when that should be looked at kindly by this House, it should be during the COVID pandemic because that is exactly what has happened to every single country on this planet. And so I would ask Members to think carefully about the responses they make, because although, yes, this is a political Chamber and, yes, we are all in politics, it has to come with some responsibility and I do not feel that to brush aside COVID, to brush aside Brexit – which, six years on, we are still working on – is realistic or responsible.

Every single country is suffering from debt. The consequences of that debt and the monetary measures implemented to deal with that debt now give us inflation and the war in Ukraine. The world is upside down. In most countries around the world, unemployment is a problem. In other parts of the world, there is a problem with not having enough people to put into employment. In Gibraltar, I think the Chief Minister told us yesterday, we have a level of unemployment of 35. That is remarkable: after COVID, after Brexit, 35 unemployed. So I think putting things in context is what this House should do when we talk to our people in what is, in effect, the one time in the year ... the State of the Union message. The Opposition would have you believe that Gibraltar is the only country that has been impacted negatively by COVID, we are the only country that has debt, we are the only country that has to take these draconian measures, which neither this Government nor especially the Chief Minister wanted to take. But being in government is about making tough decisions, ones that are going to be unpopular, and the sign of a good leader is one who does not shirk away from that responsibility. You take them because you have to.

Why would the Opposition have us believe that we are the only country in the world that has these issues because of COVID? Politics? Convenience? No, because last year the Opposition said specifically, in relation to the issue of COVID ... I will quote, from Hansard, the Hon. Roy Clinton, who, at the beginning of his intervention in respect of the Budget last year, said:

In hindsight I do not think this Parliament could or should have done anything materially different in the way the crisis was tackled from a financial standpoint. I welcome the way the COVID-19 Response Fund was created and indeed is properly reflected in the Estimates Book 2021/2022 and I wish to personally thank the Chief Minister and the Financial Secretary for listening to us and taking on board some of our suggestions as to how the COVID-19 Response Fund should be published on a quarterly basis and accounted for in the Estimates Book.

The hon. Member quite rightly acknowledge the work that had taken place between the Opposition and the Government in how we placed the response to COVID in the Estimates Book, but listening to the Leader of the Opposition yesterday, that did not seem to matter. It was just dropped in to the numbers as if COVID and the COVID Response Fund were not relevant. Surely the hon. Members are not suggesting to the people of Gibraltar that the last 12 months is where the problem has arisen – surely not, especially, since they themselves have accepted repeatedly ... In fact, the Hon. the Chief Minister quoted the words of my hon. Friend Mr Feetham that the problem has arisen since COVID. It does not take an economist and it does not take a banker – even a simple lawyer like me can understand that when your revenue is down taxes are down, Import Duty is down, business is down, productivity is down and your spending is up: more in the Health Service, furlough schemes, BEAT schemes. Paying almost the entire private sector salaries when they were not producing is going to have a pretty significant impact on your numbers. This has happened everywhere, not just Gibraltar, so let's deal with it and let's accept it, and let's not try to throw all these numbers into the air and hope they land in a position where you can say, 'It's their fault.' No, it is nobody's fault and we are all trying to fix it.

Let's just say that the Members opposite are right and let's just say that we are in financial ruin – we have problems, yes, but let's just say that we were in financial ruin. If we were, I would expect the Opposition to be the first people, if that is what they believe, to come to this Parliament and vote in favour of any measures that increase revenue. Surely you should be supporting any measure that increases money, because we are in financial ruin – but no, the Leader of the Opposition yesterday complained of the increase in the prescription charge from £2.50 to £5. For goodness' sake, it is £9.60 in the United Kingdom! It has not been touched in years – £2.50 to £5; we are in financial ruin but he complains. It is not credible. It is just not credible. He says we have no plan, we have no direction, we have no policy, that Mr Picardo has slipped his hands into their pockets. Ah, he has just joined us. (Interjection) Surely, if we were in the crisis that they described, they would welcome that we actually raise revenue, raise income and begin to deal with the problem that they believe we have. But no, they do not support that, which to me brings into question the veracity of the message they are delivering, which is that we are in financial difficulty. Yes, we are in debt, yes we need to raise money, yes we need to repay the COVID moneys; we know that. We have been telling the people of Gibraltar repeatedly that this was the position that we would end up in. It is predicted.

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition then goes on to chastise us for what he calls our Brexit plan or lack of plan, and he refers to the 1,000-page treaty that the UK has – nothing in Gibraltar.

Well, my gosh! (Interjection) He said ‘a 1,000-page treaty for the UK, nothing for Gibraltar’. I wrote it down. (Interjection) ‘We have missed the boat’, ‘We have missed the boat’. What boat have we missed? The boat I want to be in is one that gives Gibraltar access to the UK financial services market, to the UK gambling market, where all our jobs are, and gives us mobility across the Frontier, which is the treaty that we are working to deliver – the best of both worlds. We have not missed any boat. We have made a boat for ourselves which is far better than the one that is contained in the 1,000-page treaty that the hon. Member refers to.

Mr Speaker, who remembers what the GSD policy was on Brexit? I do not think anybody does, because they have not got one. Who remembers what the GSD policy was on the treaty? I do not remember and nobody else will, because they have not got one.

95 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Their policy is that they will have a policy.

Hon. A J Isola: They will come up with something at the appropriate time. God help us, because they are against the Tax Treaty, they are against a treaty with Spain, they are against the Brexit deal, they are against everything. But what the heck do they believe in? What do they propose as a solution for the people of Gibraltar? Nothing. They come here with nothing. This is an Opposition that has two primary roles: checks and balances, and an alternative to Government. The role of any opposition anywhere in the world is to provide a credible alternative to government. Where are their ideas? Where is their thinking? What do they propose? Who knows? I certainly do not and I do not think they know, themselves. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

105 He talks about the blue card holders’ difficulties crossing the Frontier. It is a testament to the negotiating ability of this Government and this Chief Minister and Deputy Chief Minister that Gibraltarians are the only British nationals who can cross into Schengen without having their passports stamped. Or hasn’t he noticed? But no, they focus on the blue card holders. Well, let’s get real: when the blue card holder lands in Malaga, or anywhere else in the European Union, it is exactly the same, and what this Government is working towards is delivering a treaty on mobility that will benefit the whole of Gibraltar, those who live here, those who reside here and those who work here. That is what the business industry is calling for. That is what the entire business community needs – mobility – because without it they cannot survive. I am staggered that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition comes and tells this House that we have missed the boat. I wonder if he has read this fabulous 1,000-page treaty that the UK had with the EU. I have yet to come across a non-Cabinet politician who describes it as a good deal for the United Kingdom, yet the hon. Member suggests that we should have been a part of that deal. I, for one, am absolutely thrilled and delighted, and I know that the entire business community is also, that we are working on a mobility deal, that we have access to UK financial services and that we have access to the UK online gaming market, because that is what delivers business to Gibraltar and employment for Gibraltar. The UK treaty that the hon. Member says we missed the boat on does not give you access to the single market, does not give you any movement at all that we will have and does not give you movement of goods either. Our deal, when it is delivered by the Chief Minister – I am confident that he will – does exactly that. So, before we criticise and before we say no to anything and everything, I believe we have to accept the quite incredible progress we have made and the time period we have been able to do it.

120 He says that Brexit was x years ago. Again, does he not wake up in the morning and realise we have been through COVID? Two years of the entire system shut down? I just cannot understand how Members opposite are able to come to this House and describe things in the way they do, as if we were living on a different planet. We live in reality, we take the difficult decisions that we have to in this reality and we will come out of this at the other end in a much stronger position than we have gone in.

135 Mr Speaker, as I mentioned before, in my view the Opposition should support the revenue-raising measures if they honestly believe that we are in the position they tell us we are in. The truth of the matter is that whatever we do on this side of the House, whether we increase taxes massively or whether we abolish taxes altogether, they are still going to vote against this Bill. That is incredible. That is incredible. We know before we start that they have all prepared speeches which say no before even listening to us, before even understanding the rationale or the reasoning. This is meant to be a debating Chamber – not come with your prepared text and 140 ‘Whatever the Chief Minister says, whatever announcements he makes, I am going to make the same speech’.

The decision to vote against the Appropriation Bill started in 2017 and I believe the Hon. Mr Clinton persuaded the Hon. then Leader, Mr Feetham, that they should vote against – a political stunt (Interjection) by which they are now hoisted by their own petard and have to follow every 145 year in order not to make that initial decision look as stupid as it was.

Hon. Chief Minister: And you are easily persuaded by anyone who suggests you might become a little bit more popular as a result, and obviously – (Interjections)

150 Mr Speaker: Let’s all pipe down and just listen to the speech.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, why have they voted against the Budget? Well, again I go to Hansard because it is always quite a useful tool to understand why things happen, and I quote again from my friend Mr Clinton’s intervention last year:

We still have no visibility of the state of Government-owned companies, indirect debt is not recognised, we now have three years’ Supplementary Appropriation Bills outstanding, we have no proper Finance Bill – more of which I will say later, and the last report of the Principal Auditor was for financial year 2015-16. We have no Public Accounts Committee and the cumulative result is that this Parliament cannot exercise any effective financial scrutiny over the executive or the Government, and so I still cannot support a half-view Budget and will not vote for it, no matter what screams – and no doubt there will be screams – of the need for solidarity, the new word that we hear again and again, that will come from the Government benches.

155 The reason he votes against the Appropriation Bill is because the system of parliament that we have had since the year dot ... I go back to 1990-96 when the hon. Members were in power: they did exactly the same thing. We tell them every year; they do not listen. Every single year we demonstrate, and the Chief Minister took hours last year explaining to them why it was the same, but for no reason because they are saying the same message that they come with, with their 160 prepared text, before they come to this House. Since the year dot, this Appropriation Bill has been prepared. The Estimates Book has been prepared today with much more clarity, with much more information than ever before, but it is not enough, and because of that they are voting against: ‘No matter whether you abolish taxes or triple taxes, our position is going to be the same – we don’t like it, so we don’t want to play.’ I consider that to be irresponsible, Mr Speaker. Oppositions
165 from time immemorial have made their points about the Budget but supported it because of the impact of the Budget. (A Member: Why?) Why? Very simple: because we used to have sensible people in the Opposition and we don’t anymore. (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, last years was the Budget of beg, borrow or scrape. Well, I am delighted to tell the Hon. Mr Clinton that this year we have continued to beg, borrow and scrape, which will result in 170 significant savings to the taxpayer, including, as the Chief Minister mentioned yesterday, the undoing of that wonderful financing deal that the Members opposite entered into all those years ago in respect of the Hospital: £3 million of savings to the taxpayer. So the scraping is working and we continue to try to scrape as much as we possibly can.

The interesting thing again, going back to the principle that if things are as bad as they say they are, how should we be acting, I am going to point again to Hansard and again from my hon. Friend 175 Mr Clinton’s intervention last year, and I do so in the belief and on the basis that his intervention this year will be similar to what it was last year, because that is what it has always been since we started – (Interjection) Yes, consistent, indeed, unfortunately; we were hoping for change.

I was delighted to read the Government's press release on 22nd June this year announcing plans for the building of a National Theatre.

Again, Mr Speaker, I pause to remind people that this is against a financial crisis.

180 The performing arts, compared to sports, have long been overlooked by this Government despite its repeated manifesto promises. This delight was short lived because I then found out that the cost of this theatre was to be met by begging from the general public and generous private donors.

185 I will just pause there for a minute. I want to thank those sponsors, some of whom have been announced recently, who are supporting the endeavour – which delights the Hon. Mr Clinton – in delivering the National Theatre, and we will get there. We will get there because the community of Gibraltar supports good projects, but when we are in financial crisis, when we are with our backs against the wall, as Mr Clinton says we are, how could his delight be short lived when he realised that the Government is not going to pay for it? Surely, if the Government has no money, how could he possibly want us to spend money on a National Theatre? I just do not understand it. He goes on:

Yes, Mr Speaker, begging. To announce the creation of a foundation to spearhead the fundraising campaign as some great event was truly Orwellian given the way this Government has spent on previous capital projects with no regard to affordability or balance.

195 I walked here, this morning, through the quite beautiful Commonwealth Park. The money that we spent we spent on things like the Commonwealth Park, our schools and our sports facilities. We have invested money which will be here forever for the people of Gibraltar and the community that lives here to enjoy. That is good investment, not spending like they would have done in digging a hole in the Theatre Royal or lending money to OEM to lose on houses that were never built. The contrast between telling Gibraltar that we are at death's door and then telling us that we should be spending more money on things like the National Theatre – which we do not believe we should, at this moment in time, do, and that is exactly what we are not doing, which is, I believe, prudent, responsible and appropriate ... The hon. Member goes on:

200

It is worth quoting directly from the glossy project plan – a very nice, glossy prospectus which the Government has produced, no doubt to send to all those donors who will dish out the millions to produce the project that they said they were going to do. It is really quite remarkable.

205

210 Well, it is not remarkable. If the hon. Member wants a National Theatre, he should not want the taxpayer to have to pay for it if others are willing to stomp up their hard-earned, taxed income to support Gibraltar in more of its projects, like they did with Campion Gardens. That should be welcomed. Surely the hon. shadow Member for Economy would welcome that, not be upset and angry and call it begging. I find it really quite remarkable.

215

Mr Speaker, we increased electricity by 8%: that is 'terrible'. Does the hon. Member not realise the extent of the subvention that Government makes on electricity? What we are doing is continuing to subsidise electricity but less so, in the hope that we will catch up. The hon. Member opposite and his party, when in government, had a plan – or has he forgotten? – to increase electricity by 5% every year. In a time of what they call crisis we increase it by 8% and he says it is terrible. Flipping heck! What are we meant to do? Five per cent per year for 20 years, I think it was.

220

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes. It would have been about 50% already.

225

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, we have raised it by 8% and it is terrible. What would he have said to the people if he had been in government for five or six years and he had raised it by 30%? He was going to do that and he committed to it whilst in government, and now he tells the people of Gibraltar that 8% is terrible. Come on!

225 What does it take to get the hon. Members to support an Appropriation Bill, which would pay the salaries of our frontline workers, our police and our firemen? It seems nothing. It seems that it is simply not possible. As a matter of political opportunism they will continue to vote no to the Budget whatever we do. I think it is unfortunate and it is sad, and I know that the people of Gibraltar will take that deeply into consideration when they listen to the presentations before this House.

230 Mr Speaker, in dealing with the first of the responsibilities that I have I would like to start by saying some words on the recent decision of the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) in respect of Moneyval. I have to thank the Hon. Mr Clinton for his responsible approach in dealing with this, unlike the spokesman for Together Gibraltar, who seems to think that I have the power to force the Police to arrest and confiscate and who seems to think I have the power to force our regulators to make fines and carry out regulatory sanctions at my whim. I suggest he reads up a little more before he ventures on to the television. But that contracts significantly with the position adopted by my friend Mr Clinton and I would start off, before I go through the statement, by saying that I would be very happy to engage with the hon. Member behind the Speaker's Chair and have 235 briefing sessions with him so that I can fill in some of the detail. Obviously we have been through a very (Interjection) confidential process, much of which we are not able to discuss, but I would be happy to give him a more detailed background in person as and when he pleases. So my thanks to him for that.

240 Moneyval is a permanent body of the Council of Europe entrusted with the task of assessing compliance with the principal international standards to counter money laundering and the financing of terrorism and the effectiveness of their implementation, as well as with the task of making recommendations to national authorities in respect of necessary improvements to their own systems. Moneyval's role is as one of the eight FATF-style regional bodies (FSRBs) and, as such, is autonomous and independent from the FATF but closely co-operates with it, as well as 245 with other FSRBs. The FATF is the global money laundering and terrorist financing watchdog. It has developed the recommendations which ensure a co-ordinated global response to prevent organised crime, corruption and terrorism. The FATF also monitors countries to ensure they implement the standards fully and effectively.

250 In 2015 the Council of Europe adopted a resolution which allowed Gibraltar to be evaluated by Moneyval for the first time. In April 2019, the first Mutual Evaluation Report (MER) process on Gibraltar commenced when an evaluation team of the Moneyval Secretariat and peer jurisdiction assessors came to Gibraltar and drafted a report. The MER was considered at the December 2019 plenary of Moneyval and subsequently published. The MER consists of two parts: the technical compliance against the 40 FATF recommendations and the effectiveness compliance. The 255 technical compliance element of the MER consists of ensuring that legislation, policies and procedures exist in a jurisdiction that would enable the application of preventative measures. The effectiveness compliance evaluation focuses on the attainment of the 11 so-called immediate outcomes. All MERs carried out on all jurisdictions are conducted using the same methodology of the FATF. All these recommendations that are marked as partially or non-compliant have to be 260 addressed by the jurisdiction in time for its first follow-up report. Note that this is only in respect of technical compliance issues.

265 The submission of evidence for the follow-up report was made by Gibraltar in time for the December 2021 plenary and the follow-up report was published in November 2021. In order to achieve the results that Gibraltar did, a substantial number of legislative changes were made, and this follow-up demonstrated a very material improvement in the technical compliance of our 270 jurisdiction. The hon. Members will be aware, because they have supported all of those measures that we have implemented in order to make Gibraltar technically compliant with the FATF requirements, and for that I am grateful. I should also say that our score on the technical compliance at the end of last year was almost 100%; it was extraordinarily good.

275 A subsequent review on effectiveness was not strictly necessary if the measure of broad money in Gibraltar did not exceed the threshold of €5 billion. In late 2021, Gibraltar surpassed, after COVID, the €5 billion mark and was, naturally, obliged to inform Moneyval of this, and we did. This then led to a full review of Gibraltar's effectiveness in practice, with 10 of the 11 immediate 280 outcomes being assessed. The FATF's International Co-operation Review Group (ICRG) oversees this process. The ICRG process submits a jurisdiction to scrutiny on how, since the MER was published, it has made positive and tangible progress in attaining the recommended actions on effectiveness. In May 2022, Gibraltar submitted its report on the progress made against all of the recommended actions in the MER to the ICRG. This report was followed up by a face-to-face meeting which was held in Paris and to which all stakeholder authorities of Gibraltar were present 285 to answer questions from the Joint Group (JG) of the ICRG. The end product of the Gibraltar submission and the face-to-face meeting is the Post Observation Period Report, which is produced by the JG to the ICRG committee. The ICRG committee then presents the findings of the JG to the plenary for adoption. Gibraltar had a total of 78 recommended actions in the MER of 2019.

I would like just to pause there, Mr Speaker, to express my thanks to each of those stakeholders 290 who came with me to Paris. They were questioned by the working group for five hours. The detail and the extent of the scrutiny was comprehensive, to put it mildly, and I have to tell this House that I was immensely proud of each and every one of those stakeholders for the manner in which they defended their respective organisations and the manner in which they put forward the Gibraltar position in respect of the areas they are responsible for. It was quite incredible to see 295 the professionalism of each of them and the manner in which we dealt with the quite intrusive questioning that we faced from the entire working group of the ICRG, so my thanks and congratulations to David Parody, who led that team in respect of the whole of the money laundering process, Jimmy Tipping and each of the stakeholders who was with us at that time and has worked on this process for some years now.

300 On 17th June the FATF identified Gibraltar as a jurisdiction under increased monitoring in respect of only two recommended actions relating to the pursuit of regulatory sanctions and the pursuit of final confiscation judgments. A colossal amount of work by all the supervisory authorities and others went into achieving the reduction to just two recommended actions in the action plan. We were, naturally, disappointed but fully accept the action plan as identified by the 305 FATF and are committed at the highest political level to show full compliance within the timescale given. Gibraltar's action plan is the shortest of any country or jurisdiction that has been identified as under the increased monitoring process, informally known as 'grey listing'.

The FATF does not call for the application of enhanced due diligence, and this is an important point because they themselves do not call for enhanced due diligence measures to be applied to 310 jurisdictions under increased monitoring but encourage their members and all jurisdictions to take into account the information presented below in their risk analysis. In respect of Gibraltar, what that would mean is the two singular points that are relevant on our action plan, not everything else that we have been successful in dealing with. So, what the FATF is basically saying is focus on the action plan and measure that against the risk-based approach that you have with that 315 particular jurisdiction. Some countries will require enhanced due diligence measures as regards Gibraltar, but we would expect these to be proportionate to the brevity of the action plan.

Needless to say, the Government of Gibraltar has been in very close contact with HM Treasury for a significant period of time on the subject of our review and they have been and continue to be extremely supportive. Likewise, Government has been liaising closely with all the relevant 320 sectors in Gibraltar. I met, on the morning of the announcement, with representatives of the Finance Sector Council and also with representatives of the GBGA, and we had other discussions with different groups, and I have to say I was hugely impressed by their professionalism and can-do approach. Many – for example, in the gaming sector – have had previous experience with their licences in Malta, which has just come off the grey list, and so they have a good understanding of 325 what it means to work within the action plan and its implications.

The Government continues to work in partnership with the FATF and is proud of the relationship that it has with this international standard-setting body. Lastly, we look forward to being removed from the list of countries under increased monitoring in as short a timeframe as possible.

330 Mr Speaker, moving on to financial services, the financial services sector continues to grow, as does the wider business support community. Firms are busier than ever before and employment opportunities continue to outstrip those available in the market place, in both financial services and gaming.

335 The Gibraltar insurance market continues to grow. By far, the largest sector, as you will know, is motor insurance and we estimate that Gibraltar's share of the UK motor insurance market is close to 30%. As a jurisdiction, we have seen tremendous growth over the last years. In my time in Parliament since 2013, as an illustration, I have watched Gibraltar's share of the UK motor insurance market grow from some 12% to the 30% it is currently at. All this despite Brexit, despite COVID and the many other challenges we have faced and continue to face. It is a real testament to the professionalism and entrepreneurial skill of this sector. Today, we have over 40 insurance companies writing new business, and collectively the gross premiums of all of these insurance companies is well in excess of £5 billion.

340 In the DLT/blockchain space we continue to thrive and innovate. Presently, the regulator accounts for the following regulated entities in this space: 15 DLT permissions, 17 initial coin offerings registered under the Proceeds of Crime Act, three firms permissioned as virtual asset arrangement providers and one full bank permission.

345 There are a growing number of crypto hedge funds domiciled in Gibraltar. In 2020 the market was estimated as having US$3.8 billion of assets under management with some 9% of these funds domiciled in Gibraltar. There is also a strong pipeline of new applicants at different stages of the regulatory process. I must thank Mr William Gracia, who deals with these and with this sector in particular at the FSC, as I know, despite the strains on staffing levels that I will refer to later, he is continuing to deliver a professional and timely service to our licensees. It goes without saying that all of the aforementioned create fees, employment, taxation and a general contribution to GDP, as well as a deserved reputation internationally for supporting innovation and leading-edge multinational technology firms.

350 We have continued to work closely with GFIA, the Association and the sector generally. They are professional, energetic and innovative and it has been a real pleasure to work with them this year, as it has been every other year. We meet regularly, and as a result of their work we have introduced significant new and exciting legislation for the industry, with more to come. My sincere thanks to Jay Gomez, James Lasry and Jonathan Garcia.

360 We continue to work with HM Treasury on the delivery of the GAR regime, which is on course to be implemented in Q1 of 2024. This will, as Parliament knows, confirm our market access to the United Kingdom financial services market, which is so critical to our community. I am grateful to the team at Treasury with whom we are working on this, as well as Jimmy Tipping and Julian Sacarello from the GFSC, who lead on this important work.

365 Mr Speaker, over the last financial year we have, in April, published new regulations setting the standard for market integrity in the virtual asset space. This 10th core principle is the first time that any jurisdiction in the world has established market integrity standards mirroring those in traditional markets. My thanks to the many individuals, both in Gibraltar and abroad, who have contributed to this working group alongside private sector firms, the regulator and Gibraltar Finance.

370 In December 2021, a working group was established to review the Central Securities Depository Regulations, which has now reported back to me with its recommendations. The working group included industry and legal experts in this field, together with the regulator and Gibraltar Finance.

375 In December we also announced that we will begin a process by which we will integrate blockchain technology to complement our e-government systems. The technology builds upon and enhances the functionality provided by e-services, with the focus of the initial phase being to enable users to store Government-issued and certified credentials in a digital wallet. We are grateful to our partners, IOV Labs and Bitso. As Parliament knows, this is at zero cost to the taxpayer.

GANT, in Q3 of 2021, has established a working group which includes industry representatives and Gibraltar Finance, which will, in due course, provide guidance and recommendations on the decentralised space, DeFi, and how Gibraltar can safely engage further in this industry.

On 26th November 2021 we announced, after a rigorous review and consultation process with GFIA, the Limited Partnerships Act and the Protected Cell Limited Partnerships Act. This new framework keeps our legislation up to date, competitive and able to attract business globally. In March 2022, after a long but beneficial engagement with GFIA, we also announced new legislation to allow for a dual funds regime for experienced investor funds (EIFs). My thanks to GFIA, who were patient as we trawled through all the consequences to ensure there were no unintended consequences of the work that we did to enable them to have these EIFs opting out of the EU regime, which we still have on our books for accessing the UK market. They are now able to compete globally, as Cayman and other international jurisdictions do.

In June 2022 Gibraltar was recognised in the PwC Fourth Annual Global Crypto Hedge Fund Report as the third best jurisdiction in the world to set up your crypto hedge fund. That is an important report and I think it sends a signal on the credibility of the work that we have done and the success we have enjoyed. It is the second consecutive year we are ranked third in the world in respect of crypto hedge fund domiciliation. My congratulations to the sector.

The public/private sector partnership is critical to everything we do, and I must thank the Gibraltar Finance Centre Council for their work and support this past year, outgoing Chair and Vice-Chair Nick Cruz and Marc Ellul for their sterling work over the past 24 months, and incoming Chair and Vice-Chair Shaun Cawdery and Emma Lejeune – I look forward to working closely with them for the benefit of the industry. I must also thank the member associations with whom we have worked closely and who have proven themselves to be a valued and important part of our partnership with the private sector.

In April of this year, Government set up a working policy group on financial services to advise Government on all aspects of the sector, including our product range, new areas of business and how we can improve our offering more generally. The group has done a huge amount of work and has met with all areas of the industry and engaged in detailed discussion on all these areas. I am much looking forward to engaging with them and working to deliver their thinking. The members of the group are Reshma Bhambhwani, Charles Bottaro, Louise Cruz, Nigel Feetham QC, Jonathan Garcia and Jay Gomez.

The GFSC, under the leadership of Kerry Blight, its CEO, have emerged from the COVID period with a rapid return to business as usual. Their work on the GAR is worthy of particular mention, as is their work in managing their day-to-day business against significant staffing challenges. My thanks to Kerry and the senior management team, as well as the chair and members of the board of the GFSC for their continued good work.

I must also thank my team at Gibraltar Finance, including Jimmy Tipping, our CEO, and our senior executives Mike Ashton, Paul Astengo and Tim Haynes for their work this year. As we emerge from COVID they will be at the forefront of our efforts to once more bang the ‘Think Gibraltar’ drum.

The transition back to normality for the Gibraltar International Bank following the peak of the COVID pandemic has been seamless, and the bank is now servicing the needs of the local community once again. Economic activity has reverted to pre-COVID levels, with the bank continuing to perform well and maintaining a stable deposit base over the last 12 months, currently standing at £1.173 billion – a remarkable deposit figure. The bank currently has over 19,000 clients, who hold over 32,000 accounts. With regard to loans and mortgages, the book currently stands at some £321 million. The bank has forecasted a profit for this year to March 2022 – and I say forecasted – of £3.2 million.

430 The bank has worked hard this year to deal with a large number of attempted scams. The bank has responded well to this challenge, altering its policies to combat fraud and continuing to communicate with its clients on the risks of disclosing personal information to anyone.

Finally, Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the CEO, Mr Lawrence Podesta, who has, unfortunately, announced his intention to retire. Lawrence was there on day one of the creation of the bank and was the architect of everything we have done. The unquestionable success that this bank has been in no small measure due to his professionalism and expertise, for which I will always be grateful. I must also thank his excellent senior management team and staff, and indeed the board, who under the chair of Albert Langston continue to drive the bank forward. My sincere thanks to them all.

440 Interest in our jurisdiction as a place for people to operate internationally as a gambling business remains strong, albeit this creates pressure on the local employment market. The gambling sector in 2021-22 has remained vibrant with employee numbers remaining stable at around 3,500, reflected in stable PAYE revenues. Hon. Members will recall that in 2011, when this Government was elected, the number stood at around 2,000. I think despite Brexit, when all of these businesses restructured to provide for their EU business – out of Malta, primarily – that we have continued to hold strong, stable numbers is a testament to this jurisdiction, and I think that deserves to be mentioned.

445 Merger and acquisition in the sector was a strong feature before the downturn in financial markets, but this has not caused pressure on overall licence numbers. The Government introduced change of control fees in anticipation of the merger and acquisition activity, which has allowed cost recovery for the detailed due diligence work that is conducted on these companies.

450 From April 2021 to March 2022 there were three new B2C licences issued and one B2B. There is a pipeline of eight new licences in train – five of those are B2B and three of those are B2C – and we have seen two new licences granted to a company that has repatriated an element of its business to Gibraltar.

455 There has been some reduction this year in Corporation Tax receipts, but we expect the yield to recover by 2023. The overall sector contribution to Government revenues is well in excess of £65 million.

460 Because of well-known factors, there has been some delay to the introduction of the Gambling Bill. A Command Paper has now been drafted and we expect consultation with the industry and wider stakeholders to take place before and during the summer months with a view to the Bill coming before Parliament in the autumn. We have already started the process of one-to-one consultation with our stakeholders and will work through their comments and contributions to our work. The hon. Member opposite is welcome to engage with us in respect of the Bill and I would be very happy to arrange for him to meet with us and the regulator to deal with any questions he may have in respect of what we are proposing.

465 Additional but proportionate resources have been granted to the Gambling Division to enable it to cope with a new licensing regime, including the personal licensing of key individuals. There will be extensive consultation and an increased amount of policy work to embed this new framework. The framework aims to maintain high regulatory standards, including international best practice in social responsibility, whilst maintaining Gibraltar's attractiveness as a business hub.

470 I am also pleased to report the opening of the Centre for Excellence in Responsible Gaming. The Centre is now engaged in active research and cementing its international standing. I am grateful to the team at the University of Gibraltar, Catherine and Dean in particular, who have helped us put this together, and, of course, Prof. Zsolt, who has already commenced the work and is making fantastic progress. I must also thank our gaming firms who have agreed to participate with us in making a real contribution to better understanding responsible gambling and how best we can each work to identify, arrest and support problem gambling.

480 The Gambling Division have done extremely well this year under their quiet but eminently professional head, Andrew Lyman. They manage their significant business workload with no fuss, delivering efficient licensing and regulatory oversight, and enjoy my full confidence. They have been instrumental in the preparation of the new Gambling Bill, together with the drafting team of the three Peters.

485 The Liaison department – and I talk about them as if they were some huge department: Lizanne Ochello and Tania Pereira – since its inception in 2013 has continued to be instrumental in providing support to the gaming and finance sectors. In November 2021, the Liaison department created a one-stop shop to offer support to persons referred by the Special Needs and Disability Unit. The department helps some of the most vulnerable people in our society access all 490 Government services. The department has also been given the responsibility to deliver and assist the public in accessing support from the Customer Services Hub at 323 Main Street, which will service anyone seeking assistance in any interaction with the Government.

Mr Speaker, moving on to GBC, the new Broadcasting House was inaugurated on Tuesday, 19th October 2021 by the Chief Minister. I am happy to say that the operation has resulted in a 495 seamless transition without interruption to service. That in itself is a phenomenal achievement. Production teams have worked hard to raise the quality of programmes during the last 12 months. A major effort has been made to improve studio-based television shows, all of which have benefitted from new sets and branding.

On Wednesday, 15th December the GBC Open Day was held, raising a record-breaking 500 £185,000 for local worthy causes. This will enable the Open Day Charitable Trust to support a variety of projects nominated by locally registered charities throughout this year.

On 8th May, Gerard Teuma, our CEO, retired after 38 years of service, the last 10 as CEO. During his tenure, Gerard oversaw the transition to digital technology in 2013 and many other changes – 505 too many to mention today, but perhaps his legacy will be the huge task in successfully relocating Broadcasting House to its new home. I thank Gerard and wish him a very healthy and long retirement. I would also like to congratulate Mr James Neish on his appointment as the new CEO of GBC. He will take up his appointment in October and I look forward to seeing his work as we now take GBC to its next level of development. The community expects, and I am sure James will deliver.

510 I must thank Pepe Caruana, the chair of the board and its members for their work throughout the year, and especially for having managed so successfully the selection process for the next CEO and for their work on developing a strategy for the future of GBC. My thanks to them all.

Mr Speaker, AquaGib continues to successfully service contracts in respect of potable, seawater and sewerage services in Gibraltar. As the Chief Minister has already announced, the 515 Government intends to acquire the shares in AquaGib currently held by our partners and take full ownership of the company. The negotiations have been driven by the Financial Secretary with my full support. We will, of course, continue to invest in capital projects as part of the asset replacement plan, including the replacement of potable and saltwater mains across all areas in Gibraltar and the new potable and seawater infrastructure for the Eastside development and OHL
520 tunnel project. Additionally, this year AquaGib will make a significant investment in additional production capability for the first time since 2011, to ensure that our potable water requirements are met for years to come. This will be an exciting time for AquaGib and I look forward to continuing to work with them.

With respect to the Gibraltar Electricity Authority, there has been significant progress in the 525 fine-tuning of the new North Mole power station. As one can imagine ... Mr Speaker, my apologies, my eyesight with this light is causing me a bit of an issue. The North Mole power station generated approximately 182 million units during the last financial year. Regarding emissions, this again saw a decrease in CO₂ emissions of about 4% from 123,000 tonnes to 119,000 tonnes in 2021.

530 Mr Speaker, may I have a five-minute break?

Mr Speaker: The House will recess for five minutes.

The House recessed at 10.55 a.m. and resumed at 10.58 a.m.

Appropriation Bill 2022 –
Second Reading –

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I am grateful. I have moved a bit to the right, with your leave, so I do not have this light running on top of this very white paper.

535 The North Mole power station generated approximately 182 million units during the last financial year, 2021-22. In respect of emissions, we saw a decrease of about 4%. It is expected that upon the release of the North Mole temporary rental plant there will be a further drop to under 90,000 tonnes per annum, which will be close to 50% of what our emissions were in 2016 when all power generation was derived from diesel. That is a significant reduction in a short period of time.

540 The GEA is actively pursuing the installation of a battery energy storage system. This will effectively make our power generation solution a hybrid one. This initiative will serve to mitigate any potential power outages and it will contribute to fewer emissions by minimising spinning reserve and enabling the more efficient use of the integrated renewable energy sources within our grid. I hope to have this tender published in the coming months. It could also result in a 545 significant financial saving.

Mr Speaker, turning to ITLD, as we move out of the global pandemic and return to the office environment the ITLD team has responded to these challenges by implementing measures to reduce working from home services and to further develop and enhance Government systems. It is clear that technological infrastructures are critical to Government operations. Data security and 550 privacy has become progressively more important, not just for the Government but also for our citizens. In order to keep up to date with these ever-evolving technological trends and patterns, the following initiatives are currently being worked on by the Department: migration to a hybrid Office 365 setup; the implementation of additional advanced email protection systems; preparation and planning for a full server technology refreshment and migration programme; the 555 continued development of application programming interfaces for application and system integration with e-services; continuation of the rolling out of email encryption services; co-ordinating departmental relocations in terms of IT infrastructure and provisioning network connectivity. I am grateful to Tyrone Manasco, the Director of ITLD, and his team for their work in these and many other areas. Human nature is quick to shout when systems are down, but not 560 when they are working perfectly – which is, thankfully, most of the time.

Mr Speaker, turning to digital services, the Government's ERP platform has now been operational for over a year. This combines procurement, purchasing and financial accounting to form one system. Centralised reporting will enable the Treasury and the Office of the Financial Secretary to interrogate live data and have access to corresponding reports. Variations of the 565 same will shortly be introduced to all Government Departments and organisations, and the work continues. Today, Government invoices are processed centrally by a team of four people and this can only be done with the use of automation. As an example, last financial year, the team processed 58,000 invoices. We expect this number to increase as we on-board more Government suppliers and service providers. The current list of e-services can be found on the Gibraltar 570 Government website. There are over 25,000 registered users and more than 100,000 applications have been processed online. Existing e-services have been enhanced and a number of new Departments will be on-boarded in the coming months. Those up and coming include Employment, the Property Register, the GHA, Tax, Housing and the Office of Fair Trading.

575 Moving on to the GHA and ERS, it will not go unmissed that health and care systems globally have been most seriously impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic. Not only has this tested the resilience and agility of the health and residential care system in a crisis, it has also diverted attention from the day-to-day delivery of previously agreed strategic initiatives and priorities.
Furthermore, having to deal with cross-border logistics which were further complicated by Brexit arrangements, while there were extreme challenges with supply chain issues due to the pandemic, 580 all combined to result in the GHA and ERS having to make decisions against a background of extreme uncertainty to ensure that essential emergency health services and residential care services continued to function to protect the most vulnerable in our community.

The combined impact of these factors has placed the GHA, ERS and Public Health staff who supported these efforts under enormous pressure – indeed, like never before. However, it also 585 brought together those in Health and residential care across the public sector, the voluntary sector and the wider community. There is no question that this coming together of all these services and the community has undeniably lessened the impact of the pandemic on our people and undoubtedly saved many lives from this deadly virus, but the real heroes have been our frontline staff. They have put their lives on the line every day to protect the people of Gibraltar, day in, day 590 out during the course of this pandemic, something we must not forget, and I thank each and every one of them for their total, unconditional commitment and professionalism.

As of 19th May, 18,000 individuals have tested positive since the beginning of the pandemic.
As well as being thankful for those we have protected and treated, we should never forget the lives we have sadly lost, including health and care staff. It is testament to the tenacity and 595 commitment of the GHA and care staff across all disciplines and those who supported us through the pandemic that the Authority has continued to deliver all that was required of it to help Gibraltar survive this crisis. I do not apologise for listing just a few of these examples, which I believe should be mentioned: rapidly and consistently securing a stock of vaccines for a highly successful programme; quickly expanding local laboratory testing and genomic sequencing with 600 swift access to results, with performance that exceeded that of the UK at the peak of the pandemic; increasingly strong containment of outbreaks and protection of vulnerable adults; establishment of a 111 service to ensure that people had ongoing medical advice and support and were signposted as we managed outbreaks; promptly adapting our residential services to ensure protection of older people and managing their healthcare needs without the need for admission 605 to hospital; and getting Gibraltar on the green list for travel before most other destinations in Europe. This House will know that healthcare systems have been fully tested around the globe and many have not fared so well, or indeed been able to reopen and safely implement their exit strategies at such an early stage as we have. It will take some time until we fully understand the impact that COVID-19 has had on the people of Gibraltar, but we have learnt so much in respect 610 of promoting and protecting the health of the population. We will use these important lessons to guide our thinking for the future.

In spite of those pressures, the GHA and ERS have continued to deliver their services across our community. Some examples: supporting and treating the most vulnerable, including those with cancer, where we have significantly reduced admissions to hospital; delivering all urgent 615 outpatient work with minimal disruption, even where there were enormous pressures and diversion of resources to manage inpatients during the pandemic; strengthening local laboratory capability beyond COVID-19 testing so we can provide a local service rather than outsourcing; starting the process to digitise hospital records in a move towards creating a fully electronic record; strengthening pathways of care across many specialties, including older people's services, 620 mental health, primary care and A&E services; continuing to progress development of a modern ENT facility to be opened by the end of this summer; delivering several key milestones in the National Mental Health Strategy; and planning the move of the chemotherapy unit to more appropriate accommodation.

As we emerge from the pandemic, the GHA family of services is embarking on the 625 implementation of a Reset, Restart and Recover Strategy designed not only to help get us back on course and address the impact of the pandemic but also to improve and modernise our services. The Authority is already beginning to work towards stabilising its workforce; implementing a programme of improvements to its facilities and to upgrade and replace key diagnostic equipment; to improve systems for booking services – we understand, accept and appreciate 630 people’s frustrations at the PCC booking system and will resolve this, it is not good enough but we will get there; strengthening patient safety and patient liaison arrangements; and strengthening local services so that people do not have to leave Gibraltar for treatment.

The GHA board, which is made up of executives and non-executives and is led by an independent chair, Prof. Ian Cumming, and the Director General, has met and approved an initial 635 set of objectives for the forthcoming year and details of these will be published by the GHA in the forthcoming months. I am grateful to them for all their continued work. In the months to come more details of these objectives will be made public. All are intended to improve the quality of the care we provide and deliver to our community value for money in the provision of these services.

I would like to end by thanking the GHA and care staff for the fabulous work they do in keeping 640 us safe and healthy and always putting the needs of our people first. There is no question that devotion and care save lives – easy to say, but difficult to do. I must specifically thank Mr Patrick Geoghegan, our Director General, and his senior management team at the GHA. In the short time I have worked with him I have been most impressed not only with his knowledge and expertise, 645 but more importantly with his calm energy and determination to address the challenges we face at the GHA and deliver his vision for a service we can all be proud of. It is a privilege to work with him and support him in all of these areas, and I am confident that his efforts will result in real and tangible change in the manner we provide healthcare in Gibraltar.

I now turn to my responsibilities in respect of the Care Agency. I am delighted to report that 650 Learning Disability Services were able to maintain people’s quality of life, despite the impact that COVID-19 has understandably had on everyone. In collaboration with Public Health, the service was still able to provide support to service users and families and was able to keep St Bernadette’s Resource Centre open throughout the year. Remarkably, staff sickness levels were down this year despite COVID-19. The Care Agency continues to recognise that one of its most important 655 resources is its staff. It is committed to the training, learning and development of its entire workforce so that they will gain the necessary skills and knowledge to reach their full potential and provide safe and informed care. Another noteworthy achievement is the creation of the Community Learning Disability Team, which supports service users and their families throughout their lifetime. It consists of a team of social workers and respite managers that aims to work in 660 collaboration with other professionals to ensure that the individual service users’ needs are met. The team hosts drop-in sessions where information and advice is provided to people with learning disabilities, their families, or carers.

Targeted investment has also helped to improve physical assets, including the acquisition of 665 three flats within the community, and therapeutic equipment such as sensory integration apparatus, interactive smart boards, education resources and materials for sessions in the therapeutic programmes offered to service users, to help them achieve their individual aims and objectives. Sporting and leisure activities have also been developed further, such as the partnership with the Gibraltar Football Association which has now been established. I am grateful to them also. The scheme effects bespoke coaching sessions delivered to service users.

The Bella Vista Day Centre had two periods of closure, between July and August 2021 and again
670 between December and February of this year. In order to ensure service users’ needs continued to be met, reviews and assessments were carried out and packages of care provided to ensure the well-being and safety of those remaining in their own homes during these times. Vulnerable individuals who were COVID positive were supported by a specific team to prevent hospital 675 admission and reduce the spread of the virus. In addition, Adult Services have been integral in organising the delivery of medical supplies, food and therapeutic activities. The Waterport Day Centre has remained open and continues to provide a service for our elderly community – some of whom are socially isolated, having little or no family or community support – to socialise in a safe and stimulating environment.

680 The Care Agency’s Children’s Social Work team have continued to receive a high volume of referrals and have seen an increase in the number of referrals from previous years. The Social Work team are currently working with over 300 children and their families to support and safeguard them. The team continue to work tirelessly to ensure that children are safeguarded and a significant amount of advice, support and practical help is provided to families within our 685 community to ensure that children can, where appropriate, safely remain at home. The team at the Family Centre have increased their workload to cover for children and families in need early on, to ensure that families receive parenting support.

The Therapeutic team, under the Care Agency CEO, have taken on the management and clinical lead on Drugs Alcohol Rehabilitation Services to include both Bruce’s Farm residential services and 690 Drugs and Alcohol community services. The head of service and lead counsellor have led on this project and, together with the new homes manager, nurse and staff, have completely revised and restructured all three operational, residential and community-based programmes to include an established drugs and alcohol pathway plan with GHA Psychiatry, which focuses on the importance of an inter-agency approach.

695 I am pleased to report that the out-of-hours service provided by the social work team is now being streamlined via the 111 line.

I am also delighted that the Care Agency was awarded, this year, a staff well-being at work recognition award as well as the Mayor’s Award in 2021, a small but important recognition of the great work provided by the Agency to our community. Carlos Banderas and his team deliver a 700 quality of care and service to our users that is difficult to understand. They are totally committed and I am sincerely grateful to them for their dedication and sacrifice in caring for others, even at such difficult times as those we have endured in the past 24 months.

Mr Speaker, I must close by thanking the team in my office for looking after me this year and for their untiring work in supporting me as we strive to deliver our different objectives. They all 705 work in different areas but each is critical to our progress. Julian, Karon, Gareth, Karl and Natalie are all supporting my work in different areas of responsibility and I am sincerely grateful to each and every one of them for their total commitment. I must also thank my secretary, Lourdes, who retires in the coming weeks and I wish her a long and healthy retirement. My sincere thanks to each and all of them – and, indeed, Mr Speaker, to you and your staff in this Parliament for looking 710 after us all so well during the course of the year.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Vijay Daryanani.

715 Minister for Business, Tourism and the Port (Hon. V Daryanani): Mr Speaker, it is an absolute privilege to deliver my second Budget speech to this House as Minister for Business, Tourism and the Port. During the course of my contribution, I will report on the projects undertaken over the past financial year and I will set out my Ministry’s objectives for this financial year.

Let me start with tourism and by saying that the Government was delighted to announce the appointment of Mr Kevin Bossino as the new CEO of the Gibraltar Tourist Board. Mr Bossino will 720 take up his post on 1st September 2022. Mr Bossino has worked in the tourism industry internationally, having worked in nine different countries in Europe and Asia. He is currently Vice-President (Operations) for the global hotel chain Accor, overseeing the Singapore and South Malaysia regions, comprising 27 hotels. He commenced his career in Gibraltar at the Rock Hotel and subsequently moved overseas, kick-starting his international career in Europe, moving to 725 Venice, London and Spain, before setting his sights on Asia, where he spent most of his time in Hong Kong and Singapore whilst experiencing the Philippines, Vietnam and Indonesia. As I have already said publicly, I never expected that a Gibraltarian with exceptional tourism experience would be selected, having the right credentials and over 30 years of working abroad in this field.

730 Kevin has worked for some of the top hotel chains internationally and has huge experience in providing high-level customer care. I look forward to working with him in the ensuing months and years.

Mr Speaker, let me say that my aim for tourism during the last year and going forward is to continue making Gibraltar visible to tourists and the wider market. The Government has had a long-held view that its presence at different trade fairs to promote Gibraltar as a tourism destination is, in particular, subject to the criterion of value for money. This is all the more relevant in the context of the huge financial cost of the COVID-19 pandemic. It may change from year to year, depending on the circumstances of the moment. There are occasions when the important activity is not exhibiting at a trade fair as such, but rather the meetings with key decision-makers that are arranged around it. I have also met senior executives, when their diaries have permitted, on different occasions. A lot of work goes on behind the scenes and numerous conversations take place, but of course these are all commercial in-confidence.

In September I participated in a UK tourism conference by Travel Weekly. I addressed a high-level delegation of UK tourism leaders at a conference billed 'The Future of Tourism'. The conference also discussed topics such as sustainable growth for the future and facing a new reality after COVID. This was the first face-to-face travel-industry event in the UK of this kind since the pandemic. It offered the perfect opportunity to network with senior players in the tourism industry. At this event guest speakers included Gary Wilson, Chief Executive of easyJet Holidays; Steve Heapy, Chief Executive of Jet2; and executives from the cruising industry. Tourism is an extremely competitive industry and it is imperative that the Gibraltar brand is kept at the forefront of people's minds. It is extremely important for Gibraltar to be seen and share its experience through the pandemic, while also relaying to the trade how the destination is ready to build forward. The feedback that I get from the local shareholders is extremely positive. I am asked to continue marketing Gibraltar proactively and energetically, and this is what I intend to do.

In October, the Gibraltar Tourist Board exhibited at the Meetings Show in London. This was the first live edition of this international event in over two years. The meetings and event industry is one of the most lucrative sectors of tourism globally and, having been hard hit by the pandemic, is a key area for rebuild. The Gibraltar stand worked over 40 pre-scheduled meetings across two days. It is important for Gibraltar to show a physical presence at this show as the market re-emerges. Business relationships with meeting planners take time to establish and it is crucial that we are able to build business for the years ahead.

Also in October I attended the World Routes Conference in Milan. World Routes is the annual meeting place for airlines, airports, tourism authorities and other aviation stakeholders. It is where the world's airlines' network planners meet with tourism authorities and their airports in order to evaluate existing air services and explore the potential for new ones. At the event I participated in a tourism round-table discussion. Several points were discussed, like the importance of tourism in the economy, how destinations can help bring tourists' confidence back and how Gibraltar has coped during the pandemic, in particular how dedicated our people were in keeping the virus at bay and the excellent vaccine rollout. I also took the opportunity to host a dinner for the British Airways team attending the conference. The aviation industry has taken a battering, so they are even more careful with new business, but we need to showcase Gibraltar's case at every opportunity possible. This was an extremely important stage for Gibraltar, and it was imperative that we should be present. I held numerous meetings with prospective airlines wanting to fly to Gibraltar. It is not easy to attract new airlines and open up new routes, but we will always keep pursuing. Connectivity and growth go hand in hand. My aim continues to be putting Gibraltar on the map and making sure our brand name is at the forefront of people's minds. The event provided, in particular, a great opportunity to discuss Gibraltar and aviation in general with the top executives of the three most important low-cost airlines in Europe – easyJet, Ryanair and Wizz Air.

I will carry on engaging with all airlines that fly to Gibraltar and prospective airlines that one day might want to fly to Gibraltar. As we will have heard over the last few weeks, the airline industry is going through a very difficult time with cancellations due to a shortage of staff and huge demand. Only last week in Kigali, where I was attending the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting, I met the CEO of Heathrow Airport. He told me that the current times are extremely challenging and never experienced before. So it is important, more than ever, to continue working on our relationship with the airlines as regularly as possible.

In November I attended the World Travel Market in London. The World Travel Market is the leading global conference for the international travel industry and is an excellent opportunity for tourism representatives to meet and conduct business. Gibraltar had a stand, where it was able to showcase our tourism product and allowed us to host meetings with industry executives during the event. The conference gave me the opportunity to meet executives from the travel trade. Also, I was interviewed by the prestigious Travel Weekly magazine and by Mr Simon Calder, the leading travel journalist. I also had the opportunity to meet with David Dingle, Chairman of Carnival Cruises UK, and share the Government's vision on cruising with one of the most crucial companies in the sector. I was delighted that my UK counterpart, the Hon. Nigel Huddleston, Minister for Tourism, Heritage and Sport, visited our stand and I was able to brief him on Gibraltar, how it had fared over the last 18 months and my plans for the future. I also had the opportunity of meeting with the Minister for Tourism of Israel, Mr Yoel Razvozov, where joint initiatives were touched upon. Our participation at this event was extremely successful as we managed to keep on raising our profile in the UK, which is the main source market for overnight tourism in Gibraltar. We have made tremendous inroads in highlighting what our destination has to offer.

In February this year I attended the CONNECT Route Development Forum in Tampere, Finland. Once again, I held a series of meetings with airlines, airports and tourism officials. At the event, I formed part of a panel discussion titled 'Tourism Recovery Strategies', where I was questioned on the work that had been done during COVID, plans for the future, the EU treaty and specifically how the EU treaty would affect Gibraltar International Airport, if aviation formed part of it.

In March I hosted a working breakfast for some members of the travel press at Gibraltar House in London. Attending the briefing were travel writers from Business Traveller, Conde Nast Traveller, BA Highlife, and Travel Bulletin, amongst others. I was also interviewed by the editor of Business Traveller, Tom Otley. It is important to talk face to face with the UK travel press and keep them abreast of what is happening in Gibraltar. As I mentioned a few moments ago, the UK is our main source market for overnight tourism, and our hotels, hospitality and retail trade will benefit from this. I hope to host another, similar event with different journalists soon. The interest in Gibraltar is at an all-time high but we cannot be complacent. We need to keep at it, always making sure that the Gibraltar brand name is distinctly visible in the high echelons of the tourism industry. I also hosted a marketing event in Edinburgh with travel agents and the local Scottish press. The event created a lot of interest, with many travel agents now intending to push Gibraltar as a city break. We live in an extremely competitive market and these bespoke marketing events are the way forward.

Towards the end of April, I attended Seatrade Cruise Global in Miami. I was supposed to attend two years ago but this was postponed due to the pandemic. Seatrade Global is one of the world's largest annual cruise industry gatherings. The event is where the cruise industry's most influential leaders, from top cruise line executives to port leaders, have been coming together for over 20 years. I held numerous meetings with the largest cruise companies, with the discussions primarily focusing on increasing cruise calls in the short term. Other projects were also discussed; these being based on developing Gibraltar as the port of choice in the Mediterranean. I was also interviewed by various international cruise press. I was able to put across Gibraltar's ambition as we try to cement our position as the jewel of the Mediterranean. Out Port is considered one of the most important in the area; however, there is strong competition with other destinations. Our presence at these events is imperative if we really want to promote our Port as a premier cruise destination. Business does not come instantaneously, as some might naively fantasise; it takes time, and we will keep on working at full throttle to achieve this.

835 In February we announced that the Gibraltar Tourist Board had been confirmed as a new long-term associate partner of Cruise Line International Association (CLIA) UK and Ireland. CLIA is the world's largest cruise industry association, providing a unified voice and leading authority of the global cruise community. On behalf of its members, CLIA supports policies and practices that foster a secure, healthy and sustainable cruise ship environment, promoting positive travel experiences for more than 30 million passengers who have cruised annually. CLIA membership includes the world's most prestigious ocean, river and specialty cruise lines, a highly trained and certified travel agent community and widespread industry stakeholders including ports and destination, ship development, suppliers and business services. CLIA represents 95% of the world's ocean-going cruise capacity, as well as 54,000 travel agents and 15,000 of the largest travel agencies in the world. Therefore, the partnership with CLIA will enhance Gibraltar's brand awareness across the region, bringing them into CLIA's wider community of cruise lines, travel agents and stakeholders. As part of the agreement with CLIA, the Gibraltar Tourist Board sponsored CLIA's flagship main conference in Southampton at the end of May. This event received trade exposure via CLIA's website, newsletter and yearbook. There is no doubt that the cruise sector is extremely important to the Gibraltar economy, and I look forward to working with CLIA in fulfilling our goal to make Gibraltar the port of choice in the Mediterranean.

850 In December, Gibraltar will host the CAPA 2022 World Aviation Summit. The two-day summit will draw aviation and travel representatives from around the world, supported with a live stream of the event available to those unable to attend in person. This is an extremely prestigious event in the world's aviation calendar. It is expected that the top airline executives will be visiting Gibraltar. I look forward to welcoming delegates from all over the world and working with CAPA to make this summit a huge success. This will bring unprecedented exposure for Gibraltar in the aviation industry.

860 During the year I have met with the Moroccan Community Association. The Moroccan community is an integral part of the Gibraltarian family and, until recently, was having an extremely difficult time visiting Morocco during the pandemic, in particular due to the lack of sea and air links. Also, Morocco was on a prolonged lockdown. The Government has left no stone unturned in trying to achieve air and sea links with Morocco. In November last year I held a series of meetings with a number of airlines in Casablanca, but unfortunately the airlines had been forced, as a result of financial considerations due to the pandemic, to cancel a number of their less profitable routes. We will continue working on, albeit in a difficult situation. That said, we continued to work in trying to resume a sea link and, together with FRS, we were able to announce the resumption of the ferry service between Gibraltar and Tangier in April. This had only been possible after the opening of Morocco's sea borders and permission being granted by the Moroccan authorities. I am extremely pleased for our Moroccan community who are now able to visit family in Morocco, as they have suffered the most without the service. Links with Morocco are extremely important and I look forward to new opportunities after Brexit, especially those linked to tourism and business.

875 Mr Speaker, as hon. Members are no doubt aware, the cruising industry was hard hit due to the pandemic, with most cruises cancelled and ships returning to their home ports. Throughout the pandemic we were in constant communication with all operators. In August last year I was delighted to welcome the first official cruise call since the beginning of the pandemic. Wind Surf, from Windstar Cruises, arrived in Gibraltar on 13th August 2021. Gibraltar was included in its itinerary as part of their Mediterranean cruise. A limited number of passengers were allowed to disembark, due to COVID-19 protocols at the time. May I remind the House that, at the time, the Gibraltar Government did not have any restrictions for tourists to visit Gibraltar at large, as was detailed in our Cruise Safe and Secure booklet; it was cruise companies themselves that had their own procedures which restricted passengers going ashore unless they had a pre-booked tour. September saw the gradual return of cruise liners to Gibraltar. On 6th September the Spirit of Discovery arrived in Gibraltar with some 400 passengers disembarking to visit local tourist sites on pre-booked 'bubble' tours. Towards the end of September, we saw the return of cruise passengers 885 in Main Street with the arrival of the Marella Explorer. This was the first commercial cruise since before the start of the pandemic that allowed passengers to disembark into the town centre without restricting them to 'bubble' excursions. There is no doubt this was a welcome return for traders, who had missed out on the cruise passenger clients during the previous 18 months. In 2021 Gibraltar received 44 cruise ships, of which five were inaugural calls.

890 The industry is now picking up, with 185 cruises scheduled for this year and 163 booked for 2023 as things stand at the moment. This year alone we will be welcoming 21 new cruise ships to the Rock. January saw the arrival of MS Iona, the new flagship of P&O Cruises, a subsidiary of Carnival Corporation PLC. It is one of the largest cruise ships, with a capacity of 5,200 passengers and 1,800 crew, and also their first LNG-powered vessel. On this occasion the ship was carrying 895 2,484 passengers and 1,657 crew. On 12th April we welcomed two inaugural cruise calls to Gibraltar on the same day. The Le Bougainville is the third ship of the Explorer class of cruise ships operated by Ponant, and the Costa Deliziosa is owned by Carnival Corporation and operated by Costa Crociere. More recently, in May, Gibraltar saw the arrival of the Valiant Lady on its first inaugural call. This is a new ship from the new cruise company Virgin Voyages and will be calling 900 here five times this year. I am delighted to see the quick recovery we are making with cruise calls.
This shows the popularity of Gibraltar as a port of call, but it also demonstrates the results of the hard work being done by the Government to get the cruise sector back on track. The Government is committed to the cruising industry for Gibraltar and I will continue my efforts with itinerary planners to make sure Gibraltar is included in future cruises. At the same time, I will keep on 905 working energetically, engaging with cruise executives worldwide, as I know how important cruising is to our economy.

Event-led tourism will continue to be a priority and I hope to see more international events return to the Rock. There are, at present, discussions being held, and I look forward to being able to make some announcements during the course of the next 12 months.

910 Finally, I believe we are now turning the tide and Gibraltar's tourism market is now looking at a brighter future after the effects of the pandemic over the last two years. Main Street is a lot busier and business owners tell me that things are a lot better. May I take this opportunity to thank the staff at the GTB for their support during the year.

I now move on to the Air Terminal. Mr Speaker, 2021 saw a gradual slow recovery in traffic.
915 The successful rollout of the vaccination programme resulted in Gibraltar being added to the United Kingdom's list of green countries. We saw growth increasing from May through to December, with this continuing into the first quarter of 2022, and by the end of 2021 passenger figures totalled 262,522, an increase of 41% over 2020. The capacity for 2022 is expected to be very close, if not the same as what it stood at in 2019 before the pandemic started. I am sure all 920 airports worldwide would be delighted with this outcome.

I would like to say a few words about the suspension of flights by Wizz Air and also by Eastern Airways. I can only imagine the Opposition spokesman for tourism rubbing his hands together with glee when this announcement was made, because deep down he does not wish the Government to succeed. Let me remind the hon. Member that Wizz Air announced its decision to 925 suspend the Luton route. I quote:

As a result of the uncertain outlook for travel at the moment due to COVID restrictions, we have had to make a number of adjustments to our schedule. This decision has not been made lightly. We are constantly reviewing our schedule and would be keen on re-entering the Gibraltar market when it makes most business sense for us, at the earliest opportunity.

We need to realise that we are facing unprecedented times as COVID is still lurking in the background, and all this causes huge uncertainty. As a consequence, all airlines are constantly looking at their route networks and trying their best to protect their finances. With respect to Eastern Airways, the airline made a substantial loss on flying to Gibraltar last year. In our 930 discussions with them earlier this year they suggested that the only way they could make the routes work was if the Government subsidised the operation. We took the prudent decision not to do so. We must respect their decision, as commercially it does not work for them at the moment. I look forward to engaging with them on this matter later on this year. Whilst it is disappointing, it is understandable that airlines need to protect their finances, like any other business. Surely the spokesman for tourism understands this, and that this certainly is not the time to gloat and play politics at the expense of Gibraltar's long-term ambitions.

Gibraltar International Airport has seen continued growth in the area of non-scheduled services over the past four years. Non-scheduled services comprise the full spectrum of aircraft movements that do not form part of the regular scheduled services occupied by airlines and are as varied as light general aviation aircraft, business and corporate charters and medium to large private aircraft operated by their owners. Mr Speaker, 2019 saw 401 aircraft operate into Gibraltar Airport, a 5.2% increase over 2018, when 381 operated. Mr Speaker, 2020 proved to be an extremely difficult year for scheduled services and the aviation industry in general, with air travel practically grinding to a halt worldwide. This resulted in non-scheduled services only dropping 2.5% to 391 annual movements. The work done by the Government to recuperate our scheduled services in 2021 has clearly not affected this type of operation, with an even higher increase of 19.9% in 2021 in comparison with 2020 and an annual record of 469 non-scheduled aircraft using Gibraltar Airport during the year. A total of 3,821 passengers flew on these flights, and this also shows an increase of 4.4% over the 3,659 carried in 2020. The summer schedule for 2022 will, at its height, offer 39 weekly flights to five airports. As the whole of the aviation industry slowly emerges from two years of considerable disruption, decline and loss of business, load factors for the first quarter of 2022 were very positive as a direct result of the United Kingdom beginning to drop COVID-19 restrictions, which led to more persons starting to travel. Also, because of the Government's ongoing booster vaccination programme, combined with our marketing efforts, we were able to retain our core routes.

940

955

A very important operational factor has come about as a result of the Government's position with regard to the role of the Air Terminal during the pandemic. The fact that no one involved in the operational aspects of the Air Terminal's day-to-day running was furloughed has meant that members of staff employed in these organisations have continued with their mandatory training, competency and skill qualifications, leading to the various compliance obligations being maintained and allowing a seamless transition to the return of normality. This has not been the case in other airports, and hon. Members will be familiar with the press reports recently, where some airports are still facing major organisational hurdles in both recruiting and training, leading to major delays and very negative passenger experiences. In addition to this, airlines are also struggling to recruit and retrain crews to cope with the expected surge, and this may result in some minor amendments to the published flying programme on the days when they are faced with resource issues linked to this. After Monarch's demise, services to Manchester dropped to four flights per week. I have been trying to convince easyJet to fly daily on this route and it was encouraging to see that they did so last year. I am pleased to announce that easyJet has continued with the same frequency for this summer, creating greater connectivity to the North West of the United Kingdom and bringing Gibraltar Airport back to the pre-pandemic levels of traffic to that area.

960

970

Mr Speaker, I now move to the Port. A new Captain of the Port and CEO of the Gibraltar Port Authority was appointed in January this year. Mr John Ghio was appointed following the retirement of Mr Manuel Tirado from the post. May I take this opportunity, once again, to congratulate John on his promotion to Captain and to thank Manolo for his support and wish him an enjoyable and well-deserved retirement. I have no doubt that John will be an impressive Captain. We share the same level of ambition for our Port, and I look forward to working with him to make our Port even more successful.

975

The Port of Gibraltar has continued operations throughout the ups and downs of the COVID-19 pandemic, in no small part because of the dedication of all parties involved to ensure that operations continued with as little interruption as possible, while always being mindful of the serious nature of the virus. This is borne out by the level of activity for 2021 and in the early part of 2022. While some aspects of the marine industry are only now starting to show recovery, other operations have remained steady or bounced back, and in some cases exceeded pre-pandemic levels. In fact, vessel calls into Gibraltar were up by 5.81% in 2021 against 2019 figures. Bunkering calls and volumes for 2021 against 2019 figures have also reflected a healthy bounce back despite the ongoing global impact of the pandemic on shipping in general, with increases of 6.54% and 5.43% respectively. LNG bunkering operations also took place during 2021 following Shell's granting of a licence, with five bunkering operations being undertaken. While demand is still on the low side, it is envisaged that we will start to see further increases in this activity, especially in light of the global energy crisis versus the demand for this type of fuel, and it is something which will also add to the Port's continued development in improving the environmental performance of shipping, with Gibraltar continuing to lead the way in supporting the changeover to this fuel.

The Government is committed to achieving a net-zero strategy for our Port. This is a complex situation but we will continue consulting and working towards concrete solutions.

We also saw the return of cruise calls in the latter part of 2021 and we are now anticipating that numbers for 2022 will almost match pre-pandemic levels. As I said earlier, the cruising sector has taken a battering, but we are now on our way to recovery. As I have previously mentioned, this year we have 185 calls booked, only slightly down on pre-pandemic levels in 2019. We have done a lot of hard work behind the scenes over the last two years, which is starting to bear fruit, as can be seen with the figures for 2022. Yacht calls also reverted to healthy growth and reflected that Gibraltar has remained a port of choice as well as necessity for the yachting community. This is borne out by an increase of over 15% in levels of activity for the first four months of 2022 against 2019 figures.

While bunkering remains the mainstay of activity at the Port, we are always looking for opportunities to increase the variety of services and business opportunities for the local maritime industry and I am pleased to report that potable water services are now available for vessels visiting Gibraltar Port, something which is very much welcomed by the maritime industry. This additional service adds further weight to the array of services already available at Gibraltar Port.

Mr Speaker, 2021 saw the return of London International Shipping Week. This was the first in-person event in the shipping calendar to take place since the start of the pandemic, and Gibraltar's presence was well received and offered the chance to re-engage with partners, stakeholders and potential clients. As part of our attendance at this event we hosted a reception for the industry at the UN International Maritime Organisation (IMO) headquarters, where I had the opportunity to meet the IMO secretary general. It is notable that even at this level the performance of our maritime industry is recognised internationally, as was reflected by the keen interest in and awareness that Mr Kitack Lim showed of our Port and contributions to the maritime industry.

London Shipping Week also kick-started HM Government of Gibraltar's maritime services marketing drive in 2021, which also saw the return of Maritime Week Gibraltar in November, the second event of its kind which showcased and promoted Gibraltar's thriving maritime sector. Some international visitors were able to visit Gibraltar despite COVID-19 restrictions still impacting on travel, with excellent feedback received from both local and international participants. The expectation is that this event will now form part of the shipping industry's calendar of events moving forward and will be an ideal platform to promote Gibraltar's maritime industry from a home stage as it continues to develop and evolve.

In February, representatives from Gibraltar's maritime industry attended the International Bunker Industry Association annual dinner in London. The Gibraltar delegation was led by John Ghio, the Captain of the Port. This event provided a fantastic opportunity to re-engage face to face with industry partners and meet with current and prospective clients in the margins of this event.

Earlier this month, the Gibraltar Port Authority, along with local stakeholders, attended Posidonia 2022 in Greece. This is the biggest shipping event in the international calendar and is a crucial forum at which we continued our engagement with the international shipping industry. I

1035 am delighted that we were joined by a number of sponsors from our local maritime community under the banner of HM Government of Gibraltar Maritime Services and I am grateful for their participation. This shows the commitment of our partners and stakeholders in working together to promote Gibraltar Port. These events form part of the Government's strategy to directly engage with partners, stakeholders and prospective clients. Arrangements to hold bespoke events abroad 1040 later in the year are in their early stages of planning, with invaluable support from our partners in the local industry. I hope to make an announcement on this soon.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to the Port's finances and report that for the financial year 2021-22 revenue received was £7,269,581 against the original budgeted figure of £7,872,000. I am pleased to report that expenditure for the same period amounted to £6,830,741 allocated against a 1045 budget of £7,149,000 for the full period. As for capital expenditure, the Authority spent a total of £76,921 against an allocated figure of £365,000. It should be noted that some of the projects planned were not realised due to the pandemic. However, we were able to improve some of the Port's infrastructure with spending on the completion of the internal refurbishment at the North Mole office. We also carried out feasibility and technical studies for both the North Mole fenders 1050 and Mid Harbour Marina project.

As reported in my last Budget speech, both the senior management team and the Ministry for the Port continue to look at ways of further increasing activity in this sector and I am hopeful that I will be able to make some announcements on some of those projects in the not-too-distant future. However, I am very pleased to report that works will shortly commence on the 1055 refurbishment and repairs of the Watergardens marina, a project which had previously been put on hold due to the pandemic. My team will be liaising with the users of the marina to manage the works and I am sure that the improvements to the infrastructure will be welcomed by the users of the marina.

Mr Speaker, 2021 also saw the UK being audited by the IMO under the IMO Member State 1060 Audit Scheme for compliance of the IMO Instruments Implementation Code (III Code). Gibraltar, being part of the UK flag, was audited in all three areas of responsibility, i.e. flag state, port state and coastal state. The very strong performance at this audit is a further measure of how proud we can be of the work that the Port Authority and Maritime Administration continue to deliver.

The Port of Gibraltar has shown its true worth to the community and economy during the 1065 pandemic. The Port has also been able to adapt to some of the initial challenges arising from Brexit and this has been, and will continue to be, down to the hard work, dedication and willingness to do whatever it takes from the whole of the Port community in Gibraltar. We have all the right ingredients to make Gibraltar the port of choice for doing business. During the next financial year, I intend to continue with my ambitious marketing strategy for our Port as we focus on attracting 1070 new operations. Finally, I would like to take this opportunity to thank my excellent team at the Port Authority for their continuing efforts to deliver. This makes my role as Minister for the Port a lot easier.

I now move to the Gibraltar Maritime Administration. A new Maritime Administrator, Dylan Cocklan, was appointed in October 2021. Mr Cocklan has been in the Department for 22 years and 1075 undertaken a number of different roles. May I take this opportunity to once again congratulate Dylan on his appointment.

This past year has been another challenging year for the GMA, as the uncertainties of the ongoing Brexit negotiations have continued to impact on our new ship registrations. However, the Yacht Register remains largely unaffected by Brexit and the Small Ship Register also continues to 1080 grow as per the trend in recent years. The fleet size on 1st May 2022 was 165 ships, 883 yachts and 317 small ships registered in Gibraltar. The total combined tonnage of the Gibraltar fleet was 1,206,130 gross tonnes.

Our registers continue to rank highly in the overall technical performance levels within the major memorandum of understandings on port state control, and as quality registers by the 1085 United States Coastguard in their USCG Qualship 21 system. Gibraltar is one of the 23 administrations having met all the requirements for full participation in the Qualship 21 programme. The Gibraltar Ship Register has retained its white list status worldwide. This was reflected within the annual International Chamber of Shipping's Flag State Performance Table for 2022. Once again, the Gibraltar Ship and Yacht Registries rated in the table with positive performance indicators in every aspect reviewed by the ICS. The indicators include the performance of the Administration, ratification of international conventions, completed ILO reports, attendance at IMO meetings and participation in the UN International Maritime Organisation Instruments Implementation Code member audit system.

Importantly, following on from last year's III Code audit by the Maritime Coastguard Agency on Gibraltar, the United Kingdom flag state, which includes the Red Ensign Group (REG), of which Gibraltar is a Category 1 register, was audited by the IMO in October 2021. The 11-day audit was carried out from 14th to 28th October 2021. It was the first time such an audit had been carried out remotely by the IMO, because of the ongoing challenges of COVID-19. The audit scrutinised how the UK and the REG administrations meet the flag, coastal and port state obligations. The GMA was audited on its flag state and port state obligations. I am pleased to announce that the audit culminated with no findings being raised against the GMA. In particular, the auditors assigned by the IMO praised the manner in which the UK/REG oversees and manages the delegation of statutory work to its recognised organisations.

In addition to the III Code, the GMA successfully retained its ISO 9001:2015 quality accreditation, having successfully completed three ISO external audits by SGS since July 2021. Maintaining ISO accreditation not only sends a message to stakeholders that the GMA operates robust quality management systems, but also reinforces the GMA's commitment to continuously improve and seek efficiencies in the work the Department undertakes. These achievements are testament to the hard work undertaken by the staff at the GMA.

The goals of the GMA are to reach pre-Brexit and pre-pandemic levels, in terms of fleet size and revenue levels, within the next five years. Through controlled growth, the GMA would still be able to operate a registry that is run with high standards, meet its duties and responsibilities, maintain the quality of its registered fleet and focus on maintaining its good reputation within the industry. The Department has identified areas in which it can generate savings and other areas where expenditure can be reduced.

The GMA continues to explore new avenues to diversify its fleet and increase registered tonnage. As part of this work, the GMA has recently undertaken a thorough review of its fees structure. The result has been the development of new products and incentives which will add to the Register's competitiveness and attractiveness in the global market. A consultation process was launched and completed in April, during which the GMA engaged openly with and sought views from its clients and stakeholders on the new fees and incentives. The fees and services restructure came into effect on 1st June 2022 and introduced an increase in fees across all services, an inflationary yearly increase to all existing fees charged by the Registry, a simplified new product pricing for Annual Tonnage Tax, discounts of up to 50% on Annual Tonnage Tax payable for multiple ships registered, introduction of Annual Tonnage Tax for large commercial yachts and discounts for 'green ships'. The principle behind the green ship discount scheme is to reward ship owners who voluntarily adopt ship designs that exceed environmental regulatory standards set by the IMO. Discounts are also offered for vessels employing green ship technologies and systems.

In line with the Government's policy on digitalisation, and as part of its commitment to client product developments, the GMA transitioned to electronic certification for its ships and seafarers on 4th April 2022. The Administration is now able to offer their clients statutory certificates that meet the requirements of the standards of the IMO's Guidelines for the Use of Electronic Certificates. The introduction of electronic certification will benefit the GMA's clients by providing improved traceability, enhanced security and a quicker means of dispatching documentation. The authenticity and validity of certificates can be obtained via a 24/7 online portal, using two-means verification embedded within the certificate. This move towards digitalisation will directly benefit the GMA's clients. The GMA is continuing to invest in systems and technology which will further enhance the quality of service provided by the GMA. This includes the provision of a cloud-based 1140 GMA/client interface portal for survey-related functions, and new, improved online services via improvements to its website. The aforementioned improvements are expected to be launched by the end of July 2022.

1145 As part of its marketing campaign, the GMA has exhibited at the Posidonia 2022 Shipping Exhibition in Athens and will be participating at the Monaco Boat Show in September. Posidonia offered the GMA direct access not only to Greek ship owners, the largest ship-owning nation, but also to international ship owners and industry leaders. In addition, the GMA visited existing and potential new clients, together with local representatives. Working closely with other local authorities and local stakeholders, the GMA is looking forward to marketing and promoting its new incentives and products at upcoming events and during planned visits to existing and potential clients in the next few months.

1150 During 2021, the Department attended the London International Shipping Week. The Maritime Administrator also attended the International Bunker Industry Association annual dinner in London hosted by the Gibraltar Port Authority. The GMA staff took advantage of these opportunities to engage face to face with existing and potential new clients, as well as other industry stakeholders. The GMA also participated in the very successful Maritime Week Gibraltar at the end of November 2021. During the event, the GMA staff delivered a presentation on the Department's ship/yacht registration, which was aimed at providing an insight to the Gibraltar Registries, local ship registration legislation and requirements, the registration process and the unique advantages Gibraltar has to offer.

1160 In addition to marketing visits, the GMA will also be taking part in the annual Red Ensign Group Conference, which will take place in July 2022 in the Isle of Man. The conference gives members the opportunity to have detailed face-to-face discussions on current matters that are of interest to the group, the chance to share best practice, look at ways of improving the performance of the British Register, both in terms of commercial success and also setting exemplary standards in meeting international obligations.

1165 Earlier during the year, the Maritime Administrator and Chief Surveyor joined other technical experts from the Red Ensign Group, in the Red Ensign Group Technical Forum in February 2022. In addition, the GMA also participated in the different REG technical working group meetings. The forum and associated working group meetings support the REG conference and look at how best to make sure there is consistent application of technical policy across the British fleet. The Technical Forum is responsible for developing new technical standards for the maritime industry.

1175 Despite the challenges brought about by the pandemic, the GMA has continued to undertake port state control inspections on foreign flagged ships visiting Gibraltar and inspections of vessels operating domestically. In addition, it has continued with its monitoring programme of recognised organisations and certifying authorities. This is an important aspect of the work done by the GMA, as it ensures that statutory survey and certification work delegated to the accepted recognised organisations and certifying authorities is conducted in compliance with agreed standards. Importantly, as from April and as a result of the improved situation in relation to the COVID-19 pandemic, GMA surveyors have resumed audits and surveys of clients abroad. This is important for ensuring effective jurisdiction and control over our fleet in terms of quality standards, but it is also essential for keeping a close relationship with our clients. The resumption of surveys abroad will also increase the Department's survey/certification fees revenue.

1180 The GMA Seafarer's Division continues to issue a significant amount of seafarer documentation. Since 1st July 2021 and until 30th April 2022, the GMA has issued a total of 1,097 certificates. This is a very important task, since the quality of the officers and crew determine to a very large extent the safety and marine environmental protection standards on board the Gibraltar fleet. As part of its work to become more competitive in relation to seafarers, the GMA has recently expanded its Recognised Countries' Standards of Training, Certification and Watch keeping list, meaning that the GMA now recognises certificates of competency from a wider range of countries. Twenty-three countries have recently been added, meaning certificates of competency from these countries are now eligible for a Gibraltar endorsement. The total number of recognised countries now stands at 26, giving our clients greater flexibility in their crewing options.

1195 Within the upcoming year, the GMA once again is expected to host surveyors from other REG members for the purpose of providing them with training and sharing of expertise with regard to port state control. The GMA is regarded as a leader within the REG in relation to this field and during the past few years the GMA has provided training for surveyors from the Cayman Islands, Guernsey, Bermuda, the Isle of Man and the UK.

1200 Locally, the GMA continues to provide technical support to the Gibraltar Port Authority and Gibraltar enforcement authorities via a framework by way of survey and certification. Members of the GMA provided technical support and were part of the multi-agency team that brought about the successful prosecution case against the AM Ghent following the oil spill that took place in the Bay of Gibraltar in October 2021 during a bunkering operation.

1205 The GMA also continues to work closely with the Gibraltar Law Office in ensuring that Gibraltar is in a position to implement and enforce the provisions of new international instruments through appropriate Gibraltar merchant shipping legislation. Work is currently under way in relation to the Ballast Water Management Convention and the latest amendments to the Maritime Labour Convention.

1210 The GMA continues to have a crucial role within the Gibraltar maritime industry. Through its role as an international facilitator of trade, its highly rated and competitive registers and global trading fleet, the GMA provides Gibraltar with a significant advantage over many other maritime centres. The GMA's strategy over the next few years is to continue to maintain its high quality of service, increase the size and diversity of its fleet and continue to add significant expertise and skills to the wider Gibraltar maritime industry and its profile as an international centre of maritime excellence. Brexit has created a challenge, but I am keen on marketing the flag with its new products and incentives so we may be in a position to attract new clients to the Registry and will market the Registry more aggressively over the coming months. I would like to thank Dylan Cocklan and his staff at the GMA for their support over the last year.

1220 Mr Speaker, I turn to my responsibilities for the Royal Gibraltar Post Office. I would like to commence by saying that I am very pleased that despite the numerous logistical challenges in the past 12 to 24 months, the Post Office has managed to offer an uninterrupted service to all the 192 Universal Postal Union member countries throughout for parcels and letters. Furthermore, local delivery service continued six days per week, Monday to Saturday. Many business and residential consumers within Gibraltar rely on the RGPO as the universal postal service provider for their standard local and international letter and parcel post services. Therefore, to meet a sufficiently high standard service for users is of significant importance. At the height of the pandemic, staffing levels were affected by staff absences due to COVID sicknesses and self-isolations. Nevertheless, the RGPO delivered 87.69% of local mail within two working days. Towards the end of 2021, the RGPO saw steady improvements in its performance with the resumption of regular flights from the UK. Because of this, its international next-day-delivery performance reached 84.5% in December 2021, 88.3% in January 2022, 97.5% in February 2022 and 95.3% in March 2022.

1235 A clear direction has been established in order to build upon the work commenced during the RGPO review in 2019 and this has already led to noticeable performance improvements and financial savings. The RGPO saved £172,195 in its expenditure budget for the financial year 2021-22 and further savings are expected during the financial year 2022-23 thanks to the modernisation of the RGPO's systems and procedures that have created operational efficiencies. The electronic parcel notification system has gradually replaced the old and costly printed notification cards format, with over 9,800 residents registered to receive notifications via SMS and email. During the financial year 2021-22, 33,563 first notice electronic notifications were sent to recipients. This operational advantage of switching to electronic notifications has hugely reduced costs on paper, ink and deliveries and has, in turn, played an important role in improving the environment.

1245 We continue to see a substantial volume of incoming parcels due to the continuous growth of e-commerce purchases, with 110,000 parcels registered in EPost since its launch over a year ago. All incoming and outgoing mail in Gibraltar is now processed electronically via the International Postal System, which provides the RGPO with accurate and comprehensive data on its mail movement, covering every point between origin and destination. The online EPost system offers a delivery option to recipients on payment of any applicable fees/duties to which our postal workers delivered 6,023 parcels in the past financial year. The Parcel Post Office Mail Centre collected a total of £224,086 revenue in fees and import duties during the financial year 2021-22.

1250 Although letter volumes have generally declined over the years, new residential developments have grown substantially in Gibraltar during the same period, thus increasing the number of individual addresses. In September 2021 the postal walks system, which had remained the same for the past 25 years, was modified, in consultation with the unions and RGPO staff, by increasing the standard 13 delivery walks to 17 delivery walks in order to accommodate the growth of new addresses. The RGPO delivers letters to any address in Gibraltar six days a week for the same rate, be it in Main Street or the top of the Rock.

1260 The Universal Postal Union announced new regulatory changes as from 1st January 2021. This meant that it is now a requirement to provide electronic pre-advice customs data on all parcel items containing goods or merchandise to international destinations. These changes also came into effect on 1st April 2021 for parcel items containing goods or merchandise sent to the United Kingdom. Letter mail formats containing letters, cards and/or documents were not affected by this new requirement. As a member of the Universal Postal Union, the RGPO was bound by the new regulations imposed upon all member countries and their postal authorities. This pre-advice data helps to automate and speed up manual processes, which enables a more efficient customer clearance process. The RGPO created a new app and provided a custom declaration option available on the website and at the Main Street Post Office to make the process of sending parcels as easy as possible for its customers.

1270 In March, the RGPO supported all Gibraltar residents with relatives and friends in Ukraine, including individuals, charities and schools, by waiving postage charges for mail addressed to Ukraine. Communicating with friends and families during difficult moments is crucial and the RGPO will do everything that it can to help. We continue to do everything possible to show our support and we are grateful to the Ukraine postal service for making a special mention of our charitable support on their website.

1275 In addition to the regular meetings that take place between the RGPO management and its Royal Mail counterparts, the Director of Postal Services took part in the Small Postal Administrations Forum held in Malta in May of this year. This was a unique event especially designed for CEOs and postal leaders in smaller jurisdictions to hear and share latest ideas, best practices and innovative approaches. It is an opportunity to learn from colleagues facing the same challenges and to discuss important topics such as the effects of COVID, terminal due revenues, bi-lateral agreements and direct postal service links. The conference gives members the opportunity to have detailed face-to-face discussions.

1285 Finally, I would like to highlight how pleased I am with the total replacement of all Royal Gibraltar Post Office vehicles to brand-new electric vehicles back in December 2020. This project was in line with the Government's manifesto commitment for a green Gibraltar. The all-electric postal vans now deliver mail across all areas of Gibraltar safely and efficiently in the most environmentally friendly way possible whilst reducing carbon emissions and noise. It gives me a lot of joy and satisfaction to see the red electric postal vehicles operating on deliveries around Gibraltar. As the Minister with responsibility for postal services, it is my obligation to ensure that efficient and reliable postal services are provided both within Gibraltar and between Gibraltar and the rest of the world. My thanks go to all the team at the RGPO ably lead by Glendon Martinez, HM Customs and our logistics partners for their continuous hard work during the course of this year.

1295 Mr Speaker, I turn now to the Office of Fair Trading. I was the Minister responsible for the OFT up to the recent reshuffle, in April, where responsibility was handed over to my colleague and friend Samantha Sacramento for the reason set out by the Chief Minister when he announced the reshuffle. I shall deal with each of its core responsibilities in turn, starting with business licensing.

1300 Over the course of the past financial year the Business Licensing team has seen a significant increase in the number of business licence applications it has received. A huge 935 business licence application notices have been published, representing a 31% increase compared with the financial year ending 2021. Applications processed per week by the team have, therefore, increased from 14 applications per week to 18 applications per week on average, with a maximum of 32 application received in a single week. During this past year, the office has issued 501 new licences, representing an approximate increase in licences of 25% based on renewal data for that same period – 2,335. This is a great indicator that Gibraltar business is flourishing despite significant COVID-19 and Brexit-related uncertainties and that the Gibraltarian entrepreneurial spirit continues to show resilience in adversity. Given the increase in workloads represented by these increases, the Government has invested in IT upgrades for the office to allow the OFT to modernise its internal processes and databases to create a modern and fit-for-purpose software package that will allow the team to provide a quicker and more efficient service to the business community.

1310 Turning to the OFT's consumer protection responsibilities, the Consumer Protection team has processed 374 complaints of reported harm to consumers in Gibraltar during the past financial year. Of these, 75 have led to investigations carried out by the team. This high number of complaints is largely a reflection of the success of the OFT's consumer awareness programme, which continues into 2022. The programme aims to educate local consumers about their consumer rights, and businesses to understand their rights and responsibilities. Awareness has been raised about wide-ranging subjects such as distance contracts, rental deposits, second hand cars and toy safety, with particular emphasis on the dangers to children of button cell batteries, magnets and flammable costumes.

1320 The team has also continually updated its awareness on travelling in the post-COVID 'new normal', to reflect ongoing changes that affect consumers. As a result, the team has extensively engaged with, and issued guidance to, businesses within the travel sector. The OFT also assisted a local consumer in pursuit of a successful claim through the Small Claims Track of the Supreme Court against a local travel agent arising from the cancellation of a package holiday due to COVID-related travel restrictions.

1330 This year, the OFT has also issued the new code of conduct for the retailers of goods, in March, which will serve as best practice guidance for businesses that retail goods to ordinary end consumers. The code provides clarity for both businesses and consumers should disputes arise from purchases, including expected redress and timeframes. As part of its ongoing inspections programme, the team has carried out 53 visits to local businesses, including follow-up visits to ensure compliance of identified shortcomings.

1335 I can confirm that the Government continues to work with the OFT on the Fair Trading Bill 2020 with the aim of producing a more appropriate and mature framework within which the OFT can operate. The Bill will make the establishment of new businesses easier and quicker by simplifying the business licensing process. It will, therefore, drastically improve the manner in which the OFT can provide its services to the public. At the same time, the new Bill will protect consumers in Gibraltar and allow the OFT to set trading standards for businesses operating in Gibraltar. As always, this process continues to be done in consultation with the Gibraltar Federation of Small Businesses and the Chamber of Commerce to ensure that it will support the business community in Gibraltar. The document is practically in final form, pending clarity on some important issues before it is ready to be presented to this House.

1340 Finally, I wish to thank Francis Muscat, Audisa Rodriguez and the rest of the team at the OFT for their support whilst I had ministerial responsibility for them.

1345 Moving on to other business-related matters, in December 2021 I introduced an all-women Small Business Board, the aim of which is to assist and foster positive development of businesses locally. The board consists of representatives of the Gibraltar Chamber of Commerce and the Gibraltar Federation of Small Businesses, in addition to a cross-section of local businesswomen. I am absolutely delighted with this; business is not only about businessmen. We have some 1350 excellent entrepreneurial women in Gibraltar, and this is proof of that. I wanted to show our women the respect they deserve, (A Member: Hear, hear.) especially at this important juncture of our economic development. This is the second business board that I have appointed and I look forward to working with them for the good of our business community and Gibraltar as a whole.

1355 The Business Improvement Districts Act 2021 was passed by the Parliament in May 2021 and brought into operation, together with the Business Improvement Districts Regulations 2021, on 8th July 2021. Hon. Members will recall that a business improvement district (BID) is a defined area in which businesses are required to pay a levy to fund projects within the district's boundaries. The Main Street and surrounding BID is managed by businesses for the businesses and has the full support of the GFSB and the Chamber of Commerce, Hindu Community of Gibraltar and Gibraltar Law Council, as well as numerous other interest groups and associations.
1360 In September last year, the voting process began for businesses to decide on whether they wanted to form part of the BID scheme. On 1st October, the results of the ballot were announced. Of the 291 votes cast, 192 businesses voted in favour, which represented 66% of businesses backing the scheme; consequently, the scheme was launched.

1365 The BID project will bring life to the town centre for tourists and locals alike. This is an exciting time. The BID company, which will be managing the BID project, is a not-for-profit company, limited by guarantee and governed by a board of directors who will be directly accountable to the BID levy payers and responsible for delivering the BID projects and services and maintaining the BID objectives. These objectives are to direct and deliver over £4 million of investment over the 1370 next five years; carry out exciting projects and events to drive footfall and spend in the town area, raise its profile, help its continued recovery and develop its position as a vibrant destination for local residents and visitors alike; give businesses the support they need to flourish, by driving down business costs, providing business development opportunities, being a strong voice and championing their interests; and finally, improve the trading environment, making our town area a better place for everyone to do business, as well as a better place for locals and tourists to enjoy.

1375 We need to keep people in Main Street and the surrounds. This will bring optimism and confidence to our small business sector and I am excited to be working with this energetic and enthusiast task force team to help bring them the much needed success they deserve. I was delighted to be part of the official launch last night.

1380 Mr Speaker, my Ministry is a strategic partner of the Commonwealth Enterprise and Investment Council (CWEIC). As hon. Members are aware, a CWEIC Gibraltar office was opened last year to assist strategic partners to establish, develop and sustain a network of productive relationships across the Commonwealth's global business ecosystem in order to enable sustainable business growth. In January, I formed part of a delegation, which included Members of Parliament from the United Kingdom, on a trade mission to Bangladesh. Meetings were 1385 arranged with the Bangladesh government, including the foreign minister, the minister for the environment and the minister for economic affairs. There were also separate meetings with private sector investors, business leaders and industrialists. It is clear that there are opportunities in many areas that are relevant to Gibraltar, like commerce and financial services, and I look forward to further engagement with those I met to establish whether there is scope for them to 1390 do business with Gibraltar. I look forward to further collaboration with CWEIC and take this opportunity to thank them, and in particular the previous CEO, Samantha Cohen, for including Gibraltar as part of their delegation to Bangladesh.

1395 Mr Speaker, I continue to meet regularly with the Chamber of Commerce and Federation of Small Businesses. My doors are always open to them and I look forward to working closely with them over the next year.

1400 The Government announced, in March, additional financial support measures for the catering sector. The Government has consistently assisted and supported the Catering Association throughout the entire COVID-19 pandemic. The support package was aimed at mitigating some of the reduced business the catering sector experienced following Public Health guidelines issued on 18th November 2021. The support package included a rent moratorium, rates discounts and the waiver of all registration fees at the Employment Department.

1405 Mr Speaker, I beg your indulgence, but before finishing my contribution let me start by saying how very disappointed I am with the Opposition tourism spokesman, the Hon. Damon Bossino, (Interjection) who has, during the last year, played politics with tourism. In an attempt to grab headlines and make himself relevant, the hon. Member has been constantly nit-picking on almost everything the Government does. (Interjection) While the hon. Member is perfectly entitled to have a different opinion, it seems that he just criticises for the sake of criticising and has not been able to come to terms with the fact that he is not the Minister for Tourism. We have been elected to implement and develop our own policies and implement our programme for government in accordance with our own views and assessments, and not the policies of the Opposition. What is remarkable is the arrogance with which the hon. Member approaches his role as a Member of the Opposition, pretending to be able to make policy in the areas he shadows. I can go on and on, but I can assure this House and those listening to these proceedings that whilst the hon. Member plays politics, I will not be detracted from getting on with the serious business of Government, which is what I was elected for.

1415 Mr Speaker, I would like to thank my friends the Hon. the Chief Minister and the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister. I could not do this job without their support. They have always been there for me. I will never forget that. Thank you. All my ministerial colleagues too, thank you. My Ministry team, of course, efficiently led by John Reyes, each and every one of them – they are an amazing team and I am lucky to have them working with me, hardworking, loyal, ready to do more and always ready to help me. Apologies to them for putting up with my demands at all hours, my WhatsApps, my emails etc. They know they do not need to reply at these hours but they do, because they care. They understand that I want everything done yesterday and they respect that. Last but not least, I want to thank Tracey Poggio for assisting me from the London Office in my tourism endeavours. A heartfelt thanks to all of you; you are a very special bunch.

1425 Finally, Mr Speaker, thank you and the Parliament staff for the dedication you put into this job and making life easy for us. Thank you very much, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Sir Joe Bossano’s Budget speech to be issued via press release

1430 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, thanking both of my ministerial colleagues for the interventions they have made so far, I have to share with the House the news that the Minister for Economic Development, the Father of the House, Joe Bossano, has just tested positive for COVID, which obviously puts a bit of a spanner in the works of many things, not least the order of speeches that we had agreed with Members opposite so that those who shadow ministerial responsibilities can speak after the Member shadowed.

1435 I am particularly saddened by the fact that Sir Joe has tested positive for COVID because this would have been his 50th Budget speech in this House.

1440 In an earlier discussion with you and with the Shadow Minister for the same areas of responsibility, Mr Clinton, I suggested that, as Sir Joe’s speech is now ready, one of the ways to ensure that it is reflected in the record of these proceedings is for me, just as I move the adjournment, to read the first sentence of what he would say and then share the speech with all hon. Members and with the general public through press releases and to have it reflected in the Hansard as delivered. So, now that the result of that test has come in, and I have Sir Joe’s speech – which hon. Members will be comforted to know this year even brings its own index to it (Laughter) – I would, with your leave, Mr Speaker, read his first few words of introduction, where Sir Joe, the Hon. Father of the House, would say:

In analysing where we are and where we need to be in our public finances, we cannot ignore the global background against which we and every other government has operated. I will, therefore, share with Members my assessment of just how serious the state of health of the global economy is.

1445 Mr Speaker, without reading any more, I will now make arrangements for the speech to be shared with hon. Members and with the House, and I will propose, given that it is quite a lengthy intervention and the hon. Member opposite will want to be able to reply to it fully, that we return this afternoon at four o'clock for him to be able to start his reply.

1450 Mr Speaker: The House will now recess to four o'clock.

*The House adjourned at 1.03 p.m.
and resumed at 3.03 p.m.*

[ACTING CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: S Galliano Esq in attendance]

Clerk: We continue with the Appropriation Bill 2022.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Roy Clinton. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

5

Hon. R M Clinton: What you have all been waiting for. Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Before I commence my main submission on the debate on the Appropriation Bill, I would like, on behalf of my colleagues in the Opposition, to wish Sir Joe a speedy recovery from being afflicted with COVID. We hope to see him soon, back in this place, as he is obviously greatly missed at Budget time if he is not here. (Banging on desks) I have no doubt he is watching!

10 I thank Sir Joe for having given us a written copy of what would have been his submission in the debate – and no doubt those 48 pages will form part of the record, for posterity – which I understand is now available on the Government website and I would urge anybody who is interested in following these proceedings to read it for themselves.

15 Sir Joe, as we would expect, gives us a good overview of the challenges that we face, not just in Gibraltar but in the economy as it affects the world today and as things are likely to develop over the coming months and years. I will just highlight one or two phrases and words from his very long contribution. He warns us that inflation is likely to increase again by July. There are words which reoccur as a theme throughout his contribution: the words ‘unaffordable’, ‘unsustainable’ and of course his ‘golden rule’. In terms of our future economic plan, I think one of the key words he repeats is the idea of self-sufficiency. In the context of this debate I would just like to quote one section from his submission, on page 7, in which he says – and I think this is probably the key phrase, if I had to identify one in his contribution:

At no other time in our history has there been a greater need to make an all-out effort to restore the state of financial stability ...

25 I can only concur with that remark, but unfortunately the message does not seem to be getting across to his colleagues. It is an important message that they really cannot afford to ignore.

Mr Speaker, going on to my main contribution, yesterday the people of Gibraltar had their collective pockets picked by this Government in order to cover the mismanagement of the 2021-22 Budget, which has resulted in the need to borrow an extra £50 million. A 2% increase in PAYE, coupled with inflation raging at 8% and only likely to increase, as Sir Joe has warned, means that the average worker and their family will see a fall in real wages of probably at least 10% this year.

This Government has had its head buried in the sand for far too long with a capital spending programme which has been fuelled by debt, debt and more debt. It has forgotten the basics of 35 public finance, regardless of Sir Joe's golden rules. Its Budget measures this year do not bear scrutiny, especially if, as stated, they are only meant to be for two years.

In this Appropriation Bill and Estimates Book I see we are now on a knife edge. We have unsustainable spending and an unbalanced Budget with increased borrowing for the coming 40 financial year 2022-23. The headline deficit for 2021-22 was estimated to be some £50.7 million.
This was before the COVID-19 costs and with additional borrowing of £50 million, which will have taken total gross direct borrowing to £747.7 million. This envisaged a total net cash spend through the Consolidated Fund of £79 million if you take out the envisaged £50 million borrowing as per the Estimates last year. The forecast outturn for 2021-22 is a headline deficit of £55.3 million, 45 which is before COVID-19 costs, with an additional borrowing of £100 million, which then takes our total direct gross borrowing to £797.7 million. This is double the borrowing that was envisaged. Instead of £50 million, they have had to borrow £100 million. The total net spend through the Consolidated Fund was £103 million, which is what we would get if we excluded the £100 million of borrowing, and this number gives a truer picture of our predicament than the 50 headline deficit number of £55.3 million, which does not take into account spending via the COVID-19 Fund.

Indeed, if that was not bad enough, there can be no doubt that there has been a significant overspend in relation to last year's Budget. Using the cashflow of the Consolidated Fund, it can be seen that keeping revenue at its original budgeted level, which would increase the deficit by £16 million, the overspend in cash terms was in the order of £40 million. Forty million pounds, 55 Mr Speaker! This is a number we have heard before. In fact, we have heard it in warnings from Sir Joe Bossano. And yet yesterday the Chief Minister said:

Over the last few months there has been an attempt to suggest a division between comments made by the Father of the House in an interview on GBC, where he projected a loss of in excess of £90 million, and some of the statements I have made. The Hon. the Father of the House was guiding his projections for the overall loss based on the level of borrowing, without classifying the distinction between business-as-usual losses of £55.3 million and the additional over-expenditure incurred within the COVID Response Fund.

Mr Speaker, each pound of overspend, regardless of origin, necessarily results in an extra pound of borrowing, so what Sir Joe was saying was entirely true but obviously not the way the Chief Minister wanted it spun for public consumption. How realistic was last year's Budget when 60 we also heard from Sir Joe that some £75 million had been shaved off departmental budget requests even before the Estimates Book reached this House?

The majority of the overspend appears to be in the GHA budget in a period when COVID-19 related expenses should not have been remotely similar to prior periods. The Leader of the Opposition has highlighted it in his speech and my colleague Mr Phillips will examine this in more 65 detail in his contribution to the debate.

The headline deficit for next year, 2022-23, is estimated to be £45.2 million, which is a very long way away from a breakeven position. In cashflow terms, the total net spend through the Consolidated Fund will be £46 million, less than half compared with the year just gone by. It is expected we will need to borrow yet another £50 million to take our total direct gross borrowing 70 to £847.7 million.

One significant difference from recent years is that there is no material contribution to the Improvement and Development Fund from the Consolidated Fund. In 2021-22 it was £19.5 million; next year, merely a notional £1,000. It would appear that the Improvement and Development Fund is expecting over £100 million of income in order to fund some £67 million of 75 expenditure. I can only assume – and the Chief Minister can confirm it in his response – that the £90 million premium for the Eastside project is included in these numbers, in which case the funding of I&DF projects is entirely dependent on successful negotiation of the premium. Failing that, the Consolidated Fund would have to pass money over to the I&DF Fund or the projects would have to be cut.

80 Mr Speaker, talking about costs, we have yet to hear how the appointment of the new CEO of the Tourist Board at a salary of £140,000 is cost neutral, as was described by the Chief Minister on 17th March 2021, especially as the salary was disclosed as being £51,767 in the 2011-12 Estimates Book under the Gibraltar Development Corporation. I would love to hear how that is cost neutral.

85 Looking through the Book, I can give an example where decisions have been taken which, frankly, flatter the outturn numbers. The deficit could have been even higher. Specifically, Head 22, being Social Security, has, in 2021-22, given itself a contribution holiday of £7 million by simply not paying anything to the Statutory Benefits Fund. This £7 million payment has been reinstated in 2022-23. If that £7 million had been paid in the year gone by, then obviously our deficit would have been yet higher.

90 Given this analysis, it can be seen that we really are on a public finance knife edge, which is only being balanced by increased borrowing. As at 7th April 2022 the borrowing on the NatWest UK guaranteed facility was £350 million. The envisaged borrowing in 2022-23 will take us to £400 million of the £500 million facility, assuming, of course, that there are no overspends, which would have to be met from further borrowing. This entire facility was due for repayment on 95 3rd December 2023.

Yesterday the Chief Minister made, in my view, the most important statement in the history of our public finances, but he mentioned it almost casually. I think it is worth repeating in full, as follows:

Additionally, we will finalise, this year, our strategy for the repayment of the COVID debt, which will be long-term, war bond style debt. Our current discussions with HM Treasury sees us repaying the bulk of the outstanding over 25 to 26 years, with the benefit of the sovereign guarantee from the United Kingdom extending over that period for that ring-fenced, crystallised debt. We will be able to set that into legal-agreement stone only once the full extent of our COVID drawdown is, itself, crystallised.

100 If the Government can stick to its Budget and if the UK government has already given its commitment, then the £400 million that would fall due on 3rd December 2023 would be extended to at least 2048. That is a much more realistic timeframe in which to rebalance our economy. But the statement from the Chief Minister was light on details such as the type of loan and repayment schedule, and I really would like to hear more about that; indeed, repayment is something I intend to discuss later on. I think it is critical to understanding the future of our public finances.

105 Our recurrent revenue is not covering recurrent expenditure – I think a fact that we all in this House recognise – such that for the last year, ended 31st March 2022, our costs were 9% greater than revenue. The COVID-19 Response Fund has re-credited the Consolidated Fund with £107 million in respect of lost revenue, the main areas that have lost revenue being £65 million in Import Duty, £32 million in Company Tax and £2 million in Income Tax. For next year it is forecast
110 that the COVID-19 Response Fund will only require £40 million to make up lost revenue of £30 million in Import Duty and £10 million in Company Tax. The slow recovery in Import Duty is concerning, and if it does not return or recover to pre-pandemic levels then we are likely to have a continuing recurrent deficit problem, and if this Government does not take this year's Budget seriously, then I am afraid to say next year's Budget debate will be scripted by Stephen King: a 115 true horror. I would have thought that by now the Government would truly understand our financial situation and predicament, especially having appointed Sir Joe Bossano as Minister for Financial Stability.

120 The example has to be set from the top, and yet there is no leadership on the control of unnecessary costs. In answer to my Question 267/2022 last week, the Chief Minister confirmed that Ministers and Government officials had flown club class 40 times in the space of six months – yes, 40 times in six months – and they could not find any economy seats. Furthermore, having just doubled the cost of prescription charges under the Group Practice Medical Scheme, the Chief Minister then flew to see His Holiness the Pope, again in business class at the taxpayers' expense: a pilgrim's progress in regal style.

125 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): I went out in economy.

Hon. R M Clinton: This is not leadership by example.

Hon. Chief Minister: I went out in economy.

130

Hon. R M Clinton: This is the Chief Minister's champagne socialism at its worst (A Member: Hear, hear.): do as I say but not as I do. He likes his champagne. (Hon. K Azopardi: Pink champagne.) Is it pink?

135

Hon. K Azopardi: Absolutely. Off-red.

Hon. Chief Minister: All the colours of the rainbow, if you are trying to imply something [inaudible] a champion of Pride, not one of those who [inaudible]

140

Hon. E J Phillips: Socialist pink – that is the analogy.

Mr Speaker: Please continue with the speech.

Hon. R M Clinton: Yes, sorry, Mr Speaker.

We also find that of the nine Government Ministers, the majority, namely six, are in private rented offices. This was disclosed in answer to my Question 269/2022. Indeed, despite the current financial crisis, the Government saw it appropriate to rent offices for the Minister for Housing and the Minister for Business at a combined annual cost of £215,000. This Government has completely mismanaged the use of the public office space it inherited upon coming into government. Instead of maintaining and renewing space it owned, it embarked on a piecemeal disposal and moved into expensive private sector accommodation. The Government sold the Haven to Gibtelecom in 2014 for £5.8 million, more or less what it cost to refurbish No. 6 to the Chief Minister's expensive tastes. The Haven, since then, has largely remained empty and is now up for sale by Gibtelecom to repay the £3.6 million mortgage which was used to buy it. Meanwhile, the DSS offices collapse into a state of disrepair, which then causes a move to New Harbours and the rental of more private sector space in the ICC for the vacating Housing Department, which will then cost us an annual £237,000. The least visited Departments of Government – not that I do not appreciate them – the Audit and Statistics Departments, have brand new offices in the World Trade Centre on 21-year leases at an annual cost of £194,000. The cost of rental of office space by the Treasury Department has rocketed from £2 million in 2011-12 to some £10.5 million in 2021-22. I would welcome an analysis and justification of this number by the Chief Minister. He says 10 years. This Government needs to make better use of its existing resources before splashing out on more lavish private sector rentals at the taxpayers' expense, which inevitably increases recurrent expenditure, of which Sir Joe is so terrified. I cannot see the Chief Minister leading on this. He simply does not seem to be able to control his spending.

For the last number of years since I have been in this House – or, at least for the last three years – I have complained about the inability of the Principal Auditor to complete his reports on time, due to outstanding supplementary appropriations. Despite three Bills covering 2017, 2018 and 2019 being passed in a single day last year, on 26th July 2021, we still do not have any new reports in this House. The last report available to us is that for 31st March 2016. If this Government truly cared for transparency and accountability it would have shown some leadership in ensuring the required Bills were debated and passed in a timely manner. I really do not accept that COVID-19 was the reason for the delay in debating those Bills. Without any recent reports from the Principal Auditor this House cannot hold the Government to account on its spending, including areas such as value for money.

The Government's record on filing its corporate accounts has barely improved, despite repeatedly being brought to their attention. As at 31st March 2022, 26 companies were overdue in their filings at Companies House and a further 12 have not even been audited since incorporation. This is an unsatisfactory situation and one that should have been resolved by now.

180 The reason why this is so important is that significant amounts of public money are being channelled into some of these companies. One in particular stands out above others, and that is Economic Development and Employment Company Ltd, a company I brought to the attention of this House back on 19th June 2019. You can check Hansard. This entity, which is owned by the Gibraltar Development Corporation, annually receives some £11.8 million from the GDC, which in 185 turn receives the money from the Consolidated Fund. In the six-year period from 2014-2015 to 2019-21 the amount contributed to this company was £82.5 million. This company has only filed one balance sheet since it was incorporated on 11th June 2012 by this Government. We know from answers to my Question 161/2022 that this company owns shares in a further nine companies, of which we know, again from answers to questions, six are behind on their filings at 190 Companies House. We do not know how that £82.5 million has been spent or, indeed, how much remains. I fail to understand how this House can continue to approve contributions in the order of £11 million to an entity that has failed to disclose how that public money is being used. The Government cannot expect the public to suffer the consequences of this financial crisis in silence while the Government does not disclose what it does with millions and millions of pounds of 195 taxpayers' money – again, a failure of leadership on transparency, which speaks volumes.

In his May Day message of 2021 the Chief Minister said the following:

I can guarantee you that we will ... stop all waste and abuse we detect in government spending.

Well, what has he managed to do over the past year, I ask myself. Business travel continues unabated and the report on GJBS only resulted in a 'series of changes in the structure of the management and operation of GJBS'. We are still deprived of the latest reviews from the Principal 200 Auditor, and despite repeated promises – and I will not hold my breath – of an Anti-Corruption Authority, this has still to materialise. There is still no appetite from this Government for a Public Accounts Committee which will follow up audit reports and other matters. Again, I remind the House that it is embarrassing that Gibraltar is the only UK Overseas Territory that has no such committee and this goes against what is deemed to be best practice in the oversight of public 205 finance. So, where is the leadership on eliminating waste and abuse that he pointed out in his May Day message?

Moving on to borrowing, our direct gross borrowing, as I set out earlier, is projected to reach £847.7 million by the end of the next financial year. The last information I have on the Sinking Fund is that it only has £25.4 million in it. This needs to be funded regularly from the Consolidated 210 Fund to ensure that we have a clear path to repayment. I have seen no indication, as yet, as to how the Sinking Fund is to be built up in future.

The analysis of the gross direct borrowing at 31st March 2022 is as follows: £372.7 million of Government debentures, which are, in fact, held by the Gibraltar Savings Bank; £150 million that was a one-year facility that we understand has now been repaid, on 7th April 2022; the £75 million 215 and £5 million facility with RBS NatWest; and, again as at 31st March, £200 million under the RBS NatWest UK guarantee. That would be £372.7 million of Government debentures held by the Savings Bank and some £425 million of bank borrowing, which would take us to the figure of £797.7 million of direct gross borrowing.

By 31st March 2023, i.e. next year, the guaranteed facility will be £400 million, given the 220 £150 million borrowed from the Gibraltar International Bank was, as the Chief Minister indicated to the House, repaid on 7th April 2022. Given the Chief Minister's expectation to convert this £400 million debt into a 25-year loan, it begs the question: how would we fund its repayment? If we assume a bullet repayment at the end of the term, we would have to set aside, into the Sinking Fund – excluding, of course, interest costs – £16 million every year for the next 25 years, and yet

225 I have heard nothing as yet on this important question, which again shows a lack of thinking or planning. How are we going to repay £400 million in 25 years? I think it is a question on which we deserve to hear what the Chief Minister thinks.

Then, of course, we need to go on to the perennial disagreement we have with the Government in terms of the indirect gross borrowing, which I try to quantify each year. Again, I 230 do this on a best-efforts basis, and if I have any numbers wrong I will happily be corrected: Credit Finance, £400 million; GCP Investments, £9 million; ES Ltd, which is the entity that has the power station, from its last filed accounts, £ 95 million; Gibraltar Car Parks, another £21 million; Gibraltar Capital Assets, another £300 million – that is the one that has the mortgages on the housing estates, although I know the Chief Minister does not like the word ‘mortgage’ but it is, 235 nevertheless, secured on the housing estates; Eruca Investments, with its very complicated structured financing, another £165 million. That adds to a gross amount of £990 million, which is in addition to the official gross debt of £797.7 million as at 31st March 2022. That would bring us to a total gross debt number, of direct and indirect debt, of effectively £1.8 billion as at 31st March 2022, as compared with £1.7 billion at 31st March 2021. Of this £1.8 billion only £350 million – 240 and again I am using numbers at 31st March 2022 – can be said to be attributable to the COVID-19 response at best. This Government has truly buried Gibraltar in a mountain of debt and it should be ashamed of itself.

Mr Speaker, turning to the Budget measures as announced yesterday, we on this side of the House have long warned of the excessive spending by this Government and that ultimately it 245 would be the taxpayer who would foot the bill. Sadly, yesterday this warning came true. The Chief Minister said that it was incumbent on him and his Government ‘to seek to find a way to lead this community out of the deficit period, with the certainty that we can address the debt that has built up during the COVID period and its aftermath’. And yet, without so much as a blush, he stated that the much talked about rainy-day funds were once again healthy, even at this time. This is 250 insane. Before seeking to tax workers by 2% at a very difficult time, shouldn’t the rainy-day funds be used first? I mentioned in last year’s debate that Sir Joe refuses to transfer the accumulated profits of the Gibraltar Savings Bank to the Consolidated Fund. As at 31st March 2022 the Estimates Book, on page 254, shows this has a Reserve Account with a balance of £56 million.
Should this not be used first, before taxing workers? This money belongs to the people, not to 255 Sir Joe Bossano. We have a rainy-day fund that we cannot touch, even today at the height of monsoon season. What is the point of having that fund?

Other than the announced increase in water and electricity charges of 8%, which we now know will continue to increase annually by inflation together with all other government fees – the only way is up – there are two main revenue-raising measures that I would like to discuss and try to 260 quantify. These seem to be the two main planks of the Government’s revenue-raising attempts.

The first is the two-year company levy, which was announced as follows:

We propose that every company pay a COVID recovery charge of £25 per week over the next two years.

Mr Speaker, whenever the Chief Minister describes a cost as per day or per week, you can be certain of one thing, and that is there is a bigger number that he is trying to hide. The charge amounts to £1,300 per annum. I am reliably informed that the number of companies on our 265 register is in the region of 14,000. If all companies were to pay, then that would raise a large number in the order of £18.2 million or £36.4 million over the two-year period. This measure can be found in paragraphs 854-61 of the Chief Minister’s Budget address. But this measure takes no account of the activities of the company, nor of the ability – or even, indeed, the willingness – to pay. The Chief Minister has, perhaps inadvertently, strayed into the field of trust and companies 270 managers, and their clients may not feel so altruistic when there are plenty of other jurisdictions to choose from. Indeed, this morning we have heard from the Minister for Financial Services, when he rose to give his Budget address, that they had representations overnight from the industry complaining that this would affect their business. And so the Government now, in what must be 275 the Guinness Book of Records' fastest U-turn on a budget measure in history – in less than 24 hours – is saying, 'No, forget what we said: we are only going to go after those trading in Gibraltar.' But if the Chief Minister is trying to raise money to balance a future Budget, how much has this torpedoed the revenue-raising measure? If they are only going to go after companies trading in Gibraltar and, for the sake of argument, if we say there are two and a half thousand registered employers in Gibraltar, multiplied by 1,300 that would bring you in £3.2 million. Well, 280 £3.2 million is, I think, about £15 million-odd short of what he originally could have tried to target on this measure as announced. How will he make up the difference? What was the amount he thought he could raise? Was this even a realistic Budget measure? Who came up with this idea?

And then, of course, you have the additional question: if we are just going to go for trading companies, what about the small companies? Why should they pay the same as a large company?
285 What about the charitable companies? There are plenty of charities that are set up as companies.
And, indeed, what about all the estate-management companies, the ones that manage all the estates around Gibraltar? Are they going to have to pay as well? It is so self-evidently an ill-thought-out levy that you need not read very long on Facebook to see that this is a complete nonsense of a measure. If it was intending to raise somewhere in the order of £18 million, well 290 then it has failed at the first hurdle.

And so we are now left with only one Budget measure that really could generate revenue in any significant amount: the 2% increase in PAYE, which is, again, across the board regardless of earnings. I will venture into some technical stuff here, Mr Speaker. Using the information on page 56 of the recently tabled 2021 Employment Survey, which shows the distribution of average 295 earnings, I estimate that 2% on the earnings across the different bands could perhaps generate as much as £16 million, although again this is a guesstimate and a best effort; I obviously do not have access to the actual numbers. Of course, it would be helpful if, in his reply, the Chief Minister could state how much he has been advised he would raise by this 2% PAYE increase, and also what he thought he was going to raise on the company levy. Assuming my numbers are accurate, or at 300 least in the ball park, this means that the measures would raise around £34.2 million per annum, but of course, given the Government's U-turn, it is probably going to be a lot less. Even if it was £34.2 million, this is still significantly less than the so-called rainy-day reserves of the Savings Bank – which we are not allowed to touch because it is not a rainy day yet. But who decides?

What is not clear from the measures announced is the use to which the money will be put. Is 305 this money going to be credited to the Sinking Fund, to start to help repay debt; or is it to reduce annual deficits in recurrent expenditure in future, in the anticipation that perhaps in two years' time revenues might recover to old levels? A two-year period certainly will not be enough to help in addressing the debt levels. I would really appreciate some indication from the Chief Minister as to what the thinking is and how much he thinks he will be able to raise with these measures in 310 two years.

The 2% PAYE increase also shows a complete lack of targeting of income bands. The burden, you would have thought, should be fairly weighted in a way that higher earners would bear more than those on lower incomes. This displays a complete lack of empathy by the Government with those middle wage earners who will suffer. Is this the best they could come up with? How much 315 thought has gone into this?

It has to be asked, given that the property market seems to be generating, as the Chief Minister said, higher than expected Stamp Duty receipts, why has this not been taxed further – an extra per cent of Stamp Duty at the top end? Indeed, some may ask why not tax the profits from the property developers? We certainly have no shortage of them and perhaps their profits should be 320 subject to closer scrutiny – perhaps they will do that – or perhaps they should suffer a windfall COVID levy as well. The Government seems to have gone for the lowest-hanging fruit, the easiest tax target, the ones least able to fight back, namely the workers who are already suffering financially. Is this the best they could come up with?

Mr Speaker, I move on to AquaGib. I was surprised to hear that the Government was proposing 325 to nationalise AquaGib at precisely the lowest point in our public finances. The Government owns one third of the shares in this joint venture, which – as per its latest accounts, of March 2020, which are available at Companies House – employs some 100 people. Based purely on a net asset value price, it would cost the Government at least £6 million, and, if on a multiple of earnings, maybe even more. I really would be interested to hear who is going to be paying for the shares, because the last time the Government made a big announcement, about buying Gibtelecom, it ended up being the Savings Bank that paid for it and became the ultimate owner, not the Government.

I was interested to hear that the Government had secured a secondment from Her Majesty's Treasury in the UK to assist in reviewing tax declarations. I am not sure if this is the first time this has happened but I would welcome further information from the Chief Minister, and indeed whether the loan restructuring for 25 years is in any way connected to Her Majesty's Treasury's interest in assisting the Tax Office?

Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely not, and we would not have accepted it if it were.

Hon. R M Clinton: Well, I am asking.

Hon. Chief Minister: We requested it.

Hon. R M Clinton: I am asking.

Hon. Chief Minister: And I said we requested it.

A Member: Hear, hear.

Hon. R M Clinton: Mr Speaker, looking at inwards investment, TNG's major expected investment in the Eastside project of course is to be welcomed, if it materialises. It is, however, evident that the majority of the Improvement and Development Fund's expenditure appears to be entirely dependent on the receipt of the £90 million premium. As I said last year, we have also seen little in the way of the Government's post-Brexit economic plan. We have seen nothing in respect of the 150,000 m² reclamation project which was part of their central plan. We hear from the Deputy Chief Minister that the Rooke site is still being negotiated, and we have heard nothing of the Queen's Cinema and Queen's Hotel site, the most expensive car park in Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, passing on to non-finance matters and FATF – and I do this wearing my hat of financial services and gaming – of course we were all disappointed, certainly on this side of the House, with Gibraltar's grey listing. I note what the Minister for Financial Services has now said to the House in his Budget address and I welcome it. It would, of course, in my view, have been more appropriate if he had made a ministerial statement to the House. That would have allowed us to ask questions of clarification, especially as he was prepared to give his analysis to a private seminar ahead of this place. He has already heard the official Opposition's views on the matter and we trust on this issue we can reach cross-party consensus that the priority for Gibraltar is to be removed from the list as soon as possible. I heard the Minister's offer and I certainly will accept his kind offer for briefings on this and, indeed, the new Gaming Act in due course.

Mr Speaker, in conclusion, we have seen that this Government cannot keep to its Budget. The people deserve better than to have their pockets picked because of the failures of this Government. We will not vote for a Budget that lacks leadership, transparency and accountability and contains measures which are a shambles and not thought through. It is a joke of a Budget. We see no leadership from this Chief Minister on curbing unnecessary spending. We see no leadership from this Chief Minister on transparency. We see no leadership from this Chief Minister on eliminating waste and abuse. We see no leadership from this Chief Minister on repaying borrowing. Indeed, we see no future for this Chief Minister, who lacks the financial skills to get Gibraltar through this crisis.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Hon. Chief Minister: Like being mauled by a sheep.

380 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Paul Balban. I welcome him back to this austere Chamber. (Banging on desks)

Minister for Transport (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, it is an honour to rise once again today, as Minister for Transport, to give my Budget address. I will start with my ministerial responsibilities for Technical Services.

385 This has been a difficult year for the Technical Services Department following the COVID-19 pandemic and the uncertainties raised by the ongoing Brexit negotiations. This has led to the Technical Services Department concentrating its efforts on operationally critical items in all areas under its responsibility. Notwithstanding these challenges, the Department has continued to provide technical support to Government Ministries and Departments on a wide range of construction and traffic-related matters, as well as meeting its defined responsibilities of maintaining public infrastructure.

390 Whilst the Department has shown prudence in its spending and concentrated its efforts on essential and critical items, the Department has nonetheless been able to meet its core objectives of maintenance. It has been involved in many projects covering a wide range of responsibilities which included cliff and slope stabilisation schemes within the Upper Rock and Little Bay, the repair of a number of retaining walls, highways resurfacing works and highways maintenance, as well as general sewer maintenance and improvement works. In addition, the Department has also provided support on the implementation of several projects related to the Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan launched in March 2017.

400 With respect to cliff stabilisation and rock-fall prevention projects, during the last financial year the Department has been involved in numerous schemes which have included stabilisation works at Little Bay, Woodford Battery and Camp Bay.

405 With regard to highway maintenance, the works programme has once again been successful over the past year, with ongoing repairs to roads, footpaths and retaining walls. The Department's team of highways inspectors carries out regular inspections of all our roads and footpaths and reacts to reports received from the public.

410 This year will see the continuation of our very successful and comprehensive road resurfacing scheme. Over the last few years, a very significant number of our roads have been resurfaced or patch-repaired, and during the last financial year the Technical Services Department once again embarked on a significant road-resurfacing scheme which saw South Barracks Ramp, the north sections of South Barracks Parade, South Pavilion Road and Engineer Road and Corral Road totally resurfaced.

415 During the past year, the Technical Services Department was also involved with works to several retaining walls. These have included works at the old King George V Hospital, Bruce's Farm, Scud Hill, Mount Road, Upper Witham's Road, the American War Memorial, Naval Hospital Hill, Europa Road and Referendum Gates. The continuous monitoring and repair of existing retaining walls is critical, as many of these are old and border our public highways network. Technical Services will continue to monitor these walls and effect the necessary repairs as and when these are identified.

420 The replacement and enhancement of pelican crossing lights and equipment will continue during this year, working jointly with the Gibraltar Electricity Authority. Works are currently under way to replace the existing light-controlled crossings by Glacis Kiosk and the Department will continue to review all existing light-controlled crossings and provide further countdown timers in areas where these are required. The current programme envisages upgrades of our existing light-controlled crossings at Queensway Quay and Line Wall Road by the American Steps. The Government will continue to provide further countdown timers at all crossings and all new traffic light sets purchased to replace existing sets will have countdown timers installed as standard. It is regrettable that there has been an increase in the number of recent road traffic accidents, which 430 have seen several existing traffic lights being damaged. This unfortunately reduces our stock of spare parts and impacts our ability to continue with our upgrade programme in a timely manner.

In addition to the introduction of countdown timers, the Department is currently working closely with Ministry staff, the Special Needs Co-ordination and Liaison Officer at No. 6 Convent Place and 435 the Gibraltar Health Authority's Occupational Therapy team to study the possibility of introducing disabled-user-friendly information templates at crossing points. This initiative is aimed at making road crossings for people with disabilities.

With regard to coastal engineering works, the Department continues to monitor and carry out maintenance and repair works as and when required. The Department also continues to provide advice to developers and the DPC on all aspects of coastal engineering as and when necessary.
440 During this financial year, Technical Services will be reviewing the existing coastal defences at Eastern Beach and Sandy Bay with a view to carrying out essential maintenance works.

Moving on to sewers, during the past year the Infrastructure section of the Department has continued to maintain the public sewer network as part of Government's commitment in this area.
As part of the major desilting and relining works of our main sewer, which commenced several 445 years ago, the Department has been working on the preparation of the design and works specification for the next phase of works. This phase will see the relining of the main sewer from the area of Bomb House Lane to the entrance of Lover's Lane. These works are earmarked to be completed during the coming financial year and will link up several previously successful relining projects spanning the worst-affected areas within the Town area, covering some 560 m, equating 450 to approximately 60% of the main sewer line within the city walls. These works are considered essential, given the age and condition of the sewer and the disruption that can be caused in the event of a failure of the sewerage network. The Department continuously monitors the condition of the main sewer in order to prioritise the continuation of this essential maintenance work. The Department will, therefore, this year, as it has since 2012, continue its major desilting and 455 cleansing works of the sewer network and will be carrying out upgrade works where necessary.
Other works will include gully cleansing, manhole repairs and the general upkeep of the public storm and sewerage networks.

Given the sharp rise in developments in Gibraltar, the Department also continues to provide advice to both developers and the DPC on the impact that these various developments can have 460 on our existing sewerage network.

Finally, funding is once again being allocated for the purchase of equipment to allow the Sewer Infrastructure section to continue to expand and provide an enhanced service in respect of its inspections of our sewer network. This also applies to the Garage and Workshop, where funding for new equipment is also being provided. They will continue to provide a service to maintain the 465 fleet of government vehicles, including the refuse collection vehicles.

This year, I would once again also like to take the opportunity to thank the Sewers and Highways Infrastructure sections and the on-call officers of the Technical Services Department for their hard work and commitment during those times in the past year where Gibraltar has suffered from storms and very heavy rainfall. It is thanks to the very hard work and dedication of this team, 470 whilst most of us are at home, that the impact of these storms is not greater on our sewerage and road networks.

Mr Speaker, the Technical Services Department is one of those Government Departments that are rarely in the limelight but work tirelessly and silently behind the scenes to deliver their defined responsibilities, maintaining public infrastructure and supporting and providing technical advice 475 to other Government Ministries and Departments. Not only does the Department meet its core responsibilities but it is also actively involved in other key projects for the Government of Gibraltar. During the past year they have been involved in the delivery of improvements of the new container terminal at North Mole. Following the uncertainties of Brexit, the number of shipping containers has shown a marked increase and a need for additional storage capacity, 480 including that for refrigerated containers, was identified. Technical Services has been working in preparing the necessary infrastructure and upgrading the existing mole to increase the stacking height for container storage. Additionally, Technical Services is also responsible, in conjunction with the Office of the Chief Technical Officer, for the delivery of the first phase of the reclamation works at Coaling Island. Technical Services is involved in many projects in order to deliver on the Government's extensive and comprehensive programmes.

485

Mr Speaker, turning now to the traffic plan, the Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan (STTPP) was always a document that set out the vision for the future. It was published in March 2017 and it spoke about Gibraltar's dependency on the car and the way we broke records as having one of the highest vehicle-ownership rates in the world. Although one can often be proud of breaking records, this is one record that we surely should not be proud of if we are serious about our need to look towards a greener and sustainable future for ourselves and our children. Emissions from vehicles contribute to poor health, especially bronchial and respiratory diseases. Furthermore, our dependency on the car means that we forego active and healthy lifestyles for inactivity and hence the diseases of affluence and lifestyle, including obesity, diabetes, heart disease and even certain cancers.

The STTPP was the first real traffic plan for Gibraltar. The plan was brave, but so too was it always going to be contentious, as it centred around change. As we know, everything surrounding change can be extremely difficult to adapt to at first, and there have been very few projects that have been well received by all or indeed rejected by all. This is the nature of that beast called change, and acceptability of initiatives very much depends on whether a person is environmentally conscious or car centric.

500

With regard to initiatives relating to the STTPP, the Ministry for Transport has carried out several projects during the past year. A charging point was delivered upon the request of the Gibraltar Senior Citizens Association to be used solely as an emergency electricity topping-up station for mobility scooters. The late Manolo Ruiz was a staunch supporter of the needs of the community at large, but especially the needs of the elderly and those with disabilities. This charging point was something that Mr Ruiz requested, and it was a pleasure to be able to deliver this worthwhile service to the community before his sad passing. He will be sorely missed.

505

As part of the ongoing enhancements to the STTPP, a new mobile parking management tool has been launched that will use automatic number plate recognition technology to easily verify that cars have permission to park in certain zones and estates. This consists of two new and environmentally friendly fully electric vehicles that can process the number plates of parked cars by checking against a real-time parking permit database. They are programmed with geo-fencing technology, which recognises the different zones and which also receives up-to-date information from the MoT database. These types of vehicles are commonly used throughout the UK and other parts of Europe and have a proven track record when it comes to parking enforcement. When these vehicles drive past, they can quickly and effectively pick up cars which are illegally parked or have an expired MoT certificate. Photographic evidence of the infringement is captured digitally and this can later be used to assist with the processing of fixed penalty notices to the offenders.

510

The Government has commenced its rollout of electrical vehicle charging infrastructure as part of the Government's shift towards decarbonising the transport sector and towards a more sustainable travel model for Gibraltar. This is the way the car industry is moving at present. It is clear that electric vehicles are becoming more widespread, even though there is much speculation as to whether they will exclusively be the future form of sustainable transport or simply just a part of it. Many experts firmly believe that electric vehicles may even just be a transition towards other forms of propulsion. In Gibraltar, logic suggests that it will be very difficult to provide a charging point for each and every one of the vehicles parked on the public highway. Indeed, with the different charging needs of each vehicle and the different charging adaptors available on the market, it would be reasonable to assume that the future is anything but clear in this regard at the moment. Biofuels and hydrogen technology are also starting to carve a path into the growing field of future means of propulsion.

What one does, however, need to question is whether we will be able to defend our huge dependency on the car and continue to keep owning multiple cars per household with the 535 expectation of having these vehicles parked on the public highway and even charged on the public highway. Today, it is more often argued that this space should be put to better, more sustainable and recreational community use. Sharing is fast becoming the mainstream concept when it comes to forging a path into a decarbonised future; of this I am also convinced. Shared use of resources, vehicles, mobility devices, indeed street space, means an equitable use of resources. Our public 540 realm will need to be looked at very carefully over time if we are to achieve a sustainable future, not only for Gibraltar but indeed throughout the whole world. If we simply swap our regular diesel or petrol cars for electric vehicles, we will bring upon ourselves an ever-increasing need to mine heavy metals, cobalt and lithium at a cost to the health of other communities around the world.

These practices have already been pointed out by the world's media to be especially polluting of 545 rivers where even child labour is used to mine these resources in order to provide the chemistry required to produce electric vehicle batteries for the developed world. These processes destroy the fragile ecosystems in developing countries, pushing pollution out of the cities through the elimination of tail-pipe emissions but passing the environmental buck on to those producing electricity or the batteries that store this energy via other less sustainable means elsewhere.
Indeed, research is showing that the environmental impact of the manufacture of electric cars 550 means that an electric car needs to be driven approximately 80,000 km before its carbon footprint equals that of an internal combustion engine.

Currently, the focus in Gibraltar is on offering charging points within public car parks, but charging points will soon also be available at certain on-street parking spaces, where possible.
Clearly, it will be logistically easier to provide charging infrastructure within private and rental 555 parking facilities than on the street. There will be many challenges to overcome, including the need to consider solutions to hide and make safe unsightly cabling on streets to provide the necessary power at given locations. Nevertheless, Gibraltar needs to be nimble footed to be able to adapt to change. It may not be the end of fuel stations yet, as biofuel and hydrogen technology continue advancing and even the concept of battery fuel stations may see a proliferation of a 560 different concept, where people purchase their car but lease the electric batteries. Shared car schemes and shared micro-mobility is gaining popularity, saving the user the cost of insurance, maintenance, depreciation and repairs while allowing the user a choice of different vehicles for different needs.

The Ministry for Transport is pleased to announce that following an agreement between 565 Government and Plug-N-Go (Gibraltar) Ltd, Midtown car park now has available for use five electric vehicle chargers. The chargers are located on level 6 and they are the most recent generation of electric vehicle charging devices, including a direct charge fast charger. Access to the chargers can be achieved by downloading the application Plug-N-Go, which is available for both Apple and Android devices. Payment is on a pay-as-you-go basis. Further chargers have been 570 ordered for installation at Europa Point car park and at Devil's Tower Road car park. These chargers are for public use. More areas are being identified as demand increases. Provision has already been made for availability of electric vehicle chargers for Government rental stock parking, with two chargers already installed at Harbour Views estate parking.

The Ministry for Transport installed a second new-style, car-shaped bicycle rack at Line Wall 575 Road, an area that has seen an increased demand in bicycle parking. This bicycle parking solution sends a clear message for a more sustainable and environmentally friendly use of our public highway by using the space normally occupied by one single motor vehicle – in this case, a car – to park up to 10 bicycles. This adds to the growing stock of bicycle parking in Gibraltar and further encourages alternative and sustainable modes of transport locally.

580 In January of this year the Government was pleased to announce the rollout of the next Residential Parking Scheme, Zone 4. This new zone surrounds the West District from Marina Court in the north to Ordinance Wharf in the south, bordering with the RPS Zone 2 in the east. Residents with households within this zone boundary will be eligible to apply for a resident parking permit.
This follows the successful rollout of Zone 1 in July 2017, Zone 2 in March 2018 and Zone 3 in June 585 2018 respectively, and more importantly continues to form part of our commitment to roll out recommendations contained within the STTPP. The Ministry will monitor this new zone as well as all other existing zones to ensure that parking take-up provides the most efficient use of the existing street space for the benefit of residents and all road users, regardless of how they move.

590 I am also pleased to announce changes to the existing parking arrangements within Grand Parade car park. The Ministry for Transport and Traffic, following an active consultation process with the main stakeholders in Zone 1, namely the Alameda Estate Tenants Association, and residents within Zone 2, enhanced the parking zones. Consultation and stakeholder engagement plays an important part in the recommendations contained within the STTPP and it pleases me to continue to gauge users so as to make these schemes successful.

595 The parking stock for permit holders within Zone 1 was increased in July 2020 from 127 to 211, which was well received by residents, increasing their chance to find on-street parking in that area. Since the release of Zone 2, parking stock within the Town Centre zone has been reduced due to ongoing works and construction, specifically in the southern part of this parking scheme. To mitigate the impact, the north-eastern section of Grand Parade car park was allocated to Zone 2 permit holders only, with line painting designating 'ZONE 2' on the ground and signs erected to effectively differentiate the parking arrangements within the car park. As with Zones 1, 2, 3 and the newly announced Zone 4, changes of this nature will continue to be monitored and reviewed, with their respective parking take-up continually evaluated with an aim to provide more efficient use to the existing parking stock within the car park and within zones.

600 The Ministry for Transport launched a new pay and display online payment function. The launch of this web-based payment portal currently captures all existing pay and display zones throughout Gibraltar; however, further enhancements to this service will be added in future to include the possibility of paying online fixed penalty notices and any Government monthly rental car parking spaces, including the launch of a Gibraltar parking mobile application. New users are encouraged to create an account, where they will be able to store their vehicle's data and personal details for regular use, or alternatively they can log in as a guest to pay for parking for single, one-time use. A reminder email and SMS message will inform the user when the parking session is due to expire and with the added option to top-up, hence extending the parking time without having to return to the machine to pay and without having to attach a ticket to the inside dashboard of the vehicle. This allows much more flexibility and makes the system much more user friendly. Parking management officers will have access to real-time data of all parking payments without the need for this physical ticket. This, in turn, increases efficiency to enforce more areas within a given working day. An FPN will be issued to any offending vehicles with no record of payment.

605 Mr Speaker, some weeks ago a new, safe, segregated pedestrian walkway was created along South Barrack Ramp with the aim of providing safe passage for pedestrians, especially school children, so that walking may be considered a viable option by residents in this area. This new walkway will improve pedestrian accessibility to and from the nearby schools, bus stops and residential properties. Works at South Barrack Ramp have recently been completed with the installation of planters and barriers as a temporary measure to protect the walkway. Traditionally, pedestrians would walk along a road without a pavement, seeking refuge between parked cars. Current thinking worldwide is moving towards ceding space to pedestrians and raising the importance of the pedestrian to the very top of the hierarchy of road users. Pedestrians are the most vulnerable of road users and walking is the best way to keep healthy and to help the environment, and walking drastically reduces our carbon footprint. It is our responsibility to make walking, for those who wish to walk, as comfortable and safe as possible, to keep encouraging them to do so, whilst at the same time supporting those who feel that walking is dangerous to be able to consider walking instead of using their car. With this initiative, pedestrians and children now have a safe passageway where previously this was non-existent.

620 As a continuation of the walking infrastructure improvements seen at South Barracks Ramp, the Ministry for Transport will be introducing walking infrastructure improvements all along Prince Edward's Road from Hargraves football pitch to Forty Steps. The western section of this road will be segregated to allow for the safe passage of pedestrians, an area where it is deemed necessary

640 to connect other existing footpaths in the Upper Town, as well as providing safe access to clubs and out-of-school activities. The first phase of this project by Hargraves football pitch has already been completed, with the remaining to be completed later, as soon as construction works at 73 Prince Edward's Road are complete. The introduction of this new demarcated footpath will result in the removal of 11 Zone 2 parking spaces. However, these have been re-provided within the ex-Queen's Cinema car park. The existing pay and display car park will therefore be removed, 645 given the fact that there is ample parking availability within Grand Parade and Ragged Staff car parks nearby and usage was seen to be low.

The Ministry continues to convene monthly Traffic Commission meetings, where applications from members of the public are submitted through this statutory forum with responsibility for traffic and parking-related matters in Gibraltar. All requests of this nature are brought forward, deliberated upon and either approved or rejected. The members of the Commission discuss these 650 applications objectively and collectively, and consciously deliberate on the merits of each individual application.

Further to and in conjunction with the traffic plan, the Ministry for Transport is working at developing improvements to mobility and accessibility and general sustainability in Gibraltar. The aim is to modify and redesign our streetscape over time, encouraging and making use of other 655 forms of moving, such as walking and cycling, and making the use of public transport more attractive with the aim of decarbonising our transport network in line with Government's commitment to reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 42% by 2030, as set out in the Climate Change Act. We are working closely with other Ministries to be able to improve the accessibility of our footpaths, introduce safe, preferably segregated cycling infrastructure and provide road 660 calming measures on certain roads that have recently been the site of concerning traffic accidents.

The Ministry's Technical Department is working on developing a Cycling Strategy, which will become a useful policy document in the future. This will provide Town Planning with a blueprint for the introduction of the required cycle infrastructure specifications, modes of construction and future locations for cycling lanes. We are fully committed to meeting the climate goals set out.
665 The Ministry for Transport is working with the Ministry for the Environment to provide ways of achieving a more sustainable transport network. The Ministry for Transport fully understands the perceived needs of the community for vans, lorries, cars and motorcycles on our roads, but also notes the number of single-user car trips being made, the often unnecessary and extremely short distances being travelled by car – with distances as short as 400 m to take children to school, for 670 example – instead of walking. Although all these journeys may still be financially possible for families in an affluent society despite the huge increase in fuel costs, these come at a cost to the environment and to our health.

I am approached by many people who wish to cycle for recreation, exercise and even as a way of commuting, and I am also approached by cyclists who want better infrastructure so that they 675 can be safer on the road. Many are scared to cycle with their children. There is a certain irony in the fact that most Gibraltarians will buy their children bicycles as a birthday or Christmas present, they will struggle to fit these inside the boots of their car, they will drive them to the lighthouse or find somewhere suitable where there is flat ground, they will teach their child how to balance and ride, and then pack the bicycle back into the boot of their car and drive them back home.
680 After a few tedious and bothersome trips of this nature to use the bicycle during the weekend, the bicycle will simply become a nuisance and will be left to gather dust on the external corridor of the flat, unless one lives in an estate with some common space that permits cycling.
Unfortunately, many estates do not permit cycling. Almost as if a rite of passage, we seem to teach our children the long-lasting gift of balance, which will be critical come their 17th birthday 685 motorbike gift, their first motorbike. Nevertheless, rarely will anyone have forgotten that day we rode our bicycle for the first time unsupported and suddenly we extended the frontiers of our neighbourhood. We were free. I do remember, but it was a different world back then, definitely worse-kept roads then, yet they were safer and quieter with very few vehicles. Unfortunately, the modern child simply cannot enjoy this basic pleasure, on roads loaded to the hilt with vehicles 690 chugging dangerous fumes, stuck in bumper-to-bumper traffic, and then, during the less congested hours, having to face the noise of those turbos firing as cars and motorbikes speed between speed cameras and traffic light junctions. The child on his bicycle in Gibraltar simply does not stand a chance in the jungle that has become our road, and neither is there the space provided today within our urban environment. Unfortunately, cycling is one of the most dangerous ways of 695 moving in Gibraltar, and this is something that we need to urgently address if we are to provide true equality within our streetscape for all user needs.

Gibraltar boasts of a complete road network, widespread pavements, an Airport and a Port, it has a free bus service and a taxi service, but the only infrastructure which is missing and which is vital in a modern city with green and carbon-neutral aspirations is cycling infrastructure. In fact, 700 Gibraltar, like most other cities, over time has improved its offering to the very mode of transport that is most responsible for a great part of the emissions locally: the car. The car's presence on the road has grown so much that it has even led to cars creeping on to our walkways and pavements to the detriment of our pedestrians as vehicles get larger and larger and the need for wider parking spaces greater and greater. This has made the design and planning of bicycle 705 infrastructure extremely difficult and most challenging, to say the least. The Ministry's Technical Department has risen to the challenge, and through determination and hard work we are developing a proposed cycling network that will span from Bayside Road south to Waterport Road, Bishop Caruana Road, Saluting Battery, Rosia Road, Little Bay, Keightley Way Tunnel and finally to Europa Point. The scheme has set aims to achieve the introduction of bicycle routes via a phased 710 approach, using transitional pop-up bicycle lanes that can later be adjusted and improved on as necessary to ensure that the final construction optimises the new infrastructure. Where space on the road needs to be shared, a reduction in speed limit will be necessary to maintain safety for all road users. The scheme also aims to create more accessible pedestrian areas and the uniformity of road crossings to respect the needs of our community at large, including those with more 715 specific needs due to medical and mobility issues.

The scheme aims to create a modern 15-minute city in Gibraltar, where you can travel and arrive at your primary destination quickly and safely within 15 minutes via a sustainable network of travel. Many cities are striving to become these 15-minute cities and yet we are already a 15-minute city by definition, as most of us can, in fact, access our destinations within 15 minutes 720 in Gibraltar by walking – more so by cycling – yet we prefer to have a 30- or 40-minute city by jumping into our cars and getting stuck in traffic, causing detriment to the air quality of our home.
Traffic is not something that exists of its own accord. Traffic is not another beast to contend with on the road. We are traffic, as the Financial Secretary often likes to hear me say, bringing a cheeky smile to his face. The team at the Ministry believes that the introduction of this bicycle 725 infrastructure will allow the public to experience this new mode of transport and help reduce the use of the car in our city.

People will immediately associate me with bicycles. I am passionate about the bicycle as a means to get to places, keep fit and discover new places, but above all I am passionate about doing my bit to help the environment. Of course I like cars – in fact, I love cars – but I seldom drive 730 if I can avoid it, and I feel better and healthier for it. I firmly believe that the bicycle is our means to a better, greener, healthier modern city. Lead researcher Dr Christian Brand for the University of Oxford said:

We found that those who switch just one trip per day from car driving to cycling reduce their carbon footprint by about 0.5 tonnes over a year.

This is a fact that we cannot consciously ignore. Leaving the car at home and walking or cycling means better air quality and better health, and collectively we can leave behind a better place for 735 future generations. After all, this is what the climate emergency is about, and this is what the Climate Change Strategy is aiming for. Without everyone doing their bit and educating ourselves, our future cannot realistically be rosy. For the first time ever, in 2013 the death of a nine-year-old 740 girl in the UK thought to have asthma was attributed to air quality and her death certificate actually stated that air pollution was the cause of her death. This child lived near the South Circular Road near Lewisham in south east London. This is the severity of the situation most cities face, and Gibraltar is no different. Furthermore, we have to contend with a stuffy and humid microclimate that causes our air to linger and we are also in proximity of heavy industrial plants within the Bay which add greatly to our problem.

745 I now turn to the bicycle and the Ministry's initiatives in this respect. The bicycle, in one form or another, has been around since the early 1800s, but the development of the safety bicycle in the 1880s was arguably the most important change in the history of the bicycle. It shifted its use and public perception from being a dangerous toy for sporting young men to being an everyday transport tool for men and women of all ages. It was decades later that the first commercially manufactured car would make an appearance. At the time, the view was that the car would 750 eventually do away with the bicycle, but in fact the bicycle has remained very much unchanged, whereas the car has had to evolve to survive, changing its shape and appearance, its use and its means of propulsion. With the dawn of the car, roads and streets slowly had to be adapted to the vehicles that would eventually change the way the world moved. I am firmly of the view that the bicycle will outlive the car; but regardless of my personal opinion, it is important and right to 755 provide accessible streets for all to be able to choose their own means of travel, be it walking, cycling or whatever they choose.

Gibraltar clearly was never built for the car – the Upper Town and city within the walls is testament to that – yet 'new' Gibraltar, if I may call it that, has been planned around the car. Planning policy has traditionally sought to provide space for car parking in all but a few of the 760 newest developments, and unfortunately, creating the space for a harmonious co-existence for these different modes of transport never happened. Roads were built, yet no provision was ever made for bicycles in those days. Today, planning policy is very slowly changing and the Ministry for Transport actively seeks to ensure that all development applications take into consideration modern needs and apply the latest thinking with regard to urban planning. The design of street
765 space is critical if we are to move towards a greener future. No matter how much we enjoy our cars, it is easy to draw the conclusion that internal combustion engine vehicles – HGVs, cars and vans – all result in noise pollution, air quality deterioration, space challenges and the loss of potential and valuable recreational street space for people, families and children to enjoy.

770 Unfortunately, resistance to change is strong and the way ahead is potholed and with many obstacles, but this is certainly the direction we must try to travel if we believe that there is a climate emergency and that we need to be proactive against climate change. Otherwise, it makes little or no sense. Cycling is not for everyone, but neither are the bus or the car. The question here must be choice and to provide that choice, so that people may choose whether they drive, walk or cycle, but everyone must be allowed to do so safely and without fear. The problem is that 775 cyclists often fear, especially for their children, and many parents will not allow their children to cycle on the road. Pedestrians often fear, too, the speed of cars, delinquent drivers, the sound of noisy, blasting turbo exhausts deliberately made to fire by rapid acceleration. Even those who drive on a Sunday for recreation often fear cars and motorbikes overtaking them. The key is respect, and unfortunately much respect is being eroded together with road etiquette, and this is 780 fast becoming a big policing challenge across the board.

As part of our existing manifesto commitments, the Ministry is engaging with various stakeholders to allow Main Street businesses to make and receive deliveries all day by cargo bike and provide fiscal incentives for the use of cargo bikes for deliveries instead of via often old, 785 polluting diesel trucks. Many cities are embracing the cargo bicycle as a real and serious alternative to the internal combustion engine. E-cargo bicycles are, today, capable of carrying huge loads and are relatively inexpensive to run and maintain.

The existing bicycle sharing scheme and the concept of bicycle sharing is currently under review. Bicycle sharing technology is constantly advancing and, as a result the Redibikes scheme, came to the end of its usable lifespan. It is well accepted that bicycle shared schemes form a very 790 important part of any city's active shared mobility plan, together with other, more novel means of personal mobility. Government will continue to explore ways of introducing shared personal mobility solutions as and when the time is deemed right.

New bicycle racks are continuously being rolled out at strategic locations around Gibraltar, with the latest additions being at Main Street South, Harbour Views Road, Casemates and John 795 Mackintosh Square. There are, as it stands, a total of 327 public cycle parking spaces throughout Gibraltar.

The Ministry for Transport is happy to be re-launching Pedal Ready, in partnership with the GSLA, during their summer sports programme this August. The aim of Pedal Ready is to prepare children for cycling by using games to develop their cycle handling and awareness skills. Such a 800 scheme offers our future generation the awareness and skills needed to adopt more sustainable travel options both now and in the future. Pedal Ready will also, over time, be offering short courses for adults to teach them the basic skills of safe cycling on the road, including road positioning and the new Highway Code. There will also be future opportunities to teach persons who have never cycled before to master the basic skills of balance.

805 The Ministry for Transport, in conjunction with the Department of Education, will seek to trial walking and cycling 'buses' once the Mobility, Sustainability and Accessibility Scheme has kicked off. This scheme aims to encourage children to walk and cycle to school. This initiative would be beneficial not only for the health of the nation at large, as studies have shown that exercise before school improves concentration as well as providing known positive effects that exercise brings, 810 but will also help to reduce the number of cars on the road during peak school drop-off and pickup times, as children will be encouraged to walk in a supervised manner with their peers as a sustainable and healthy means to travel to and from school. This will, hopefully, lead to fewer school car trips.

Mr Speaker, the Department of the Environment, Heritage and Climate Change, in conjunction 815 with the Ministry for Transport, is currently drafting anti-idling legislation. Research shows that an idling vehicle can emit up to 20 times more of certain pollutants than the same vehicle travelling at 50 kmph. These microscopic pollutants can cause asthma and worsen chronic illness such as bronchial disease, lung cancer and emphysema, and can be particularly damaging for children. By introducing this legislation, we hope to raise public awareness about the damage that 820 can be caused to health by leaving vehicles idling unnecessarily. The powers under this legislation will mean that anyone who leaves their engine running unnecessarily while not in use can be issued with a fixed penalty notice if they do not turn off their engine when told to do so. The introduction of this legislation is just one measure the Government is looking at to improve local air quality. Clearly, this initiative is only possible when the whole population works together and 825 understands the importance of reducing emissions in this way. Most modern cars already prevent unnecessary idling by cutting their engines out automatically when stopped, but this is a function that can be overridden manually in some cars. Idling is an even worse problem in older vehicles, especially when some drivers refuse to switch their engines off in order to keep their air conditioning running and their cabins cool.

830 The Ministry for Transport, in partnership with the Department of the Environment, Heritage and Climate Change, is currently investigating the possibility of introducing a low emission zone in the heart of our town, Main Street, in a bid to improve air quality in an area which sees many old diesel trucks delivering goods during the delivery times. Such a scheme could introduce a permit fee to discourage the use of these highly polluting vehicles to drive through Main Street 835 and bring about a transition to newer and less polluting delivery vehicles such as electric vehicles or plug-in hybrids. The Ministry has already met with the Chamber of Commerce to discuss the introduction of a low emission zone along Main Street. The proposed policy of this low emission zone is currently being drafted and we have engaged with various stakeholders to allow Main Street businesses to make and receive deliveries all day long by cargo bikes. A fee would be 840 considered, by way of an access permit, which will be incrementally raised annually for delivery vehicles within this low emission zone which are not environmentally friendly. The proposed scheme has been well received in principle and we look forward to working closely with our local businesses to see how we may be able to make this a reality in partnership. Permit fees would depend on the emissions of each vehicle, and certain sustainable modes of transport would enjoy longer delivery times in Main Street.

The purchase of two latest-technology handheld speed camera guns with photographic capabilities for the Royal Gibraltar Police was approved in Cabinet following a request by the Commissioner of Police in order to improve the policing of speeding offences. This system does not require a police officer to stop a vehicle, as the photographic evidence means that these handheld devices work similarly to a static pole-mounted speed camera.

850

The Personal Light Electric Transporters Bill is now drafted and will be brought to Parliament very shortly. The legislation will provide these devices a sound legal framework which will allow these vehicles to operate legally and safely within Gibraltar. It will define the personal light electric transporters, or e-scooters, that fall within this special framework and will focus on safety, and, for example, make it a requirement that an operator of a transporter wears appropriate protective headgear, further setting a minimum age and speed limits. The Bill will also amend the Traffic Act to ensure, for example, that the offences which can be committed by cyclists are replicated for operators of personal light electric transporters. The amendments to the Act will allow amendment of existing subsidiary legislation to ensure that it is clear that operators of these personal devices are required to comply with the rules of road safety that apply to the users of other vehicles.

The updated Gibraltar Highway Code is now completed and should be available online shortly. There will also be a printed version available to the general public. The new Gibraltar Highway Code, which follows the new UK Highway Code and standards, takes into account relevant changes made in the UK Highway Code. This new code reinforces new rules and, most significantly, provides increased priority to the most vulnerable – the pedestrian and the cyclist – within the modern streetscape. The Ministry has been working very closely with the Royal Gibraltar Police and the chief examiner at the Driving and Vehicle Licensing Department, who are the principal stakeholders in this document.

In preparation for the introduction of cycle lanes in Gibraltar, the Government Law Officers are currently in the process of drafting regulations concerning the use of, as well as the exclusions on, the use of cycle lanes. This legislation will also include the introduction of an offence of dangerous overtaking of a cyclist.

The draft Bill for the implementation of a penalty points system is now complete and ready to go before Parliament. The software back-office solution is nearing its final stages and should be ready ahead of the Bill being brought before Parliament. All ancillary documentation and processes have now been prepared. We aim for the system to be up and running very shortly after the Bill is enacted.

The Ministry is finalising plans for the introduction of advanced stop lines for cyclists at certain specific strategic locations. New legislation would need to be published for these new road improvements, so that they are enforceable and used as intended.

880

Mr Speaker, I now turn my attention to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Department. The DVLD has had an extremely challenging two years, due to all the necessary amendments to legislation and additional requirements when driving in Europe. This has proven challenging at times, with the DVLD team working closely with the Government Law Officers, DVLA (UK) and HM Government of Gibraltar Office in Brussels in order to meet the imposed deadlines.

885

The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Department has embraced and used information technology as a tool to achieve a better and more efficient service to our customers. To date, it offers a total of 13 online services and applications via the e-government portal. The Department is in the process of providing further services in the coming months. The DVLD continues to see considerable demand from its service users and also offers its services through its public-facing counters, which includes a dedicated business counter. The Department has managed to maintain very reasonable waiting times and expedite tests for students and those requiring driving licences

890

895 for work-related matters, despite the increased workload. The introduction of the express service is providing our local dealers with a next-day service for new vehicle registrations, duplicate certificates of registration, change of ownership and motor vehicle particulars. We are looking forward to introducing an express service for driving licences in the near future.

900 With regard to special driving licences, such as categories for buses and heavy goods vehicles, the Department arranged for a Driver Certificate of Professional Competence trainer from the UK to come to Gibraltar as soon as the COVID restrictions were lifted. This allowed all existing licence holders to undertake their respective refresher update courses and new applicants were able to meet the stringent requirements of these licence categories. The courses were delivered by an approved UK instructor.

905 The compulsory basic training (CBT) continues to be a huge success and continues to receive very good feedback, especially from parents. I am very proud to have introduced this for motorbikes back in 2013, which has improved road safety, mainly for teenagers driving on our busy roads. The Government of Gibraltar is pleased with the success of the compulsory motorcycle basic training course, almost 10 years after its introduction. This important course continues to ensure that every person demonstrates a minimum level of skill and competence before being permitted to drive on our roads. I cannot emphasise the importance of this training, which is delivered by qualified motorcycle instructors, and I am confident that this compulsory procedure will continue to help prevent serious injuries and accidents on the roads in Gibraltar.

910 I am proud to announce that following the successful MoT booking system developed by ITLD, the Department is now working to introduce a full online booking service for the CBT, to include theory and practical motorcycle riding test components that will allow service users to choose their own bookings online, providing a quicker and more efficient service to the public.

915 Continuing with road safety, the Government has invested in new brake rollers for the Certificate of Roadworthiness tests – otherwise known as MoT tests – within the Test Centre. These will help vehicle testers when examining vehicles. Continuous investment and improvements are the best way to ensure further road safety, and the Government is fully committed to this. Environmental matters are also of importance, and the Motor Vehicle Test Centre boasts the latest equipment to test vehicle emissions. The equipment fully complies with the EU testing legislation and is in line with the manifesto commitment for a greener Gibraltar. By conducting these tests, our vehicle testers can establish if any part of the emission system of a motor vehicle has been tampered with, removed or otherwise illegally modified.

920 The DVLD has come a long way in establishing a database link with other member states in accordance with EU directives. The DVLD shares vehicle information via the European Register of Road Transport Undertakings via the Driver and Vehicle Services Agency. The European Car and Driving Licence Information System is another example of the information exchange software system that the DVLD uses to provide the necessary framework to other countries in order to share their car and driving licence registration information.

930 Mr Speaker, after a brief stop due to the pandemic, the taxi city service has been fully restored and with the help of our transport inspectors the provision of the city service will continue to be monitored. The Government works closely with the Gibraltar Taxi Association to try to improve the service being provided. I am also pleased to announce that Gibraltar now has its first Electric Taxi within its fleet.

935 The Transport Commission meets on a regular basis to consider applications for a wide range of transport licences. The Commission also considers all transport-based complaints received from users of our public services. I must thank all members of the Commission who give up their time regularly to provide and deliver the statutory responsibilities of this forum to all.

940 The Transport Inspector team provides cover on the ground to police transport-related activities throughout Gibraltar. Their duties include the overseeing of our taxi and bus services and the inspection of the taxi provision service at the Airport. Furthermore, the transport inspectors oversee the provision of the taxi city service throughout the year and ensure that all

945 permits to access pedestrianised areas, particularly those accessed by commercial vehicles, are adhered to.

With Brexit came the requirement to make changes to our present driving licence format, which included the removal of the EU stars from our licence cards. As from 3rd May, Gibraltar has 950 been printing and issuing the latest model of driving licence as currently used in the UK, with our Gibraltar issuing authority label. These cards have been printed within our Test Centre's newly refurbished facilities, reducing the costs of production. A new MoU has been signed with the UK, reducing further the cost of our blank cards.

955 Finally, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the entire team at the DVLD for their hard work. They have managed to ensure a continuity of service and introduce substantial improvements throughout the entire Department during somewhat challenging and uncertain times.

Mr Speaker, Gibraltar's buses are a key and very critical part of transport within the STTPP.
Encouraging modal change also requires an efficient and reliable bus service, and the Gibraltar Bus Company provides exactly this. There is little reason not to consider the bus offering in 960 Gibraltar, which is predominantly free for locals except for the night bus services. The Bus Tracker app has been revolutionary, putting the bus service right into the hands of the user. The request stops at certain bus stops have greatly improved the service timing and made the ride more comfortable for both the user and the bus driver. Nevertheless, we would like to see greater take-up of the bus service throughout the whole community. At present, the bus service is used 965 predominantly by school children and the over-60s group. This results in a massive take-up during the morning and at school times and very low usage during the day and weekends. The school bus routes, operating every weekday during school term, continue to be a success. This service tackles the issues brought to our attention by users who were concerned that route buses were full at school peak times. The Bus Company shares a hopper ticket with Calypso Transport. The hopper 970 ticket – or hop-on, hop-off – enables visitors to Gibraltar to make the most of Gibraltar's attractions within the city centre and other areas located within the lower reaches of the Rock at their own pace throughout the whole day. The bus hopper ticket can be used on all of Gibraltar's public buses. We will continue to explore ways to improve the current service.

I would like to thank all those down at the Gibraltar Bus Company, the bus manager, his 975 management team and all the bus drivers, who work long hours, day, night and into the early mornings on the weekend night buses. They provide a service so that we may go out and enjoy the nightlife safely and sustainably.

Parking enforcement continues to be a massive challenge in a town with one of the largest vehicle ownership rates in the world. The sheer volume of cars means that there is a constant and 980 daily battle to find a place to park these cars. Often, cars park illegally on pavements and abuse the zone parking rules. This provides a massive challenge to provide all-year-round enforcement.
To this end, parking enforcement has had to evolve to rise to the challenge. During lockdown, with very quiet streets, GPMSL took the opportunity to install all the required smart parking sensors within the pay and display areas. This technology would prove essential with the development of 985 other projects which followed, and 2022 saw the soft launch of a mobile phone app and website branded simply Gibraltar Parking. This is our local implementation of SmartParking technology.
Using a sensor placed under each parking space, the online map shows drivers which bays are available for use. Before the introduction of this system, drivers would need to drive around looking for a parking space, but this new technology directs users to the empty spaces in the area, 990 helping to reduce the need for driving aimlessly and speculatively, and therefore provides an environmental benefit.

Further investment has been made in the operator control room. Operating around the clock, the control room team watches live CCTV feeds from all of our car parks and other relevant sites.
Through secure website portals, the controller and his assistants can see the status of the pay and 995 display machines, the SmartParking sensors and other systems, including the bollards at Casemates Square. These open and close automatically on a daily basis for cleaning and deliveries.

They are also programmed in advance of special events such as the recent visit of Prince Edward and the Countess of Wessex, where maximum security is achieved whilst allowing remote opening from the control room in the event of an emergency.

1000 The pandemic saw a move from people willing to queue in public areas and wait in line to be attended to in the traditional counter environment to opting for smarter, online services. Gibraltar Car Parks did not have a website before the pandemic. As local restrictions were imposed, a website was developed in house. Important documents were converted from paper format to online, tested and then made available to the public. All forms which were previously only 1005 available in paper format at the public counter were added to the website and can now be accessed online.

Post COVID and with the introduction of alternatives to cash payment systems at pay and display machines, we have seen a reduction in cash payments generally, and these are seen to continue to drop over time. Over the past three months, cash payments have dropped further to 1010 35%, from 46%. This makes for a more effective service, as via the app paying for parking can be done remotely if a person needs to extend their parking time within the limits set within each parking area. It is the hope and aim to be moving to cashless systems in the near future.

Mr Speaker, in conclusion, I would like, again, to thank all those working within my respective Departments, most of whom I have got to know personally throughout the years and with whom 1015 I enjoy and share an invaluable professional relationship. I would like to thank all management, technical and administrative staff at Technical Services, the Sewer section, Highways division, the Garage and Workshop personnel, the Gibraltar Bus Company staff, its drivers and mechanical staff, and those involved with parking management and enforcement. I would also like to thank management and all the staff down at the DVLD. Finally, I would like to thank my Ministry and 1020 technical team for their efforts throughout the past year. I also wish to thank all parliamentary staff for their hard work and assistance.

This has been the toughest Budget speech, ever, for me to prepare. When one's body and mind was elsewhere for weeks on end and at a time when I needed the most support, much welcomed support came from an unexpected source. I would like to give my heartfelt thanks to someone, a 1025 public servant whom I got to know very well over the years I have been in Government, a person I have worked closely with and travelled with on Government business in the past and who kindly offered to assist me during the latter stages of the preparation of my speech, giving up his family time after working hours and during two weekends, even while overseeing the children at the pool. You know who you are, and I am most grateful.

1030 This one is for you, Dad.

Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I wonder whether this might be a convenient moment before the next sonoric contribution from Mr Bossino, to take a 15-minute break.

1035

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess to 10 past six.

The House recessed at 5.52 p.m. and resumed at 6.13 p.m.

Appropriation Bill 2022 –
Second Reading –
Debate continued

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Damon Bossino.

1040 Hon. D J Bossino: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I rise to set out the GSD Opposition's contribution in the areas of tourism, housing, heritage, planning and lands.

1045 On the tourism statistics, the general point to make is that they have not been as assiduously updated online of late. I am not clear why that is the case. The cruise liner statistics are the exception, with the last updates online from June this year. This is particularly helpful when one considers that the Tourism Survey Report was only laid before the House yesterday, the very day the debate on the Appropriation Bill started. By comparison, the figures for Upper Rock visitor numbers end in July 2021. When asked for updated figures in respect of the various tables which comprise the Tourist, Air Traffic and Hotel Occupancy Survey Reports, the Minister, rather 1050 unhelpfully, declined to provide the answer, telling me to await the formal issue of the reports. It is not clear what the reason is for the delay or refusal to provide the answer in response to a parliamentary question. Is it that the Minister is less than keen to provide updated information in a transparent manner? Or is there a more innocent explanation, that administratively it has not been possible? I do not propose to make a value or political judgement at this stage, other than 1055 to say that, whatever the reason, the Opposition, but more importantly the public, are having a disservice visited upon them and I urge the Government to rectify this.

For an analysis of the statistics which were available at the time of preparing for this contribution, one would need to focus on the cruise liner figures. What these show is that there is clearly a much welcomed improvement in a post-lockdown world. I use those words advisedly, 1060 because it would be inaccurate and clearly overly optimistic, in light of increased infections – and we have one of our own currently undergoing the condition – to describe the current scenario as 'post-COVID'. There is a significant jump in the number of passengers from March 2022 to April, of 11,867, an increase of almost 60%. Although slightly down from April, this May's figures are looking promising at 20,479. If that statistic is compared with the immediate post-lockdown
1065 monthly average from July 2021 to March 2022 of 3,740, it represents a further sign of recovery in this sector. This is to be welcomed and we do so from this side of the House. We are not, however, quite there yet. This statement is backed up by the comparison which can be made with the same months, i.e. April and May, in 2019 when the number of people arriving via cruise liners stood at 32,000 and 36,000 respectively, compared with 20,500 and 20,400, again respectively, 1070 for this year.

We hope that we can regain the share of the market that we once had. This requires energy and focus and should, quite properly, be private sector led. As someone who has been described as being on the centre-right of the political spectrum, the view that the private sector should take a lead and incur the expense of marketing and business development in order to bring more 1075 business here has an inherent ideological sense to it. This is not to say that the Government should not play its part.

From a very macro level, Gibraltar faces stiff competition. Gibraltar Port is having to contend with an increased dominance of the Cadiz and Malaga ports. Indeed, there has been talk for some years of La Linea itself also operating a cruise liner port. It will not be lost on Members that this is 1080 competition which has the potential of becoming even more acute should we accede to the Schengen space in the event of the much sought-after deal with the EU becoming a reality. Coach tours to Gibraltar will be able to be sold, say from Malaga, as is done from the Roman port of Civitavecchia to the Eternal City, which entails a two-hour drive, not dissimilar to what it would take from Malaga to here. If La Linea did ever become a reality in terms of cruise liner provision, 1085 the effect would be obvious.

In other statistics which are more contemporaneously available – coach passenger arrivals – we also see a similar picture of improvement, albeit not to the same pre-pandemic levels. The figures for January 2022 stood at 731, and as at May they stood at 14,320. The comparative figures for 2019, however, were 7,246 and 27,100 respectively.

1090 The information we were given yesterday with the laying on the table of the Tourist Survey, Hotel Occupancy and Air Traffic Survey Reports for 2021, shows that the overall tourist expenditure has risen from £97.51 million in 2020, which in itself represented a vertiginous drop from £307.57 million in 2019 ... is now starting to creep up, albeit slowly, to £128.19 million in 2021.

1095 The hotel occupancy figure is still comparatively low at 59.6% in 2021, although increased from 46.6% in 2020. We see a similar story with air arrivals, where there is a slow pick up in numbers but certainly not the high numbers that anyone listening to the Minister would think were arriving each time he announces a new airline coming to Gibraltar, which, as we all know too well, never materialises in anything serious or long-lasting.

1100 Dwelling on some of the measures announced yesterday – the Sustainable Tourism Tax of £3 per person per night of hotel stay and the £1 per cruise liner passenger – we on this side of the House have initial doubts as to whether this revenue-raising measure now, at this precise moment when we are in the throes of a recovery of a severely and badly hit sector, is the best decision. Historically, Governments and Oppositions have argued over how one party or another has fared in bringing more visitors here, but I think we need to spend much more political time and energy in analysing what it is that we offer those visitors once they arrive. I am told, for example, that there is a particular challenge to get passengers off the liners. Here, we face competition with the liners themselves, given the full array of amenities and comforts which they offer on board, such that passengers need to be persuaded to come onshore. Liners, as will be expected, will go to where it is more profitable for them, and shore excursions are where they get a lot of their income and revenue. It is not yet known, in those circumstances, what the effect of the £1 surcharge will be on things. This is where the competition is tough. This is where everything that we can do to improve the much-needed footfall on our streets must be done, from effective marketing on board liners to providing a Rolls-Royce, fully integrated transport service, to the cleanliness of our streets, to high-quality customer care, to improving on our prices. A tall order, I know; a tall order which I think has eluded us for far too long. I say so in the least partisan of ways. As Gibraltar, we cannot afford to rest on our laurels. We have to accept the huge blow which the pandemic has brought in its wake, particularly in the tourism sector and the consequential impact on our economy.

1110 In figures – and to put this in context, the figures bear repetition – the Tourist Survey Report of 2019 clocked tourist expenditure at £308 million. That dropped to £98 million, a whopping £210 million, as a result of the pandemic. We, all of us, need to ensure that we do our bit to improve what we have to offer, and I am confident that it can be done. We, on this side of the House, are excited to offer the electorate, at the next election, our ideas in this sphere. Our view is that fundamental to that offering is that there is proper strategic thinking to be done – an opportunity which we thought the Government lost during the lockdown period, as I put to the Minister in the televised debate we had in January.

1125 We are fully conscious and aware of the amount of activity that this small area of the world has to put up with in order to provide what is, on any objective view, at least currently, a high standard of living. We have an Airport, a Port, a dockyard, a financial services industry, a vibrant construction industry etc. All of these features have an impact, for example, on how clean our streets can be kept or how pristine our buildings can be maintained, or, indeed, how busy with traffic our roads are. This is why we need to take stock, do a bit of naval gazing and honestly and truly ask ourselves what destination do we want to be. Should we be a day visitor destination, or do we want tourists to stay in our hotels? What type of hotels should we offer, if so? Once we answer fundamental questions like these, we will be able to inform the decisions that we take, in full partnership with the operators within the industry, in driving policy in this area. Our further

1140 view, in terms of basic themes which should drive policy in this area, is that there has to be much more joined-up thinking. The Tourism Department needs to talk to Culture and Sport – indeed even Education – under one umbrella and co-ordinate approaches in a formal way. Culture and 1145 Sport bring people here, and that must be harnessed as part of our tourism and visitor experience potential, and educators must be brought in to encourage people to pursue career paths in the hospitality sector.

I must say we are concerned at the answers we received when we asked detailed questions in 1145 connection with the Minister for Tourism's extensive travels. There is one currently on the Order Paper still to be addressed, in relation to his trip to Bangladesh during the same period that he could have been at the Madrid Travel Fair in FITUR, which he failed to attend. There appears to be no focused strategy, other than the clocking up of air miles and an almost obsessive desire to get a picture taken with the latest political or business celebrity in order to then publish it in the 1150 press with a standard quote saying how good and beneficial the particular trip or meeting was.
(Banging on desks) It may do wonders for his scrapbook, but what does it do for Gibraltar? He runs the risk of becoming identified as a stalker and security risk (Laughter) by the security details of famous personalities if he carries on this way. Where is the analysis as to why it is more productive to go to one event over another? What SWOT analysis is made as to what is likely to 1155 come of a trip? What business has been generated, and, indeed, is it worthwhile attending again?
Was the money, which is increasingly in short supply, well spent? We got absolutely no sense of that – with the greatest of respect to him – which, sadly, is not surprising but is, nevertheless, highly concerning. Simply to flag that, at this stage, as regards the money, the information we have now indicates that the Minister himself – i.e. excluding his delegation, only him – has cost 1160 the taxpayer, in travel alone – for him, I repeat, not his delegation – £28,527.45 in just one year.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Money well spent.

1165 Hon. D J Bossino: The appointment of the new CEO of the GTB has the potential of providing that new impetus and strategic leadership, and we wish the individual well.

Hon. Chief Minister: It's your brother!

1170 Hon. D J Bossino: As the House will know, our main quarrel with the Government was the location from which he would conduct operations. It became the subject of heated debate. They insisted it should be London on the grounds that it was our main source market – although arguably, we would say, this is Spain – whilst we said he should be here, at the destination he will be wanting to sell. In this connection, we had a rather vague smoke-and-mirrors response from the Government, which is their wont, in a recent question and answer session here. That half-1175 response spoke more to a childish avoiding of an admission that there has been, we suspect, a change of policy and thereby avoid the 'I told you so' reaction from this side than anything else.
Eventually, the truth will come out.

I fear, however, that the Minister will continue to want to feature heavily when, say, we have an inaugural cruise liner arrival with picture and plaque in tow, or showcase his last visit to some 1180 conference or other, all in a misguided attempt to improve his ratings. He has, after all, been associated more with flops and failures – Volotea, Eastern Airways, Wizz Air and, I dare say, Line Wall Road very quickly come to mind (Interjections) – but I would urge him to give the new appointee wings. I say this not because of the filial connection, as I would be urging him to do so whoever the CEO may have been, but so that the significant salary is properly put to good use.
1185 The Minister's career may not have taken off, but that does not mean that he should bring others down with him. Finally under this head, I need to highlight to the House the concerns that have been expressed in the context of the employment situation within the Gibraltar Tourist Board, with recent complaints expressed publicly about employees being transferred unwillingly or 1190 employees leaving because of the Minister's despotic manner. This is borne out by the reduction of four in the overall staff complement in this Department, from 24 last year to 20 this year.

Our housing needs continue to be an issue. The waiting list figures available online as at April still show a total of 763 waiting to be housed, with the greatest demand being placed on the 1RKB category, standing at 532. There is also a rather persistent figure of 200 applicants on the pre-list as at April 2021, which are the latest figures online despite the table having been last updated in 1195 May 2022. It is welcome to note a decrease from February to March, from 1,183 to the 763 figure that I have just mentioned from the general waiting list, i.e., excluding the pre-list. The anecdotal evidence that we receive as an Opposition, however, continues to be that housing remains a persisting social issue of concern, with many of the approaches we deal with relating to housing.

The Public Services Ombudsman in his report confirms this when he states:

Complaints against the Housing Authority continue to remain top of the list of departments attracting the highest number of complaints.

1200 I also quote my friend, the former Opposition spokesman for housing Mr Reyes, when last year, in this very debate, he said:

the reality today is that there is a need for housing and it is the most vulnerable in Gibraltar who are suffering the worst. Most of the meetings I hold with constituents are about housing matters ...

I can confirm that that is my own experience since I was given this responsibility recently. We hear of families in nine-square-meter accommodation who have been waiting to be housed for 1205 years on end, some for seven to eight years, or other cases where there is an inexplicable failure to rehouse tenants while they continue to live in squalid conditions. The physical and psychological effects that these individuals have to endure are almost too much to bear, but bear it they do with resigned patience.

The inevitable conclusion that one comes to is that the system is simply not working. The Housing Allocation Scheme is still under review and we eagerly await the soon to be published 1210 new rules. As matters stand, however, there is a need for a radical shake-up. Firstly, our policy to create separate lists to buy and rent would be expected to both reduce the list and identify who is in real need of social housing. Secondly, this policy, coupled with our further policy in government to grab the bull by the horns and introduce means testing would help us to further 1215 target those in real need. The Minister's reply on this was, in some ways, and with respect to him, underwhelming. In essence, it boiled down to a supposed administrative challenge which he claimed results in PAYE earners suffering unfairness when compared with the self-employed. Are we really not pursuing what surely we can all agree, on all sides of the House, is a fair system because something, somewhere is failing administratively?

1220 We need to move away from the concept that there is an entitlement to a fully funded, state-provided home irrespective of your wealth to a system which acknowledges that there are people who are in genuine need of social housing, with the state focusing assistance on these individuals and not others. We make absolutely no bones of our view that housing of this nature should be targeted at those individuals. Persons on low income or with specific medical or other special 1225 needs should be helped, and not others. How many of us hear stories of luxury cars leaving government estate parking lots, for example? This needs to end. There should also be much better monitoring of those who claim that they live in government rented accommodation but in fact live almost permanently in Spain. This is an abusive practice at various levels, as they hog much sought-after social housing subsidised by the taxpayer and benefit from other state-funded help 1230 in education or free parking. In respect of supported housing for the elderly, here too we need to see a fairer system in place, in which homeowners who have sacrificed life's luxuries to fund a mortgage and own their own home ... should be treated less fairly and are indeed discriminated against when compared with other individuals who may have done very well for themselves, may

1235 be in receipt of a healthy government occupational pension, lived on a government estate and therefore paid very low rent during their working life and also, to boot then been granted assisted living. This is unfair and should also be stopped. On rental arrears, the figure remains stubbornly and depressingly high, at £4,486,558.25 as at April 2022. I will not stand here and point the finger at the Government. This is a problem which I am sure is complex to resolve, but more thinking 1240 must be done to bring that figure down. Gibraltar's public purse simply cannot afford to see this type of abuse as a permanent, long-lasting, perennial feature. Something more needs to be done.

We are still waiting for progress on the new Housing Act. Here we need to see the introduction of a fairer system, where private landlords are able to make a profit on their property and thereby allow them to properly refurbish and improve the housing stock they own while at the same time prevent abusive action being meted out to tenants. The balancing act here is to prevent abuse in 1245 both directions, from tenant to landlord and from landlord to tenant. We eagerly await the arrival of the new legislation to see if that balancing act has indeed been achieved.

On affordable homes, the long-suffering applicants have experienced woeful delay in respect of, without exception, all developments, whether it is Hassan Centenary, Bob Peliza Mews or Chatham Counterguard. The current dates that we are looking at, according to the latest replies 1250 we have had from the Minister, range from July 2023 in respect of Hassan Centenary to anything around the 2024-25 mark, depending on site clearance issues in respect of the other two. All of this clearly creates financial burdens for some who are making payments towards the financing of their new flats while in some cases paying for their current accommodation. The delays are also having an effect on those young people who are having to put their lives on hold until the flats are 1255 built; all of this in the context that the originally promised completion dates were, in at least one of the cases, pre-COVID. Indeed, their press release boasted at the time – this is in 2017 – of 'hundreds of new homes as from August 2019'. When Chatham was announced in July 2019 the envisaged commencement date for construction was the last quarter of 2019, months before COVID hit us. As matters stand, not one brick has yet been laid in respect of this development and 1260 Bob Peliza Mews. Indeed, not that many bricks were laid before COVID struck, so on this occasion the pandemic cannot be reasonably used as a cause of the delay, and it will not be lost on anyone that the announcements of the construction of these estates benefitted them electorally in 2019, yet they have failed to deliver.

We need to pause and make further plans for the future. We need to ask ourselves what are 1265 our housing needs for the next five, 10 even 15 years. We now hear of cases of individuals who would have been in their late teens when the first announcements were made in September 2017, who do not now have access to affordable housing and there is no prospect whatsoever in sight of them receiving a flat any time soon. The current Eastside project only caters for 100 flats. We are staring at a missed and forgotten generation who must be catered for.

1270 It is also important to plan for the housing needs of people with disabilities. We need to ensure that there is provision of appropriate housing, including specialist and supported housing. This is crucial if we are to help them live safe and independent lives. Unsuitable or unadapted housing can have a negative impact on disabled people and their carers. It can lead to mobility problems inside and outside the home, poorer mental health and even impact on their employment 1275 prospects. Without accessible and adaptable housing, disabled people risk facing discrimination and disadvantage in this area. We need to recognise the diverse range of needs that exist.
Disabilities can include people with ambulatory difficulties, blindness, learning difficulties, even autism and mental health issues that will generate a range of housing requirements which may themselves change over time. I understand that it is an administratively difficult issue to grapple 1280 with, but to enable disabled people to live more safely and independently the Ministry for Housing needs to engage much more in ensuring that any future planning considers the variety of needs.
It makes sense from our perspective to build accessible housing from the outset rather than have to make fundamental adaptations at a later stage. Such an approach is bound to make financial savings into the future. Appropriately built flats should be included in all new developments, 1285 where possible. We hope to make future announcements as to our plans for government in this connection at the appropriate time.

On a separate note, arising from the figures, I would simply point out that the Housing Works Agency – I think this was mentioned by my friend Mr Reyes – is expected to receive £1.9 million less from the Improvement and Development Fund than the forecast outturn for 2021-22, as that 1290 is the amount by which the expenditure on works and repairs is going to suffer this coming year, and we will need to analyse that during the course of the next few months.

On planning, we see the same lack of overall strategic thinking we referred to in the context of tourism. It is acknowledged and appreciated on this side of the House that in a place so small – and I make a similar point I made earlier – over which so many demands are placed, it is very 1295 difficult to strike what are often very challenging balances. Nevertheless, more needs to be done, both strategically and innovatively, to counter the obvious failing of the current Government.

Let's take the question of addressing our housing needs. The Chief Minister has spoken of the only way being up, due to the shortage of land mass. Others from a heritage or well-being perspective would focus on the negative impact that tall buildings have not just on the aesthetics but also on the effect that the changing face of Gibraltar will have on its beauty, history and, critically, on community cohesion between the entitled and deprived. In the context of the recent application for the Caleta hotel development, we saw those tensions at play. We have, on the one 1300 hand, an entrepreneur who, let's face it, wants to invest to make a profit, and there is nothing wrong with that, but in the process we are creating an eyesore of a building which will gravely impact the Catalan Bay area, an area which is already the subject of building pressure on both its southern and northern ends. We raised the serious bulking concerns that we had at the time, but they have been ignored.

We firmly believe that development needs to be tempered by moderation and the right to build by the right design. Too often we are building nondescript monoliths that mar Gibraltar. Surely it is a sad indictment of Gibraltar's modern builds that the last major development inspired 1310 by our British colonial Mediterranean heritage – and it was done during their last period in office – is the Queensway Quay in the 1990s. Big does not need to be ugly. We are fast ending up with both.

In respect of the developments around Catalan Bay, it is worth quoting the words of one of the objectors, who described its 'excessive massing' and talked of the design being 'overall incompatible with Gibraltar's urban character, which is a key aspect of Gibraltar's tourist appeal' with the further, very valid question 'What is the point of economic development if we lose our cultural identity in doing so?' I quote him further because I think this encapsulates in a very nice 1315 way what we referred to last year during this debate:

1320 Buildings should be designed to fit in and not stand out. Our future should not be condemned to live in a cluttered smorgasbord of anonymous towers to a mere facsimile of Benidorm or Dubai, totally cultureless and devoid of charm having sacrificed any sense of its own history and cultural identity in the name of progress and profit.

A Member: Hear, hear.

Hon. D J Bossino: In the event, the project received outline planning permission, with the 1325 Ministers sitting on the DPC board predictably voting in favour. Unfortunately, in a DPC packed with civil servants it is not hard to believe that where Ministers lead others are likely to follow. Open DPC board meetings does not make them less susceptible to often-heard accusations of ministerial interference at worst and cajoling at best. The volume and massing of the Catalan Bay hotel have been accepted by DPC, the design is set to change, yet given existing evidence we are 1330 sure that the end result will still be a singular blot on the Bay's Italianate heritage, to the detriment of Gibraltar PLC. On the Eastside project, too, we see the same tension playing out in a highly significant way, where we have the pressing economic and social needs of this housing, should the development proceed, offset against the deep concerns of the Catalan Bay residents and 1335 others along this area about the wholly negative effect the marina will have on the environment there. Any destruction of the sea, beachfront and wider environment here would be an unforgiveable mistake and an enduring blight which we will be passing onto future generations.

In terms of the DPC proceedings themselves, I must say that I share the view of Eileen Gomez in the Gibraltar Chronicle, in which she states:

but as project after project receives planning approval, for many people there is an inescapable sense that their genuine concerns are not being properly heard.

1340 This is the very sense that I personally got when witnessing Mr Riddell make his submissions to the DPC in the context of the Eastside project, a veritable David against Goliath, a man against big business and entrenched power. Unfortunately, in this instance it is not looking good for David. This is why the DPC needs further reform. It is no longer fit for purpose. (Interjection) Under constant ministerial scrutiny it is in real danger of just existing to rubberstamp Government planning policy – policy which, in the case of private large developments, suspiciously smacks of 1345 intense backroom lobbying between Government and selected enterprise. It is interesting to note that the full force of DPC sanctions tends to fall on small and medium-scale developments, while larger developments face cosmetic changes but little else. We need a more robust DPC which speaks to people's concerns.

1350 And let's stop, just for once, with the immature point-scoring of how things changed with the arrival of the new dawn, as they put it, in 2011. Yes, things did change – so did we introduce changes in 1996 – but we have to move on. The building spree we have witnessed over the last 20-30 years has been phenomenal, but it needs to be tempered by issues that resonate with the people. We need to revisit planning and privacy issues, for instance, both in the new builds and in 1355 the old town. Few of us live in patios anymore, therefore it is not reasonable to expect new massing and terraces to invade neighbours' privacy or have their well-being circumscribed by blocked access to space and light. In Devil's Tower Road we are seeing how what was an industrial/commercial area has increasingly become a mixed bag of high-end, assisted housing residential area with some hospitality mixed in also with social housing, and all seemingly without any thought as to some uniformity in design or respect for the people already living there and 1360 their rights to light and space. It is all the effect of a singular lack of planning and a haphazard approach to new developments.

In the Chronicle article just referred to, a resident was quoted as saying 'developers have been allowed to go as high and close as they wish to ensure maximum profits'. A far cry from the complaints of the now governing parties when they used to highlight similar issues when they were last in opposition and we were in government. It is a case of do not as I said, but do as I now want. This is why we need a robust, comprehensive development plan. A year on and there is little sign of it, although I draw hope from the hon. Lady's comments to the Chronicle – the same article I have been quoting – even if somewhat unclear, when she talked about work 'on the review' starting in earnest. But we can safely assume that the thinking now is that this project is indeed, 1370 after all, critical given that the Minister for Financial Services, when he had responsibility for planning, would not commit in this House to any timings for completion on the basis that a decision had not been made as to whether that particular project was critical.

We think it is absolutely doable to work in partnership with business to develop a Gibraltar which preserves its unique heritage and indeed enhances its singular beauty, but it requires, once 1375 again, joined-up thinking, a new, strong development plan and a fair bit of imagination and architectural nous. This Government is, I am afraid, failing on all of these.

On heritage, there is a sense on this side of the House that it is, once again, somewhat fractured. We have the Ministry dedicated to this area, but many gold-star projects are [inaudible] retained by the Deputy Chief Minister and his office. In this regard, the Northern Defences, the 1380 Mount and the Road to the Lines project referred to yesterday come to mind. The recent announcement in respect of the beautification of Landport is a further case in point, with this particular development, if I am not mistaken, being fronted by the Minister for Tourism. This piecemeal approach is reflected in the Estimates Book, in which separate funding is allocated to what are termed ‘heritage building refurbishments’ and ‘heritage projects’, to the detriment of Ministry for Heritage projects. While in respect of this we will be seeking further particulars at Committee Stage, we do ask whether the Deputy Chief Minister and the Minister of Tourism place so little trust in the Minister for Heritage that these projects are withheld from his purview.

In terms of adding further buildings, monuments and artefacts, I must say I was sorry to see that there had been less progress than would perhaps otherwise have been expected. The lack of commitment to protect the beautiful, now former Social Security building at Governor’s Parade was also less than we would have desired. Any impact to the architecture of that building would affect not just the building itself but the entire surrounding environment, which, barring a few notable exceptions, has remained as it is for two centuries – an example, therefore, of a building which should receive full statutory protection. Given that the building belongs to the Government, I cannot see what the delay in listing is, unless the whole area has been scheduled for a new development. Who knows?

The Government’s seeming lack of imagination encompasses the restoration plans involving our extant artillery pieces throughout the Rock. Much – we would say too much – is left to voluntary work that is undertaken by the eager and enthusiastic Fortress of Gibraltar Group and the Gibraltar Heritage Trust. Thanks to them and their essentially free work, Gibraltar’s artillery is being allowed to survive and thereby pass as a fitting reminder of glories past to future generations, which is the right thing to do. We sincerely thank them for the recent works carried out on Lord Airey’s Gun Battery. But – and this is a fundamental question – where is the Government in all of this? Beyond granting permission, they are singularly absent from most of the proceedings, although they are happy to be present at any unveiling or the taking of photographs for the press. Again, we need a robust plan of heritage maintenance and restoration to bring back our guns, our walls and our bunkers. In this, the Government is conspicuous by its absence.

It was surprising to hear Mr Picardo’s remarks yesterday – I lose track of time – about the recent developments in the United States Supreme Court in relation to the position on abortion. Let us be absolutely clear, Mr Speaker: what has happened in the US is that the Supreme Court has handed down responsibility and devolved powers to the individual states in the country to legislate according to their own democratic and political wishes. It will now be for the individual states, which will have the power to legislate and determine how restrictive or permissive their abortion laws are. It does not make abortion illegal; it just gives power to take the decision back to locally accountable representatives. As one commentator recently put it:

Returning policy decisions on such a literal matter of life or death to the democratic system is something that all who cherish liberty should welcome.

Mr Picardo, we know, is a champion of the progressive cause, one that grows more dogmatic and intrusive by the day. He attends every party and wears every t-shirt of every fashionable cause in town, but neither he nor the new and increasingly belligerent new left hold the monopoly of the truth, compassion or social justice, despite the rhetoric and despite the tough talk. Yesterday he said that Gibraltar has no reverse gear on rights and progress and only move forward in one direction. He also said that any attempt to go back on abortion or any other of the progressive causes would be met with ferocious opposition. There is no need for that kind of radical language in the context of a parliamentary democracy. We all need to calm down. He has his vision and I and others will have ours. One is progressive and the other now deemed conservative, but both are equally legitimate visions of society, although in Gibraltar it seems increasingly that the former rarely recognises this in respect of the latter. In a truly liberal and democratic society you should be able to express your views whilst absolutely respecting others and not be the subject of ridicule or suffer the full force of the cancel culture.

1430 Whatever happens in the future with abortion or any other issue should be decided by the people of Gibraltar in democratic elections, and they will cast their vote in one direction or another. That is the way democracies operate: the voice of the electorate expressed here in Parliament in general elections. The street, the stage, the demonstrations, the festivals and the 1435 shouting of slogans and waving of banners on the public highway are mere accessories of the fundamental exercise of the democratic will of the people. To quote Shakespeare, which I know the Hon. the Chief Minister is very fond of: full of sound and fury, signifying nothing. There is no democratic legitimacy in ferocious opposition and noise when the people make their views known through the ballot box. That is what matters. This is far from being anti anything. This is basic 1440 democracy, where, with respect and understanding, sensible debate between people who hold opposing views can and should prevail.

In the context, particularly – and I end here, Mr Speaker – of tourism, a reference has been made to the issue of the ongoing negotiations with the EU and Spain, a hugely significant issue for our future if ever there was one. Yesterday we heard the Chief Minister state that he remained 'deeply optimistic' that a treaty is now increasingly probable. I do not think it is at all controversial 1445 to wish the Chief Minister and his Government well in its endeavours to bring this critical accord which safeguards our red lines to a successful conclusion as soon as is practically possible. The treaty, if it were to achieve a mobility agreement for fluid access through the Frontier, would be of huge importance to our quality of life and lay the basis for enhanced economic development and co-operation in the entire region. It is further hoped that businesses, investors and 1450 entrepreneurs will be able to use Gibraltar and the hinterland as a springboard for ambitious commercial initiatives, create employment and economic opportunities for all.

On 31st December 2020, Gibraltar was finally – and unfortunately, for the vast majority of us here – dragged out of the European Union kicking and screaming, following Britain's unfortunate decision to abandon the EU after the Brexit referendum in 2016, now six years ago. We were left 1455 on a cliff edge, facing the prospects of two-to-six-hour queues and the dramatic existential domino effect which could have had potentially devastating consequences for our economy, which at that stage had already been hit by the COVID pandemic. The New Year's Eve Agreement secured by the Government, despite the issues which we have identified on this side of the House, offered us a glimmer of hope that diplomacy could yet avert a worst-case scenario of Gibraltar crashing out 1460 of the EU without any mitigating measures. It is that blueprint, we are told, that forms the basis of the much-awaited EU-UK treaty on Gibraltar which holds the key to our future prosperity and continued economic success. We look forward to the publication of the full treaty text.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Adjournment

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, feeling almost as if I were getting up in the United States 1465 Senate, given the speech we have heard, I wonder whether this might be a convenient moment to adjourn to tomorrow at 4.30 in the afternoon.

Mr Speaker: I now propose a question, which is that this House do adjourn to Thursday, 30th June at 4.30 p.m.

1470 I now put the question, which is that this House do adjourn to Thursday, 30th June at 4.30 p.m.
Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Passed.

This House will now adjourn to Thursday, 30th June at 4.30 p.m.

The House adjourned at 6.54 p.m.

Appropriation Bill 2022 – Second Reading – Debate continued

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Thursday, 30th June 2022.
We continue with the Appropriation Bill.

5 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Samantha Sacramento.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, it is a privilege to once again address Parliament and it continues to be an honour to serve this community as a member of Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar, now in my 11th year. On this occasion, I set out my Budget address in my capacity as Minister with responsibility for Justice, Equality and Public Standards and Regulations.

10 Before I speak about those responsibilities, I would like to begin by making reference to the pandemic that we have just emerged from and which clearly is still not over and has even played some mischief at our Budget session and denied us from the enjoying the opportunity of listening to the Father of the House deliver his speech. I am sure we can all agree that when it comes to Sir Joe and the Budget, reading his speech is not the same as being in his presence when he delivers it. (Hon. Chief Minister and another Member: Hear, hear.) I have been in touch with him this morning and I wish my friend a very speedy recovery from COVID. (Banging on desks) This is a stark reminder that COVID is not yet over, and neither is the economic effect that COVID has had, not just on us but globally. For this reason, I just do not understand a lot of what has been said by the Members opposite so far. They speak as if without any realisation or acknowledgment of the global economic situation. Where have they been for the last two years? The bottom line is that we have to tighten our belts just a little bit, just for two years, to be able to get us out of this, but of course pensioners and those on lower wages will be insulated, as they rightly ought to be. I must congratulate the Chief Minister for being brave in what he has done in the Budget and his rationale for so doing. (A Member: Hear, hear.) Let's hope that we can transition back to normality as soon as possible.

15 20 25 30 35 Speaking about what we have had to endure from the Members opposite, I must call out something that was said by the Hon. Mr Clinton yesterday. I am sure he did not mean to mislead Parliament in what he said, but he was clearly disingenuous in the way that he presented the matter, in that he did not provide the full picture. The Hon. Mr Clinton made a big fuss about our business-class travel and this is because his last Parliament question was quite one sided and limited only to asking when we travel in business class – he never asked how many times we travel otherwise. I travel economy as much as I travel business, and we all do – the Chief Minister, the Deputy Chief Minister and the Minister for Tourism, who are the ones who travel the most, I know also travel economy – but he did not mention that part, did he? I only travel when it is absolutely necessary, as we all do. Personally, I do not like to travel. I hate packing, I hate flying, I hate airports, I get travel sick, but I do it because it is my job to do it, and we all do it because it is our duty. Only last week I was in Berlin for 48 hours and I flew Ryanair – I am not sure whether that 40 classifies even as economy. When I travelled to Iceland, I travelled economy as well. That trip was subsidised by the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association (CPA) because I was travelling in my capacity as Chair of the Commonwealth Women Parliamentarians (CWP).

While the Hon. Mr Clinton pontificates about business-class travel from his pedestal, I need to remind him that last year we both travelled to Northern Ireland for a CPA conference –
45 (Interjection by Hon. R M Clinton) Mr Speaker, it is my Budget address, perhaps the hon. Gentleman can wait for me to finish. We travelled to Northern Ireland. I travelled direct on easyJet and – get this, Mr Speaker – the hon. Gentleman travelled BA business class and not direct, so he had two flights there and two flights back. I make this point – (Interjection by Hon. R M Clinton)

50 Mr Speaker: I cannot force anybody to give way. It is in the hon. Member's – (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)
Please continue.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, what I have said in my intervention is fact, and what I 55 have said is that the hon. Member did not provide the full facts in his. I will continue, Mr Speaker. In August 2020, in the middle of the pandemic, I was appointed Minister for Health and I held this responsibility until a few months ago. It has been a very difficult, all-consuming and intense time. (Banging on desk) The job of being Minister with responsibility for Civil Contingencies and also Minister for Health meant that the work was relentless and I have been pretty much working 60 on adrenaline for two years.

When I became Minister for Health, at the outset the priority was to support an organisation that was at the coalface in the battle against COVID, particularly at ERS. Additionally, it became apparent to me that I had two major priorities as Minister for Health. The first was to make mental health a priority, not just for the GHA but for the whole of Gibraltar. Using the Public Health England Situational Analysis Report 2019 – which I immediately published when I became Minister 65 for Health – as a benchmark, I launched the five-year strategy in July 2021 with the objective of improving the mental health and well-being of the population of Gibraltar by having a comprehensive, integrated mental health system that promotes self-care and recovery and reduces stigma. The strategy was developed through a comprehensive multi-agency stakeholder, patient and public engagement process, with listening and learning being a cornerstone principle.
70 The strategy has four overarching strategic priorities aligned with the World Health Organization Global Mental Health Action Plan 2013-20. Importantly, the strategy has an inbuilt mechanism of accountability and includes timelines for the implementation of the key milestones. There were some very immediate improvements last year in the delivery of the GHA mental health services, 75 including the introduction of a mental health crisis line at the 111. I wish to thank, at this point, the members of the Statutory Boards, the Mental Health Board and the Mental Health Tribunal. An enormous amount of time is dedicated by those who sit on these, and they do so on a voluntary basis.

Immediately, also, I became acutely aware of the impact that the pandemic was having on our 80 hospital services and I feared the outcome of its aftermath. It was the invaluable help and guidance of Prof. Ian Cumming OBE – whom I had initially engaged in January 2021 to devise and lead on our COVID vaccination strategy but who became invested in assisting Gibraltar – that we worked together on what were to become landmark reforms and the Reset, Restart and Recover programme later that year. On 30th November 2021 I announced these landmark reforms with 85 the objective of improving the GHA services provided to patients and the accountability of the Authority to the Government and, therefore, the taxpayer. This represented radical reform. A seven-point plan for Reset, Restart and Recover was announced and also a reconfiguration of the GHA board to ensure its function as the key strategic oversight body for the GHA, the removal of

90 the Minister for Health as the chair of the board, a new, independent chair of the board appointed and the introduction of a new position of director general to provide overall leadership in the organisation. This restructure represented our serious and genuine desire to transform the GHA.
I could think of no one better to be the interim chair of the board at this time than Prof. Cumming and he was asked to take up this role on an interim basis. I wish him and the board all the best in ensuring that the GHA delivers for us all.

95 Mr Speaker, in my time as Minister for Health I worked with very dedicated professionals. I thank them for their guidance and support during this time. The services of three nurses in the GHA have been recognised with honours. Of these, I have worked very closely with the Head of Elderly Services, Susan Vallejo, and the Director of Nursing, Sandie Gracia, and I can certainly recognise that their honour is very well deserved. My congratulations to them. (Banging on desks)

100 Starting with my responsibility as Minister for Civil Contingencies, Mr Speaker, as you will imagine, the centre of the Government's ongoing response to the COVID-19 pandemic has been the Office of Civil Contingencies: 2021 and 2022 have continued to be largely dominated by the global pandemic as well as planning for a possible no negotiated Brexit outcome and dealing with the consequences of the ongoing war in Ukraine.

105 When our vaccines arrived at the beginning of 2021 – and we have to thank the UK government for their generous and constant supply of these – our community saw a rapid decline in positive cases, deaths and hospitalisations. The hugely successful vaccination programme executed by the GHA allowed us to start winning the battle against COVID, and as restrictions quickly started to be eased Gibraltar became the centre of attention for a post-vaccination world. As the new Director 110 of Public Health expressed her concerns over vaccine effectiveness waning, the booster programme was launched in early October with the aim of offering maximum protection to our people over the winter months. As cases in the boosted population started to improve again and hospitalisations of positive cases were kept at a steady and manageable rate, we were once again reminded about the risks from new variants of concern, but with a large uptake in boosters and 115 with a better understanding of the Omicron variant the first quarter of 2022 has allowed Gibraltar to continue with its exit strategy and easing the vast majority of restrictions. The last two years have been painfully difficult for everyone in our community but it now seems that we are well on our road to recovery, noting of course that we must continue to remain cautious and continuously monitor the situation.

120 When Russia invaded Ukraine on 24th February 2022, Gibraltarians living in Ukraine with their young families reached out to us for support. The Office of Civil Contingencies assisted with the repatriation of the family by making the necessary travel arrangements and deploying one of its officers to Poland to meet with the family, to deliver the necessary emergency passports and other travel documentation. The Office of Civil Contingencies has also co-ordinated much of the support 125 given to other Ukrainian families who fled the war-torn country to safety in Gibraltar, where they have been provided with accommodation at the Retreat Centre and co-ordinated support from the Care Agency and the Department of Education among others.

I could not have asked for a more dedicated or focused team to steer us through these extremely difficult times. My thanks to the Civil Contingencies Co-ordinator, Mr Ivor Lopez, whose 130 efforts were also recognised in his very well-deserved award, and Ernest Danino and Brian Brooks, the latter who recently, with others, also made a round trip to deliver medical supplies to Ukraine on behalf of the Red Cross – a selfless endeavour, indeed, and they should be congratulated.

On my Justice responsibilities I will commence with the Gibraltar Financial Intelligence Unit (GFIU). GFIU plays a critical role in the fight against economic crime, but it also uses financial 135 intelligence to tackle other criminal conduct. The unit has, over the last two years, made an immense contribution to ensure that Gibraltar features well in the Financial Action Task Force Post-Observation Period. In the process, it has built on the successes of 2020, driven decisively with new developments that will create innovative approaches to tackle financial crime.

140 In 2021, GFIU received almost 4,000 suspicious activity reports. This has placed a significant workload on the unit, but it has also taken advantage of its digital transformation, with better analytical software that helps strengthen its capacity by creating a modern digital ecosystem that harnesses the many pieces of information received from a wide range of sources.

145 GFIU is not just providing training locally, and this is quite a remarkable recognition of the level of work that they deliver. In 2021, GFIU was invited by the United Nations Office of Drugs and Crime to deliver training to Morocco's financial institutions, sharing Gibraltar's experience in improving engagement with the private sector to detect illicit financial activity to end human trafficking. It is also delivering training to INTERPOL's project manager, an initiative designed to enhance capacity in Latin America and the Caribbean countries to target the proceeds of smuggling persons or trafficking in human beings.

150 Another significant development has been the establishment of a public-private partnership, called the Financial Liaison and Intelligence Network. This partnership is led by GFIU and is comprised of Gibraltar's banks, the Royal Gibraltar Police, HM Customs and the Gibraltar Financial Services Commission, and is expected to greatly enhance information sharing.

155 As the lead agency for counter proliferation financing, GFIU established the Joint Co-ordinating Intelligence Group to Counter Proliferation Financing, a pioneering working group that ensures that Gibraltar mitigates the threat to global security by those intent on facilitating the illicit development of weapons of mass destruction.

160 Mr Speaker, turning now to the Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP), the last year has seen the RGP work to achieve the recommendations and areas for improvement set out in the 2020 report by HM Inspectorate of Constabularies and Fire and Rescue Services. This has meant the RGP undertaking some significant reform to achieve this. Crime recording is now more in line with the Home Office Counting Rules and the RGP has established the criteria which have been followed by UK police forces. Further to this, the code of ethics has been embedded in all operational activity, determining standards of behaviour and the principles of policing. This activity is now co-ordinated by the Ethics Champions Lead, with an Independent Committee on Ethics overseeing ethical dilemmas in the RGP. To achieve this, the RGP has also introduced policies and procedures determining standards of behaviour, mechanisms for officers and staff to report on poor behavioural standards and control measures to protect the reputation of the organisation. The entire workforce and any external partners working with the RGP will require to be vetted, as is the practice by UK police forces, and a vetting unit has been established with an emphasis on a new internal counter corruption unit.

175 The recently created Victims of Crime Support team has trained officers in line with the Victims in Criminal Proceedings Regulations. Every victim of crime is now contacted and provided with support through the entire investigation process. Combatting domestic abuse also features highly on the RGP's agenda with the creation of a domestic abuse unit implementing better protective measures for victims of crime.

The Government is, of course, committed to supporting the RGP. Last week I had the pleasure of speaking at the passing out parade for 17 new recruits. I wish them all the best in their careers in the policing family. Recruitment for a new intake of officers has already commenced.

180 Turning to the Gibraltar Courts Service, during the past year the Law Courts have continued to work extraordinarily hard to deal effectively with the current substantial workload brought about as a result of the scaling down of operations during both COVID-19 lockdown periods. The current full complement of judges, coupled with the fact that when hit with the pandemic there was no backlog at either the Magistrates' Court or the Supreme Court, allows the Law Courts to continue to be in a strong position. The Rt Hon. Sir Martin Moore-Bick retired this year, in March, as a Justice of Appeal, bringing the current number of appointed Justices down to four. In order to maintain the complement of the Court of Appeal Justices at six, it is envisaged that recruitment will proceed for two more Justices. As a result of a number of retirements and in order to maintain the complement of existing Justices of the Peace, on advice from the Judicial Service Commission it is anticipated that the recruitment process will shortly be advertised for appointment. Finally, acting on advice from the Judicial Service Commission, the Government has agreed to continue to provide funding for a fourth Judge of the Supreme Court.

195 Mr Speaker, now the Government Law Offices (GLO), the Government lawyers. Since the last Budget speech, our team of lawyers has continued to play a crucial part in delivering legal advice to the Government, shaping legislation and providing legal representation to our law enforcement agencies. On legislation, during the last year the Government Law Offices published the following legislation: 18 Government Bills, 16 Acts, 344 Legal Notices and a staggering 423 COVID 200 regulations. At this point I really would like to thank the small team who were working on the COVID regulations so intensely during the last two years, because sometimes we literally had to work day and night to get those regulations right. Related to Brexit, the GLO have continued with the publication of measures to revoke or amend retained directly applicable EU legislation under the European Union (Withdrawal) Act 2019. The following legislative projects have also come to fruition during this period, including the commencement of the Freedom of Information legislation. The Register of Property Occupation Act 2021 was also commenced and associated 205 subsidiary legislation published, and the Gibraltar Health Authority Act regulations which reconfigured the GHA board and separated the functions of the GHA and the Ministry of Health and Care. Following the recent ruling by the Court of Appeal in February of this year, the Government published the Employment (Bullying at Work) (Amendment) Bill 2022, which seeks to address the issues raised. The Government has passed the British Sign Language Act. All this 210 work has been done thanks to our lawyers at the GLO.

The law drafters are currently working on a number of other legislative projects that I have commissioned in my capacity as Minister for Justice, including in relation to a Bill to prohibit vaping for under-18-year-olds, online safety legislation, a Domestic Abuse Bill – having been previously published as a Command Paper – a project on gender neutrality in legislation and conversion 215 therapy ban. I also wish to announce that I will be commencing two important and significant reviews of existing legislation: a review of family law and a review of crimes legislation. The team at the GLO is preparing the groundwork for me so that I can formally proceed to the consultation process. I am also involved in their ongoing work regarding the extension of a number of Council of Europe and United Nations Conventions to Gibraltar. These include the United Nations 220 Conventions on corruption, disabilities, the rights of the child and the elimination of all forms of discrimination against women. I thank the team for all their hard work and advice.

Turning to my responsibilities on safeguarding, as the Minister with responsibility for children and adults safeguarding and regulation, I believe that no child or vulnerable adult should be exposed to harm or left behind. Everyone has the right to feel safe and live in peace. To do so, we 225 need to tackle the social issues that have arisen or have been exacerbated by the pandemic and lead the way for continued changes and improvements to our safeguarding systems. Effective safeguarding requires partnership, collaborating with individuals, professionals and other agencies working together to recognise the potential of preventing harm. Prevention is, therefore, the responsibility of a wide range of agencies, as well as other organisations, charities and groups.
230 It is for this reason that I have reconstituted the function of the Child Protection Committee and established a Safeguarding Adult Board and a Youth Offending Committee, the latter two being the first of their kind in Gibraltar. I must highlight that the purpose of the Child Protection Committee and the Safeguarding Adults Board is to provide a joint forum to allow for a close working relationship between the Care Agency, the RGP, the GHA, the Education Department and 235 other key organisations who share the common aim of protecting children and vulnerable adults at risk and for developing, monitoring and reviewing safeguarding policies. The chairperson of both committees is currently the Chief Executive of the Care Agency, who reports and provides advice to me on safeguarding with respect to the Child Protection Committee and the Safeguarding Adults Board, and I am very grateful for these additional responsibilities that he 240 discharges.

Social care and safeguarding services all around the world have experienced great challenges in providing optimal care and protection to the most vulnerable members of their communities during the COVID-19 pandemic. The Care Agency and all other bodies with safeguarding functions have spent the last two years dealing with the challenges of the pandemic by building innovative 245 ways to manage risk. This must continue as we move to recover from the consequences of the pandemic, especially since the full impact of COVID is not yet known. In this regard, the Youth Offending Committee has been working towards preparing recommendations which include analysis and conclusion of the main issues that have arisen through their meetings. All the services involved are united to ensure that children are supported and empowered to make the most of 250 their lives, enjoy and achieve and make a positive contribution to the community within Gibraltar, and agree that this requires all involved with the child to tailor their services to the individual child's needs. The committee has identified ways in which progress can be made to ensure a reduction in first-time offenders, a reduction in re-offending and a reduction in the use of custody, especially for first-time offending.

255 I now turn to the management of sex offenders in the community. This comes under the Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangements (MAPPA). There are currently nine trained designated risk managers (DRMs) across the different MAPPA organisations, who undergo yearly specialist training in the assessment and management of risk posed by sex offenders. From the DRMs and representatives of key partner agencies a core team has been formed and the core team received 260 further specialist skills in assessment and interventions with MAPPA cases to ensure effective risk management – a very difficult job to undertaken indeed. The Public Protection Panel comprises members from the MAPPA organisations and is responsible for the identification and implementation of risk management plans for each offender.

Turning my attention to Her Majesty's Prison Service, from a prisoner management 265 perspective 2021 saw the highest daily average of prisoners since 2015 – there were 54, a figure which was adversely affected by the influx of detainees who were unable to be deported for a period because of COVID restrictions. This impact factor is no longer the case and at present the daily average population stands at 38 for the first quarter. The Prison's facilities continue to be well used by those in custody as the year has progressed, with all of these seeing a higher 270 percentage of users. Of these, 32% of the prison population attended educational classes, up from 29%; 91% made use of the gymnasium; and 49% attended vocational classes, up from 22.4%.
Counselling is essential in providing support, and the system must maximise its efforts to pick up from the excellent work coming out of the Prison's voluntary drug testing scheme. This currently boasts participation of 67%. The programme will better place offenders on the road to 275 rehabilitation and successful reintegration into society and therefore reduce the rate of reoffending.

Mr Speaker, now turning my attention to the Probation Service, the Probation Service continues to provide services to the courts in terms of pre-sentence reports, and to the Parole Board for consideration of parole. Probation officers continue to supervise and manage those 280 offenders subject to licence conditions and community rehabilitation orders and carry out intervention plans based on the needs of the offender. One of the probation officers also forms part of the Prison Board and undertakes prison inspections. Last year, probation officers underwent training in the Freedom programme as part of the Government's Domestic Abuse Strategy and this programme is now being delivered with perpetrators of domestic abuse as part 285 of their licence conditions or community rehabilitation orders. The Probation Service continues to explore further training on domestic abuse interventions.

I turn now to the final uniformed bodies that I am responsible for, the Fire Services. Starting with the Airport Fire and Rescue Service (AFRS), they have maintained a very busy period of activity. The primary focus throughout the last year has been to consolidate practical training and essential development courses. It has also undergone external reviews to ensure that its 290 personnel, manning and resources are adequate to fulfil its operational response tasks and that these are delivered in accordance with mandated international standards. At the same time, it has reviewed all its processes and operational procedures to ensure that these remain current in the lead up to its 15-month full audit by UK Civil Aviation Authority inspectors.

295 As integral components of their ongoing competence-based training, AFRS personnel undertook a variety of training and instruction courses which are fundamental elements of their continual professional development. In addition, senior officers attended an airport fire officers' course in the UK, which was an excellent opportunity for them to work alongside senior officers from across UK airports. The AFRS is an acknowledged and well-respected organisation among UK airport fire services in different aviation fire and rescue forums, so staying in continual touch with these allows it to keep abreast of industry developments and thereby remain relevant.

Last year, the AFRS underwent an overview audit inspection and a series of task resource analysis sessions under the auspices of the Defence Fire Safety Regulator. This entailed both theoretical and practical sessions to formally confirm and document that the AFRS is meeting its mandated incident response requirements with sufficient personnel and firefighting resources. In this respect the AFRS was given a clean bill of health for its operational effectiveness.

The AFRS continues to work closely with the Gibraltar Fire and Rescue Service (GFRS), having a great professional working relationship and collaborating on training and other projects of common benefit to both. The AFRS strives for organisational and individual self-improvement, ensuring that its firefighters maintain the necessary skills and competences which are critical for mitigating risk, enabling safety and allowing them to effectively fulfil their roles. This underpins its strategic operating principles with its team always moving forward in a dynamic cycle of improvement whilst positively responding to the evolving challenges facing fire services.

From the AFRS, I now turn to the GFRS, and for them it has been a year of continued progress and adaptation to new challenges – no different than the rest of the public service and Gibraltar in general as we move out of the pandemic restrictions. With the growing number of developments, amendments to fire safety standards and innovative fire engineering solutions, the GFRS Fire Safety team is constantly challenged and does a magnificent job in the anticipation of risks, subsequently impacting their frontline operational preparedness. The GFRS continues with its primary objective, implementing and adopting measures or procedures necessary to ensure that they maintain competence and provide the best possible level of emergency response to safeguard Gibraltar and its citizens. The GFRS is also very much part, as first responder, of the Gibraltar Domestic Abuse Strategy and they, too, are receiving training.

Finally, turning to the firefighter recruitment selection process, GFRS officers have been working for months to come up with the right formula for the revised firefighter recruit selection process. This new system mirrors the selection process applied by their counterparts in the UK Fire and Rescue Service with a single standard for all applicants and was put to the test last month, leading to the appointment of their newest firefighter recruit. In efforts to adopt full transparency and equal opportunities, video footage capturing all activities is provided through the GFRS website to demonstrate the process and level of fitness required of all candidates. It goes without saying that I have been working very closely with the Chief Fire Officer, in the same way that I have been working with the Commissioner of Police, to try to increase diversity in the number of women who join the force, and the Ministry for Equality is working with both departments in this regard.

During the past two years, most of the GFRS's efforts have been focused around the pandemic and implementing rigorous measures to protect minimum levels of response if faced with virus spread within the department. These were very testing times and scary times indeed, no doubt, for staff, who went the extra mile to ensure that Gibraltar could still count on an efficient emergency response. I must thank all those in the essential services and uniformed bodies that I am responsible for, as they are the ones who run towards danger in order to keep the rest of us safe.

In the recent reshuffle I was given the additional responsibilities of public regulation, regulations generally and town planning, so I now turn my attention to my responsibilities for Town Planning and Building Control. I wish to start by reminding this House of the Government's commitment to the Development Plan. The Government recognises the importance of having an up-to-date development plan in place. This is important for a strategic approach to our development. I hope to make further announcements on this once the tender process has been completed.

350 On the day to day, the volume of applications dealt with by the Department continues at the high levels of past years, with a total of 961 applications across all application types between 1st January and 31st May 2022. Probably one of the largest and most complex applications that the Department has dealt with has been the recent application in respect of the Eastside. In 2021 the Development and Planning Commission (DPC) held a total of 11 meetings, whilst so far this 355 year there have been six meetings. Additionally, the DPC's subcommittee meets regularly to determine minor applications, which greatly helps to speed up the decision-making process for more minor applications. There were 27 meetings of the subcommittee last year and 12, so far, this year. DPC meetings have continued to be held remotely via video conferencing. The meetings have also continued to be live streamed on the Government's YouTube channel. I will ensure that 360 public access to planning applications and the decision-making process continues with the transparency that we have been enjoying over the last 10 years, and I shall strive to improve on this accessibility and transparency, if at all necessary and possible.

The Department continues with its work to develop and improve the e-planning service, which allows for easy access to application details for the public and provides a platform through which applicants can submit their applications. I am pleased to say how successful this function of e-365 government is, and almost 98% of planning and building control applications submitted in the period 1st January to 31st May were submitted via this portal. My Department is also undertaking an exercise to review the current building regulations and various building codes with a view to bringing them in line with the latest standards. Finally, we will be having a new workstream that will be a collaboration between Town Planning and Building Control and the Ministry for Equality 370 with a view to taking a more holistic view and making Gibraltar more accessible to people with disabilities.

On regulation, the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority (GRA) has, again, managed to remain fully operational during another challenging year, efficiently continuing to respond to public concerns and to enhance its awareness-raising initiatives. Testament to the GRA's ability to remain flexible 375 was its successful hosting of a virtual European case handling workshop in 2021, an annual feature in the calendar of European data protection authorities and typically an in-person event. This workshop provides a platform for international co-operation and focuses on the practical implementation of data protection on a day-to-day basis. This year has also seen the GRA win an international Global Privacy Assembly award for its awareness-raising initiatives undertaken 380 regarding its education and public awareness work. Congratulations to them, Mr Speaker.
Furthermore, the GRA continues to proactively publish guidance notes and organise data protection workshops intended to promote collaboration and debate and to provide an open forum whereby organisations can discuss data protection law and best practice – a very difficult field to navigate, no doubt.

385 Turning to the Office of Fair Trading (OFT), my predecessor in this respect spoke yesterday about the work of the OFT. I thank my good friend Minister Daryanani for his dynamic work and progress in this respect. I know that it was his intention to drive further progress and build on the work that we had already done. In addition to the Department's responsibilities that he outlined,
I will mention the OFT's anti-money laundering and counter-terrorism financing regulatory role 390 for the real estate agent and high value goods sectors as this continues to mature with the implementation of new procedures and ongoing supervisory programmes. The team is currently conducting a round of on-site visits to businesses in these sectors on a risk-based approach. Of the 13 visits carried out since November 2021, the OFT has issued five fines to local business. In this past year, the team has also carried out significant outreach to these sectors to support 395 businesses to achieve compliance. This has included hosting virtual training opportunities with the assistance of the Gibraltar Financial Intelligence Unit.

I can confirm that the Government continues to work with the OFT on the Fair Trading Bill with the aim of producing a more appropriate and mature framework within which the OFT can operate, again building on the work that was previously done. This Bill will make the establishment 400 of new businesses easier and quicker by simplifying the business licensing process. This will, therefore, drastically improve further the manner in which the OFT can provide its services to the public. At the same time, the new Bill will protect consumers in Gibraltar and allow the OFT to set trading standards. Having recently taken on this role, I am already working on this aspect. Given that this is a such a big and important piece of work, consultation is key and I am committed to 405 continue to engage with the Gibraltar Federation of Small Businesses and the Chamber of Commerce to ensure that we will support the business community in Gibraltar in the same way as my friend Minister Daryanani did.

Finally on regulation, there are two major innovations in the pipeline. The first, of course, as we heard from the Chief Minister, is the introduction of the Anti-Corruption Authority. I have given 410 this work priority as soon as the COVID pressures have permitted. There is a draft Bill in final form and it is going through the final stages of internal approval. It is my hope to be able to publish it as soon as possible in the coming weeks.

A very interesting new piece of work that I have now embarked upon is the regulation of quality of care. I have already met with the Chair of the Medical Registration Board and the Chair of the 415 Nurses and Midwives Registration Board to consult on their views on the most appropriate way forward. The new structure will also make provision, importantly, for quality of care inspections of providers. I am very excited about this innovative piece of work and I shall make more detailed announcements after the summer.

And now, finally, Mr Speaker, turning to my portfolio as Minister for Equality. During this 420 administration's three terms of office it has been my privilege to have held various portfolios. Of all of those portfolios, the Equality portfolio has been the one that I have held from the very first day. It was a great honour to be chosen as Gibraltar's first Minister for Equality in 2011 and it is a responsibility that I have always been, and continue to be, very proud of. As Minister for Equality, I lead the Ministry for Equality, a Department which our administration has created and which is 425 dedicated to upholding equality principles and eliminating all forms of discrimination. While it is a sad reflection that equality matters were given little, if any, political or parliamentary consideration until 2011, I have to say that it has been incredibly rewarding to have been at the helm of a Department which has been innovative in its philosophy, vision, policies and, of course, most importantly, legislation.

On LGBTQ+, as the month of June draws to an end today, this being Pride month I think it fitting 430 to begin with LGBTQ+ rights, no less because in the 11 years since the inception of the Department of Equality we have made such huge strides to ensure that gay rights are properly protected by legislation and that through our awareness campaigns and community engagement these are understood and embraced. The development of LGBTQ+ rights since we have been in office has 435 been nothing short of remarkable and I feel that this was symbolised most recently with the very successful Pride celebration event last Saturday. Although this was not the first Pride celebration in Gibraltar – and, incidentally, I also attended the one that was organised in 2014 and that one was also successful for its time – this year's was different as it reflected that we have progressed even further in the eight years since the first one. I must congratulate the LGBTQ+ committee, 440 which organised this year's event so marvellously. Looking back now it is hard to believe that the first time the word 'gay' was mentioned in Parliament was in my very first Budget speech in 2012 and that the first time, regrettably, (Interjection) that gay rights were first properly achieved in this Parliament was in 2014.

The Civil Partnership Bill, which was the first Bill I ever moved in this Parliament, was a 445 landmark piece of legislation. For the first time in Gibraltar's history this Bill enabled the formal recognition of relationships between couples of the same sex. Two years later, in 2016, I brought the Civil Marriage (Amendment) Act to this House to allow for the civil marriage of gay couples as well. Further to this, we have legislated to outlaw homophobic hate crime and hate speech, and such crimes are now, thanks to us, aggravated offences. In July 2015, and in recognition of our 450 transgender community, we made provision to extend protection from discrimination for individuals who have undergone gender reassignment. The passing of all this legislation has marked a hugely significant change in values and demonstrated our commitment to equal rights for all members of our community, regardless of their sexual orientation or gender reassignment.

455 Legislation is hugely important in ensuring that everyone can enjoy the same rights, but legislation alone cannot immediately bring about cultural change. What we do is sometimes controversial. For example, last year we installed stencils to some traffic lights to depict LGBTQ+ images. It was a real conversation starter and I am glad that it gave people the opportunity to discuss and see why such visual representation is important to them. I am glad that it provided a platform for discussion and debate, and for this reason, whereas the traffic lights were initially 460 intended to only be installed for the month of Pride, the whole Cabinet agreed that they should be kept indefinitely. It really does make me smile every time I cross the pelican crossing here at Line Wall, and especially this week when I have been coming to Parliament and I see the traffic lights. I have also heard many tourists comment very favourably when they see our traffic lights. Again, another small, but important step that I am glad we took. This is why we continue to raise awareness of LGBTQ+ matters, and for this reason we are committed to listening to the voices and concerns of the LGBTQ+ community. This was our motivation for launching Gibraltar's first LGBTQ+ survey to coincide with Pride month last year. Hearing directly from stakeholders is essential in progressive democracies and I am happy to report that there was an enthusiastic 465 response to the survey, which was open for a period of three months. A total of 196 responses were collected and the information collated will allow my team to glean insights into the experiences of members of the community locally and act on them accordingly. The survey findings in full, plus a report prepared by the Ministry for Equality on its findings will be published as soon as it is finalised. These valuable insights will enable us to ensure that any remaining barriers experienced by members of the LGBTQ+ community are swiftly eradicated.

475 While we have ensured that legislation protects members of the LGBTQ+ community we will continue to mark Pride month because there is no place in Gibraltar for homophobia, biphobia or transphobia. (A Member: Hear, hear.) We mark Pride now in a very visual way, as awareness is key. We do this by flying the rainbow flag in prominent places throughout Gibraltar, by illuminating the Moorish Castle in rainbow colours, with the installation of the traffic lights and in 480 supporting the Pride parade. We organise this visual representation to send a strong message to anyone who needs to hear it: how incredibly supportive this Government is and that we do not shy away from being so. We will continue to mark Pride month because there is no place in Gibraltar for hate. We will continue to mark Pride month because it is fair and just. In Gibraltar we are all of equal value and we all deserve and are entitled to full respect at all times. We will 485 continue to mark Pride month because it is not right that some people, especially young adults, cannot live true and authentic lives out of fear of rejection by those around them. (Banging on desks)

On gender equality, this Government's commitment to equality is truly embedded in everything we do. Gender equality is, of course, another important strand of my equality portfolio 490 and I believe that gender equality is a necessary component of a modern and progressive society and is a vital factor in our pursuit of social justice. A key strand of the Gender Equality Strategy is the economic empowerment of women. Inevitably, the last two years have regrettably had an impact on a lot of the projected initiatives for gender equality, but needless to say we are working extremely hard to catch up. Nevertheless, I am happy to report that one of the key initiatives of 495 the Gender Equality Strategy, the Women's Mentorship Programme, has been able to continue in recent months. We recently completed the third cycle of this programme, and once again the feedback from participants, both mentors and mentees alike, was extremely positive. I am very proud of the Women's Mentorship Programme because its aims are hugely ambitious. In the first instance, the programme helps women to develop personal and professional skills, and in the mid 500 to long term the programme aims to address the underrepresentation of women in positions of leadership and management. We now know that a more gender-balanced workforce is better not only for organisations and businesses, as proven by numerous studies and research, but for national economies too. Therefore, ensuring that we maximise the skills and talents of both men and women in equal measure is a goal that we can all support and that we can all benefit from.

505 The third cycle of the Women’s Mentorship Programme came to a close in March and there was a very positive uptake of the programme. There were 57 participants in the third cycle, bringing the total number of participants, so far, to 175. This means that since the inception of the Women’s Mentorship Programme, 89 mentees have been able to access support and advice from 510 established professionals. In case anyone is wondering why the numbers do not add up, this is because some people are repeat mentors. We are very fortunate that some people have been with us through every single cycle and I would like to express my gratitude to them. Because this is such an invaluable opportunity for women, I am delighted to announce that the next cycle of the Women’s Mentorship Programme will commence in September. I will make a more detailed announcement on this next week and I would urge and encourage anyone interested in 515 participating in the Women’s Mentorship Programme, either as a mentor or mentee, to contact the Ministry for Equality to register for the next cycle.

Finally on gender equality, Mr Speaker, as you know, I was elected Chair of the Commonwealth Women Parliamentarians Steering Committee of the British Islands and Mediterranean Region.
This also gave me a seat on the steering committee of the wider International CWP Committee.
520 Of course, as everything happens at once, I was elected as chair in March 2020, just when the pandemic was starting, so in addition to everything I was doing at the time I had to deliver on this, too. Had I known what was going to happen when I stood for election, maybe I would have considered it before then, but anyway, everything happened and everything was done and everything went well. My tenure came to an end in March this year when we met at CPA in the 525 Isle of Man. One of the objectives of this committee is to encourage more women in Parliament.
Another is to support women parliamentarians in discharging their role. I am the only woman in Government and I am one of only two women in this Parliament. This ratio is not good because it means that the gender balance of this Chamber does not reflect the gender diversity in our community, and it should, so I have the pleasure to announce that later this year I will be hosting 530 the Regional Conference of the Commonwealth Women Parliamentarians of the British Islands and Mediterranean Region, in Gibraltar. One of my motivations for hosting this conference here is that I can arrange for outreach with other colleague Commonwealth women parliamentarians from our region to promote discussion of political life locally and that hopefully this will be one of the tools that we use to encourage more women to stand for election at the next opportunity. I 535 hosted a CWP conference here in 2015 and it went extremely well and is still referred to by those who attended. I also hosted the conference last year, albeit virtually. This next conference will be the first in-person conference for a number of years and everyone is looking forward to it.

Mr Speaker, regrettably, this week I am the only woman here. The hon. Lady opposite is unable to be with us because of the sad passing of her mother, Lady Hassan. Understandably, the hon.
540 Lady is going through a difficult time and feels that she cannot be here. I was very saddened yesterday to learn of some online abuse that she received because of this. We are servants of the people and we are in the public eye, but that should not make us fair game for personal insults and abuse – and we get them all too often. We are also human and we cannot be strong all the time. I am sure that the hon. Lady would have wanted to have been here if she could, but 545 regrettably, and for a very sad reason, she feels that she cannot. I ask that people respect this (Banging on desks) and allow the hon. Lady to grieve the passing of her mother. My condolences to the hon. Lady and her family once again.

Generally on equality, diversity and inclusion, since we have slowly emerged from lockdown the Ministry for Equality has been able to resume its ongoing training and awareness programmes, 550 and equality continues to be embedded in the awareness that we do. We facilitated bespoke training at the University of Gibraltar for the current PGCE and nursing cohorts. We are also working with the RGP to provide unconscious bias training to officers and staff. In recent years the RGP has taken significant strides in its equality, diversity and inclusion journey as an organisation with the formation of an LGBTQ+ forum, a Muslim officers’ forum and the Women in Policing

555 Network. This training on unconscious bias will be a vital opportunity to further embed equality, diversity and inclusion principles at an individual and strategic level.

Another key point to address is domestic abuse, and that is one of the things that is at the forefront of my equality agenda. Eradicating domestic abuse is a top priority for us and so much work has been done. As Minister for Justice and as Minister for Equality, I am only too aware that 560 effecting legislative changes which will strengthen responses from key agencies is crucial in addressing domestic abuse. For this reason, I published a Command Paper for a Bill specifically dedicated to offences relating to domestic abuse. This landmark, standalone and consolidated piece of legislation seeks to enshrine in law the protection of victims of domestic abuse. However, since that was published, further representations have been received on the Command Paper.
565 Changes that have been suggested are significant and they are being made to the draft to ensure that the concerns raised have been dealt with. The Bill will be redrafted and finalised and we will ensure that coercive and controlling behaviour is criminalised, and introduce domestic abuse protection notices and orders. These notices and orders will afford the courts and the RGP new tools with which to address and target domestic abuse, as they prohibit abuse and may prohibit 570 contact or stop the perpetrator going within a certain distance of a victim's home. This will send a very powerful message to the perpetrators and the wider community that this Government is committed to eliminating this very serious social issue, and I hope that within the next months, and certainly before the end of the year, all the legislative requirements that need to be in place are in place. We will, of course, deliver training and support those with training because this is a 575 key strategic priority. We have already, in 2020, offered training to all officers of the RGP – 250 of them – and this was commissioned from a specialist charity called Saving Lives. In addition to this, the Ministry for Equality commissioned very successful training on the Freedom programme, which is a therapeutic intervention for victims and perpetrators of domestic abuse, as well as their children. It is a very successful strategy, I am told.

580 Turning to disability, this brings me to speak about another landmark equality achievement in the progress that we have made. In my last Budget speech I mentioned how COVID had put a stop to a lot of our plans. This year has seen a resurgence in our efforts to make sure that we are back on track. Basically, we have to do double the work in half the time, but we are committed to doing so.

585 Setting our work in context, it was after much preparation in 2017 that we passed the Disability Act, the fundamental purpose of which is, of course, to promote and protect and ensure the full and equal enjoyment of fundamental rights and freedoms of people with disabilities. Even the Chamber of Commerce at the time described it as one of the most significant pieces of legislation that our Government had introduced. Of course, this progress had been previously overlooked by 590 those opposite, who, although now attempting to rewrite history in this respect, in reality did little to nothing in the furtherance of the rights of people with disabilities. The passing of that legislation was always intended to be the first step to Gibraltar requesting that the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities be extended to Gibraltar. Quite unlike the transposition of an EU Directive – in the good old days but no longer – having Conventions extended to us is 595 something that we do via the United Kingdom and it can be a long and complicated process with various stages and audits along the way. But as you heard the Chief Minister say on Tuesday, this process has already begun. I have already met with the Government's legal team and their work has started. They will be working closely with my team at the Ministry for Equality to progress it. They all received the memo from me that this must be a priority and I want this to be progressed 600 as quickly as possible. In order to be able to progress on the extension of the Convention, we need to step up the standard once again. A tremendous amount of work is required on this journey, but what matters is that the work has already commenced and my Equality and Justice teams will be working together to deliver.

605 Returning to the Disability Act, when it was passed in 2017 there were two sections that were not in force. These are the sections that require that all buildings be made accessible. Immediately after the passing of the Act we passed the Part R Building Regulations. This means that, since then, all new builds or modifications are required to meet the accessible standards. Sections 13 and 14, however, relate to existing buildings and these provisions were paused in order for those responsible for buildings to have sufficient time to prepare and phase it in. We did this in full 610 consultation and agreement with the Disability Society at the time. It was for this reason that in 2019 the Chief Minister announced tax relief for businesses that adapted and made modifications to their existing premises – regrettably, another initiative that became a victim of COVID and slowed down the progress that we wished to make, and as such inevitably delayed the coming into force of these sections. For this reason the Chief Minister announced that he would once 615 again make this tax relief possible and available for a further two years. I can announce that it is our intention to trigger those provisions after the end of that period and bring them into force – indeed, bring them into force in the lifetime of this Parliament. Therefore, the Ministry for Equality will shortly be launching an information campaign on what these obligations will entail and will offer guidance in their usual helpful way. We will also offer training so that everyone is aware of their responsibilities and what is expected of them as best practice, as we want to support 620 everyone in getting it right.

Of course, the work on the Convention also goes hand in hand with the Government’s Disability Strategy, and this essentially provides our roadmap for the journey. The Ministry for Equality is responsible for the strategy and its delivery and spearheads it and has been doing so for the past 625 10 years. All the improvements that we have seen throughout our term in office are due to this. But we are stepping this up, too, and I would like to publish a multi-agency national strategy, very much like the Gibraltar National Mental Health Strategy that I commissioned last year, and I would like for this to be published by the end of this year. That means that there will be a lot of strategic activity in this regard in the coming months and there will, of course, be stakeholder consultation.

I have already also commissioned refresher training on the Disability Act for the public sector, as there will have been changes at senior management level since the last one. This will be rolled out in September and will be a reminder to all Departments of their responsibilities for having disability policies to promote inclusion and comply with their obligations under the Act. The 630 Ministry for Equality will assist in revising their policies, if necessary. As this work will be undertaken by my team, there will be consistency of standard across the board. There will also be other training programmes offered and these will be sector focused so that we can properly target for maximum effectiveness.

One of the important strands of our Government’s Disability Strategy and the first thing the Ministry for Equality did when the restraints of COVID were lifted was to restart the disability customer care training on language and etiquette that we had halted a year or so earlier. This 640 training now forms part of the Government’s Human Resources Department training prospectus. To date, 270 public servants have received this training. The next session, in July, will see another class and this figure will go up even more. Further efforts have been made to ensure that this training is available to other sectors as well, including the private sector. The Department of 645 Equality is currently liaising with the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority and the Care Agency to make arrangements to facilitate training for them as well.

Interaction between the general public, representative bodies and Government bodies is another important strand of our Disability Strategy. As with training and awareness, this is a strand that needs to be nurtured and developed continuously if we are to develop the services Gibraltar 650 deserves. I am happy to say that this is something the Ministry for Equality does very well, and this can be shown by the work they have done this last year. The Ministry for Equality was there to advise on the introduction of a WhatsApp service available to people with hearing difficulties who needed to contact the GHA’s 111 service for either the COVID helpline or the Mental Health Crisis Pathway. Also in conjunction with the GHA and Public Health, the Ministry for Equality joined 655 the Gibraltar Hearing Issues and Tinnitus Association (GHITA) in the campaign on hearing loss prevention during Deaf Awareness Week. The Government has also seen the implementation, this year, of sign video services, originally introduced in the GHA in 2014 and now available across most, if not all, public departments. This now makes British Sign Language interpretation available

660 instantly to any Department or agency that may need this service in order to communicate with members of the public. And while we are on the subject, let us not forget that this House has recently passed the British Sign Language Act, recognising British Sign Language as a language in Gibraltar.

665 The Ministry for Equality has, for years, been in close contact with the Ministry of Environment and the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority (GSLA) in their development of accessible services at our beaches and pools. This year is no different. You will, no doubt, be aware, Mr Speaker, that when Government inherited the Europa pool complex the facilities were not ideally suited for people with disabilities. There have been numerous improvements and we made an announcement in this respect recently, and I would like to thank both the GSLA and the Ministry for Environment for their dedication and awareness this past year and in previous years. I think I 670 can confidently say that Gibraltar probably has some of the most accessible beaches in Europe, (A Member: Hear, hear.) and while, of course, I am not going to pretend our services are perfect, the Ministry for Equality and other Government Departments that allow for improvement of the services every year will continue to work together in furtherance of the Government's Disability Strategy. I am sure that if improvements are required going forward, they will be identified and 675 provided for.

The Ministry for Equality is the central co-ordinating Government Department on disability and is very much involved in an advisory role with numerous committees like the Joint Strategic Needs Assessment Panel mainly led by the Department of Education and the Traffic Commission, and is also a consultee to Town Planning and Building Control on new applications. It is right for this to 680 be the case.

On another note, I am really excited about our partnership with Special Olympics. One of our joint initiatives is the Special Olympics Healthy Athletes Programme and this Government hopes to emulate this in Gibraltar. This House may remember a meeting that was held last March between the Government – including the Chief Minister – Special Olympics Gibraltar and Mr David 685 Envangelista, the President and Managing Director of Special Olympics Europe Eurasia and Senior Adviser for International Development at Special Olympics. The Healthy Athletes Programme is a programme developed by Special Olympics – who are very much the specialists in the field of learning disabilities – and designed to facilitate various health check-ups for athletes with learning disabilities and, importantly, provide the necessary training to the medical practitioners who see 690 them. This programme is already used extensively around the world by Special Olympics at both national and world games and has proved incredibly successful in highlighting health issues that athletes may have. Anecdotally, because of the issues that people with learning disabilities may have, and their limitations on communication, this can have an impact on their health, and the screening programme is obviously a preventative measure and has proved to be very effective.
695 Whereas this programme was originally aimed at athletes attending the games, the desire of Special Olympics globally is for this initiative to be used in communities and across the board for anyone who may need it. This is why, having only just returned from Berlin for this purpose, to learn about this programme, I cannot wait to put it into action.

At this juncture I would really love to recognise and thank Mrs Annie Risso MBE for her sterling 700 and selfless work on the progress of Special Olympics in Gibraltar. Her dedication to Special Olympics athletes and the movement is incredible, and every time I travel with her she is so established in the world of Special Olympics that everybody knows who Annie is. She truly needs to be recognised for the progress she has made in this regard. (Banging on desks) Thanks to her for opening the doors for us to access this programme and the training thereupon. It will have a 705 very positive effect on us locally and this will form part of the health equality strand of the Government's Disability Strategy.

Finally, Mr Speaker, earlier I spoke about our LGBTQ+ survey, consulting with stakeholders and the results and report I am about to publish, but this is not the only survey that has been undertaken by the Ministry for Equality. You may remember that a disability survey was also 710 launched in October 2021 and it ran until 31st January this year. This information has been collated and a report is currently being compiled for me by the Ministry for Equality, and this will also be published once complete. I am sure that its contents will make for interesting reading and will be of exceptional value to our Government's Disability Strategy.

715 I have to really commend the small but extremely effective and efficient team at the Ministry for Equality. They really are committed, full of ideas and wanting to make progress at every single opportunity, and I thank them for all the work that they do. In wrapping up, I would like to thank absolutely everyone I have worked with during this year who has supported and advised me, in particular those who work closely with me in my office – Craig, Leyton, Nyreen and Ian – and, of course, Mr Speaker, you and your staff in Parliament for supporting us, too. And it goes without 720 saying my ministerial colleagues – we work very closely together as Government Ministers, we are always there to support each other and we can count on each other's support in Government for a long time to come.

Thank you, Mr Speaker, for your indulgence. (Banging on desks)

Procedural – Mr Speaker's previous ruling on Points of Order

725 Mr Speaker: I need to just refer back to an issue which arose early on, when the Hon. Roy Clinton wished to correct something which had been said by the Hon. Minister. He asked for the Hon. Minister to give way and I said that I could not force the Hon. Minister to give way.

I have had a look at a ruling which I made last year in relation to the raising of Points of Order, where I said, referring to the Speaker of the House of Commons:

The Speaker of the House of Commons allows the use of Points of Order to effect factual correction of a Member's statement.

I said this will be permitted in this House.

730 The Hon. Roy Clinton did not rise to make a Point of Order, so that did not kick in, but I am advising everyone here, all Members of the House, that this is open to them.

I have since spoken to the Hon. Roy Clinton and he mentioned that it was a matter that had been spoken of by the Hon. Minister which he wanted to correct. The event has now passed and therefore I cannot allow the Hon. Roy Clinton to make a Point of Order, but I wanted to remind 735 everybody that the Rules are there to be used sensibly and correctly.

740 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker – if I may – thank you very much, I think it is very useful to be reminded of that. Can I also remind hon. Members – and you will know this as much as I, and other Members who have been around as long as I have – that in this debate, the Budget debate, the normal course of business has been that we do not seek that Members give way because every Member, traditionally, speaks and therefore every Member has the opportunity to put their points and Members of the team, also Members of the Opposition team, will have an ability to speak. In fact, we will be hearing from the hon. the sweeper of the Opposition later on, who will be allegedly sweeping up for all other Members, and I will be replying for the 745 Government, of course, and so where we have taken issue with many of the things, where we feel exactly the same way as Mr Clinton may have felt, we will be dealing with those points in the course of my reply. But thank you, Mr Speaker, I think that is a very helpful indication from you.

750 Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, just on that point, I agree with the Hon. the Chief Minister that that certainly has been the practice, but I heard Mr Speaker's ruling and I thought Mr Speaker was raising a quite different issue, which is that there might arise, during the course of the debate, something which has been asserted as a matter of fact which a Member, across the floor, might want to correct on a Point of Order, and that opportunity arises as Mr Speaker has said, and I think it is quite a different issue to what the Chief Minister has been saying.

755

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I agree as much as I disagree with the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, because in this debate we might all see facts in a different way and if we start to assert that facts are what we are presenting during the course of a Point of Order – which are not actually facts but they are subjective views about facts, not objective positions where would could not have an argument even if we tried – then the debate is not going to progress in the way that the traditional Budget debate has progressed. I agree as much as I disagree with the Leader of the Opposition and I am sure that we will both agree that you will know how to balance, in your discretion, how to deal with those points even in the course of this debate.

760

Hon. K Azopardi: Mr Speaker, a final word, because I do not think the Chief Minister has the right of reply in particular, but can I just say I agree with that, of course, but what arose – and without getting into it – is whether something happened or did not happen, and that objectively can be justified one way or the other. I would have thought there was a significant difference.

765

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, with respect to the hon. Gentleman, whether something happened or did not happen is a matter of fact. Whether it can be justified in a particular way or another is not a matter of fact, it is a matter of opinion, and therefore it is very clear that the facts asserted by the hon. Lady are the facts, full stop. That there are other surrounding facts and circumstances, that there might be opinions as to how things arose or did not arise – well, all of those things, Mr Speaker, are not facts, and your ruling – I do not recall the exact wording to repeat it, but I recall the use of the word ‘fact’ in it – I think is what will be, no doubt, the determining factor for you.

770

Mr Speaker: When a Member rises to make a point of order it has to be a serious point backed up by facts. That is the important thing.

780

Hon. R M Clinton: Absolutely.

Mr Speaker: Thank you.

Appropriation Bill 2022 –
Second Reading –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Elliott Phillips.

Hon. E J Phillips: ... [Inaudible] and not burdening the public purse with those tickets. I think that corrects the record insofar as the suggestion. I am sure the hon. Lady was not trying to mislead the House in relation to that point, but that corrects the factual basis for the purchase and our contribution to those tickets.

790

Mr Speaker, this is my seventh Budget and sixth contribution to the debate on the Appropriation Bill. Before I get to the substance of my address, I echo the thanks expressed by Members of this House in relation to your team here in Parliament for the work they do all year round to support Members – (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) Mr Speaker, of course the hon. Gentleman, the Chief Minister, wishes to interrupt me daily, on every single subject. We will let him have his reply eventually, but what I would say is we thank you all for the support that you have offered Members of this House irrespective of the side they sit on.

Our civil servants in this place go about their daily obligations without fear or favour and they are a credit to the service. In my interactions with your staff, Mr Speaker, their response time has always been excellent and I appreciate their guidance. The parliamentary team is placed in a difficult spot, not because of the job but because of the way in which the Government conducts itself in managing the parliamentary diary with very little notice to you or your staff, not to mention the elected Members on this side of this House. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) Whilst it is appreciated that urgent and emergency-type Government business may – rarely – upset things, the Government must make sure that the House works for all Members of Parliament, so that you can provide, and we can provide, a better service to the public. I have not been shy in saying this in this House and I have not been shy in saying that this House does not work as it should and is in desperate need of reform.

This should be a place for informed debate, collaboration for the good of the community, scrutiny and holding the Government to account. The quality of the answers we have received in this House for many years now from the hon. Gentlemen and Lady across the floor of the House has little regard for accuracy and leads me to the conclusion that this House is an opportunity for the Chief Minister and the Government that he leads to grandstand on every single possible occasion to diminish and suppress the role of the Opposition. We will not be diminished, suppressed or silenced. (A Member: Hear, hear.) We will continue to robustly oppose the Government so that the alternative can be put before the House and ultimately before the people at the next General Election.

Yesterday, the Deputy Chief Minister spoke about planned physical changes to improve the functionality and accessibility of this House, and they are welcome, but the elephant in the Chamber is not so much the physical changes but a deeper introspection as to how we improve the quality of the work that we do in this Chamber. People hold this institution in high regard but there are some fundamental issues which must be tackled so that the quality of our democracy can be enhanced. I am personally disappointed that the Parliamentary Reform Select Committee has not met, despite it being established many years ago.

The last two years have been difficult and challenging years for our community. We have had continued uncertainty as to our place in the world post Brexit, and whilst its negotiators endlessly pick through the detail of the deal it is important to understand that continued uncertainty is causing serious anxiety within our community about our future and our relationship with the European Union – and, indeed, others. Coupled with the pandemic, we have all had it tough. Our citizens have had their liberties restricted and 104 of our men and women have lost their lives to COVID, whilst many thousands of people have had their physical and mental health impacted from being locked down. Our people needed and continue to need our support during this period. We, as a community, did what we did to protect our GHA and the lives of many more that arguably would have been lost if we did nothing. Our thoughts and prayers are with those who have lost loved ones, those who are afflicted with long COVID and our healthcare warriors who continue to attempt to manage a virus that will no doubt live with us long into the future. At this point, I wish the Hon. the Father of the House, Sir Joe Bossano, a speedy recovery.

We should also spare a thought for the many people in our community who have struggled to access basic appointments, treatments and operations during this time and what many within and outside the GHA are describing as a healthcare service on its knees. If COVID has taught us anything it is that life changes at the blink of eye and, whilst we must be thankful for what we have, we must at all costs protect those who need our support the most. We may not be the largest or most powerful country in the world but we have each other, and whilst this Chamber is a place for heated debate and vocal argument, it has shown that when the chips are down we are able to unite and defend our way of life, be that a challenge to our status, our economy or our health security.

What the last two years has also done is expose our vulnerability and our weaknesses. The last two years have shone a floodlight on areas which are creaking under the pressure of expectation and need. One such area is the crisis in healthcare which my colleagues and I have been talking 850 about for some time. As Shadow Minister for Health, I have observed that health security, public health and our GHA have been put under the spotlight in two ways: first, in how the GHA came together to respond to the COVID emergency; and second, how it has been able to emerge from the pandemic in the Reset, Restart and Recover strategy deployed by the Government.

855 Governments across the world are learning important lessons from COVID. They are learning from the data collected that the state of people's health has a direct correlation as to how they respond to a health crisis and there is much we can do to improve the health of the nation from improving our collective approach to our own health and well-being.

860 The only way, in my view, in getting down the collective weight of our community is by increasing our activity levels, putting healthy eating at the forefront with exercise. This is the only way we can bring down the cost of healthcare and the burden that poor choices can have on the public purse in the long term. The world is moving towards a better understanding of the importance of public health and we need to listen to the experts in this area. I do not believe we do enough in our community to explain the impact that poor dietary choices or a lack of physical activity have on the ability of the GHA to deliver care to the population. Minister Balban's contribution yesterday touched upon improving the nation's health by improving walking and cycling infrastructure. I share his passion, but he appears a lone voice on those benches in relation to their commitment to a green and child-friendly city.

870 As the Minister for Civil Contingencies said in her contribution moments ago, it is clear to all that COVID is here to stay. We must learn to live with the risks associated with COVID and ensure that our community is provided with a Health Service that is fit for purpose, that our healthcare professionals are not demoralised and our people have confidence in the leadership at the GHA and that confidence translates into a decent Health Service being provided to our community.

875 Mr Speaker, as I said, I am responsible for the Health, Transport and Environment – amongst others – portfolios. The one portfolio that has eclipsed all others in respect of public complaint and engagement is Health and it is one that will dominate my address to the House in this Budget, alongside Transport and the Environment.

880 In order to understand the draft Estimates it is important to reflect on the 30th November 2021 statement by the now former Health Minister. That statement was supposed to revolutionise healthcare in Gibraltar. Well before the 30th November 2021 statement, the Opposition regularly raised serious concerns about the Government's inability to provide leadership over our Health Service and the provision of a fully functional Health Service to service users and patients. We have long raised many concerns about the operation and effectiveness of the GHA on a range of disciplines, and whilst COVID has had an impact, matters have, of course, become more acute during the GSLP Liberal administration of this service.

885 The present Minister for Health yesterday talked about the world being upside down, but it is easy to blame COVID for the problems in the GHA. As I have been at pains to say, COVID has served to highlight where we are going wrong and the systemic problems that have plagued the GHA for years. It is easy to blame everything on COVID, but the truth is that we know, the healthcare professionals know, the public know, the unions know and the Minister, from his contribution yesterday, knows that the GHA is broken and it has been caused by a decade-long mismanagement of priorities and the wider economy. The moment they publicly acknowledge it, the sooner we can get on and move forward. It is clear from the outpouring of criticism from the public that things must change quickly within the GHA.

895 We, too, have been vocal in our complaints about the Health Service: the lack of dental care for our children, the collapsed PCC appointments system, the telephone line, the face-to-face appointments, cancelled operations, the lack of financial control in relation to procurement, clinical governance, shocking preventable harm and death raised by the former Head of Clinical Governance, the lack of a chief executive and chief financial officer to lead the GHA, the removal of the micro-manager Minister from St Bernard's as a signal that things needed to change, and the tsunami of poor morale within the service leading to industrial strife. We were critical of the former Minister's supervision of the GHA, and under the Chief Minister's watch our Health Service has spiralled downwards, from internal crisis to internal crisis, with no end in sight.

Never in our history has our Health Service been in such a state of disarray as under the GSLP Liberal Alliance administration of healthcare in Gibraltar. In their time in office we have seen a 905 massive escalation in the cost of the service, we have seen complaints, litigation and claims skyrocket, we have experienced systemic waste and we have heard about shocking, serious concerns about preventable harm and deaths – all on their watch and they know it. This is nothing to be proud of, and this all rests on their shoulders as the guardians of the provision of healthcare. We have heard of normal working families, our elderly and vulnerable not being able to access 910 simple appointments, children left without seeing dentists for three years, a management structure destroyed by years of micromanagement by an incompetent political leadership – and, to add salt into the wounds, now a Budget which promises mass un-co-ordinated and haphazard cuts across the Health Service that will inevitably impact on service levels and basic health in our community.

The 30th November 2021 statement – or the reconfiguration, as described by the former 915 Minister for Health – announced the so-called landmark radical reforms to the GHA in direct response to our comprehensive proposals set out at the last General Election and our public statements reflecting the crisis in healthcare. It is clear that, once again, where we lead on policy, particularly health policy, the Government follows. We, on this side of the House, welcome the 920 wholesale adoption of GSD policy. It was excellent back in 2019 and it is of critical importance now that the GHA has been put under the microscope – not only by us but so very vocally by the patients and public at large.

Back in 2019 we constructed a package of positive, constructive and radical proposals for the reform of healthcare. We proposed an independent professional management team, as well as 925 structural and qualitative changes to improve the quality of care. In particular, we proposed the reintroduction of a CEO at the GHA and the appointment of a CFO to monitor procurement and spending of public money in the GHA. We are pleased to note that all of our proposals have been introduced. Where we lead on health the Government follows.

The GHA has had five Ministers – Ministers Cortes, Balban, Costa, Sacramento and now 930 Minister Isola. Whilst the public watch the ministerial musical chairs at the GHA, our Health Service stumbles from one crisis to another without leadership and with public confidence in the service at an all-time low. We now have a new kid on the Health block – who happens not to be in the Chamber at this time – Minister Isola. Let's hope his head is not next on the block; they are running out of front-bench Ministers to replace him.

The hon. Gentlemen knows that I have a great deal of affection for Mr Isola and respect him, 935 but I have to say that he should stick to what he is known for and what he appears to be fairly good at, namely financial services and digital assets. The hon. Gentlemen is a consummate salesman, he knows how to sell Gibraltar plc outside Gibraltar and I personally commend him for his efforts, but I suspect his silver tongue is not going to come to his aid with the Health Service, and whilst I wish him Godspeed and the best of British, I suspect that deep down he knows he is 940 presiding over a Health Service that is on critical life support.

His contribution yesterday, whilst not earth shattering was, at the top end, ad lib before he got to his pre-prepared speech, just the usual defensive jabs, none of which landed on his opponents on this side of the House. I suggest he sticks to non-contact sports. Far from it, all he did was 945 demonstrate that he is able to do the quickest U-turn in political history. It took less than 24 hours after they announced a ridiculous £25-a-week charge affecting all businesses to row back on it. Where in the world does a Government, after supposedly thinking properly about their measures, row back on their commitment within 24 hours? It must be a world record. It is like Line Wall Road all over again. (Banging on desks) More of that later. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

I do not think that he honestly recognises that – (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) 950 Mr Speaker, I know the Chief Minister is baiting me. He wants to get to his feet, but he is going to have to wait until I have finished this. I do not think that he did honestly recognise that all is not well at the GHA and I got the distinct impression that he may be overwhelmed by the prospect of trying to fix the GHA. There were no answers by him – or, indeed, the hon. Lady, who could have answered those questions – in relation to the areas which, on the surface, look like significant cuts to the healthcare budget referred to by the Leader of the Opposition in his contribution. I take the absence of a reply as an acceptance that we will have a task on our hands of managing the Health budget moving to 2023.

They only have themselves to blame and the public know it. We told them last year that the GHA should be regulated by an independent body and pointed to our very carefully designed Care Quality Commission: our idea. It seems clear that they are giving active consideration to this. We told them to hire a CEO – they hired one. We told them to hire a CFO – they hired one. We told them to move the Minister for Health out of the Hospital and they fired her. I am all for constructive politics, but they haven't got a clue when it comes to managing the healthcare budget. They have simply run out of good ideas and brought the GHA to its knees. The only thing I will commend them for today is adopting well-thought-out, prudent and cautious GSD policy.

Whilst they are at it, I would ask them to introduce an integrated healthcare system, an IT system between primary, secondary and tertiary care so that the systems can talk to each other. The failure of digital platforms is totally unacceptable and in 2022 there is no excuse for poor technology in health. The answer to the delivery of better healthcare is to embrace technology and to ensure joined-up IT with all aspects of healthcare, so that when you visit a doctor or go to a pharmacy your health record is accessible by health professionals and you can be provided with the best possible treatment and medication for your ailment.

When it comes to healthcare in our community, the cost to the taxpayer for years 2019-21, namely two years, was a staggering £322 million-odd crudely divided into £161 million each year. The estimate for 2021-22 was £140 million. The forecast outturn for 2022 is £170 million. In short, we spent £170 million up to March 2022 and the estimate for this time next year is £128 million. The Leader of the Opposition has spent much time attempting to demonstrate the overspend and has expertly, in my view, dissected the Chief Minister's contribution and serves to highlight the failure of the Government to get a hold of public spending on healthcare. Putting it simply, we spend half of all revenue generated from Income Tax on the Health Service. The Government has committed on numerous occasions to attempt to cut the cost of health – I remember the Hon. Mr Costa's attempt – but they have been unable to place financial controls and secure efficiencies within the system, and this is why the Hon. Roy Clinton has said that this Budget is irresponsible and unrealistic. Every single Minister for Health – the revolving door, as is well known – has tried and failed to drive efficiencies within the Health Service, and despite what is set out in the Book it is very difficult to see how they are going to stem the crisis in the GHA. Meanwhile, people continue to suffer, and complaints about service rise.

The Government now and again repeats the efficiencies mantra and now proposes to essentially cut the cost of healthcare from the outturn of £170 million to £128 million a year. How are they going to do that? Well, they have no choice. They are going to have to cut services that people rely on. We have already received the pre-Budget announcement of a massive hike in prescription costs to the public and a reduction in those eligible for exemption. We have also learnt that now life-saving and life-improving medication to those who need it will be curtailed. I have spoken with many patients and pharmacists alike and it is clear that patient access to important medicines will now be severely restricted. This is the start of it. What will follow is a period of sustained cuts, cuts and more cuts to our health services. Appendix F on page 225 of the Book provides some insight as to how they will go about butchering our most beloved Health Service.

As we all know, the Health Service is as good as the people who work in it, and it has always been a place where they have been overwhelmed by the demands placed by them by the service. We have excellent healthcare professionals who are trying their best whilst being completely demoralised. We pay, as a community, personal emoluments, which includes salaries, over £60 million a year. In terms of relief cover, visiting consultants and recruitment expenses, we paid

1005 out, in 2021-22, over £15 million. Insofar as those subheads, the Government is now budgeting, for the year ahead, just over £3.4 million, which is a massive cut, which can only impact on the delivery of care in our community. Is this seriously realistic?

1010 Selecting a number of other areas, you can see that it is not just on people where we are seeing cuts but on other areas directly affecting patients. When we look at prescriptions, the Government intends to cut the cost from £12.5 million to £9 million, a whopping £3.5 million from prescriptions. In terms of medical departments they intend to reduce the cost from £18 million-odd to £5.7 million – all this to directly impact on healthcare to our community.

1015 And then we come to the last line of defence in healthcare, our most treasured sponsored patients scheme. Many of our families and Members of this House may have been recipients of healthcare delivered elsewhere because we simply cannot provide that quality of care here. I am sad to report to this House that the Government intends to cut sponsored patients from approximately £15 million to £10 million, representing a significant decrease, in my view.

1020 It is also very disappointing that despite all that is said by them in this House about the importance of support for members of the community with disability and mental health, there is no detailed budget for these areas. We will all remember the publication of the Mental Health Situational Analysis report, which sat on the then Minister for Health's desk for 19 months. That report heavily criticised the Government for not having a defined mental health budget – and low and behold, the report from Public Health England has been ignored once again this year and no mental health budget is properly put forward by them in this year's Budget. It is shocking that in 1025 300 pages there is no mental health budget. They talk about the vulnerable, the weak and those in need with compassion, but it is never backed up. They are all words but no action. How many more young men and women have to needlessly suffer in silence because of a lack of provision in relation to the mental health budget?

1030 All this Budget does is demonstrate that they are entirely disconnected from reality and what is important to this community. Healthcare is our number-one priority and the Government has embarked on a culling and mercenary butchery of the healthcare budget, targeting medicines, staff and the availability our well-loved sponsored patient scheme. No amount of spin we have heard from the latest in a long line of Ministers or the spin doctor extraordinaire, the Chief Minister himself, will assure the public that what they are doing is ... embarking on a haphazard 1035 scatter-gun approach to cost cutting at the expense of patient care. In respect of the purchase of the Hospital by the Government, we will, obviously, carefully scrutinise the deal when the details are made available to us.

1040 Mr Speaker, I said in 2018 in this very House that the Government had been reckless with the peoples' money. I said in 2018 it took them seven years of spend, spend, spend, which saddled our community with debt, debt and debt. We will now have to live with the consequences of his huge appetite for spending, and that is cuts, cuts and even more cuts. The Chief Minister's chickens have certainly come home to roost, and they seek to blame Brexit and now COVID for their poor planning and mismanagement of the economy.

1045 The two clear characteristics of an economy bruised and battered by a decade of spending are cuts to public services and tax increases, and the Government has now done both. The Chief Minister almost seems proud of the fact that under his watch he needs to take significant revenue-raising measures, albeit for two years – or, to lighten the presentation, 24 months, not that that makes a huge amount of difference, of course.

1050 The Chief Minister tells us that this is not a giveaway Budget – but, Mr Speaker, it is a takeaway Budget. The Chief Minister is taking away from hardworking families who are enduring a cost-of-living crisis and higher interest rates. After a decade of spending he now wants to raid our piggy banks in true Sheriff of Nottingham style. As I have demonstrated, there is less money for medicines needed by patients, less money for sponsored patients and less money for cover, which ultimately has a direct effect on the level of healthcare provided to our community. How can he 1055 be proud of that record? What the Chief Minister cannot get away with is his decade-long splurging of millions at festivals, his Venetian palace, swanky business trips through VVIP World

1060 Leader lounges and a war-like bunker that can only be rivalled by the West Wing, to name but a few. All he can point to is the wonderful green park that the Hon. Mr Isola spent some time discussing yesterday. We all remember the VVIP tickets issued to all and sundry and his friends, and now that he has spent the peoples' money the Chief Minister talks about a nation of fairness and the people's toughest Budget. There is nothing tough about this Budget. The Chief Minister is attempting to position himself as a strong, determined leader who has to take the tough decisions which might not be popular. Well, he would not have had to take those tough decisions in relation to people's money if he had managed the public purse better over the last decade of spending.

1065 I think it was the Deputy Chief Minister who attempted, on Tuesday, to persuade the public that it was a combination of a lethal cocktail of Brexit and COVID that had caused the economic bomb to go off. We do not doubt that Brexit and COVID have had an impact, but to brush aside the Government's addiction to frivolous spending and mismanagement of the public finances will not go unnoticed by the public. Whatever the shape of the treaty, it will be too late for the Chief 1070 Minister and his cheerleaders. The Chief Minister's conversion to prudence and the age of responsibility is an act to shield him from a decade of mismanagement and spend, spend, spend. It is a shame he did not listen to the perfect-storm warning set out by the Hon. Mr Feetham all those years ago.

1075 When the hon. Gentlemen sat down in his chair after what he described as the people's Budget, our community literally exploded in anger. Social media went into a frenzied criticism of his speech. The pendulum has truly swung and this is the champagne-swigging socialists' last Budget. (Two Members: Hear, hear.) They are bruised and battered, tired and spent, with nothing more to give, clinging to the hope that successes on the treaty will somehow make people forget the domestic nightmare that people have been living with. The community has had enough, they 1080 want him gone, and it is only he and the Government who are responsible for the ruinous state of public finances.

He talked at length about rebirth and renaissance. Listening to the Chief Minister was like looking at an entirely different human being. It was not a rebirth, it was not a renaissance; it was a wholesale reincarnation. The Chief Minister is selling himself as Robin Hood but he is the Sheriff of Nottingham. He is, as my learned and hon. Friend the Leader of the Opposition said, the 1085 highway man: 'Stand and deliver' I think were the words that he used.

We are pleased that he now appears to be counting the pennies, as the Hon. Mr Roy Clinton does on many occasions, but what about those many millions of pounds he spent on parties? Is he accountable for that spending spree? I say 'appears' because even now, when he asks you to 1090 dip your hand in your pocket for more tax, electricity and water contributions, he increases his entertainment bill at No.6 Convent Place. In short, while he has gone from drinking Dom Perignon to Prosecco, he still wants you to pay for it. Shame on him. Tell that to the people who can no longer afford medication or obtain the medication they need. Tell that to the people living on the breadline who now have to pay more in tax and utilities. Tell that to the sponsored patients who 1095 have just had their budget slashed. Tell that to small business and the unions who have openly and directly criticised this Budget. This is not the people's toughest Budget, it is a desperate scramble Budget to get us through the next year, scrimping around to cover the hole created not by Brexit or COVID but his pathological addiction to spending other people's money. We now rely on the generosity of benefactors to pay for our parks and our theatres. I make no criticism of their 1100 generosity, their contribution to our community is welcome, but in one way it is an abdication of responsibility and a reflection of the state of public finances, for which they are ultimately politically responsible.

This Budget demonstrates to all who would care to listen that the Government that he leads has lost the trust and confidence of the people of this community. Our community has lived 1105 through a decade of spend, spend, spend and debt, debt and debt, and it now appears that we are all about to board tugboat Picardo for a sustained period of collective economic pain. On Tuesday, he romantically talked about himself as being Capt. Picardo of HMS Gibraltar, leading us through choppy waters, when the reality is he is readying himself to abandon ship.

1110 Mr Speaker, moving to other areas of responsibility and the Government's now abandoned commitment to a green and child-friendly city, I have heard it being said by the Chief Minister, the Deputy Chief Minister and others in this House that they will not be able to honour the promises they made to the people in 2019. It appears that the green and child-friendly city will be the victim of GSLP mismanagement of our economy. No other Government in a refined democracy has 1115 abandoned its commitment to the environment, so why should we? Any political party going to the polls in the future rowing back on its commitment to climate change, for instance, and decarbonisation will be punished by the electorate.

I was surprised to hear from Minister Cortes on Tuesday that several countries have stepped back on low-carbon measures, which the Minister described in his contribution as short term and opportunistic. I would be very interested to hear which countries have stepped back from that 1120 commitment, because he simply did not disclose them. There was nothing in his very short, limited, unfocused and, quite frankly, poor five-minute contribution on the environment, apart from wishy-washy commitments to climate change that inspired very little hope to those listening that he was truly interested in improving the environment for the betterment of members of our community. The Minister said that the Government remained fully committed to green Gibraltar, 1125 but then confirmed in the same breath that they had to pull back on plans and manifesto commitments. Well, which one is it?

We heard a very limited update from the Minister in relation to their decade-long and hitherto undelivered sewage treatment plant, which appears to be no further forward and in fact is not being provided for in the Book, save for a limited provision. It appears that Gibraltar will continue 1130 to pump raw sewage into the sea with no indication as to how much it will cost the public purse and despite saying that it could be ready in a year. Again, is it a realistic timetable for the delivery of this project?

Insofar as solar power, it is clear that there has been very limited progress on rolling this out more widely. It is also clear from Opposition questions in the House that the move to EV is very 1135 slow indeed and that businesses have very little encouragement to move their entire fleets to electric. We will continue, therefore, to see fleets of trucks spewing dirty fumes across our streets, and with increased construction our health is going to be further impacted by bad air quality. The Government must do much more to improve our air quality and clean up Gibraltar for all our residents. We will watch with bated breath how the new instruments purchased by the Minister 1140 will improve public information about air quality.

We heard about the Sustainable Tourism Tax, which has been described as a positive step, but the Leader of the Opposition and my hon. Friend Mr Bossino said that it is strategically a bad move.

I welcome the prohibited importation of diesel and petrol mopeds from 1st July 2023. Again, it should have happened much earlier. We have been saying this in this House in a number of 1145 questions I have put to the Minister, but we are where we are and we are pleased that they are following policy which we have long promoted in this area. Diesel and petrol mopeds are polluting and noisy and the sale is counterintuitive – another example of where we lead on constructive and progressive policies and they follow.

I cannot, of course, not deal with Line Wall Road and the debacle. (A Member: Hear, hear.) The 1150 other Ministry I am blessed to shadow is Transport, which was quickly taken back by the Hon.
Mr Balban after a disastrous term, himself, at Health and after Mr Daryanani's massive U-turn on Line Wall Road. Who will ever forget the appalling mismanagement by the former Minister for Transport, who famously said in this House that Line Wall Road belonged to the Government, only to be corrected by the Leader of the Opposition, who put him right on who owns Line Wall Road – 1155 and that is the people, as the learned Leader of the Opposition has said? (Banging on desks) They got themselves into a right mess on Line Wall Road and it is the first time I have ever seen the Chief Minister apologise for anything. He held up his hands – 'We got it wrong,' I think were the words he used at the time. We were grateful for that apology, we all get things wrong, but that was cataclysmic. They jump into ideas and they do not think about the consequences for normal 1160 working families. By way of example, the closure of Line Wall Road had a massive negative effect on other important road infrastructure and caused massive and untold chaos. Mr Speaker, I know he does not want to listen to this because it is just so painful for him to listen to his mistake on Line Wall Road, but the mistake cost the taxpayer £300,000. Let that sink in. It is truly embarrassing. The ill-planned, ill-conceived closure of Line Wall Road cost the taxpayer £300,000, an example of carelessness and a waste of public money, and now they are increasing prescription costs and cutting sponsored patients. Where is the priority? They have no idea what they are doing any more. You could not make it up.

During COVID, 2019-22, they spent nearly £2 million on road resurfacing. They estimate to spend £1 million this year on road surfacing. Have you seen the state of our roads? Where are the improvements? Minister Balban spoke in his contribution of patch jobs to our roads. The public are up in arms in relation to transport and the quality of our roads, and rightly so. Mr Balban's speech is not going to appease the many who believe that the STTP was a waste of public money. Addressing that point, in 2019-21 the Government spent nearly £8 million on the tunnel and roads to North Front. The outturn for 2021-22 is £4.1 million. In 2022-23 they expect to spend £4.5 million on the tunnel. That is £16 million on a tunnel and it is not even open.

The infamous Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan continues to be an unaccountable money pit. In 2019-21 the taxpayer paid £477,000 for the STTP. In the year 2021-22 it cost a further £205,000 and for 2022-23 it is estimated to reach £800,000. I have said it before that Gibraltar requires a radical shake up in the way we move about our community, but spending millions of pounds on a plan that does not work is not the answer.

Gibraltar can only change if people in our community have confidence in the reliability and availability of public transport. Safe infrastructure for alternatives is essential – and I agree with the hon. Gentleman Minister Balban in relation to that – to move our people away from car use to more sustainable modes of transportation. Yesterday, the Hon. Minister Balban romanticised about his desire for walking and cycling infrastructure and I applaud and support his commitment to this, but it is not backed up by the Members who sit opposite with him. It is clear that his predecessor was certainly not on board with that vision, which I agree is a good one and we applaud him for it, one which sees our people walking more, cycling more and embracing sustainable and healthier modes of transport. I really do think that the only way the Minister will see his vision put into practice is when we shortly move from these benches over to there, where we will do that very thing. Mr Balban is a lone voice on that side of the House but we support his vision.

In relation to e-scooters, there is no real indication as to when proposed legislation will be brought before the House. We need an integrated plan that provides public confidence and allows people to explore safe and cleaner modes of transportation. We also need to encourage a full transition to EV and we require our infrastructure to be significantly upgraded to meet the green and child-friendly commitments set out in their glossy 2019 manifesto. One example is our taxi service, which should be entirely electric, in my view, and we should encourage that transition as soon as possible. Gibraltar deserves better than a half-baked traffic plan that is costing the public millions.

Gibraltar's streets and highways are unsightly and dirty, and whilst millions go out of the Improvement and Development Fund nothing is improved or developed by the GSLP Liberal Alliance. Whilst they have enjoyed a decade of spending and decadence, they have not seen the decade of decay on our highways and byways. It is important to remark on the following, so the public know, Mr Speaker. We spend over £6 million a year for the cleaning of our streets and public spaces. We pay £½ million a year to monitor air quality. We spend £1.85 million on the Environmental Agency contract. We spend £1.25 million on Alameda Gardens. We spend £100,000 a year on keeping our cemeteries. In most, if not all of those areas, I receive complaints from the public. If it is not our dirty streets, if it is not our exceptionally bad air quality affecting the long-term health of our young and old alike, it is the poor state of where our relatives are placed at rest. Where is the supervision? Where is the quality control? Where are the efficiencies, ensuring that we are getting value for money? All the public can see from this Book is the Government spending their money with no real improvements in our environment and, worse still, a deterioration in the way our community looks.

1215 Our air quality is diabolical and anyone who suggests that we do not have a problem that is directly impacting on the lungs of our children is blind to reality. I am shocked by reports from doctors on the levels of asthma and other respiratory conditions as well as the prevalence of allergens. More must be done, and quickly, to stop the increasing bad and poor air quality in our city. I am not confident that the current Minister has the ambition to drive real change in this area.

1220 No one in their right mind believes that this community is well within the 2021 limits imposed by the World Health Organization and that we have no problem with air quality. The hon. Gentleman, the Minister for the Environment, paints a rosy picture but it is very far from rosy. In fact, the Hon. Professor's contribution yesterday was completely at odds with that of the Hon. Mr Balban. Don't they speak to each other? Don't they compare notes before they draft their speeches? Should 1225 Transport, Health and Environment be joined up with one message?

The fact that the Government has changed its air quality monitors demonstrates that the 20-year-old equipment was not fit for purpose in the first place and they now accept the longstanding concerns of NGOs as to our poor air quality. Pausing there, we should thank and applaud our health, disability and environmental charities, NGOs and associations for the excellent work they do in raising awareness and funds for their causes. We should thank every organiser and tin shaker for their efforts in ensuring that their health, disability and environmental concerns are raised loud and clear.

Mr Speaker, coming to the end, I wanted to say something about the contributions of the Chief Minister and Mr Bossino yesterday in relation to another country's approach to the question of abortion. The Chief Minister talked about not having a reverse gear on rights and Mr Bossino I think talked about the belligerent left. Old wounds which were settled in the referendum and the subsequent commencement of the Act should not be reopened. We, in this community, were torn apart by this question and let us not continue to create ill feeling. Let our community continue to heal the wounds of these divisions and attempt to live together in peace and harmony with the collective decisions we have made about a seminal issue such as abortion despite the many views that have been expressed.

1235

Before I close my contribution, a word about yesterday's news in relation to the end of reciprocal healthcare benefits. We have consistently said that the Government has mishandled the negotiations by giving away rights to frontier workers with no equivalent rights in return for our people. People will now need to be concerned with taking out health insurance for Spain to cover emergency health cover there. I think the end note in relation to that point is that we should have been much more prepared for the situation, and I am sure the Chief Minister will deal with that in his reply but it is a significant move that was announced yesterday and which the Opposition has replied to in a press release today.

1245

Mr Speaker, it is clear to all that after a decade of spending and a decade of decay, to use a Shakespearean theme, something is rotten in the state of Denmark and there is a real need for a change of direction. We need a Government that delivers what it says it will deliver, a Government that can be trusted with the public affairs and finances of the community and a Government that puts the health of our country first.

1250

1255 Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, thank you very much.

After that contribution, which has no doubt been inspired by Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds, frankly, I wonder whether we might recess for 15 minutes before we hear the sweeper of the Opposition.

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess for 15 minutes and will return at five to seven.

The House recessed at 6.39 p.m. and resumed at 7.04 p.m.

Appropriation Bill 2022 –
Second Reading –
Debate continued

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

1265 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it is now five past seven, not quite the graveyard shift that it has been in the past – (Interjection and laughter) well, not quite – but I am conscious that hon.
Members have been in the Chamber for three consecutive days. As Zsa Gabor would say to her nine husbands prior to contracting marriage, ‘I shall not keep you long, darling,’ therefore keeping my intervention short.

1270

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): The best news for everybody.

Hon. D A Feetham: Indeed, very good news.

1275 Mr Speaker, I wish to start by congratulating the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition on his articulate exposure of the Government’s responsibility for the state of the public finances and indeed for the austerity measures announced by the Government on Tuesday. Yes, Mr Speaker, austerity measures, described by Unite the Union as a Budget hitting workers in the midst of a mounting cost-of-living crisis; austerity that, with the normalness that belied his 60 years of age, the Minister for Financial Services, within 24 hours of the Government announcing those 1280 measures, came to this House and performed the most remarkable U-turn. Nonetheless, the Leader of the Opposition has asked me, as he did last year, to draw together some of the themes in this year’s debate and respond, where relevant, to some of the speeches from the Government side, and I am delighted to do so.

1285 I also want to congratulate Ministers for, on the whole, concentrating on the positives and what they in their Ministries have done, rather than trumpeting the same tired tune about what they say – wrongly, as it happens – the GSD did whilst in government. Frankly, it has become as tiresome as it is irrelevant to the issue of whether they deserve the continued trust of the people of Gibraltar. They have been in government for over 10 years. It is their record that we judge and at the next election the people of Gibraltar will turn their backs on them in their droves, (Several 1290 Members: Hear, hear.) and with reason.

What, therefore, are the differences that separate this side of the House from that side? There are two issues that separate this and that side of the House. The first is how far should the Government bear some responsibility for the financial mess we find ourselves in and for the measures that the Government introduced, hitting working-class families and companies, in 1295 particular in the light of the consistent warnings that we gave from this side of the House, both pre Brexit and pre COVID. The second is the extraordinary overspend in the last financial year, which is difficult to justify on its own but particularly when we consider the service the public is getting in return. We spent £170 million on health last year, £30 million above the estimate. The least you would expect is that the appointments system at the Primary Care Centre would work 1300 or that at least people’s calls are answered. Here we are in a real financial crisis and the Government cannot even control public overspending – not spending but overspending:
£90 million, as the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition said in his address yesterday, which feeds inevitably into the reasons for the measures that the Government introduced on Tuesday. Even if you calculate that overspend differently by taking into account the contributions from the COVID 1305 Fund into the Consolidated Fund, it still leaves you with an overspend in the tens of millions of pounds.

Let me take the first issue first. The Chief Minister, during the course of his address, said the challenges of COVID, Brexit and Ukraine scar our economy. The Deputy Chief Minister said ‘grossly unfair to belittle or underestimate the pandemic’. It cannot be denied that the pandemic has 1310 catapulted us into an economic crisis which has caused us to sit on a mountain of debt. More on 1315 the mountain of debt in due course, Mr Speaker. Minister Isola said that Brexit and COVID are not made up; they are not excuses but unprecedented events. The hon. Lady, tonight, said, ‘Where 1320 have they been in the last two years?’ Indeed, where has she been in the last 11 years? The common theme is do not blame the Government, blame external unavoidable factors – the political get-out-of-jail-free card. Of course no one denies the challenges of Brexit or COVID or the Ukraine war, no one on this side belittles or underestimates the pandemic or the economic crisis 1325 that they have brought in their wake. Yes, these are unprecedented events. Yes, the immediate deficit in the public finances has been caused by COVID – I stand by everything that I said last year – but what you cannot do is, by a political sleight of hand and a political deception, airbrush away the gross mismanagement of our public finances over 10 years, which we predicted would 1330 have consequences in the future if we faced an international downturn. Their mismanagement of the public finances was a disaster waiting to happen and there is absolutely no doubt that regardless of COVID or Brexit, sooner or later they would have had to take corrective measures. It is that mismanagement that has massively contributed to what the Leader of the Opposition has appositely described as putting their hands in the collective right-hand pockets of ordinary working people and small businesses in Gibraltar, and what is worse is that after the next election, should they win – God forbid – they will put the other hand into the collective left-hand pockets of the people, and businesses too. Nowhere have the failings of this Government been more apparent than the mismanagement of the public finances. Nowhere have they betrayed their own 1335 traditional core principles more than in the management of the public finances. Nowhere have they placed the Gibraltarian more in jeopardy than they have in the management of the public finances.

The Chief Minister said that underpinning this Budget was ‘the spirit of prudence and responsibility’. It is a real shame that he was not possessed of that same spirit when we were 1335 urging prudence and responsibility over the last 10 years, or that he managed to instil that very same spirit over the last year to ensure that his Government did not overspend by £90 million.

They are the party that has always professed to stand for financial stability as the foundation for mounting a proper defence of our national interest. It was only with these foundations – or so the Father of the House would say in the 1980s and 1990s – that we could properly defend against 1340 pressure from our neighbours and indeed at times from the periodic machinations of the UK government. Over the last 10 years, and all for the sake of piling on the votes – not just winning but winning by landslides – they have played Russian roulette with those public finances, unconcerned by warnings from this side of the House about the weakened position it was leaving this community in if the global situation deteriorated or turned. Whilst we could not have 1345 predicted COVID or Brexit – although I did refer to the possibility of Brexit in these very same debates prior to it happening – our warnings were clear and unheeded. Whilst we want the best outcome and the best deal for Gibraltar in treaty talks, and if we get a decent deal we will be the first to support it, it is their mismanagement of this issue, the public finances, that has contributed significantly to the weakening of our position – of that there is no doubt.

1350 I have always admired the Chief Minister’s energy, more than he knows. For the first six years of his Government there was no interest group or person who held his hand out that the Chief Minister did not personally see or write to, to promise a cure for every conceivable ill or request.
Where was his newfound ‘no free rides’ mantra because ‘previous generations had no free ride’ 1355 when he was throwing taxpayer-subsidised parties to the annual tune of £4.5 million? We all like a party but that, with respect, was a tad excessive. It was bound to catch up with him and it did many years ago. Many times we pointed out that in Bermuda, when governments there changed the borrowing limits – much as they did in 2016 – electoral auctions reached such levels that their government ended up borrowing to pay for recurrent expenditure. The popularity of this Government has rested on a mountain of pre-COVID debt and out-of-control expenditure. That is 1360 his legacy when it comes to the public finances of this community, and that is what also underpins the measures that he announced on Tuesday – and as with every political sleight of hand, it has rested on ensuring that either people did not understand or, frankly, did not care whilst they had money in their pockets.

1365 But debt mountains are deferred taxation or cuts in public service, or both. We already sat on a mountain of debt of £1.45 billion before COVID – or have they forgotten? It was inevitable, and this is what we see in this Budget. Of course these worrying figures are attributable to COVID in the first instance, but all COVID has done is accelerate the inevitable downturn that would have occurred anyway and added to what was already an alarming situation. Of that there is also no doubt. A strong economy, sound public finances and money in the bank to see us through difficult times – those are the foundations of true success. That is the way that we have consistently said we would protect the Gibraltarian way of life. They are the principles that have guided our warnings in these debates for the last 10 years. They cannot now point to those same principles to justify the austerity measures which they, in part, have caused.

1375 Sadly, it will be people of moderate means who will be the hardest hit. He says this is not austerity. He accused us of wanting austerity when we put forward a detailed plan of debt and expenditure reduction pre Brexit because we were concerned even then by the mountain of debt he had accumulated and increasing expenditure. The classic definition of austerity is economic policy consisting of tax increases, spending cuts or both, used by governments to reduce large deficits. If what the Government served up on Tuesday is not austerity then quite frankly I do not know what is.

1380 Trust is as important in politics as it is in business and personal relationships. Let me remind the people of Gibraltar of the phenomenal sleights of hand performed by this Government in the management of these public finances and why we say from this side of the House that the people cannot trust them. In 2011, when gross public debt stood at £540 million, inclusive of debt in Government-owned companies, the Chief Minister said – then I think he was the Leader of the Opposition – that the GSD was addicted to debt. Today, it stands at £1.8 billion. That is 333% more gross debt than when he said that the GSD was addicted to debt. Only £350 million of that is attributable to COVID, so when the Deputy Chief Minister says we are sitting on a mountain of debt caused by COVID, my answer to that is that £350 million is but a hill compared with the mountain of debt we were sitting on pre COVID. The Chief Minister said it is the oldest trick in the book, like blaming Labour for the debt that followed the collapse of the markets in 2008. The difference is that we were carrying a staggering amount of debt prior to COVID and we consistently warned about its consequences. That is the difference. In 2011 he castigated us because there was £20 million of borrowing in Government-owned companies. Today, in Government-owned companies the debt stands at £990 million. That is a 4,950% increase in off-balance-sheet debt, i.e. not included in this Book, from the time that he was lambasting us because we had £20 million of debt in Government-owned companies. I accept there was debt in Government-owned companies in 2011, but it was minuscule compared with the systematic re-engineering of our public finances through the use of Government-owned companies, companies that are not only repositories of off-balance-sheet debt but are used to pay for expenditure that would otherwise come from Government revenue. In other words, it not only distorts the extent of true debt owed by Gibraltar plc, it also distorts the true extent of expenditure of the Government. That is why we have consistently voted against the Budget since, yes, Mr Clinton persuaded me that we should do so.

1405 He can see from that exposition that I do understand the link between expenditure and debt and vice-versa. It is a shame that he did not better understand it over the last 10 years. In 2011 the hon. Member lambasted us because he said that every man, woman and child was notionally indebted to the tune of £16,000. By his own measurements today it stands at £60,000, 375% more than when he made the point in 2011. Indeed, the difference is that we never mortgaged working-class housing estates in order to secure that debt.

1410 In December 2011 he said that he had found an impenetrable curtain and as he addressed the nation he told us there was a serious public finance and public debt problem. He then, after saying that, proceeded in four short years to borrow not only that huge amount of debt that I alluded to 1415 a few moments ago but also spend £750 million on capital projects. The curtain hiding the debt mountain on which we sit in Government-owned companies has no equal in the history of the public finances. No one knows how the Government has precisely spent £400 million in Credit Finance Company Ltd or the £300 million borrowed through Gibraltar Capital Assets, to give but two examples. Indeed, we do not even know whether all of this has been spent or part of it is still in cash.

1420 Those are just a few reasons why people listening to this debate, when they come to weigh whether they believe the Government or they believe the Opposition ... That is why the people of Gibraltar should believe the discourse of the Opposition, because we have been consistent and, despite the fact that it came at an electoral cost, we never deviated from what we thought was right. (Banging on desks) (A Member: Hear, hear.)

1425 I now want to also just explain how we ended up in the mess that we are in today – in other words, how we ended up with that mountain of public debt. I want to explain that. Every country has legislation that is designed to prevent governments borrowing in a manner that becomes unaffordable to the community – and so did we when they first came into government. But the problem the Government faced was that because of those legal borrowing limits it could not 1430 borrow what it needed in order to deliver on its manifesto commitments in 2011. Not only couldn't it legally borrow but it did not have the cash in the bank in order to pay for those commitments. They promised £750 million in capital projects to reduce rents, rates and electricity, and then, to boot, to donate every single last penny of government surpluses to Community Care.
It does not take a rocket scientist – and indeed, to reduce debt, if you are saying, 'I am going to be 1435 spending £750 million; all the spare cash I have in my pocket I am going to donate to a charity and I am also going to reduce the debt that I am lumbered with,' how on earth are you going to be spending that colossal amount of money on capital projects?

The way they did it was this. The first thing they did – not the first thing, but close to the first thing they did, and they did not tell the electorate in 2011 they were going to do it – was to amend 1440 the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act. I think it was 2012, or 2013 it may have been, not quite soon afterwards. The Gibraltar Savings Bank Act at that stage, pre amendment, only allowed the proceeds of Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures to be invested in money or moneys-worth investments, a very safe form of investment, usually UK Treasury bonds. They introduced an amendment that did away with that and meant that the Government could then use the 1445 debentures in the Gibraltar Savings Bank to invest in whatever they wanted. Thus they began shifting Government debt, which of course appears in this Book as the debt owned by the Government from Government, direct debt, into the Gibraltar Savings Bank, where it is a direct debt of the Gibraltar Savings Bank, not a debt of the Government. That is the way in which they then circumvented the legal borrowing limits, because your Government debt is within the legal 1450 limits but you then have this indirect debt sitting in the Gibraltar Savings Bank, which of course is not accountable as Government debt.

From 11th December 2011 to 1st May 2013, just under two years, the total value of Government debentures had been reduced by £151 million. During that same period the total value of debt security issued by the Gibraltar Savings Bank rose spectacularly from £24 million to 1455 £272 million, and that was just the beginning of their administration but the trend accelerated. It allowed the Government not only to keep the debt off balance sheet but its expenditure, too, by injecting hundreds of millions of pounds into Government-owned companies which then spent the money on the projects. That is how they did it, and it is irresponsible. Why is it irresponsible?
Because the legislation that is there to prevent governments from borrowing in a manner that 1460 becomes unaffordable is there for a reason. It is not there to try to avoid and evade. That is the reason why it was dangerous. Millions of pounds went from the Gibraltar Savings Bank into Credit Finance and Gibraltar Investment Holdings Ltd, the company which has traditionally been used to fund other Government-owned companies. It is a company that sits at the top of the pyramid of Government-owned companies, so traditionally the way that Government would fund 1465 Government-owned companies is by injecting money from the Consolidated Fund into Gibraltar

Investment Holdings Ltd and that would then trickle down to the other companies that were owned by the Government. Of course, if you are injecting into Gibraltar Investment Holdings Ltd money in the hundreds of millions from the Gibraltar Savings Bank, you do not have to do it from your own pocket as the Government.

1470 That is the link that he says we did not understand between debt and expenditure, in simple terms. That is why I predicted in 2013 that this would have huge consequences for transparency and accountability in relation to the public finances. I feel immensely proud of the fact that that was my rooky speech as Leader of the Opposition and I predicted what the Government was about to do, and I was spot-on. This is why contributions to the Consolidated Fund – in other words, the 1475 kitty – (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) I am going to repeat it so the Government listens to this, (A Member: Hear, hear.) bearing in mind that they said that we did not understand the link between debt and Government expenditure. This is why contributions from the Consolidated Fund – in other words, the kitty into which all Government revenue is paid to the IDF, the kitty out of which the Government pays for its projects – went down, not surprisingly given what they did, 1480 from £181 million in 2012 to an actual of £51 million for the two years 2019-21 and then £19 million for 2021-22.

Mr Speaker, to make good my point that the Government just cannot be trusted and people listening should prefer the discourse of the Leader of the Opposition to that of the Chief Minister, I want to demonstrate how at every step of the way after this amendment to the Gibraltar Savings Bank they misled and lied to the people of Gibraltar. Let me give you some examples of that, too.
1485 During the 2013 by-election, even when we had found indisputable evidence –

Mr Speaker: I think with respect to the speaker, he cannot accuse the Government of lying just like that, without any concrete proof. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) You should not use the word 'lie'. It is out of order.
1490

Hon. Chief Minister: Unparliamentary.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, of course I will abide by any ruling that Mr Speaker gives.
1495 I think there are two points here. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) One is the point made by Mr Speaker about it being supported by facts. I think anybody listening to this speech will come to the conclusion that what I am saying is supported by fact. The second is the point that the Chief Minister made from a sedentary position about the bringing of a motion. That is a more substantive objection to the use of the word 'lie'.

1500 May I use 'economical with the truth'? I think that is probably more parliamentary, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have no difficulty with the hon. Gentleman saying 'economical with the truth' or any other phrase which has been judged to be a parliamentary alternative to the word that he used, but in every parliament under the Westminster system that 1505 follows Erskine May, when that word is used it has to be withdrawn and the speaker can then use an alternative, if he wishes; or, having withdrawn it in the course of a debate, he can then bring a substantive motion, if he wishes, which is what the Rules provide for. If I had used it, I would have to say formally I had withdrawn it and then use an alternative. I think that we can all agree to continue to abide by tradition and parliamentary language or we can all agree not to abide by 1510 parliamentary language rulings which are accepted by everyone.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am not going to withdraw something that I believe, that has formed part of my discourse over the last 12 years.

I will, of course, use alternative language. I have suggested 'economical with the truth'. I believe that I am entitled to say that a Government has misled the people of Gibraltar – I am perfectly entitled to do so – and I think that I am entitled to say that the Government has been 1515 economical with the truth with the people of Gibraltar.

1520 I do not want to make a song and dance out of this, Mr Speaker, because I wish to get on with my speech, but the people out there listening to this debate and listening to my intervention and listening to the way that my intervention has been stopped in mid flow – (Interjection) yes – because of this, because I have said that the Government has not –

1525 Mr Speaker: No, I think the use of the word ‘lied’ ... I have been quite liberal in allowing lots of things which have words, phrases, sentences and paragraphs that have been exchanged. We started off with the Leader of the Opposition suggesting that the Chief Minister had used his meeting the Pope very impiously. I let that go. I thought it was in bad taste but I let it go because there was no objection. We have then gradually listened to the increase in the kinds of words and phrases that have been used to describe actions by the Government. We heard the Hon. Elliott Phillips with such gusto being, at times, quite disrespectful to the Government, and I have allowed 1530 it to happen because there was no objection by the Chief Minister.

Up to now, I have not noted anything which gave me reason to stop the Hon. Daniel Feetham, but with the use of the word ‘lied’ ... I have to stop you saying that word. I would ask you to agree to withdraw the word ‘lied’ and then we can get on with listening to your speech.

1535 Hon. D A Feetham: No, Mr Speaker. If Mr Speaker wants me to withdraw the word ‘lie’ ... I will not withdraw the word ‘lie’. I will sit down and not continue with my speech. The people of Gibraltar will know that I have not continued with my speech because Mr Speaker has not allowed me to essentially make a point that I do not consider I should be withdrawing. I have said that I will use alternative language.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I could be of assistance in my capacity as Leader of the House, rather than as Chief Minister – we want to hear what the hon. Gentleman has to say. I want him to say it so I can reply to him, to show that the thing that he has said – which he should not have said – he believes about us we are able to demonstrate about him. So I do not want him 1545 not to be able to give the speech, but he has to do it in terms which are parliamentary, otherwise we can all say things which have been ruled not to be parliamentary and I will be able to say about them the thing which he has said about us – which is unparliamentary – which I believe about him as much as he says he believes about me.

Therefore, I wonder whether the hon. Gentleman might agree – this might assist the hon. Gentleman, so I am genuinely trying to help him and he might want to listen – if it might help you, Mr Speaker, and it might help the hon. Gentleman, that he might say that although he continues to believe it, he withdraws it. He would then be able to continue with his speech, which I would very much like to hear because he entertains me greatly, he speaks a great amount of nonsense and I do enjoy replying to him and demonstrating that the people of Gibraltar can put absolutely 1555 no stock by what they say because the more they say it, the more they assist me in demonstrating that what they have said is that which he says we have incurred in.

Hon. K Azopardi: May I just, on this issue, Mr Speaker ...? What I had heard, and I may not have heard it properly but what I thought my hon. colleague was talking about when he uttered the phrase ... He was describing the Government. As I had understood previously the rule ... I am asking for clarification from Mr Speaker and I am staring at the Standing Orders, in particular Standing Order 45(6), which is ‘No Member shall impute improper motives to any other Member’ ... I can understand that if he had said that a particular Minister had lied, that is about imputing improper motives of any Member and I can understand that in that context he would be asked by the Chair 1560 to withdraw a particular remark which would be unparliamentary, but he is not imputing improper motives of any particular individual, he is talking about Government generally and it is a different point. So I am asking for clarification, Mr Speaker.

We do not understand the Rules to say that, when there is a much more general description of the Government, and indeed there have been plenty of occasions when the Members opposite

1570 have used language that has been, if not similar, a carbon copy of remarks which Mr Speaker, when looking at Members on this side of the House, seems to be offended by. There have been plenty of remarks both in this session and in previous sessions, not least the last Budget session, where similar remarks have been made by the Government.

1575 Mr Speaker: I think Members generally believe that they have a right to challenge the Speaker when the Speaker says something that may not be understood or accepted by Members, generally speaking. The fact is that it is not right and it is not in order. It is out of order to challenge the Speaker.

1580 I cannot at this stage give you a clarification. What I can say is that if you ... What you are suggesting is that the whole of the Government has lied, then, because that is what ... The hon. Member has generalised by saying the Government has lied, (Interjection) that Members have lied on this side, so it is not as an individual.

Hon. D A Feetham: The Government.

Mr Speaker: The Government consists of the Members of this House on the Government side.

1590 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, of course the rule is there in order to avoid a situation where you impute improper motive to the individual. That is unparliamentary. But if you effectively prevent somebody on this side, in the Opposition, from saying a Government has lied over a particular issue, this is effectively castrating an Opposition because – (Mr Speaker: No.) No, of course, Mr Speaker, there may be – (Interjections) May I be allowed to finish? (Interjection) Well, okay. Well, Mr Speaker –

1595 Mr Speaker: I do not think –

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker has already intervened – (Interjection) Mr Speaker has already prevented me from continuing; now he is preventing me from making the point that I wish to make. (Interjections)

1600

Mr Speaker: That is unfair and wrong. Of course it is unfair and you know it is unfair.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, it is not.

1605 Mr Speaker: Yes. You should not even be challenging me on that one. What you need to do now is simply change the word and use another word to describe the message you want to give. This is easy, very simple.

Hon. D A Feetham: I have done that, Mr Speaker. I have explained that.

Mr Speaker: Then there is no need to continue this argument. Get on with the speech, please.

1615 Hon. D A Feetham: I did that 15 minutes ago, Mr Speaker, but because of the intervention of the Chief Minister, which ... you were effectively carrying on with the point that he made ... This is why we are where we are. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

Mr Speaker, to make good my point that the Government just cannot be trusted and people listening should prefer the discourse of the Leader of the Opposition to the Chief Minister, I want to demonstrate how, at every step of the way, they have misled the people of Gibraltar. Let me give you examples of that.

1620 During the 2013 by-election, even when we had found indisputable evidence that the Government had used the proceeds of the Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures, through Credit

1625 Finance, for the purposes of loans to the Sunborn, it was denied in this House – in and outside this House, actually – until after the election was over. When it was then admitted, it was justified on the absurd basis that Credit Finance Company was some form of sovereign fund. That is misleading the people of Gibraltar. The problem that we have in Gibraltar is that, of course, there is no independent reporting where a media outlet will stick its neck out and say that Government is misleading people, the Opposition is right; it will report what one party and the other say in press releases. A Government that wants to confuse and obfuscate can do so. No one confuses and obfuscates like they do – they are the masters of it.

1630 And then, in 2015, when we were telling people that all this indirect Government debt, when added to direct Government debt, has seen the Government exceed the borrowing limits not by £20 million but by 10 country miles, they denied it. However, a year later, in 2016, they came to this House and altered the legal borrowing limit by delinking it from recurrent revenue and linking it to a percentage of GDP. These are the same amendments which Bermuda introduced, which led to the spiralling of debt problems in that jurisdiction. What is worse is that in this case, during that 1635 General Election, we had made public debt an electoral issue and they never said to the people of Gibraltar, ‘We not only defend the levels of public debt but we are going to change the legal borrowing limits in order to allow us to borrow more.’ That would have been the honest thing for them to have said at that election, to show the courage of their convictions. The Chief Minister said during his address, ‘We are not afraid to make decisions. I have said many times that politics is about making and defending decisions.’ But he did not tell people, ‘Not only do we think that public debt is low but we are going to change the legal borrowing limits to allow us to borrow more.’ Instead, they kept the people in the dark and, just as they did in 2011 when they had already planned to amend the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act as a precursor of the re-engineering of 1640 the public finances of Gibraltar, they kept quiet about changing the borrowing limits, all the while telling people that we were lying when we said that the true debt of Gibraltar plc exceeded the legal limits. That is what they were saying, that we were lying about it.

1645 None of this takes into account the mortgaging of the housing estates in 2016, which they did not tell people would occur during the 2015 election or the sale of their interest in the 50-50 home ownership estates in 2019, all of which was pre COVID. In simple terms, to use a term people will understand, they were mortgaged to the hilt before COVID without any leeway in case we had a rainy day. So when they say we have been caught in a veritable rain storm, we say, ‘You should not have mortgaged your umbrella.’

1650 On this issue they have never been straight and you cannot believe anything they say. They have confused, obfuscated and attempted to hide the evidence, and this is the reason why every year there is a sharp contrast in the discourse from this side to that side of the House, and for the reasons that I have outlined, people should not trust them. That is a political point that I and this Opposition are entitled to make, and we will continue to make them, Mr Speaker. (Interjections)

1660 To say that we should airbrush away all that and stand like political automatons in unity with the Government is as nonsensical as it is farcical and the people should be astute to social media sirens making calls to that effect. Whilst I am a Member of this House I will continue to be true to our message and our arguments during the last 10 years because they were honest and they were sound. They may not have garnered votes and they may have directly contributed to their landslides. No one wants to be told we have to be prudent in the face of a Government throwing 1665 parties at a cost of £4.5 million to the taxpayer, but if they had listened to us we would have been in a much better position today to navigate the difficult waters ahead. There would have been fewer people expecting more for less, and our collective expectations would have been recalibrated sooner and in a far less painful way. For these reasons, I would urge those listening to this debate to prefer the discourse of my learned and hon. Friend the Leader of the Opposition over those of the Chief Minister.

1670 I want to briefly just touch on a number of points to conclude, with Mr Speaker’s leave. In relation to the message that was circulating through social media – I think it was WhatsApp – I was told by the hon. Lady, Marlene Hassan Nahon ... I reached out to her, as indeed I know the 1675 Leader of the Opposition also reached out to her, and I said that it was the product of a sick mind. I want to publicly state that today (Banging on desks) and disassociate everybody on this side of the House from those messages.

1680 Secondly, my hon. and learned Friend Mr Phillips, in his quite magnificent speech, did make a point about e-scooters and criticised the Government for the time it has taken for that legislation to come to the House. It is my fault because I have not communicated this to Mr Phillips, but the delay is in large part my own fault. I represent – I declare this interest – the Motor Insurance Bureau, which has been in contact and in talks with the Government of Gibraltar and, as stakeholders, they wish to make some amendments to that legislation. That is reason why it is taking the time it is taking.

1685 The third point is related to the statements made by the Chief Minister and also the hon. Lady about not having a reverse gear on the gains that they have introduced in relation to same-sex couples, for example. Mr Speaker, I stood in a minority of four in this House when I introduced a Private Member's Bill seeking to equalise the age of consent in 2009-10. At the time, actually, it was, politically, not a very sexy theme – if you do not mind me using that term – and, indeed, politically unsafe. We did it anyway, in a minority of four, and I know that the Hon. the Leader of 1690 the Opposition was supportive of that from outside the House. When the legislation for same-sex partnerships was introduced by hon. Members opposite in this House, everybody on this side of the House voted in favour of it, including my hon. and learned Friend Mr Bossino. When they introduced same-sex marriage, it was supported unanimously from this side of the House. There is no question of a GSD government going in reverse gear in relation to any of that.

1695 Having said that, I do wish to simply add this. My learned friend Mr Bossino yesterday made the point that we should be careful about the majority stamping out the views and the voices of the minority. I have huge respect and sympathy for that view and I think that it is right that people who have a different view in a democracy ought to be able to express those different views, but I think it is also right that we should, from this side of the House, also clarify that there is absolutely 1700 no intention of reverse gear on any of the measures I have referred to, or any other measure that the Government has introduced in the last 10 years that they have been in government.

1705 Mr Speaker, that is my contribution. I thank you, and may I also ...? Mr Speaker knows that I hold him in very high esteem. We were friends before Mr Speaker became Speaker of this House and he has always been phenomenally helpful to me, not only as Speaker but also as Clerk of this House when he was Clerk. Mr Speaker, if I have offended you in any way, I apologise for it. It is not my intention to offend Mr Speaker. Mr Speaker must understand, as well, from my point of view, that at times I have felt as if I have been the lonely voice in the desert in this particular debate. It is a matter that is very close to my heart and therefore, when I say that the Government – I am not going to use the word – has misled the people of Gibraltar on this, I do 1710 genuinely believe it. There is no intention of offending you in any way, shape or form, and if I have, I apologise for it because your friendship means more to me than me making a political point. (Banging on desks)

1715 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Gilbert Licudi.

Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear.

1720 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, it is getting late. That is how Mr Feetham started his speech. Then he said he would be brief, and I am not sure that he kept to his promise. (Interjection) But what Mr Feetham also said is that we should not be looking back – and then he treated us to a history lesson, going back to 2011, including reminding us of his rookie speech as Leader of the Opposition. He told us a few minutes ago that he was spot-on in that speech, but history will tell us that it was not a position that he held for very long at all. For my part, I do intend to be brief. I do not have ministerial responsibilities anymore and I will limit myself to making some general comments.

1725 We have, over the last few days, listened to all Ministers – except, of course, the Hon. Father of the House, Sir Joe Bossano – and we have listened to Members of the GSD opposite. I want to also start by sending my best wishes to Sir Joe and hope that he recovers and deals with – as I am sure he will – COVID successfully and that we will see him back in full force in this House very soon. (Banging on desks)

1730 I also want to echo the words that we have heard in particular this afternoon from my hon. colleague and Friend Samantha Sacramento, which we have also heard from the Hon. Mr Feetham a few moments ago, in connection with the hon. Lady who is not here today, the Hon. Marlene Hassan Nahon. For very understandable reasons we have not been able to enjoy her presence and her speech. I use the word ‘enjoy’ advisedly, even though I am sure there would have been many parts of the speech, or all of the speech, that we would not have agreed with, but we certainly would have enjoyed her presence and her speech (Banging on desks) and I do want to add my own sympathies and condolences to her, to her sister Fleur and to the rest of the family on the recent passing.

1740 Mr Speaker, over the last couple of days we have heard much from Members opposite but essentially what we have heard are the same tired old speeches. It is almost as if they dig up what they said last year or the year before, look at the adjectives they used in those speeches in those years and simply change a few dates, change a few figures, change a few facts here and there and regurgitate what we have been hearing from them over the last 10 or 11 years.

1745 Mr Feetham has just made the point that they have been saying since 2011 that the Chief Minister and the Government have been misleading the electorate. Well, the electorate, over three elections – 2011, 2015 and 2019 – have preferred what they have heard from this side of the House and not from there, and therefore there should be a little bit more respect to the electorate. Essentially, he is saying that they have been treated for all this ... I cannot remember the exact word he used, but certainly misleading by the Government. He should not take the electorate for fools who are misled year in, year out, election in, election out and always choose the same option. One predicts that the same will happen next year, or whenever the Chief Minister feels it appropriate to call the next election, because we have seen nothing new from Members opposite, nothing constructive, nothing positive, nothing progressive.

1750 Despite the pretence – and today we heard that from Mr Phillips – of trying to give the impression that he was trying to be constructive, there was absolutely nothing constructive in his speech. I am sure the Chief Minister in his reply, whenever that will come, will say something. I am sure he will have something to say about what Mr Phillips treated us to – and Mr Feetham, as well as other Members of the Opposition – because what we have been treated to, what we have seen in the last few days from Members opposite is no real understanding and no real appreciation of what we have been through in the last two years.

1760 And no, this is not about blaming everything on COVID, despite what Members opposite have said. This is about facing reality, facing economic reality, facing political reality. Hon. Members opposite are very keen to start to criticise expenditure. They even criticise the Government when the Government seeks to avoid expenditure. We have seen that with Campion Park. (Interjections) I have been listening to – (Interjections) I have been here more than Mr Phillips and I have been listening to every single word that has been said in this House. (Interjection)

Hon. Chief Minister: You have hardly been here in all the debate. (Interjections)

1770 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, hon. Members opposite ... Maybe I have struck a raw vein somewhere, but they should calm down and listen. In fact, we have just been told by Mr Feetham that we should listen to them and everybody should listen to each other, so they should listen to what we have to say from this side of the House. They are very keen – we have seen it in the last few days – to criticise expenditure and they criticise even when Government seeks to avoid expenditure. We have seen that with Campion House. We saw it from Mr Reyes himself, a point that was dealt with by my friend and colleague Mr Isola on the National Theatre when the call from Mr Reyes was actually that it should be funded by Government. When Government is trying to avoid expenditure from public funds, Mr Reyes calls for this to be funded by Government.

1780 But then they go on not just to criticise the expenditure and ask Government to incur more expenditure; they go on to criticise revenue-raising measures. They describe what we have heard from the Chief Minister this week in terms of these Budget measures as a highwayman's Budget, as picking the pockets of workers – from Mr Phillips, today, a Sheriff of Nottingham style Budget. It again displays no understanding of what politics is like in the real world, and that is the world we live in. We live in the real world. This is not the world of Harry Potter, where one can simply 1785 wave a magic wand and everything will be solved, or things will appear or things will disappear. Despite Mr Feetham's attempts to justify that they understand this, it is clear that they do not understand that Gibraltar is not immune from global issues. They say that, they pay lip service to it, and then ignore it completely and go on in the usual year-after-year rant. But it is clear that we do not live in a cocoon in Gibraltar. We do not have a magic cape which envelops the Rock of 1790 Gibraltar and protects us.

It is a fact that there has been an invasion of Ukraine and that it has had global consequences, even for us, even for Europe. It is a fact that there have been increases in the price of oil and that affects us. It is a fact that there have been increases in the prices of food products and that affects us. It is a fact that there has been unavailability of goods and components and that affects us. And 1795 of course it is a fact that we have had COVID, not just from the point of view of the health issues and other public health issues that have arisen, but also from the economic perspective and the public finance perspective, the way it has affected our public finance. That is a fact, and what we are seeing is that over the last two years extraordinary measures have had to be taken. Who would have thought that measures would have had to be introduced to restrain some of the basic 1800 liberties we take for granted? And who would have thought that we would have to introduce some of the economic measures to deal with the economic effects – not just with the practical and health effects of COVID but with the economic effects of COVID? These are measures which have been brought to this House from an economic point of view and which have been debated in this House, and these are measures which hon. Members opposite have supported and endorsed, and 1805 now they are critical.

On occasions it is necessary to take tough measures. As the Hon. Chief Minister mentioned this week, sometimes tough but necessary decisions and measures are needed, and the same is true of the Budget that has been presented this week. No one in this House and no one outside this House likes to hear about increases in taxes, about levies on companies, on passengers or anybody 1810 else. These are measures which certainly can be unpopular, but they are sometimes necessary and it is what being in government is about. It is about having to face the reality of the world we live in. It is about having to take tough decisions, decisions which are in the interest of Gibraltar as a whole because that must be the guiding principle – and all of this seems to be lost on Members opposite.

1815 Mr Phillips did not ignore COVID. He mentioned the effects of COVID on our community but made no mention whatsoever of the effect of COVID on public finances. There has been no suggestion, nothing said from the other side on what they would have done. How would they have dealt with the public finance, with the economic response in relation to COVID? How would they have handled those economic and public finance issues we have faced? It is one thing for 1820 Members opposite simply to stand up and criticise specific revenue-raising measures, but it is another to criticise proposed revenue-raising measures without offering an alternative, without offering anything else. It is as if they say there should be no revenue-raising measures at all. Well, how do we pay for the extraordinary expenses that we have had to incur in the last two years?

1825 It is a mark, I would suggest, of an irresponsible Opposition, and of course it leads to a lack of credibility in the Opposition we have. One of the reasons I say that is because we have heard many statements made this week without any sort of analysis. I will give an example. The Leader of the Opposition criticised the passenger levy that has been announced and which I would suggest is modest by any standard, and then he said this will drive cruise liners away. Why, Mr Speaker? I

1830 ask that rhetorically; I do not expect Mr Speaker to give me a response. Why will it drive cruise liners away? The hon. Member ignored that point and simply made the bold statement that this will drive cruise liners away. What sort of comparative study have they made to come up with such a conclusion? It would be understandable if they made such comment and backed it up with figures; if they said, 'We have looked at the overall cost. We have looked at our competitors. This is what is charged in Malaga, in Cadiz and in Malta. We have done all that, we have done that 1835 study and this is why we think this will drive cruise liners away.' But they have not done any of that. It is just criticism for the sake of criticism, it is shooting from the hip, and again it loses them credibility when they do not back it up – not just with figures but any kind of analysis at all. Have they looked at passenger levies in other jurisdictions, in other ports? Have they looked at mooring fees? Have they looked at the types of services that are provided to cruise liners and other vessels?
1840 Have they looked at the fees in relation to bunkering? Have they looked at the overall product that we provide in Gibraltar? Nothing that the hon. Members have said this week suggests that they have.

The Leader of the Opposition, when he made that comment, said, 'Mr Bossino, in his intervention, will give more details,' and what we heard from Mr Bossino was essentially limiting 1845 himself to saying that we needed to be competitive. Of course we agree – everyone agrees with a statement such as 'we need to be competitive'. We need to be competitive in the Port, in financial services, in gaming services, in every service we provide, because we live in a global market where competition is very keen. Everybody agrees with that. But what they did not address, what they said nothing at all about is why this levy will make us uncompetitive. Why is it 1850 that this levy will make us uncompetitive? If, as a result of this levy, Gibraltar was three times more expensive than all our competitors I could understand the point, but nothing like that is analysed and considered by Members opposite.

I can tell hon. Members that when I had responsibility for the Port this was something I looked at. I sought information about what other Ports charge – nearby ports like Malaga and Cadiz and 1855 further-afield ports in the Mediterranean – and the conclusion I remember coming to was that Gibraltar is very competitive indeed when you look at the overall package, not just one isolated matter, that Gibraltar is very competitive indeed and that there was scope for a modest increase;
we would not drive anyone away by having a modest increase to the Port dues and the cost of coming to Gibraltar. Gibraltar continues and will continue to be a very attractive proposition, a 1860 very attractive destination for cruise liners. That was the conclusion that I reached. Members opposite may say, 'What happened? Why didn't you introduce it?' Well, COVID happened and cruise liners stopped coming, and therefore it was not a matter that could be considered at that particular time. My advice – and I say this wholeheartedly – is simply that you have to do your homework before coming to this House and making statements such as that, because we have to 1865 be careful about the message we send out there. We do not want to drive cruise liners away, we do not want people to think that they are unwelcome in Gibraltar – and that is the sort of message that is being put out by Members of the Opposition, and that is irresponsible.

The other thing in relation to this is when they criticise this revenue-raising measure, importantly they do not say, 'Don't do that, do it in another way – raise the revenue you need in 1870 some other way.' We have heard nothing about that in all of the speeches by Members opposite.
What is their alternative? When looking at this particular measure, what is their alternative? Are they saying instead of 2p it should be 3p in the pound? Instead of £25 per company it should be £30 per company? What is their alternative? There is, quite frankly, no credibility in their approach.

1875 I also want to mention very briefly a matter that Mr Reyes said in his contribution. This was in relation to new schools when he said that when a new project, a new school, is being built, there should be more consultation with teachers. I did not take that to be a criticism of the schools themselves; it was just an observation or suggestion by Mr Reyes, or perhaps even an implicit criticism that there was not sufficient consultation with teachers when it comes to new schools.
1880 He suggested it should not be left to architects simply to produce fancy designs without looking at the requirements of the schools. It is a fact – and I do not say this in a disparaging way of Mr Reyes – that Mr Reyes, who had ministerial responsibility in the GSD Government, had no experience during his time in government of building a new school and he would not understand and would not know what was the process of building a new school. Come to think of it, no GSD 1885 Minister had experience of building a new school because in 15 years in office they built no new schools at all. (Hon. Chief Minister: Exactly.) (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Mr Feetham says he has heard enough and he wants to leave. Goodbye.

Hon. Chief Minister: The truth hurts. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham)
1890

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the GSD of which Mr Feetham – who now wants to leave, who has had enough of listening ... Mr Feetham was also a Member of that GSD Government and he did not have any experience in building new schools, (Hon. Chief Minister: Exactly.) and neither did any of his colleagues, but during my time in government when I had ministerial responsibility 1895 for Education I did have experience in building new schools. I say this in the most constructive way possible in terms of offering an explanation to Mr Reyes and Members opposite as to how this process works, because I was involved in the building, during our first term of office, of the two St Bernard's schools, then, in my second stint in Education, in connection with the plans for the new St Mary's, and my friend and colleague Prof. Cortes has very extensive experience in building 1900 new schools and can expand or elaborate, confirm or corroborate what I am going to say because he has hands-on experience in these matters.

What we need to realise is how this process starts, what is the first thing that happens when a decision is taken to build a new school. The very first step that is taken is that the school is asked for a list of requirements. So, when we want to build a new St Bernard's First School, we ask 1905 St Bernard's First School, 'What are your requirements in terms of the new school? How many standard classrooms do you need? What specialist classrooms do you need – music room, art room, breakout rooms for children with special needs, staff room – even offices and storerooms?' The school will put out that list – assembly area, gym ... All of that has to come from the school. It is not something that an architect decides he wants to put in, it is not something that the Minister 1910 himself or herself would dream of, not even the Department of Education; this comes from the school itself, and that is considered and discussed with the Minister, with the Department and with the technical team that is going to be advising and putting together the project. But the school is the one that is first involved at the very outset of the process, and then what happens is a brief is prepared.

So, architects are not asked to design whatever they want and come up with whatever ideas they want about classrooms and gyms etc. They are given a specific brief, which comes originally 1915 from the schools themselves and the list of requirements is a fundamental part of that brief, and whether it is as part of a tender process or submissions of interest, before final architectural drawings are put together and produced, floor plans are produced reflecting the requirements that the schools themselves have identified, and that will then be taken back to the school and 1920 discussed and modified as necessary.

Only when everyone is satisfied, in particular the school involved, will the go-ahead be given for the full design and the drawings. This is certainly not a case of lack of consultation, not even a case of consultation; it is a case of full collaboration. It is a collaborative project starting with the 1925 very essence of those who are most interested in this: the schools, who will know the needs of themselves and their pupils. That is core to this particular process. Of course, one can look at a new school and say, 'With hindsight, this could have been done differently.' That is the same for any project, for any building, but that is not the same as lack of consultation or lack of adequate consultation, which is what Mr Reyes seemed to imply.

Mr Speaker, just to end, this Budget has been described as many things and I have mentioned already it has been described by Members opposite as a highwayman's Budget, as a pickpocketing Budget and as a Sheriff of Nottingham Budget. I have also heard it described as a brave Budget. In fact, I have heard it said that this is the bravest Budget speech than any Chief Minister of Gibraltar has had to make. It is undoubtedly the case that the last two years have involved enormous sacrifices. It has affected all of us.

1935

There are many decisions in Government, in terms of the decision itself, which are quite simple. If I, for example, am given sufficient funds and a place, and told, 'Go and build a new marina,' that decision is very simple. A different matter is how you do it and getting the end product you want, but once you have the funds and the place, the decision is go and do it. Nothing difficult about the decision itself, but what differentiates a mediocre government from a good government is the ability to take tough decisions and to get those tough decisions right. It is the ability to face challenging times and it is difficult to appreciate, to understand, to see, or even foresee, times more challenging than we have had and what the GSLP Liberal Government has had to face in the last couple of years. Again and again tough decisions have been taken, and again and again the Government had proved that it is prepared to take those tough and difficult decisions, however unpalatable at times they might appear to be.

1940

It is undoubtedly true that the issues we face and the issues we have faced will not disappear overnight but it is very encouraging to hear some of the figures that the Chief Minister has given, not simply in relation to public finances but the economy generally, and the estimates of GDP which the Chief Minister gave in respect of the post-COVID year where we are reaching ... or just about there. We have bounced back, as I understand the Chief Minister mentioned, to pre-pandemic levels. But at the same time as the GDP bounces back, we have to make sure that public finances remain solid. We have to make sure that our ability to provide the services we need, the services we all want, is not compromised in any way, and sometimes it is necessary – and this year it is certainly necessary – to introduce measures which raise revenue and which make sure that we can all continue to enjoy those services that we hold dear.

1950

Despite what Mr Feetham has said today, this is certainly not an austerity Budget. It is not a Budget that cuts services. In fact, it is a Budget that seeks to protect those very services, protect our ability to pay for those services. Indeed, we have heard some of the measures described as temporary measures, necessary but temporary. They are targeted, they are limited and I would suggest they are prudent in nature. For all those reasons, I certainly will support this Budget and will support the Second Reading of the Bill – in fact, the whole of the Appropriation Bill. I will lend my support.

1960

Mr Speaker, before sitting down I want to end by adding my own tribute and congratulations to the Father of the House, Sir Joe Bossano, on reaching the milestone of 50 years as a parliamentarian. There are not many parliamentarians in the world, if any, who can boast such a record. And it is not just a question of longevity in this House, it is about 50 years of public service, 50 years of putting Gibraltar first, 50 years of putting the Gibraltarians first. Whether you agree or disagree with Sir Joe and his politics, no one can deny his unselfish commitment to the Gibraltar cause, defending our position in Gibraltar and outside in the four corners of the world. It is particularly noteworthy the undeniable fact that Sir Joe's ideals and economic aspirations for Gibraltar have not changed at all in the 50 years that he has been in this House. I tell the House that my own interest in politics came about in 1984 following the signing of the Brussels Agreement. It was an impassioned speech that I heard by Sir Joe about the dangers of Brussels that made me want to support the campaign to make sure that those dangers, the dangers of Brussels, did not come to pass, and of course what Sir Joe said then and what he has continued to believe has been proved right. His leadership was instrumental in difficult years in protecting us from those dangers, and Gibraltar has been blessed with an economic and political mind like no other. We have been lucky and long may he continue. I hope that he recovers very soon. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

1985 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, if I can thank the hon. backbencher for that demonstration of how one can be absolutely devastating of the Opposition's views and keep the language entirely parliamentary (Two Members: Hear, hear.) and the mood temperate, and reflect that it is unfortunate that we have not heard contributions of that sort from the other side on the seminal issues that we are dealing with in the context of this Appropriation Bill, and invite the House to return on Monday at 10 a.m. when I will have an opportunity to respond to all Members' speeches that we have heard in the past three days and then invite the House to make a final consideration of the Bill by voting for it and consider also the Third Reading and Committee Stage.

1990 Mr Speaker: I now propose the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Monday, 4th July at 10 a.m.

1995 I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Monday, 4th July at 10 a.m. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Passed.

This House will now adjourn to Monday, 4th July at 10 a.m.

Use of 'lied' – Statement by Mr Speaker

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Monday, 4th July 2022.

Mr Speaker: I should like to make a short Statement before we return to the Budget speeches.

5 On 30th June 2022, in the course of the Budget speech of the Hon. Daniel Feetham, I had reason to stop the delivery of his speech after he used the words 'they have misled and lied to the people of Gibraltar'. I pointed out that the word 'lied' was out of order and would need to be withdrawn. The Hon. Daniel Feetham suggested alternative language to the word 'lied', namely 'economical with the truth'. I accepted this as a way forward. He was, however, unwilling to 10 withdraw the word 'lied'. In order to take the heat out of the moment, I suggested that the Hon.
Daniel Feetham continue with his speech, which he duly completed, at the end of which he offered his apologies to me, which I accepted. There remains the matter of a ruling sought by the Leader of the Opposition in relation to the use of the word 'lied' when referring to a government. I have considered the matter and rule that the use of the word 'lied', although directed at the 15 Government and not a particular Member, is nonetheless a word which can be regarded as unparliamentary and, accordingly, the Member should have withdrawn the word 'lied'.

In addition, I would like to remind Members of the following point. When the Speaker asks a Member to withdraw unparliamentary words, he or she is expected to do so. It is out of order and totally unacceptable for a Member to suggest that the Speaker has endeavoured to curtail a reply, 20 speech etc. It is out of order and totally unacceptable for a Member to suggest that the Speaker is not acting impartially. It is out of order and totally unacceptable for a Member to question or challenge the authority of the Chair. That ends my Statement.

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

25 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Thank you, Mr Speaker, as ever, for your ruling. As you know, on every occasion, whether they are rulings that favour us or not, we always accept them.

Mr Speaker:

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you,
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting too;
If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,

Or being lied about, don't deal in lies,
Or being hated, don't give way to hating,
[...]

If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken
Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools,
[...]

If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much
[...]

Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!

Those were the words of Rudyard Kipling, Mr Speaker, when he wrote the very famous poem If.

Today, I rise in this debate to reply for the Government on the Second Reading of the Appropriation for 2022-23 with deep disappointment in the contributions from hon. Members opposite; not so much for their shallow analysis ... I understand that they need to keep it shallow because they want to persuade the public of something that bears no deep analysis, so they have to just try to keep it shallow.

In fact, what they have done in this place in the past few days has been tabloid economics: bold headlines that are then not borne out by the substance of the article below. Their contributions are like some of those articles that we sometimes read. When you finish reading the article, you think, 'That's got nothing to do with the headline.' Of course, what happens is that you end up disappointed with the newspaper and you probably never buy it again because you know that they try to catch your attention but the substance is not there.

My disappointment is a little deeper with hon. Members, and it is as much political as it is human because we have had to endure in the past week what I can only describe as a debasing of Parliament – indeed, an assault on the rules of debate; a litany of personal insults which Members opposite at best say, perhaps, they did not intend. The words of Kipling are particularly apposite because of the parliamentary thuggery to which we were subjected when Mr Feetham subjected you in particular, Mr Speaker, to an assault in respect of your position on the established Rules, which is probably the most unsavoury episode I have seen in this place for a long time.

I see Mr Feetham laughing. I am not surprised, because it is ironic that Kipling also wrote The Jungle Book, and it is clear to me that Mr Feetham wishes that he could translate everything into the law of the jungle, into the law of 'might is right and I can impose myself on anyone just because I am bigger,' and not having to persuade. That is what we saw, Mr Speaker, in his defiance of you some days ago, and as reported in the media. Therefore, I thank you, Mr Speaker, on behalf of this and future generations of Gibraltarians, for your ruling this morning. I will deal with this issue later in the debate when I deal with Mr Feetham's lacklustre and flawed analysis.

For now, I want to start by saying that testing times are not best served by tabloid politics. Testing times require a deeper analysis. Testing times are done few favours by seeking to ignore the truth to exploit cheap political points. Indeed, not even silken attempts were made to put the truth aside, just brutish attempts to completely contradict the truth with made-up facts and figures and, frankly, despicable innuendoes. We have ended up looking at a team of men with no shame.

When pupils of good government study the excellent work done by the Government and, indeed, all of the public servants of Gibraltar in respect of the challenges of the past couple of years, they will wonder, perhaps, why I started today with Kipling's If, but by the time they reach the end of my response, they – like anyone who is listening today – will realise that there could be absolutely no better allusion. Why? Well, let me start by reminding the House of what inspired Kipling to write the poem. It came from an attempt that he observed to overthrow the Boer government – exactly what we have seen from Members opposite. Their speeches were an attempt to overthrow the Government. Why? Their speeches were not about the financial management of the community or how we had managed the finances. Their speeches were not about the 2022-23 Appropriation. Their speeches were about the next election. They were for out there, they were not for in here. This is about let's change the Government, let's go into an 70 election with these arguments to try to persuade people, not an analysis of the financial year, with still another financial year to come before a General Election in the autumn of 2023, when it is due. The overarching theme of If is that successful, virtuous living based on values pertaining to integrity, rightful behaviour and self-development will win the day over those who want to mislead, who want to act out of spite, out of hatred, or who think themselves better than their 75 opponents. I do not think there can be a better literary reference to underline what I am about to say.

If a citizen of another country were to come to Gibraltar after the increases that the Government has been reluctantly required to introduce in this Budget, were to have a conversation with a Gibraltarian and be told that utility bills have gone up by 8% in a year, although 80 they have gone up 100% in his or her country, and that the maximum rate of tax will go up by 2%, from 25% to 27%, but just for two years and most people who were paying 17% would pay 19%, and that there is no capital gains tax, no tax on savings, no tax on pensions, the state pension went up 8% and Government occupational pensions went up 2%, Disability Benefit went up 8% and the Minimum Wage went up 8%, they would not believe it. If they were told that actually the 85 Minimum Wage in Gibraltar after this increase is probably the highest take-home Minimum Wage in Europe, they would be full of praise for the Government that was delivering that economic performance. If you were to tell the visitor, on top of that, that every children in Gibraltar can have a scholarships paying both their tuition fees and their maintenance fees and they can have a first master's degree – tuition fees and maintenance – paid, and that then the discretion to give 90 them a third one kicks in and 75% of those who apply for the discretionary one get it, as happened in the press release issued on Friday ... If they saw that even after the toughest years in Gibraltar there are going to be only minimum increases for two years, that person from outside of Gibraltar would say, 'In my country, utility bills have gone up by 75% to 100%' – depending where they come from, because of the cost of fuel – 'my tax is between 40% and 50%' – in France, Portugal,
95 Spain, the United Kingdom and Germany – 'and on top of that we pay much higher social security contributions than you pay, and we pay an amount also to look after our elderly, on top of our social insurance contributions, and we think things are going to get worse.' This person from another country might say, 'My goodness, you guys are lucky with the political leadership you have. What are you complaining about?'

100 Even after the modest increases we have seen, we are still protecting every Gibraltarian household and every Gibraltarian business from the increases in the cost of fuel being directly applied to their utility bills, which has happened in every other country. That is why Spain has had to ask for an Iberian exemption for themselves and for Portugal to be able to give a subsidy to every household because of the cost of fuel.

105 Mr Speaker, let's try to bring some levity to these proceedings. Let's do that analysis in a different way. Have you heard the joke about the Englishman, the Spaniard and the Gibraltarian who walked into a bar? Well, they all got talking and the Gibraltarian said, 'Boys, I'm really disappointed in my Government. You know what this lot have done? They've gone and put our taxes up by two points for two years and they've put up my electricity bill by 8%.'

110 The Spaniard and the Englishman looked at the Gibraltarian. The Spaniard said, 'que estas de cashondeo' You must be joking. My electricity bill has gone up by 75%.'

The Englishman said, 'My electricity bill has gone up by 50% and my tax has gone up to over 40%.'

115 'You must be really rich,' said the Gibraltarian to the Englishman. 'People in Gibraltar who earn over £½ million used to pay 5% under the previous lot; now they are going to pay 27%, and that is the richest.'

'No,' said the Englishman, 'I am an ordinary working man.'

120 The Gibraltarian did not seem convinced. He said, 'Well, I'm going to vote against this Government. The Opposition have told me they would do better because this lot have put up my tax and they've put up my utilities.'

The Englishman and the Spaniard could not stop laughing. 'Why are you laughing?' said the Gibraltarian.

'Because you need your head examined,' said the Englishman. 'The joke's going to be on you if you change those who are in government today.'

125 Mr Speaker, anybody who heard the speeches of hon. Gentlemen opposite will have discerned that all of the drama and all of the bluster was to hide the underlying message, and the underlying message delivered by Mr Clinton and the underlying message delivered by Mr Azopardi was simple: we are going to cut and we are going to cut deep. Either they are presenting us with a theory that we are spending too much, which, if they take over they are going to continue, or they 130 are going to cut and cut deep. Then we would really find out what austerity means, just like the example I gave the House in my first speech when the Tories were very critical of Labour because of the amounts that Labour had had to spend to save the Tory capitalist system – and the minute they were elected, blaming Labour for having put money into the international financial system to keep the banks afloat, they started to cut, cut, cut and they have not finished cutting yet.

135 The theme that hon. Members opposite tried to develop about financial ruin is utter nonsense. They were wrong about everything they said about where we were when this COVID problem started, this question of the point of arrival, which I will take them through to show them definitively that they are wrong. What has brought our economy to its knees is what has brought every economy in the world to its knees: the COVID pandemic. It is not an excuse, it is a reason.
140 We are all tired of hearing about it. When you put on the news and you hear the COVID numbers are up in the United Kingdom, it is the last thing you want to hear; you want somebody who is going to talk about something different. I understand that, but when you are making a choice, not of which channel you are going to watch but of who is going to run your Government, then you do need to listen to the facts and not to the escapism that it is somebody else's fault and you can 145 blame Picardo and his merry men.

I was struck, however, to see a return to the sort of viciousness we had seen from hon. Gentlemen and the party they represent in this House before. Again, just as an aside, when Hansard is analysed in the future by students of the politics of Gibraltar in the 1980s, 1990s and the early part of the millennium, they will see that that venom arrived in this House circa 150 1992-93. They will see it was fully deployed from the Opposition benches towards the GSLP Government in that period. They will see it was then deployed from the GSD Government benches against the GSLP Opposition. I thought that that had disappeared, but it is back, and because it is back, what they are going to find – in me, at least, and in all my Government colleagues – is that when somebody tries to bully us we are not going to turn and run, we are going to face them and we are going to give back as good as we get.

One speech, at least of the leading speeches, stood out for not containing name calling and insulting, for being of substance and being different and representing a different ideology than the one we represent. I recognise that, Mr Speaker, and will deal with that speech in the way we were dealt with also, by showing the ideological differences between us, which is what we are 160 here to do. But to the others I am going to give as good as we got.

Before I go into that part of my address I want to clarify some aspects of what I said during my initial address, in order to assist some sectors that have been concerned about the detail of what we intend to do.

If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting too;

165 Well, let's look at some of the things that we need to clarify and which the general public will need to know more about. I will start with the COVID charge. The last two years have required us

170 to put our hands into our collective pockets to keep the economy afloat. That has affected everyone, every individual. Even the ones who have not wanted to have the vaccine have had the benefit of the vaccine. Every individual, even if they have not had BEAT, has had the benefit of the shops being open when the pandemic finished, because people who had had BEAT in the shops were able to still come back – they had not left their jobs. So this has affected all of us, even those who have not had BEAT and those of us who have not had vaccine – although, of course, I have had all of them, and so have all Members of the Government.

175 Let's be very clear that one of the things that has distinguished us in the past 10 years is that we are a listening Government. I know that they hate it, because when we say something and the public have a concern, we are prepared to always work with that sector to resolve the dispute that may have arisen between the Government and the sector in a way that is good for the Government, therefore the public and the people and that sector. And so we understood the concerns that there are in some quarters about the £25 per week COVID recovery charge for companies and we will be working with the Chamber of Commerce and the Gibraltar Federation of Small Businesses (GFSB) to ensure that the application of the charge is done in a way that is going to not cause greater problems for that sector, which is an income-producing sector for the Government and is a sector that provides a lot of employment across the board, whether it is the trust and company managers or simply people who have a small business and those who have larger businesses also.

180 There has been a request that the Government consider stratifying the charge between larger companies and smaller companies. The Government is prepared to listen to that. It is not true that bigger companies always pay more than smaller companies for things, especially when it is in their company register issue. Every company pays the same amount for an annual return. Every company pays the same amount for the filing of a document in Companies House, whether you are a large company or a small company – Marks & Spencer pays the same to file its annual return as a new company that has one employee. But we are understanding and concerned to ensure that we can work with the sector to alleviate any potential hardship and that this measure, which is designed to alleviate public finance concerns, does not create greater hardship, so we are going to be talking directly to the Chamber and the GFSB. Indeed, my hon. Friend Mr Isola has already started that engagement.

185 Mr Speaker, I just want also to reflect, in that context, that during the pandemic the direct payments out to employees and companies were £32 million. Thirty-two million pounds of taxpayers' money was paid as BEAT salaries or as moneys given to companies to pay BEAT salaries in the second phase of BEAT; £14 million in foregone rates. That means the discounts that we gave in rates so that businesses did not have the burden of rates in the period is £14 million, which has gone out of the public purse. Thirty million pounds is foregone duty – £30 million in the two-and-a-bit-year period where duty has been reduced. The calculations of Customs are that it is £30 million. And of course we waived rents on all the Government-owned properties and achieved discounts for tenancies which were with private landlords. So, in excess of £75 million from the taxpayer was either directly paid to businesses or was foregone revenue from businesses in our economy – principally, obviously, members of the Chamber and the GFSB. That was money well paid and well forgone. The Government believes it did the right thing to give businesses that money and to give businesses those benefits – and I am not saying it because we do not think it was the right thing to do; I am saying it because it is important to quantify it, so that people understand that we do not want to hurt business. We have just come through a period where we have given business £75 million of taxpayers' money in forgone revenue or in payments out.

200 If you are running a small bakery in town with two employees, you have not got £75 million from the Government. I understand that. You got your share of BEAT, which was paid directly to the employees so that you could keep them on. You have not paid rates in a period when you were not operating anyway, so it is not as if that helps today. I get that, but £75 million went to big companies and small companies – many of the bigger companies did not claim; medium-size companies and small companies – and that came from the taxpayer. So, when we go back to try

220 to get something which helps us to refill the pot, it has to be understood in the context not of a Government that ignores the plight of small businesses and medium-size businesses and every company in our economy; it has to be seen in the light of the Government that has given the benefit of £75 million over the last two years to those companies and wants to continue to work with the representatives of those companies so that now, when we try to recover a part of that, we do it in a way that does not inflict pain or losses and it is done in a way that helps us all to recover. We fought the pandemic together – the businesses, the entrepreneurs, the workers and 225 the Government – and we will work together to fight for the recovery of the COVID costs, but we must take responsibility together also.

Mr Speaker, I am also happy to be able to tell the House that the Minister for Business will be launching the Business Nurturing Scheme that the Federation of Small Businesses asked about in the autumn – we believe by November – and that the new Fair Trading Act has already passed all 230 its stages with the Minister for Business and is now with the Minister for Justice, who is reviewing it to ensure compliance with the Constitution, which is our internal process, and we expect it to be on the statute book this calendar year.

On the issue of taxation of pensions and investment income for those who are not Gibraltar
'belongers', so to speak, I want to clarify that that measure is intended to cover those who are 235 non-Gibraltarians by birth and who would otherwise have been eligible for, or were holders of previously, a Cat 2 certificate. These are not times to tolerate the best-off amongst us in our economy contributing nothing to our public finances, but neither are we seeking to tax the investment income or the pensions of people who have moved to Gibraltar but are not in that category of the very rich.

240 On mopeds, I want to clarify that the target of the prevention measure for importation of small bikes will be for those in the under-100cc range, which are the most polluting. Those are the ones we are looking to ban by the new measure and which will have to be replaced by electric vehicles – the most polluting, both in terms of noise and emissions. Of course, that does not cover vehicles that are already registered.

245 Mr Speaker, in seeking the support of this Chamber for the Bill, I am going to now deal with the speech of each individual Member and all of the points they have raised which need to be deal with, and I am going to do that even though they have already said that they are going to continue with their very poor tradition of voting against the Budget. They have already said they are not going to vote for this, but I am going to reply on the basis of the parliamentary tradition being that 250 this is a debate about a Bill and that they have raised points which, if I reply to them in a satisfactory manner, might persuade them to support the Bill. That is really what we dealing with here in this House today. They have already said they are not going to support it because of their principal view that the 300-page Budget Book, which everyone can look at, does not present a full picture of the Government's spending. What utter nonsense.

255 Even though they do not treat this Chamber with respect, we do and we will; even though they do not treat the public with respect, we do and we will; and even though they do not treat us with respect, we will treat them with respect. We will break down their arguments, we will answer them one by one as we break down their arguments one by one, and of course I am going to start with the Leader of the Opposition.

260 The Leader of the Opposition said that I had temerity in calling the Budget a people's Budget, that I should practise what I preach and that when I told people that we were on their side I slipped my hand, whilst I was looking into their eyes, into their pockets. Well, why is this a people's Budget? It is a people's Budget because it is a Budget that intends to do social justice, and I cannot imagine that our people want us to do anything other than social justice. It is to get Gibraltar and 265 the Gibraltarians back on track to growth, to surpluses, to pay rises in the future. It is no act, it is a fact. Maybe when the hon. Gentleman was writing 'it is an act' he left out the 'f'. It is a fact.

It is a Budget that protects pensioners. State pensioners have an 8% increase. It protects those on Disability Benefit: they have an 8% increase. It protects even occupational pensioners of the Government, who have a 2% increase. But, in particular, it protects those who are in the bottom 270 tier of earnings in our country, those on the Minimum Wage, who have an 8% increase as well. I imagine that even the better-off in our society want to see people who are on pensions, on state benefits, who are on the Minimum Wage, protected at this time. That is why it is a people's Budget. And judging by the real-world reaction, it has landed in exactly that way.

275 Of course nobody wants to have their taxes put up. Let's be very clear, I am disappointed with that part of the Budget – I am a taxpayer, too: who wants to come here to put up taxes on everybody and on themselves? – but I am humbled and grateful for the literally hundreds of messages of support that I have received over the way that have structured this Budget and we have ensured it protects the vulnerable. Hundreds. Messages are not just those posted on social 280 media by a few hotheads. Whilst they seek that approval and comfort of social media, we will continue in touch with real people and the organisations that represent them.

The hon. Gentleman then said some or all of these new revenue-raising measures would not need to happen if the Government had been disciplined last year, if they had been disciplined from the beginning. When he said that we had not been disciplined, when he said that everything that Mr Feetham accused us of doing is what we have done, what he ignored – and it was there, 285 in my main speech, so it was not to be ignored unless you came here with a prepared speech and did not really care about what you had been told or had not really looked at the Book in detail – was that actually departmental expenditure last year was very controlled. Where we had an overspend it was specifically demand led. It was not a lack of control. There can be losses which arise from lack of control, from negligence, lack of diligence, or there can be losses that arise 290 because the price of something has gone up or the need for something has increased.

I am going to explain in detail what those overspends were. Indeed, I explained it in my main speech, but Mr Azopardi was not listening – or he did not want to hear because it did not suit the theory that he was going to sell, like the snake oil salesman that he is, with the headlines and tabloid-style economics that he wanted to put out there. They have ignored those facts in order 295 to spin their speeches around the political arguments that they wanted.

It is not true that we have had to put up costs because we failed to control expenditure last year, because it is demand and expenditure principally by an increased cost of fuel affecting our Electricity Authority and increased demand for COVID-related expenditure in the Health Authority. That is to say it is not a failure to control the GHA, it is that the GHA needed to do more 300 during 2021-22 than was foreseeable in February and March 2021 when we prepared the Estimates. So the theory put forward by Mr Azopardi is wrong. I am not just going to tell him that it is wrong; I am going to demonstrate to him again, as I did in my main speech, before I knew what argument he was going to spin. I will demonstrate it to him again now in my reply, but because I said it in my main speech, unless he could not hear me or could not read the text which 305 was published shortly after I sat down, or could not see where the overspends were, he must know that he was wrong.

Mr Speaker, in keeping with your ruling, I am not going to accuse him of misleading the House, but I think he must have come close. I will set out why I say that. He said this:

When anyone looks at this Budget and, importantly, last year's public spending, there are some big themes that emerge ...

310 The first one he wanted to deal with was trust. He said I could not be trusted on the economy, public finances or recovery. Again, he writes that down without thinking.

The economy? The economy and the public finances are two different things. The public finances are the pocket of the Government; the economy is the activity in the whole of Gibraltar.
I just told the House in my main speech that we had bounced back immediately to a GDP that we had in 2019-20 – indeed, we were slightly above it – so how can I not be trusted on the economy?
315 I do not think there are many economies that have bounced back as quickly as ours has.

The public finances or the recovery? Well, let's look at this question of trust. He said that I have 'no real plan, other than a very late and insufficient one, no direction, no willingness to address issues and no clue'. There is a Jewish saying, that people do not see the mote in their own eye, that the things one says of another are the things that are true of you. In his speech there was no 320 plan, no direction and no willingness to address the issues, because he was saying, more or less, the only way to deal with the financial crisis in the world affecting Gibraltar is to change Fabian Picardo for Keith Azopardi, but he did not tell you what he would put up to recover the losses, he did not tell you what he would cut or not cut. Of course not: he has no plan, no direction, no willingness to address the issue and no clue.

325 Then he said that this was all a failure, a failure that is down to the Government:

a failure to control expenditure, a failure to control waste and a failure of discipline, which goes all the way to the top because there is a clear line of responsibility and the buck stops with Mr Picardo, who has political responsibility for the bottom line, no ifs, no buts.

I do have responsibility, the buck does stop with me, but this is not a failure of control or anything like that.

But before I get into the detail of that and break down where the overspends have been to show him that he is wrong, because I am following his speech chronologically to deal with the 330 issues that he dealt with I want to deal with one of the biggest underlying issues affecting the United Kingdom economy and Gibraltar, and that is Brexit, which is what he turned to next.

By the way, Mr Speaker, the pound is now much weaker than it has been against the dollar. All economists identify that that is principally due to Brexit and that inflation will be higher in the United Kingdom than in the United States, principally due to Brexit and the Fed raising interest 335 rates higher and quicker than the Bank of England, and that is itself a driver of inflation because the pound does not go as far as it used to. The price of fuel now, although it is high, is not as high as it has been in the past, and the pound does not go as far. So with the price of fuel at $328 a barrel and the pound at $1.20 – in fact, it dipped before the weekend to $1.19 to the pound – you need more pounds to buy the barrel at $300-odd than you did before, even if the barrel was at
